Written Answers to Questions

The following answers were received between Friday 26 May and Thursday 1 June 2006.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Action Team for Jobs

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what results were achieved by the action team for jobs based in Leytonstone; what the cost was of the action team's work; and if he will make a statement. [72616]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Since its inception in October 2000, the Waltham Forest action team, which is based in Leytonstone, has engaged with 12,592 disadvantaged customers and has helped 3,424 people into work. The total cost, for the period April 2002 to March 2006, was £2,034,306.

Many of the practices and ideas developed by action teams have been integrated into Jobcentre Plus mainstream programmes and services. Examples include outreach work in local communities and the greater discretionary funding that is available to advisers.

Our future strategy will build on the success of action teams, and other community-based initiatives; including the introduction of a Deprived Areas Fund (DAF) from October 2006 and the Cities strategy proposed in our recent Green Paper.

Benefit Simplification Unit

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the work of the Benefit Simplification Unit, with particular reference to (a) cost, (b) staffing and (c) performance to date. [72252]

Mr. Plaskitt: When fully staffed, the Benefit Simplification Unit will have five full-time staff with additional input from senior officials. Gross costs during 2006-07 are estimated to be around £290,000. A secondee from Citizens Advice will also be joining the unit in June 2006 for six months, looking in particular at the customer interface.

Simplifying the benefits system requires action on many fronts, particularly among those developing and maintaining benefit policy and procedures. The Benefit Simplification Unit's role will be to act as a catalyst in driving forward simplification, challenging existing complexity and ensuring that the need to bear down on complexity is at the heart of future benefit design and delivery.

The unit published "Simplification: Guide to Best Practice" on 4 May 2006. A copy has been placed in the Library. The unit is now working to raise awareness of the simplification agenda across DWP and to embed best practice. Progress will be reported on annually in the departmental report.

Council Tax Benefit

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he plans to raise the applicable amount of single person's income that is deemed eligible for council tax benefit. [68312]

Mr. Plaskitt: We have already increased the applicable amount for all pensioners, whether single or couples.

This took place when pension credit was introduced in October 2003. From then we committed almost £0.5 billion a year to increasing the amounts on which council tax benefit (and housing benefit) are based. This meant that around 2 million pensioner households either became entitled to council tax benefit for the first time or qualified for more help.

We will continue to keep applicable amounts under review. They are subject to annual uprating.

Council Tenants

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many council tenants there were in each year since 1997; how many of those tenants were on housing benefit; what the cost of council tenants' housing benefit was in each year; and from what source the cost of such housing benefits has been met since it ceased to be a charge on housing revenue accounts. [61725]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is in the following tables. Since 2004-05, when responsibility for payment of rent rebate subsidy passed from the then ODPM to DWP, the cost of rent rebates has been a charge to local authorities; general funds. DWP pays subsidy to local authorities for expenditure incurred on rent rebates.

5. Some figures for past years may have changed since previous publications owing to the incorporation of more up-to-date information. Also please note that from April 2003 responsibility for child benefit, guardians allowance and child's special allowance has been transferred to Inland Revenue.
6. Figures exclude asylum seekers from April 1999, since when the National Asylum Support Service has reimbursed DWP for benefits paid to asylum seekers.

Customer Management System Call Centres

Natascha Engel: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Government make a profit from the operation of customer management system call centres. [68457]

Mrs. McGuire: The Government do not make any profit from the operation of customer management system call centres.

Employment and Support Allowance

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether young people under the age of 25 will receive a lower basic rate of the proposed employment and support allowance than those over the age of 25; and if he will make a statement. [73351]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 25 May 2006]: The formal consultation exercise for the Green Paper "A new deal for welfare: Empowering people to work" finished on 21 April. We are currently considering the responses and will publish a report in the early summer.

Error Task Force

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made in reducing levels of official error in the benefit system, with particular reference to the work of the Error Task Force. [72348]

Mr. Plaskitt: The latest available estimates for the value of official error in the benefits system as a whole cover the year to March 2005 and total £0.9 billion. These were published in the Departmental Resource Account in January 2006.

A task force was established in January 2006 to address the top value official errors in the main income-related benefits. The task force has identified a number of improvement measures which are now in the process of being implemented. The first set of official error figures covering the period of the task force are due to be published in summer 2007.

Gershon Efficiency Targets

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress his Department is making towards achieving compliance with Gershon efficiency targets; and if he will list the (a) reallocations of savings targets between different sections of the Department and its agencies, (b) arrangements for securing and monitoring service quality and (c) external audit of compliance with the targets which have taken place in pursuit of those targets. [69278]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Department is on track to meet its Gershon review efficiency targets. Progress against the targets has been reported in the Department's Departmental Report 2006 which was laid before Parliament on 11 May 2006.

Indicative year-end headcount milestones by DWP business are set out as follows. DWP SR2004 financial settlement was funded net of required financial efficiency savings. The Department for Work and Pensions spending plans for the SR2004 period are set out in the Department's Departmental Report 2006.

The Department's Efficiency Technical Note sets out how the Department will measure achievement of the efficiency targets from the Spending Review 2004 and departmental performance, including assurance arrangements for those measures. The Efficiency Technical Note is published on the Department's website.

Income Support

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what information he collates on the accuracy of income support calculations. [69276]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what information he collates on the accuracy of Income Support calculations. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus carries out accuracy checks on Income Support calculations at national and at local site level.

Data is collected nationally to measure progress towards our benefit delivery target. This target supports Jobcentre Plus in delivering our key business processes efficiently, accurately and to agreed standards. Performance is measured in five key Jobcentre Plus processes, including the accurate processing of Income Support claims. We currently have a target of 90 per cent accuracy. The latest performance figure for Income Support accuracy to the end of March 2006 is 89.39 per cent. Full claims checks of a sample of cases are made by a specialist external team 3 times a year.

Data is also collected internally at a local level. The data collected includes random accuracy checks of staff work, with 100 per cent accuracy checks of the work of new staff after they have been trained. An accuracy database has been designed for the simple and accurate recording of the checks detailing any errors found.

I hope this is helpful.

Jobcentre Plus Labour Market System

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action his Department is taking to increase the numbers of people in work aged 50 years and over in Hartlepool constituency. [72614]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Like all other customers, people aged 50 and over can benefit from the range of services provided by Jobcentre Plus, including access to jobs and help and support to find work.

Additional help is provided to older people who do not find work quickly. New Deal 50 plus is a voluntary programme that provides people with advice and guidance from personal advisers, and access to in-work financial help through the 50 plus element of the working tax credit. Since April 2000, the programme has been successful in helping more than 150,000 older workers into employment, including 320 people in Hartlepool. Once in work, New Deal 50 plus customers can claim a training grant of up to £1,500 for training of which up to £300 can be used for life-long learning.

People aged 50 and over, including those in Hartlepool, are also eligible for help from New Deal 25 plus. People who have been claiming jobseeker's allowance (JSA) for 18 months and who have not previously participated in New Deal 25 plus are already required to attend the Gateway stage of the New Deal 25 plus programme. This is a period of up to four months of intensive job search and specialist help and support to improve job prospects. This is followed by the intensive activity period (IAP) which is currently voluntary for people aged 50 and over. The IAP provides further support and pre-work training to help people return to work.

Since April 2004, we have been piloting mandatory participation in the New Deal 25 plus IAP for people aged 50 to 59 who have been claiming JSA for 18 months. The pilot has offered people in this age group more extensive help back to work. Hartlepool was not part of the pilot. However, interim pilot data has yielded positive results and, as announced in our Welfare Reform Green Paper, we will be commencing a phased national rollout.

New Deal 50 plus is a voluntary programme for those who have been claiming benefits, including those claiming the pension credit, for six months. However, our Green Paper also announced our intention to pilot mandatory participation in New Deal 50 plus activities for people aged 50 to 59 who have been claiming JSA for six months. This will involve attendance at work-focused interviews and the development of action plans to help participants move into employment. Pilot locations have not yet been confirmed.

In spring 2005 there were 3 million people claiming incapacity benefits in Great Britain, of whom 1.3 million were aged 50 or over. As nearly half of all benefit claimants aged 50 or over are on IB, they will be able to benefit from the rollout of the successful Pathways to Work service across the whole country which will be completed by 2008. Pathways offers new IB customers early support from skilled personal advisers and direct access to a "Choices Package" of employment programmes and clear financial incentives to make work pay. Any IB customer will be able to access the support and help available on a voluntary basis. Pathways has already begun helping people in the Hartlepool area, having rolled out there last year.

Our Age Positive campaign works with employers and others to promote the business benefits of an age diverse workforce and best practice on age in recruitment, training and promotion. In May 2005 we launched the 'Be Ready' national information campaign to raise employer awareness of, and ability to adopt, flexible employment and retirement opportunities to support the recruitment and retention of older workers in advance of age legislation due in October 2006.

Pension Credit

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have received back payments of pension credit of (a) £1,000 to £1,999 and (b) £2,000 or more in each year since 2001. [70767]

James Purnell: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the pension credit caseload handled by the Pensions Service was during (a) January, (b) February, (c) March and (d) April 2006. [71723]

James Purnell: The information requested is not available; caseload figures are published on a quarterly basis each year.

The most recent early caseload estimates available are for February 2006. As at February 2006, there were 2,706,200 pension credit claimants in Great Britain.

Notes:

1. These figures are early estimates. Caseload figures are taken from the CMS scan at 17 February 2006, rated up to give end-month estimates. These are adjusted using the historical relationship between Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study (WPLS) and GMS data to give an estimate of the final WPLS figure.

2. Caseload figures are a count of the number of pension credit claims in payment at a given time.

3. Caseloads are rounded to the nearest hundred.

Women Pensioners

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many women who are eligible to claim state retirement pension at 60 have not done so. [71846]

James Purnell: The information is not available in the format requested. However, it is estimated that approximately 15,000 women each year are eligible to but do not claim their state pension at age 60, but do so subsequently.

Note:

Estimates pre-date the introduction of more general deferral arrangement from April 2005 which may encourage more women to defer claiming their state pension.

Work (Over-50s)

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action his Department is taking to increase the number of people in work aged 50 years and over in Denton and Reddish constituency. [73132]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Like all other customers, people aged 50 and over can benefit from the range of services provided by Jobcentre Plus, including access to jobs and help and support to find work.

Additional help is provided to older people who do not find work quickly. New Deal 50 plus is a voluntary programme that provides people with advice and guidance from personal advisers, and access to in-work financial help through the 50 plus element of the working tax credit. Since April 2000, the programme has been successful in helping more than 150,000 older workers into employment, including 240 people in Denton and Reddish. Once in work, New Deal 50 plus customers can claim a training grant of up to £1,500 for training of which up to £300 can be used for life-long learning.

People aged 50 and over, including those in Denton and Reddish, are also eligible for help from New Deal 25 plus. People who have been claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) for 18 months and who have not previously participated on New Deal 25 plus are already required to attend the Gateway stage of the New Deal 25 plus programme. This is a period of up to four months of intensive job search and specialist help and support to improve job prospects. This is followed by the intensive activity period (IAP) which is currently voluntary for people aged 50 and over. The IAP provides further support and pre-work training to help people return to work.

Since April 2004, we have been piloting mandatory participation in the New Deal 25 plus IAP for people aged 50-59 who have been claiming JSA for 18 months. The pilot has offered people in this age group more extensive help back to work. Denton and Reddish was not part of the pilot; however, interim pilot data has yielded positive results and, as announced in our Welfare Reform Green Paper, we will be commencing a phased national rollout.

New Deal 50 plus is a voluntary programme for those who have been claiming benefits, including those claiming the pension credit, for six months. However, our Green Paper also announced our intention to pilot mandatory participation in New Deal 50 plus activities for people aged 50-59 who have been claiming JSA for six months. This will involve attendance at work-focused interviews and the development of action plans to help participants move into employment. Pilot locations have not yet been confirmed.

In spring 2005 there were 3 million people claiming incapacity benefits in Great Britain, of whom 1.3 million were aged 50 or over. As nearly half of all benefit claimants aged 50 or over are on IB, they will be able to benefit from the rollout of the successful Pathways to Work service across the whole country which will be completed by 2008. Pathways offers new IB customers early support from skilled personal advisers and direct access to a 'Choices Package' of employment programmes and clear financial incentives to make work pay. Any IB customer will be able to access the support and help available on a voluntary basis. Pathways is due to roll out in the Denton and Reddish area in the future.

Our Age Positive Campaign works with employers and others to promote the business benefits of an age diverse workforce and best practice on age in recruitment, training and promotion. In May 2005 we launched the 'Be Ready' national information campaign to raise employer awareness of, and ability to adopt, flexible employment and retirement opportunities to support the recruitment and retention of older workers in advance of age legislation due in October 2006.

Work Incentives

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to review the structure of (a) housing benefit and (b) council tax benefit in order to improve work incentives; and if he will make a statement. [64015]

Mr. Plaskitt: We continue to keep work incentives in both benefits under review. For example, since April 2004 a move into work has no longer required a fresh claim for either housing benefit or council tax benefit for the vast majority of people. Also, from April 2004 the extended payment scheme in housing benefit and council tax benefit has been widened to include people moving off incapacity benefit or severe disablement allowance because they are starting work.

As outlined in the Green Paper "A New Deal for Welfare: Empowering People to Work" published in February, we propose to roll out the new local housing allowance to tenants in the private rented sector. The local housing allowance would be a major simplification of the housing benefit system which would make it easier for people to understand what in-work support they could receive. Our proposal to pay the local housing allowance directly to tenants, rather than to landlords, is also designed to promote financial inclusion and, where appropriate, help tenants develop financial and budgeting skills as they move towards work.

TREASURY

Birds

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many birds were imported into the (a) UK and (b) EU in each year between 2000 and 2005; and how many were of (i) wild-caught, (ii) captive-bred, (iii) ranched and (iv) farmed origin in each year. [67041]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

HEALTH

Abortions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has (a) undertaken and (b) evaluated on the number of women who died following complications from a legal abortion; when her Department last undertook an evidence review of the number of women who died following complications from a legal abortion that drew on (i) UK and (ii) international research; and if she will make a statement. [70407]

Caroline Flint: The confidential inquiry into maternal and child health (CEMACH) investigates all maternal deaths, including those following a legal abortion, and publishes an evidence-based report, for the United Kingdom (UK), every three years. The latest report, "Why Mothers Die 2000-02", is available on its website at:

www.cemach.org.uk

The next report for 2003-05 will be published in late summer 2007. CEMACH continues to draw on all relevant UK and international research and the report's findings inform clinical guidelines on abortion care.

Acute Hospitals

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has commissioned into single-bed room provision in acute hospitals with particular reference to (a) additional capital costs, (b) patient stays and (c) patient safety. [72847]

Andy Burnham: The Department has commissioned research into single bedroom provision in acute hospitals, which includes references to additional capital costs, patient stays and patient safety.

Details of this research commissioned by the Department are shown in the table.

Project	Status

Alcohol Treatment Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the scheme to establish alcohol health workers in accident and emergency departments, general practitioner surgeries and some criminal justice settings announced in November 2005 will begin. [72356]

Caroline Flint: This scheme is an aspect of a series of trailblazer pilot sites to be implemented in 24 dedicated sites. We are in discussion with strategic health authorities as to how they can be delivered and when they will begin.

Lynda Waltho: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the recent Alcohol Needs Assessment Research Project report, what steps she is taking (a) to address the gap identified between the provision of alcohol treatment and demand and (b) to increase access to and capacity of specialist alcohol treatment services. [70164]

Caroline Flint: Responsibility to improve services and fund service improvements rests with local primary care trusts.

In order to assist local commissioners the Department published the Alcohol Needs Assessment Research Project (ANARP) in November 2005. This is the first comprehensive study of the need for and provision of alcohol services in England.

The Department has launched "Alcohol Misuse Interventions: Guidance on developing a local programme of improvement", for commissioners developing a local programme of improvement for local alcohol treatment services. We have also sponsored a series of regional conferences to highlight the need for improved focus on alcohol interventions.

A comprehensive review of the evidence base for the effectiveness of alcohol treatment interventions will be published shortly, alongside guidance on "Models of Care for Alcohol Misusers", which will lay out how best to combine treatment approaches into an effective local alcohol treatment system.

Ambulance Service

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average response time for ambulances in (a) England, (b) each region and (c) the Tees Valley was in each year since 1997. [71081]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department collects ambulance response time data by ambulance trust rather than by geographical area, and in relation to response time requirements rather than by average response time. Therefore, the information requested is not centrally collected in the required format.

The data that the Department does collect on ambulance response times has been published on an annual basis in the statistical bulletin, "Ambulance services, England". These documents are all available in the Library and from 1998-99. The latest data is available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/11/36/79/04113679.pdf.

These publications include ambulance response time data for the Tees, East and North Yorkshire Ambulance Trust, which covers Tees Valley, and for the whole of England.

Bone Marrow Donors

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to increase the (a) number and (b) diversity of bone marrow donors. [72936]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 18 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1163-64W.

Childhood Immunisation

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to improve childhood vaccination take up for families living in the most disadvantaged primary care trust areas. [72768]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Since November 2004, the Department has taken forward a wide-ranging assessment to investigate how best to support the improvement of child and adult immunisation services through commissioning including:

an examination of the systems and commissioning routes needed to improve access and increase low uptake; and a review of the way services could deliver more effectively for the people currently missing out.

Primary care trusts' (PCTs) experience of the new commissioning routes for immunisation is still growing and there is an opportunity to share good practice on planning and service delivery using these mechanisms. In support of this, the Department has:

prepared guidance for the wave two national purchasing pilots of alternative providers for immunisation services (referred to as the alternative personal medical services (ARMS) wave two pilots); developed a series of targets for local use as part of the Better Metrics project in conjunction with the London Health Observatory to allow service managers to monitor the performance of services targeted at deprived or disadvantaged groups; held two national events with national health service primary care contracting to share good practice and facilitate learning networks; and in the recent White Paper, announced measures to free up the target payment funds and allow them to be carried across into other contract forms. It also highlighted a recent example of a nurse-led personal medical services that successfully increase immunisation uptake rates among poor and deprived groups who were planning to apply for ARMS status.

The Department is working in partnership across policy teams, NHS employers, other Government Departments (including the Department for Education and Skills, Social Exclusion Unit and Neighbourhood Renewal Unit) and a range of NHS implementing agencies in order to improve childhood immunisation take up for families. Specifically:

continue collaboration with our stakeholder to examine the systems and commissioning routes that have worked to improve access and increase low uptake; requiring the Health Protection Agency to promote the benefit of opportunistic immunisation, in order to reach disadvantaged groups more effectively; continue to deliver a series of reports and seminars and generate concrete recommendations for PCTs and commissioners; and issued joint guidance with neighbourhood renewal unit on local partnerships that led to a number of PCTs and councils to submit and secure a local area agreement for immunisation among disadvantaged groups.

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the childhood immunisation take-up rate is in primary care trusts where GPs have opted out of providing this service. [72770]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information in the form requested is not available.

There is currently no nationally available analysis of the impact of those general practitioners opting out on immunisation uptake rates.

Recent analysis of the proportion of general medical services partnerships in England opting out of childhood immunisation schemes as at 30 September 2004 showed that though the majority of partnerships (93.7 per cent.) had not opted out, some had. The practices opting out are disproportionately likely to be in deprived areas.

Children's Hospices

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions (a) she and (b) Ministers in her Department have visited children's hospices on official business in each of the last five years; and which hospices were visited on each occasion. [62753]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is not available in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Since May 2005, no Departmental Minister has yet visited a children's hospice on official business. In a series of meetings with doctors and other representatives from hospices, the former Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Hodge Hill (Mr. Byrne), met with doctors and representatives of Butterwick Hospice on 14 February and Little Havens Children's Hospice on 9 May.

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent commitment the Government have made to support the work of specialist services for (a) myalgic encephalomyelitis and encephalopathy and (b) chronic fatigue syndrome; and if she will make a statement. [74158]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In 2003, the Department announced £8.5 million central funding to stimulate improvements in care and access to treatment and to ensure the long-term continuing provision of services for people with myalgic encephalomyelitis/encephalopathy and chronic fatigue syndrome (CFS/ME) across England. This resulted in the development of 13 clinical network co-ordinating centres and 36 local multi-disciplinary teams, as well as 11 specialist children and young people teams to support the development of multi-disciplinary CFS/ME services in their designated area.

Funding of these services from 2006-07 is included within the resource allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs), to facilitate the continuation of services following the end of the ring-fenced period of funding. CFS/ME services are therefore considered as part of the future local planning of services and PCTs can take steps to ensure the establishment of further CFS/ME services, where there is local need.

National health service organisations are expected to demonstrate that they are making progress towards achieving the level of service quality described in the national service framework (NSF) for long-term conditions. The NSF sets out a clear vision of how health and social care organisations can improve the quality of care, consistency and responsiveness of their services and help improve the lives of people with neurological conditions, including CFS/ME. The Healthcare Commission and the Commission for Social Care Inspection can undertake performance reviews to assess progress on local implementation of the NSF.

Community Nursing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS trusts are operating a freeze on community nursing vacancies. [72266]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Consultations

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many public consultations her Department undertook in 2005; and what the cost was (a) in total and (b) of each consultation. [72856]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: During the year 2005 the Department launched 47 formal public consultations in order to inform the Department's policy development.

Information on the cost of each consultation and the total cost of all consultations could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Report

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department (a) has undertaken and (b) plans to undertake into the reasons for the slippage of targets (i) 3 and (ii) 4 set out on page 13 of the Departmental Report 2006; and if she will make a statement. [71976]

Caroline Flint: The "Saving Lives: Our Healthier Nation" White Paper (1999) set out targets to reduce rates of death and serious injury from accidents by 2010. Analysis of the data suggests that the 65 and over age group accounts for the main part of the increase in the death rate from accidents, and in hospital admissions for serious accidental injury. Falls account for the main part of the increase in death rates in this group, and are the major contributor to the increase in admissions for serious accidental injury in this group. The Department is keeping the targets under review to ensure that areas of slippage are dealt with as appropriate.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who is responsible for progress on each of the targets set out on pages 13 and 14 of the Departmental Report 2006; to whom each person reports; what recent discussions she has had about implementation of each target; and if she will make a statement. [71977]

Andy Burnham: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health has overall responsibility for delivering the targets set out in the Department's public service agreement. She is supported in delivering her functions through the Department. The Secretary of State has regular meetings with the Permanent Secretary, the Chief Medical Officer and the Chief Executive, to apprise her of progress against targets and other matters.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many copies of the Departmental Report 2006 were printed; at what cost; how many were purchased for (a) internal departmental use, (b) NHS primary care trusts and (c) interested bodies and organisations; and if she will make a statement. [71979]

Andy Burnham: 1,200 copies of the 2006 Departmental Report were printed, at a total cost of £23,551. Half were for internal departmental use and the remainder were for The Stationery Office. None were sent to national health service bodies.

Drug Strategy

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the Government have spent on the Drug Strategy in each year since it was introduced; and how much of that sum was spent on (a) purchasing programmes of treatment and (b) staff systems and other costs relating to overseeing its expenditure in each year. [71993]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Annual direct expenditure for tackling drugs for the last five years for which figures are available is shown in the second column of table 1. We are unable to provide information regarding monies spent on purchasing programmes of treatment and staff systems in the format requested. However, the pooled drug treatment budget (PTB) since 2001, including yearly local mainstream spend, is shown in total in table 1. This money is spent directly on delivery treatment, as well as improving access to treatment, for example for offenders via drug intervention programmes, and supporting drug misusers after they come out of treatment.

	PTB and local funding	£ million Annual direct expenditure for tackling drugs
2001-02	287	932
2002-03	322	1,026
2003-04	436	1,244
2004-05	457	1,344
2005-06	508	1,483

Emergency Treatment

John Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what working definitions are used for (a) accident and emergency departments, (b) walk-in centres and (c) minor injuries units for the purposes of determining which procedures are carried out in each. [68791]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Accident and emergency (A&E) departments are officially classified into three types. The types include major departments (type one), single-specialty departments (type two) and non consultant-led services (type three). Type three services are mainly minor injury and illness and include minor injury units (MIUs) and walk-in centres (WiCs).

The services which it is clinically appropriate for any individual A&E department, MIU or WiC to provide are a matter for local clinical judgement according to local skills and competencies.

Enzyme Replacement Therapy

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 9 May 2006, Official Report, column 217W, on enzyme replacement therapy, when she expects a decision to be made on whether the funding of enzyme replacement therapies for lysosomal storage diseases will continue under the present National Specialist Commissioning Advisory Group arrangements after 31 May 2007. [72351]

Andy Burnham: It has not yet been decided when a decision will be made on whether the funding of enzyme replacement therapies for lysosomal storage disorders will continue under the present national specialist commissioning advisory group arrangements after 31 May 2007.

Fairer Charging Policy

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make a statement on the implementation of the Fairer Charging Policy for care payments; [73765]

(2) what mechanisms exist to ensure that social care charges to individuals do not exceed the income they receive. [73766]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is for councils to decide how to set charges for non-residential social services. The legal basis is that charges generally should be 'reasonable' and that no one should be asked to pay more than they reasonably can. The position contrasts with that on charges for residential care, where regulations prescribe a national means test, which councils must follow.

The Department of Health issued statutory guidance, "Fairer Charging Policies for Home Care and other Non-residential Social Services—Guidance for Councils with Social Services Responsibilities", which is available in the Library, to all local councils in November 2001. It was amended in September 2003 to reflect the introduction of pension credits. It does not seek to change councils' power to charge, or not, for these services.

The guidance aims to ensure in particular that service users on low incomes are protected from charging and that any charges levied on disability benefits are subject to an assessment of disability costs, to ensure their reasonableness. Councils are required to ensure that charges do not put any users' incomes below basic income support levels or the guarantee credit of pension credit, plus a buffer of 25 per cent. This can lead to real improvements in the position of many users, who will cease to pay charges or pay a smaller charge.

Folic Acid

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effects of high levels of folic acid on the incidence of twins following in vitro fertilisation; and if she will make a statement. [71975]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The effects of folic acid on multiple births, including effects following in vitro fertilisation, is currently being considered by the Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition as part of its report on "Folate and Disease Prevention". The report is expected to be published later this year.

Food Supplements Directive

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether officials in her Department have held discussions with the Better Regulation Task Force on a regulatory impact assessment in relation to setting maximum permitted levels for vitamins and minerals under the food supplements directive; and if she will make a statement; [70011]

(2) when she last met the EU Commissioner responsible for implementation of the food supplements directive to discuss its potential impact on the choice of products available to British consumers; and what progress was made at the meeting; [70012]

(3) what progress is being made by the Food Standards Agency (FSA) in meeting counterparts from competent authorities in each other member state of the EU to discuss the setting of maximum permitted levels for vitamins and minerals under the food supplements directive; and what further action the FSA is planning to promote her objectives; [70013]

(4) when she expects member states to receive from the European Commission the consultation document on setting the maximum permitted levels for vitamins and minerals under the food supplements directive; [70014]

(5) with which other EU member states she has held recent meetings to discuss setting the maximum permitted levels for vitamins and minerals under the food supplements directive; and with which other member states she plans to hold discussions. [70015]

Caroline Flint: The issue of obtaining data for a regulatory impact assessment in relation to setting maximum levels for vitamin and minerals under the food supplements directive has been discussed with the Better Regulation Task Force (BRTF). The BRTF has agreed in principle to this and officials will discuss this further with the BRTF.

I spoke with the European Union Commissioner responsible for implementation of the food supplements directive to discuss its potential impact on the choice of products available to British consumers on 7 and 12 July 2005.

To date, Food Standards Agency (FSA) officials have met counterparts from other competent authorities in the Netherlands, Germany, Ireland, Finland, France and Italy. These meetings have provided an opportunity for an exchange of views on the setting of maximum safe levels of vitamins and minerals in food supplements. The FSA will seek further opportunities for meetings with officials from other member states and interested parties.

The European Commission has indicated that it will present discussion documents in autumn 2006 to gain views from member states about the setting of maximum permitted levels for vitamins and minerals in food supplements.

The Public Health Minister has written to her counterparts in other member states and members of the European Parliament informing them of the United Kingdom's position on setting maximum permitted levels, and that FSA officials will be visiting certain member states to discuss this issue and vitamins and vitamins and minerals in food supplements.

General Practitioners

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners per 100,000 population there were in (a) the Sutton and Merton Primary Care Trust area and (b) England in each year since 2003. [71390]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The requested information is shown in the table.

2004 population figures from the 2001 ONS resident estimates have been used for 2005 organisation calculations, as population figures for 2005 at organisation level are not yet available, this figure is therefore subject to change.

Health Services (Cornwall)

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nursing and (b) residential care beds there are in Cornwall; and how many there were in (i) 1996, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2005. [72799]

Caroline Flint: Table 1 shows the number of residential and nursing care home places in Cornwall and Isles of Scilly, as at 31 March in 1996 and 2001.

Table 1: Numbers of residential and nursing care home places in Cornwall and Isles of Scilly

		Rounded data
	At 31 March:
	1996	2001
Residential places[1]	5,400	4,800
Nursing places[2, 3]	2,600	3,200
Total places[4]	8,000	8,000

[1] Residential data are for Cornwall and Isles of Scilly unitary authorities.
[2] Nursing data are for Cornwall and Isles of Scilly health authority.
[3] Nursing data include places in general nursing homes, mental nursing homes and private hospitals and clinics.
[4] Totals may not equal the sum of parts due to rounding.

I understand from the Chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI), which took over the responsibility for the regulation and inspection of care homes in England on 1 April 2004, that the number of nursing and residential care homes and beds in Cornwall Local Authority, as at 31 March 2005, was as shown in Table 2. There are some definitional differences between these data and those for years up to 2001.

Hospital Alerts

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will define (a) red, (b) black and (c) all other hospital alerts. [68042]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is aware that some national health service trusts and ambulance trusts operate local bed capacity management systems which incorporate coloured alerts. However, these are local arrangements and there is no national definition of particular colour alerts.

Hospital Cleanliness

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made in improving hospital cleanliness. [73565]

Andy Burnham: Hospital cleanliness is measured annually as part of the patient environment action team (PEAT) assessment. The first inspections in 2000 found around one-third of trusts to have poor or unacceptable standards. Since then there has been a steady improvement and in 2004-05, fewer than 5 per cent. were classified as poor or unacceptable. The latest PEAT inspections have recently been completed, and the results will be published in due course.

The Department has a comprehensive and multi-faceted programme of work on cleaner hospitals covering a wide range of issues, including:

setting standards that are monitored by the Healthcare Commission; increased investment;

involving ward sisters and charge nurses;

inspecting hospitals;

issuing guidance;

raising awareness; and research into alternative cleaning and monitoring technologies.

Hospital Transportation

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 13 March 2006, Official Report, column 2029W, if she will collect data in respect of the frequency of transportation between hospitals of infants requiring treatment in special care baby units; and if she will make a statement. [73209]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: No. In line with the principles of shifting the balance of power to local national health service organisations, we wish to minimise the burden of all central information requirements on the health service.

It is for local neonatal networks and hospital trusts to determine the appropriate number of special care baby cots to ensure there is provision for babies requiring such care. Strategic health authority areas will increase or decrease cots to reflect demand.

Hospitals

Mr. Devine: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) NHS trusts and (b) foundation hospitals in England recorded unsafe staffing levels in 2005. [72257]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All national health service organisations are required to ensure that they have sufficient appropriately trained staff to deliver high quality care in safe environments. Their performance in terms of safety and care environments is reviewed by the Healthcare Commission. The Department does not collect the information requested.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals were failing to meet Government targets in (a) England and (b) the boroughs of the Tees Valley sub-region in the latest month for which figures are available. [32766]

Andy Burnham: In line with the principles of devolution, the Department monitors progress against local delivery plans that strategic health authorities agree with primary care trusts. These plans are based on current Government priorities set out in "National Standards, Local Action: Health and Social Care Standards and Planning Framework 2005/06-2007/08" at SHA level.

Individual national health service trust performance against national priorities is assessed by the independent regulator, the Healthcare Commission, through its annual performance ratings process. The latest performance ratings are available on the Healthcare Commission's website at ratings2005.healthcarecommission.org.uk/.

Human Embryos

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department last undertook a review of the scientific evidence of when human life begins that drew on (a) UK and (b) international research; and if she will make a statement. [70406]

Caroline Flint: Under English law, a foetus is not recognised as being a separate person from its mother. It has no rights independent of its mother until it is born alive and has an independent existence.

Imported Blood Products

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department became aware of the higher risk of hepatitis C contamination from imported blood products; and if she will make a statement. [64128]

Caroline Flint: The issues around the risk of haemophilia patients acquiring infection with hepatitis C through contaminated blood products are complex. We understand that there has been concern that plasma imported from the United States may have carried a higher risk of transmitting hepatitis C. However, knowledge of the viral risks associated with both domestically produced and imported blood products evolved over time.

Blood products contain plasma pooled from many thousands of donors, and only one donation needs to carry the virus to infect the whole batch. Regardless of the source, or of the manufacturer of the plasma used, all products were potentially contaminated with the hepatitis C virus as a result of the need for pooling and the prevalence of the virus in blood donor populations around the world.

Methadone

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what alternatives to methadone are used by the NHS. [69409]

Caroline Flint: Methadone remains the main treatment of the national health service for the management of opiate dependence. The main alternative drug for management of opiate dependence is buprenorphine[1], used increasingly in the NHS since the Department amended regulations in April 2001 to enable practitioners to prescribe the drug for opiate dependence safely through instalment dispensing.

Patients may also be prescribed pharmaceutical diamorphine, and in a small number of cases alternative opiates such as clonidine and lofexidine to substitute for illicit opiate use, with decisions based on clinical judgement for each particular case.

As part of the Government's ongoing commitment to ensuring drug treatment is delivered in a way that maximises the potential for a successful outcome, the National Institute of Health and Clinical Excellence is currently conducting a review of the effectiveness of methadone, buprenorphine and naltrexone in the treatment of drug misusers, due for publication in March 2007.

Although outcomes generally are better for those who remain on opiate substitution treatment, there has been an increase in focus on commissioning effective support for patients who are ready to benefit from abstinence-based approaches to optimise such treatment pathways. Rehabilitation services or aftercare support are available for those opiate-dependent drug users who can successfully become drug-free and who no longer require treatments such as methadone.

Milk Tokens

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the level of take up of milk tokens by pregnant women. [72884]

Caroline Flint: Data are not collected on the number of pregnant women who may be eligible for free milk under the welfare food scheme. There are approximately 25,500 pregnant women currently in receipt of milk tokens. Promotion of the new Healthy Start scheme planned for late autumn this year is expected at least to maintain the current claim volumes.

Ministerial Visits

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for Ministers of State in her Department on foreign visits in each of the last three years; [69209]

(2) on how many occasions Ministers of State in her Department stayed overnight in (a) five star, (b) four star and (c) three star hotels on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [69210]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information cannot be supplied without disproportionate costs.

Under the terms of the "Ministerial Code" and "Travel by Ministers", when travelling on official business Ministers are expected to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements.

Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. This information includes accommodation costs. Copies are available in the Library.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Department is taking to ensure effective medical education in the diagnosis and treatment of myalgic (a) encephalomyelitis and (b) encephalopathy. [71469]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Medical schools develop their own undergraduate medical curriculum in the light of recommendations from the General Medical Council's Education Committee, which has statutory responsibility to determine the extent of knowledge and skill required for the granting of primary medical qualifications in the United Kingdom (UK). The Department does not provide direction on the content of medical school courses. Medical schools are autonomous bodies and Ministers are precluded by legislation from intervening in their internal affairs, including curriculum content.

The content and standard of postgraduate medical training is the responsibility of the postgraduate medical education and training board, which is the competent authority for postgraduate medical training in the UK.

NHS Commissioning

Roger Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when her Department's taskforce will publish its review of NHS commissioning of specialised services. [71916]

Andy Burnham: The report of the review of commissioning arrangements for specialised services was published on the Department's website and is available at www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/13/52/16/04135216.pdf.

Copies are being placed in the Library.

NHS Finance

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure consistent standards of patient care in hospital trusts seeking to recover from financial deficit. [72725]

Andy Burnham: All areas of the country have received record increases in their level of funding for the national health service. Funding of the NHS has increased from £34.7 billion in 1997-98 to £69.7 billion in 2004-05. By 2007-08, spending on the NHS will have increased to over £92 billion. This level of investment should enable NHS organisations to deliver key national and financial targets.

Priorities for the NHS are set out in "National Standards, Local Action: Health and Social Care Standards and Planning Framework 2005/06-2007/08", which is available on the Department's website at:

These include details of health care standards, existing commitments and new national targets. All NHS organisations are expected to meet these priorities and achieve financial balance. The independent regulator, the Healthcare Commission, assesses health care organisations' performance against these priorities, including financial balance.

NHS Management

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the turnover rate for NHS trust (a) chief executives, (b) chairmen and (c) senior managers was in each year for which records are available. [70156]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

NHS Trusts

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the NHS trusts that have funded visits abroad for staff in the last 12 months; and in each case what was the (a) purpose and (b) cost of each trip. [71402]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many chief executives were recruited to NHS trusts in 2005; [71411]

(2) how many of the chief executives recruited to NHS trusts in 2005 (a) were head hunted and (b) applied for advertised vacancies; [71412]

(3) how many of the chief executives recruited to NHS trusts in 2005 came from a background predominantly in the private sector. [71413]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Pharmaceutical Wholesalers

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will take steps to amend the Medicines Act 1969 to require the Medical and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency to inspect the warehouses and operations of companies which self-distribute medicines and drugs; [73160]

(2) if she will require the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency to extend its inspection role to cover companies which self-distribute medicines and drugs and which are not covered by the requirement of the Medicines Act 1968. [73161]

Andy Burnham: The Medicines Act 1968, as amended, and orders and regulations under that Act, regulate the distribution of medicinal products in the United Kingdom. These provisions transpose into the United Kingdom's law the relevant requirements of Directive 2001/83/EC relating to medicinal products for human use.

Companies wishing to wholesale distribute medicines for human use are required, under the Act and related regulations, to be licensed and inspected by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) unless an exemption applies.

The term self-distribute, in relation to medicines for human use, is not a term used or defined in Directive 2001/83/EC or the United Kingdom medicines legislation, or in official guidance published by the MHRA.

The supply of medicines from a company's central distribution warehouse to its own retail outlets is not considered to be wholesale distribution as the supply is within the same legal entity.

The Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain is therefore responsible for the inspection of retail pharmacy businesses in England and Wales at which medicinal products are sold by retail or supplied in circumstances corresponding to retail.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many and what percentage of pharmaceutical wholesaler dealer licence holders have been inspected by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency within the target period of three years; [73164]

(2) how many inspectors the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency has available to inspect pharmaceutical wholesaler licence holders; and how many inspections each inspector has carried out in each of the last three years. [73169]

Andy Burnham: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA), the Government body responsible for the safety and licensing of medicines in the United Kingdom, employs six full-time good distribution practice inspectors. These inspectors inspect the facilities of licensed wholesale dealers of medicines to confirm compliance with the European Commission's guideline on good distribution practice and UK medicines regulations.

The current level of resource enables a regular and repeated inspection programme (at specified frequencies) of all (100 per cent.) of the facilities from where licensed wholesale distributors of medicinal products conduct their wholesale business to be maintained.

Details for the last three years of the numbers of inspections performed by good distribution practice inspectors is shown in the table:

	Number of inspections
Inspector	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06

For the year 2003-04 an additional GDP inspector was employed. This inspector performed 16 site inspections which are included in the totals for that year.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will estimate the annual increase in revenue if prescription charges had been increased in line with the rise in the retail price index since the present level of charges was established. [71973]

Andy Burnham: The information available in respect of England is shown in the table.

Primary Care Trusts

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many public responses there were to proposals for primary care trust reorganisation in (a) Trent, (b) South Yorkshire and (c) England; [69751]

(2) how many members of the general public attended each primary care trust reorganisation meeting in (a) Trent and (b) South Yorkshire. [69806]

Andy Burnham: The information regarding responses to local consultations on primary care trust reconfiguration and attendance at public meetings is as follows.

	PCTs
	Trent	South Yorkshire	England
Stakeholder meetings	29	42	830
Public attendance	860	69	11,785

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any financial surplus of the Bedford Primary Care Trust will be used to subsidise the financial deficit of the Bedfordshire Heartlands Primary Care Trust following the implementation of the new configuration of primary care trusts in Bedfordshire; and if she will make a statement. [72956]

Andy Burnham: It will be for strategic health authorities and the newly formed primary care trusts to manage, and continue to use, the funding available to them in the best possible way to deliver government targets and make service improvements.

The reconfiguration exercise should not be used locally to move resources from high performing areas to under-performing areas and vice versa. Local managers should be ensuring that the quality of financial management in all organisations is raised to the level of the best.

Private Finance Initiative Projects

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list reviews the Department is undertaking of private finance initiative projects; and whether she expects the review to affect the timescale for the project in each case. [64592]

Andy Burnham: Departmental officials will be reviewing all private finance initiative schemes yet to reach financial close and with an expected capital value of more than £75 million. The current list of such schemes is as follows:

University Hospital North Staffordshire National Health Service Trust

Essex Rivers Healthcare NHS Trust

Peterborough and Stamford Hospital NHS Foundation Trust

Mid Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust

University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust

Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust

North Middlesex University Hospital NHS Trust

Salford Royal Hospitals NHS Trust

Epsom and St. Helier University Hospitals NHS Trust

Royal Liverpool Children's Hospital NHS Trust

Southampton University Hospitals NHS Trust

Taunton and Somerset NHS Trust

Northampton General NHS Trust

Barnet and Chase Farm NHS Trust

The purpose of the review process is to deliver schemes that are financially viable and sustainable over the long term. It may be that in pursuit of achieving these objectives certain schemes experience limited delays.

Promotion Boards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what promotion boards have been held in her Department in each of the last five years. [72857]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: None. The Department assesses the suitability of employees for promotion on a job specific basis.

Small Change Big Difference

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department and its agencies have taken following the launch of the Government's Small Change Big Difference campaign. [72012]

Caroline Flint: We have followed up with "small change, big difference" event guests to explore tailored options for the initiative's roll-out. A series of further seminars is being planned. They will include the development of the logo and brand, investigating possible joint campaign work, the integration of the initiative into the wider public health framework and the work of all our key stakeholders.

A partnership programme will begin aligning key commercial and public sector partners with existing and new programme delivery, the aim being to create a number of dedicated, dynamic partnership programmes between government, commercial partners and non-governmental organisations in direct support of "Choosing Health" objectives. These partnerships will define routes to communicate with people through, for example, their place of work, as well as their local shops and during their leisure activities about making healthier choices in their lives.

Strategic Health Authorities

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many strategic health authority (a) chief executives, (b) chairmen and (c) senior managers have (i) medical, (ii) dental, (iii) nursing and (iv) other qualifications and previous experience of working in the (A) private sector and (B) NHS. [71465]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information in respect of chief executives and senior managers is not collected centrally. The NHS Appointments Commission is responsible for appointing the chairmen of NHS organisations, a number of whom are retired clinicians. I have asked the NHS Appointments Commission to write to the right hon. Gentleman direct with the information he seeks.

Telephone Advice Lines

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many telephone advice lines her Department and its non-departmental public bodies support; how many telephone advisers each employs; and how much funding is provided to each by (a) her Department and its non-departmental public bodies, (b) other Government Departments, (c) the private sector and (d) the voluntary sector. [66586]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department's call centre provides information of a general nature to members of the public about the work of the Department. It responds to about 120,000 telephone calls a year and most of the emails sent through the Department's website. The annual cost is £505,715.

There would be a disproportionate cost in identifying advice lines and funding by the Department in external bodies, since this is not ringfenced in funding given to those organisations.

Tuberculosis

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the 20 local authority areas with the highest incidence of tuberculosis; and if she will make a statement. [67434]

Caroline Flint: The 20 local authorities with the highest rates of notified cases of tuberculosis in England in the last year for which data is available are shown in the following table:

Local authority	2004
Hackney	95.1
Newham	92.0
Slough Unitary Authority (UA)	68.0

Islington	46.7
Greenwich	45.6
Blackburn with Darwen UA	42.1
Wolverhampton	41.0
Birmingham	40.1

United Health Europe

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many times (a) she, (b) her predecessor as Secretary of State and (c) another Health Minister met representatives of United Health Europe in 2005; and what the dates were of these meetings. [53685]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Neither the current nor the former Secretary of State for Health met representatives of United Health Europe in 2005.

The President of United Health Europe attended a meeting where Lord Warner made a speech at the Adam Smith Institute on 4 October 2005.

Liam Byrne met the President of United Health Europe on 27 July 2005.

Work Permit Regulations

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department conducted a race equality impact assessment concerning changes to the work permit regulations as they affect medical staff. [65676]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A partial race equality impact assessment was carried out on the proposed points-based system, which had the effect of ending permit-free training. A full one will be undertaken when the system is fully implemented.

On advice, an REIA has not been carried out on the recent changes to the immigration rules for postgraduate doctors and dentists which brought the immigration provisions for non-European Economic Area (EEA) junior doctors and dentists into line with the immigration provisions for non-EEA nationals wanting to work in any other sector of the United Kingdom labour market.

Wound Care

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the NHS spent on training and endorsements for wound care nurses in 2005; and what assessment her Department has undertaken of the value for money obtained from the expenditure. [71584]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally. It is for national health service trusts to decide on the skills and knowledge needed by their nursing work force in order to meet the needs of patients.

DEFENCE

Air Miles

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many free air miles have been accrued by senior civil servants in his Department on official business in each of the last three years; and how they were used. [70621]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence has no central record of air miles accrued by senior civil servants and is therefore unable to provide details of how they were used. Guidance for officials requires that air miles accrued on official business are not used for private purposes.

Armed Forces (Foreign Citizens)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what percentage of members of each of the armed forces are not British citizens, broken down by nationality. [72550]

Mr. Watson: The number and percentage of service personnel who are not British citizens in each of HM armed forces are shown by country in the following table:

Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether officials at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston are involved in designing a new warhead for the use in Trident missiles; and if he will make a statement. [73237]

Des Browne: I have nothing to add to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Member for Airdrie and Shotts (John Reid) to the hon. Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis) on 21 March 2006, Official Report, column 364W.

Bills

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the occasions when an amendment has been moved by (a) a Labour back bencher, (b) an Opposition back bencher and (c) an Opposition Front Bench spokesman to a Bill sponsored by his Department which has been accepted by his Department during the 2005-06 Session; and if he will make a statement. [72480]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence has sponsored the Armed Forces Bill during this session. Information on amendments moved and accepted during the Select Committee and Committee of the Whole House stages of the Bill is published in the Official Report.

Combat Stress

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much funding was allocated by his Department to the ex-services mental welfare society Combat Stress in each of the past five years. [58183]

Mr. Watson [holding answer 13 March 2006]: The information requested is set out in the following table:

Income received by Combat Stress to defray individual treatment expenses

	£ million
2000-01	1.5
2001-02	2.1
2002-03	2.4
2004-05	2.8

Ex-Services Mental Welfare Society ("Combat Stress").

Article 21 of the Naval, Military and Air Forces Etc. (Disablement and Death) Service Pensions Order 2006 provides that the Secretary of State for Defence may defray necessary expenses in respect of the medical, surgical or rehabilitative treatment of a former member of the armed forces which arise from a disablement due to service, provided they are not provided for under other UK legislation. Under this discretionary power, MOD defrays the individual costs of war pensioners undergoing "remedial treatment" at the Combat Stress homes for conditions related to their individual pensioned disablement and of related expenses, such as travel costs. The table shows the funding received by Combat Stress under this provision.

Conscientious Objectors

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many soldiers have been discharged on the grounds of conscientious objection over the last five years; [71509]

(2) how many applications to leave the Army on the grounds of conscientious objection have been considered by his Department over the last five years. [71510]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence has no record of any applications to leave the Regular Army on the grounds of conscientious objection in the last five years.

However, the Army cannot identify from its records those applications that may start as requests to leave the Army on the grounds of conscientious objection but result in an individual leaving for different reasons.

Departmental Plans

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made on the delivery of his Department's revised policy of providing industry with a better and longer-term understanding of the Department's future plans. [71478]

Mr. Ingram: We have started a series of briefings to various sectors of industry to set out more details of our forward plans—which have been welcomed by industry. We have also been reinforcing existing partnering agreements by providing industry with a clear view of our planning assumptions, recognising that these are subject to final investment decisions by Ministers and the Department.

Departmental Procurement

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress his Department has made in its discussion with industry on alternatives to competition as a means of delivering value for money; when he expects to complete his Department's action plan on this; and if he will make a statement. [71481]

Mr. Ingram: We have begun discussions on alternative approaches to competition in a joint MOD/industry working group established under the auspices of the National Defence Industries Council. By the end of 2006 we intend to have in place top level policy, working level guidance and revised training packages which ensure the selection of an appropriate commercial approach which continues to deliver demonstrable value for money for the Department.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the creation of a joint plan between his Department and industry for embedding defence acquisition values throughout the acquisition community. [71490]

Mr. Ingram: We are continuing to work with the National Defence Industries Council to ensure the defence acquisition values are the foundation upon which working relations within the MOD, and between the Department and industry are based. Within the Department's acquisition community, the values will be reflected in individuals' personal objectives and reward arrangements. Individual companies are already using the defence acquisition values to inform their in-house corporate values and behaviours.

The Defence Academy will be working to bring in joint training courses with industry to embed the values, and we are also ensuring that partnering agreements with industry reflect the values explicitly.

We shall be making a joint announcement with industry later this year to set out the totality of the work, and our achievements.

Departmental Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those (a) Acts and (b) parts of Acts which received Royal Assent between 1976 and 2006 for which his Department has policy responsibility and which remain in force. [70394]

Mr. Watson: With respect to part (a) of the question, the Ministry of Defence has policy responsibility for the following Acts which remain in force:

The Armed Forces Acts 1976; 1981; 1986; 1991; 1996 and 2001

The Armed Forces Discipline Act 2000

The Armed Forces (Pension and Compensation) Act 2004

The Army Act 1992

The Crown Proceedings Act 1987

The Greenwich Hospital Act 1990

The Ministry of Defence Police Act 1987

The Reserve Forces Acts 1980 and 1996

The Protection of Military Remains Act 1986.

No Acts have been identified in respect of part (b) of the question.

Eid-Ul-Adha

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff from his Department attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event in London in 2005; and what the total cost to his Department was of their attendance. [73090]

Mr. Watson: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will write to the hon. Member with details of the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event. Copies of her letter will be placed in the Library.

Eurofighter

Mr. Cranuby: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the timetable is for delivery of future tranches of Eurofighter Typhoon aircraft, with particular reference to those (a) with and (b) without full air-to-ground strike capability. [73554]

Mr. Ingram: The United Kingdom has, to date, contracted for two tranches of Eurofighter-Typhoon, providing 144 aircraft for use by the Royal Air Force. A decision by the Eurofighter Typhoon Partner Nations on the third production buy of the aircraft, and thus on the delivery timetable for this future tranche, has still to be taken. Integration of air-to-ground capabilities is being considered for Eurofighter Typhoon as part of a programme of future enhancements.

Gurkhas

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what estimate he has made of the number of widows of Gurkha servicemen who would receive pension payments if Gurkha servicemen were eligible for the British soldier's preserved pension at the age of 60 after more than two years of service; [72134]

(2) how many Gurkha ex-servicemen there are who retired prior to 1 July 1997; [72137]

(3) what estimate he has made of the cost of up-rating the pensions of Gurkha ex-servicemen who retired prior to 1 July 1997 to the amount received by their British soldier equivalents. [72139]

Mr. Watson: On 11 January 2005, the then Secretary of State announced to the House that he had commissioned a comprehensive review of the Terms and Conditions of Service under which Gurkhas serve in the British Army.

As part of this review, the Department is looking at the pension position of Gurkhas back to 1 July 1997. Prior to 1 July 1997 Gurkhas were members of an overseas-based force and had no comparable British soldier equivalents. Gurkha soldiers are members of the Gurkha pension scheme which does not provide for preserved pensions; there are therefore no Gurkha widows who would be eligible. The Department does not hold records of individuals (or of their widows) who do not have an entitlement to a pension, so cannot make reliable estimates of either the numbers involved or the cost of hypothetical pension entitlements.

However there are currently 26,699 Gurkha service pensioners (of which 1,900 have retired since 1 July 1997) and the Gurkha Welfare Trust has reported that last year it paid 10,246 welfare pensions. Of the 26,699, there are about 5,000 Gurkha widows' or family dependants' pensions in payment.

Helicopter Searches

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on how many occasions a helicopter from RAF Benson was used to assist a police search for a missing person in each of the last five years; [74199]

(2) if he will identify the helicopter from RAF Benson used to search for Dr. David Kelly on 18 July 2003; whether the helicopter in question was equipped with (a) an infra-red camera and (b) heat-seeking equipment; how long the helicopter was in the air; what areas it covered in its search; and if he will make a statement; [74200]

(3) how many (a) military, (b) civilian and (c) other personnel from (i) the United Kingdom, (ii) the United States and (iii) other nations were based at RAF Benson on 17 July 2003. [74201]

Mr. Ingram: No RAF helicopters from RAF Benson have been used to assist police searches for missing persons in the last five years.

No RAF helicopters from RAF Benson were used in the search for Dr. David Kelly on 18 July 2003. However, I understand that a Chiltern Air Support Unit police helicopter which is based at RAF Benson was on standby but not used. I am informed that a police helicopter from the Chiltern Air Support Unit based at Luton was used in the search.

Details of the personnel based at RAF Benson on the 17 July 2003 were as follows:

	Number of personnel
RAF personnel	1,379
Army personnel	18
Navy personnel	2
MOD civilian personnel	166
Non-MOD (contractors)	150
Foreign	2 (exchange aircrew from Canada and the United States)

Hercules Aircraft

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost of fitting reticulated foam devices to Mk1 Hercules aircraft. [71527]

Mr. Ingram: I am withholding information regarding which of our Hercules aircraft will be fitted as the release of this information may prejudice the security of our armed forces.

There is an initial programme, however, to fit Explosion Suppressant Foam to a number of them that will cost some £600,000 per aircraft.

Iran

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the military capability of the Iranian armed forces. [72958]

Des Browne: As a matter of routine we assess the military capability of other nations' armed forces, including that of Iran. I am withholding this information on the grounds that to release it would prejudice the capability, effectiveness, and security of the armed forces.

Iraq

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the quality of the Iraqi (a) armed forces and (b) police force based in Multi-National Division (South-East). [65442]

Des Browne: Regular assessments of the capability of Iraq's security forces are made as part of the process of considering the preparedness of each province for transition to Iraqi security control, including the four provinces of Multi-National Division (South-East).

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department plans to take to make helicopters in Iraq safer for flight personnel. [71728]

Mr. Ingram: We are continually reviewing ways of providing greater protection for all our personnel deployed on operations. For helicopters, we have identified a number of improvements to meet the specific operational conditions in Iraq; these have been, or are being, implemented through urgent operational requirement procedures. They include improvements to countermeasures, self protection, and crew and aircraft armour.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer of 4 May 2006, Official Report, columns 181-84W, on Iraq, if he will place a copy of the eligibility criteria for the Operation TELIC medal in the Library. [73426]

Mr. Watson: Command Paper 6135 was presented to Parliament in February 2004 by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence and laid down the qualifying criteria for the Iraq medal for service on Operation TELIC from 20 January 2003. In accordance with standard procedures, a copy was placed in the Library of the House.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of why the two Britons rescued from Basra Prison by British forces were (a) dressed as Arabs and (b) in possession of explosives at the time of their detention; and if he will make a statement. [73589]

Des Browne: An internal review was carried out in the wake of the events of 19 September 2005. I am withholding further details as disclosure would, or would be likely to, prejudice the capability, effectiveness or security of our armed forces.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what role UK forces have played in the (a) training and (b) operations of the Facilities Protection Service in Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [73598]

Des Browne [holding answer 25 May 2006]: Coalition forces have trained some 6,650 members of the Facilities Protection Service (FPS) based in Multi-National Division (South-East). The basic training course provides FPS guards with the skills that allow them to act as static security. The advanced course content varies, being structured at the discretion of FPS commanders, but frequently includes such areas as combat life support, Quick Reaction Forces, and logistics. At present, the FPS are operating at over 800 sites in Multi-National Division (South-East) on behalf of 22 Ministries.

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers prescribed medication for psychological problems have been posted back to active service in Iraq. [73741]

Mr. Watson [holding answer 25 May 2006]: We are aware of a very small number of cases where service personnel deployed to Iraq have been prescribed medication for a psychological illness; however, precise figures are not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Joint Personnel Administration

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how much has been spent on the Joint Personnel Administration computer system; [72639]

(2) when he expects to introduce the Joint Personnel Administration computer system fully for (a) the Royal Air Force, (b) the Royal Navy and (c) the Army; [72640]

(3) what assessment has been made of the suitability of the Joint Personnel Administration system for defence services; [72641]

(4) what reports Ministers have received about the operation of the Joint Personnel Administration system; [72642]

(5) how many complaints have been received about the operation of the Joint Personnel Administration computer system; and what changes have been made to the timetable for its introduction since the system was originally planned. [72643]

Mr. Watson: On 20 March 2006, the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency (AFPAA) rolled out Joint Personnel Administration (JPA) to all 48,000 RAF service personnel throughout the world on time and on budget. The event marked the culmination of five years of system design, development, integration and testing and bears testimony to a very strong partnering agreement between MOD and EDS. The total cost to date of JPA is £116 million.

The suitability of JPA was considered in July 2004 by the Defence Investment Approvals Board in approving the Main Gate Business Case. Prior to rollout, the readiness for service was assessed by an independent Office of Government Commerce Gateway review.

On JPA rollout to the RAF there were a small number of technical issues which had not manifested themselves in the extensive testing carried out prior to its launch. This resulted in the system operating much more slowly than anticipated which greatly restricted the number of self-service users at any one time. Over the course of the last six weeks these early problems have been overcome and all users now have full access to the system. JPA has performed satisfactorily on rollout to RAF professional HR administrators and has delivered pay to the RAF with only a relatively few discrepancies caused by the migration of data from the legacy systems to JPA. Although the first few weeks following rollout have generated a significant number of enquiries, no formal complaints have been received.

Following RAF rollout, the related provisional JPA dates for the RN and Army were June and November 2006 respectively. However, in order to more closely align JPA with Defence Information Infrastructure (Future) programme requirements, current plans are that JPA will be rolled out to the RN from October 2006 and to the Army from March 2007 respectively.

Low Flying Aircraft

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the locations are of each tactical training area in the UK in which low flying aircraft are permitted to fly to a minimum height of 100 feet. [73291]

Mr. Watson: There are three Tactical Training Areas (TTA) in the UK Military Low Flying System, within which fixed wing aircraft and military Helicopters are permitted to operate down to 100 feet, and sometimes below, throughout the Low Flying System.

The three areas are located in mid-Wales; in the Highlands of Scotland to the north-west of the Great Glen; and, in south-west Scotland and the Anglo Scottish border area, from Dumfries and Galloway across to the Cheviot hills. Maps showing the location of the Tactical Training Areas are included in The Pattern of Military Low Flying, which is published annually, and placed in the Library of the House.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on how many occasions (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department have stayed overnight in (i) five-star, (ii) four-star and (iii) three-star hotels in each of the last three years; [69111]

(2) what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department staying overnight in (i) mainland Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) other countries in each of the last three years; [69112]

(3) what discounts are available in relation to hotel accommodation used by (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department. [69113]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence has an Enabling Arrangement with Expotel Hotel Reservations Ltd. for booking hotel accommodation which staff can access through the Central Hotel Booking Service (CHBS). The MOD does not directly receive discounts for hotel accommodation but CHBS is required to secure the lowest possible rates available for accommodation, generally of three-star quality, throughout Great Britain and overseas. Northern Ireland is not included in this agreement.

This enabling arrangement is not mandated and individuals can choose to make their own bookings, providing they do so within a financial limit of £53 per night. There is no central record of bookings arranged outside CHBS and an attempt to collect such information could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost.

CHBS does not record information on the star rating of the hotel, the choice of hotel being determined by value for money. Nor does CHBS hold information differentiating between civil servants and special advisers.

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions a local authority safety plan for visiting nuclear submarines has been declared fit for purpose within 24 hours of a submarine docking at a UK port in each of the last five years. [73795]

Mr. Ingram: Local authority off-site emergency plans in respect of nuclear submarine berths are maintained in accordance with the Radiation (Emergency Preparedness and Public Information) Regulations 2001 (REPPIR). These regulations are enforced by the Health and Safety Executive, Nuclear Installations Inspectorate (HSE NII). Any questions relating to the fitness for purpose of the off-site plan should be referred to the HSE NII.

Nuclear Weapons Testing

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent research he has assessed on the possible association between witnessing atomic and nuclear weapons testing and ill health. [74119]

Mr. Watson: Ministry of Defence officials are currently studying the report of New Zealand research which used gene analysis techniques to identify minute changes in DNA which may correlate with radiation exposure. The report of this study was recently presented to the New Zealand War Pensions Research Trust Board but has not been peer-reviewed or published in the scientific press.

Racial Abuse

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints of racial abuse have been (a) investigated and (b) upheld in his Department in each of the last five years. [70618]

Mr. Watson: Records are not kept centrally in the form requested and it is not possible to identify complaints citing racial harassment separately from those citing racial discrimination. Changes to record-keeping will lead to improvements for the future. The available information is as follows:

Royal Navy

The number of formal redresses of complaint which cited racial discrimination and/or harassment in each of the last five years were:

	Number
2002-03	2
2003-04	0
2005-06[1]	5

It has not been possible from the data available to identify those redresses of complaint which were upheld and those complaints which were resolved locally through the chain of command.

Army

The number of formal redresses of complaint which cited racial discrimination and/or harassment investigated and upheld in each year were:

Ministry of Defence Civil Service

There is no requirement to report centrally bullying and harassment cases (including racial abuse) that are resolved at local unit level. To obtain this information would incur disproportionate costs. The figures provided as follows are for the last five calendar years, and record civilian harassment cases, involving racial abuse, where MOD units have requested a formal harassment investigation be carried out by a trained departmental civilian harassment investigation officer. Records are not held centrally on whether these investigated complaints were then subsequently upheld.

RAF Heavy Lift

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the heavy lift capability of the Royal Air Force. [72938]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Scarborough and Whitby (Mr. Goodwill) on 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1188.

Regimental Bands

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many regimental bands there are in the Army; where they are located; and what the strength is of each regiment which has retained a regimental band. [70340]

Mr. Watson: As at 1 May there were 29 bands in the Regular Army and 14 in the Territorial Army (TA). Under the Future Army Structure (FAS), the number of Regular Army bands will reduce to 23 and the TA bands will increase to 19.

It has only been possible to show a breakdown of strengths by regiment for regular infantry units. All other figures are for the appropriate arm/service. Details are shown in the following tables for Regular and Territorial Army units respectively.

Small Change Big Difference Campaign

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department and its agencies have taken following the launch of the Government's Small Change Big Difference Campaign. [72002]

Mr. Watson: A key element of the Ministry of Defence's 'People Programme' concerns the health, welfare and sickness absence of our civilian staff. From 1 June 2006, guidance will be included on the Defence Intranet to encourage staff to consider healthy choices in relation to lifestyle and diet. Guidance will be available on giving up smoking, diet and maintaining a healthy weight, alcohol consumption and exercise. Links will be provided to specialist websites and Government initiatives including 'Small Change, Big Difference'.

As part of the launch of these services, the Department is to hold a 'Health Awareness Week' in early July. A series of events will be held around MOD sites to promote a healthy lifestyle. MOD already has a thriving Sports and Social Association and a number of workplace sports clubs and gyms which staff can join at their own cost and in their own time. MOD restaurants also provide healthy choices.

Health is vital to operational effectiveness and the armed forces have always had policies for health promotion. A Health Promotion Action Plan was published last year prior to the production of the Choosing Health White Paper covering issues such as diet, tobacco and alcohol consumption and sexual health. There is an expert panel on armed forces feeding which advises on diet and has published "Recruits' and Commanders' Guides to Nutrition". These offer advice on diets and eating patterns which are compatible with military requirements and health.

Somme Anniversary

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to mark the 80th anniversary of the Battle of the Somme; and if he will make a statement. [73268]

Mr. Watson: It is assumed that the hon. Member is referring to the 90th Anniversary of the Battle of the Somme, which occurs on 1 July 2006. An Anglo-French commemoration will take place at Thiepval on that day, the details of which have not been finalised. The main feature of the commemoration will be a Service of Remembrance organised by the Royal British Legion. It is expected that regimental associations and cadets will be present. A British military band is being provided.

Vehicle Sharing

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what incentives his Department offers to encourage staff to share vehicles when travelling to work. [73092]

Mr. Watson: Encouraging staff to share vehicles when travelling to work is dependent on the circumstances of each site. For example, at Abbey Wood in Bristol, there is a scheme offering 300 car-sharing priority parking spaces. There are also informal schemes established on an individual basis. The Royal Navy also encourages the practice through its intranet sites with schemes in place at Royal Navy Fleet HQ, and at Portsmouth and Devonport Naval Bases.

Vehicle-sharing is one of a number of measures that the Ministry of Defence encourages as part of its work on sustainable development and travel. These include the use of both telephone- and video-conference facilities for business meetings, and offering staff a pay advance to purchase bicycles and public transport season tickets for commuting to their place of work.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Industrial Injuries

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and (b) vibration white finger claims have been submitted from Tamworth constituency, broken down by district electoral ward. [71226]

Malcolm Wicks: Although I cannot provide statistics by electoral ward, I have broken down the claims submitted from Tamworth constituents by postcode[1]. The figures are as follows:

[1] The postcodes listed include areas beyond the Tamworth constituency boundary.

Postcode	Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease	Vibration white finger
B77	1,022	289
B78	1,155	396
B79	571	141
WS14	33	5
Total	2,781	831

The figures for Tamworth constituency are 1,700 chronic obstructive pulmonary disease claims and 437 vibration white finger claims submitted.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Adults with Learning Difficulties

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken to ensure that adults with learning difficulties report crimes to the police; and how this action has been communicated to people with learning difficulties. [71987]

Mr. McNulty: In November 2005, the Home Office hosted a workshop attended by representatives of organisations who work with people who have learning disabilities. Since then, an Action Plan has been developed specifically to tackle low reporting rates amongst people in this vulnerable group. Among other things, the Action Plan identifies the need to raise awareness of sexual abuse with vulnerable adults and we are working to take these actions forward.

The Home Office has also worked with Respond, Mencap, the Down's Syndrome Association and the National Forum for People with Learning Difficulties to produce an easy-access booklet called "Protecting You from Sexual Abuse", and this can be found on the Home Office website. The booklet has been written for people with learning disabilities to provide information and guidance on the law in relation to sexual offences.

Amendments to Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions when an amendment has been moved by (a) a Labour back bencher, (b) an Opposition back bencher and (c) an Opposition front bench spokesman to a Bill sponsored by his Department that has been accepted by his Department during the current session; and if he will make a statement. [72097]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Department has sponsored the following Bills/Acts during the current session:

Racial and Religious Hatred Act
Identity Cards Act
Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Act Terrorism Act
Charities Bill
Fraud Bill
Police and Justice Bill
Violent Crime Reduction Bill.

Information on amendments moved and accepted during the Committee and Report Stages of these Acts/Bills is published in the Official Report.

Animal Experimentation

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what ways his Department plans to contribute to the review of European Directive 86/609, on animal experimentation; and if he will make a statement. [72391]

Joan Ryan: The European Commission is currently reviewing Directive 86/609 to take account of technical progress since it was first adopted almost 20 years ago. The directive is transposed into United Kingdom legislation by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

Four technical expert working groups have already provided preliminary advice to the Commission on scope and definitions; severity/cost/benefit; ethical review; and authorisation of procedures. These groups had a strong United Kingdom representation, one of which was chaired by a Home Office official.

Four more detailed technical issues were subsequently referred to the Animal Welfare Committee of the European Food Standards Agency (EFSA) for consideration and advice. The Commission is now considering the EFSA advice, and has commissioned a regulatory impact assessment to which the Home Office has recently responded.

The Commission has indicated that it will next produce a consultation document in the summer of 2006. This is expected to take the form of a draft revised directive. The Home Office will respond once it has had the opportunity to consider its content and consult scientific community stakeholders.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance is given to (a) local authorities and (b) the police about how and in what circumstances antisocial behaviour orders are issued to children under 18 years. [72281]

Mr. McNulty: There is a range of sources of guidance for local authorities and the police on issuing antisocial behaviour orders to children and young people. The Home Office's comprehensive "Guidance on ASBOs" issued jointly with the Youth Justice Board and the Association of Chief Police Officers is currently being updated and will be issued shortly. In addition joint guidance issued by the Home Office, Youth Justice Board and the Association of Chief Police Officers, issued in March 2005, provides youth offending teams with advice on their role in preventing and reducing antisocial behaviour. Practitioners can also access information provided by the Together campaign in the form of a website, an extensive range of leaflets and a telephone action line offering advice on all aspects of antisocial behaviour.

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued in each local authority area in the County of Durham since 2001, broken down by age. [72460]

Mr. McNulty: The available information is in the following table.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applicants whose applications have been refused and whose appeal rights have been exhausted have had their claims reconsidered on the basis of further representations in each year since 1997; what criteria are used in deciding whether to allow claims to be reconsidered; what estimate has been made of the number of such applicants eligible to have their claims reconsidered; what the average time taken to conduct such reconsideration has been in each year; when such reconsiderations commenced; what the effect is on the status of applicants of having their claims reconsidered; and how many such reconsiderations in each year have resulted in the grant of asylum status or other permission which results in the applicant being able legally to remain in the UK. [73787]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost by examination of individual case records.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) Nigerian, (b) Bangladeshi, (c) Pakistani, (d) Turkish and (e) Somali asylum seekers are living in the UK. [72907]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not available in the format requested.

The following table shows the number of asylum seekers from Bangladesh, Nigeria, Pakistan, Somalia and Turkey supported by NASS in the UK as at the end of March 2006.

Asylum seekers[1,2,3] (including dependants) from Bangladesh, Nigeria, Pakistan, Somalia and Turkey supported by NASS in the UK as at the end of March 2006

[1] Provisional figures rounded to the nearest 5 with * = 1 or 2. Figures may not sum due to rounding.

[2] Excludes unaccompanied asylum seeking children supported by local authorities and cases that pre-date the establishment of NASS in April 2000, administered by local authorities under the Interim Provisions.

[3] Excludes those in initial accommodation.

Black/Asian Employees

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in his Department's press office. [74351]

Mr. Byrne: The numbers employed in the press office are as follows:

	Number
Black	2
Asian	0
Other	44

Community Support Officers

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the retention rate of community support officers in (a) Gwent, (b) South Wales, (c) Dyfed Powys and (d) North Wales police force areas in each year since they were first employed. [71372]

Mr. McNulty: Information on the retention rate of community support officers is not collected centrally. However, the available information regarding the number of community support officers leaving the Welsh police force areas is given in the table.

The number of PCSOs leaving (FTE)[1] by each police force area in Wales, in 2002-03, 2003-04 and 2004-05[2]

	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05

South Wales	0	4	11

[1] This table contains full-time equivalent figures that have been rounded to the nearest whole number.
[2] These figures have been calculated from the quarterly leaving figures submitted by police forces.
[3] Data is not available for this period.

Correspondence

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the immigration and nationality directorate will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Warley of 17 January on behalf of Mrs. McLeish, Meadow Road, Oldbury. [67205]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the right hon. Member to the written answer given on 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 1407W.

Crime Statistics

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the level of crime in (a) Cornwall and (b) England and Wales in 2005-06. [72777]

Mr. McNulty: The latest crime statistics for England and Wales were published in Home Office Statistical Bulletin 06/06 entitled 'Crime in England and Wales: Quarterly Update to December 2005'. The publication gives recorded crime statistics for the first three quarters of financial year 2005-06 and is available at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs06/hosb0606.pdf

Detailed statistics at police force area level for 2005-06 will be published on 20 July.

Deportation

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many deportees have returned to the UK because their destination country refused them entry in each of the last five years. [73337]

Mr. Byrne: Such information on returned cases could only be obtained through examination of individual Home Office case files and this would be at disproportionate cost.

Published statistics on immigration and asylum issues are available on the Home Office research Development and statistics website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Domestic Violence

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he has made to the Sentencing Guidelines Council recommendations on domestic violence. [72505]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The guidelines prepared by the Sentencing Guidelines Council are currently out for consultation and it would be inappropriate to make any comment at this stage.

EU Criminal Proceedings

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of whether the current proposals for a framework decision on certain procedural rights in criminal proceedings throughout the European Union would grant new rights to persons arrested in the United Kingdom; and what his policy is on the proposal. [73225]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Member states have not been able to reach agreement on the original text proposed for this framework decision, and a revised text is now being considered. If a revised text were to be formally tabled for discussion it would be subject to negotiation in the usual way. Intimations received as to the contents of a revised text suggest that it will be shorter and less ambitious.

We will lodge an explanatory memorandum on any new text that is referred to the relevant council working group.

IND (Marriage Visas)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long he expects it will take to clear the backlog at the immigration and nationality directorate for those awaiting marriage visas. [71269]

Mr. Byrne: Certificate of Approval applications are being considered in line with our published service standards (70 per cent. of cases within 20 working days and 90 per cent. within 70 working days). At present these standards are being exceeded.

Intermediate Custodial Sentences

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many defendants received immediate custodial sentences from (a) Wrexham magistrates court and (b) Crown courts to which defendants were committed from Wrexham magistrates court in the last five years for which records are available. [71314]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is shown in the table.

Defendants sentenced and those receiving immediate custody at Wrexham magistrates court and at the Crown court having been committed from Wrexham magistrates court

	Wrexham magistrates court		The Crown court (having been committed from Wrexham MC)

Mandatory Sentences

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mandatory life sentences for offenders convicted of violent offences for the second time have been handed down in each of the last five years. [69746]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is published in Table 2.7 of 'Sentencing Statistics, England and Wales, 2004 (page 28). This publication can be found in the Library and also on the Home Office website, as follows:http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1505.pdf .

Migrant Workers

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of the number of people who are likely to come to work in the UK when Bulgaria and Romania accede to the European Union. [68532]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The Home Office is reviewing relevant data and research in the area. The final decision on what kind of labour access should be granted to Bulgaria and Romania will be taken once the date of their accession to the European Union is known.

National Asylum Support Service

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to publish details of the recent review by the director general of the immigration and nationality directorate of the operation of the National Asylum Support Service; and if he will make a statement. [70563]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 8 February 2006, Official Report, column 1276W.

Non-Emergency Crime Line

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost will be to callers of using the new 101 non-emergency crime line. [69368]

Mr. McNulty: The cost of calls to the new 101 single non-emergency number has been set at 10p per call following consultation with a wide group of stakeholders and research with the public. The research showed that a small fixed charge would not put people off calling the service but would reduce the likelihood of the service being abused. The Government, police and local authorities will not profit in any way from the 10p fixed charge for calls to the single non-emergency number. The charge will be retained by telecom providers to offset the substantial cost of carrying calls.

This fixed rate charge compares favourably with existing police and local authority non-emergency numbers many of which are charged at 0845 call rates which can cost as much as 10p per minute or more. Calls to 101 will be 10p per call regardless of length which means that callers are protected against additional cost if their call is longer and more complex.

The tariff will be reviewed once the service is in operation and has been evaluated with the aim of making it free to call the number in the future.

Open Prisons (Absconded Prisoners)

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the level of absconds by prisoners from open prisons in England. [73501]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There were 702 absconds from open prisons in the financial year 2005-06. This represents the lowest figure for absconds in the last 10 years. However, the Prison Service recognises that this abscond rate needs to be reduced further and continues to drive forward work to meet this aim.

Parole Boards

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have appealed against parole board decisions in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and how many were granted legal aid to do so. [69735]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There is no right of appeal as such against a decision of the parole board. The only legal remedy available to a prisoner wishing to challenge such a decision is to apply to the courts for judicial review. The following table, taken from the parole board's annual report for 2004-05, gives a breakdown of the number of judicial reviews for each of the previous five years. The number of cases granted legal aid is not held centrally and to provide this information would incur disproportionate cost.

Judicial reviews of parole board decisions

	Number
2000-01	71
2001-02	52
2002-03	59
2003-04	56
2004-05	56

Passports

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to offer pensioners a special rate for the purchase of (a) a new biometric passport and (b) an identity card; and what plans he has for arrangements for those already entitled to free passports. [71691]

Joan Ryan: There are no plans to discount biometric passports for pensioners. Those born prior to 2 September 1929 who are already entitled to free passports will continue to be eligible for free biometric passports.

The final schedule of fees for identity and passport service products after the introduction of identity cards is not yet settled and is partly dependent on the outcome of forthcoming procurement processes. However, due consideration will be given to current passport fee policies before the schedule is finalised and the Identity Cards Act provides that the first schedule of fees must be approved by Parliament through secondary legislation under the affirmative order procedure.

Persistent Offenders

Mr. Holloboone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persistent and prolific offenders have been identified by the Northamptonshire police force. [72935]

Mr. McNulty: The four prolific and other priority offenders schemes operating in the Northamptonshire police area covering Corby, Kettering, Daventry and Wellingborough are working intensively with 208 such offenders . Across the East Midlands region, a total of 1,296 prolific and other priority offenders are being targeted as part of the Government's national programme to tackle the small number of highly active offenders who cause a disproportionate amount of harm to the communities in which they live.

Police

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the sickness absence rate was in the Cambridgeshire constabulary in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [71393]

Mr. McNulty: The available information is provided in the table.

Police Officer Sickness Absence[1] in Cambridgeshire (2000-2005)

As at 31 March	Average number of working days lost per officer	Average number of working hours lost per officer
1998	10.8	—
1999	11.9	—
2000	11.8	—
2001	13.3	—
2002	12.0	—
2003	11.4	—
2005	—	98.3

[1] Prior to 2004, sickness data was recorded in days rather than hours. Figures from 1997-2003 were published in the Annual Report of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary. Figures after this time are taken from the Police Performance Monitoring Reports published by the Home Office

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the total costs of the National Policing Improvement Agency in each year between 2005-06 and 2009-10; and if he will make a statement. [71865]

Mr. McNulty: The NPIA will be established on 1 April 2007. The budget for financial year 2007-08 and thereafter has not been finalised.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) purpose and (b) objective is of the National Policing Improvement Agency; what its manpower requirement will be; and if he will make a statement. [71866]

Mr. McNulty: The purpose and objective of the National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA) is to deliver a step change in the provision of services to support operational policing and drive further improvements in the service, particularly in front-line delivery to the public. The NPIA will be police-owned and led. The exact staffing levels of the Agency have yet to be determined.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police stations there were in (a) Devon and (b) Cornwall in (i) 2006, (ii) 2002 and (iii) 1995. [72780]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were on attachment to overseas police forces in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [72358]

Mr. McNulty: The maximum number of UK police officers who may be deployed to international peace support operations at any one time is 475. On average, around 170 officers from forces in England and Wales are deployed in this capacity each year.

In the years 2001 to 2005, the Home Office issued the following numbers of authorisations under section 26 of the Police Act 1996 to police officers from forces in England and Wales in respect of travel overseas to provide assistance to an international organisation or other body engaged outside the UK in policing activities:

	Number
2001	262
2002	250
2003	354

The majority of these authorisations were in respect of short-term assistance, including in the areas of counter-terrorism, serious and organised crime and disaster relief, such as the extensive help provided in 2004-05 in the aftermath of the tsunami.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons are employed (a) full-time and (b) part-time in working for Police Direct; what his policy is on the expansion of Police Direct; and if he will make a statement. [70899]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 16 May 2006]: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of how one super force for the entire Eastern region would affect (a) the number of full-time police officers deployed in the area served by the Norfolk constabulary, (b) the level of service offered to the public and (c) the rates of crime. [38866]

Mr. McNulty: An assessment of the single Eastern regional option was not undertaken. Both the Home Office and forces and authorities in this region agreed that there were other more viable options on which resources needed to be focused.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the precepting arrangements will be for the new proposed Yorkshire police force; and whether the current arrangements requiring majority support among elected members of the police authority before a precept increase can be agreed will remain in place. [65792]

John Reid: I think the strategic direction that has already been set out is the right one. I have not yet had time to consider these matters in the considerable detail that would be wished, but will be turning my mind to how we can achieve this direction in the not too distant future.

Prisons

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of the preparation and production of the performance testing bid at HMP Wandsworth. [74005]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The additional cost of the performance test at Wandsworth prison was £200,000. This does not include the cost of any support for the process found from within existing resources.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to reduce the incidence of prisons breaching Rule 39 correspondence conditions; what estimate he has made of the number of breaches at each establishment in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [66560]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There are clear procedures in place for the handling of correspondence to which prison rule 39 applies. No estimate has been made of the number of breaches of these procedures but we have no information to suggest this is a significant problem.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those Private Members' Bills in respect of which his Department adopted a policy of neutrality in each session since 2001-02; and if he will make a statement. [72098]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Probation Service

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) active and (b) inactive operational vacancies there were for each probation area in England and Wales at the end of each of the past five financial years. [48448]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information is not available for the full period requested. Data on active vacancies has only been collected since 1 April 2004.

The figures presented show active vacancies, in terms of full-time equivalent value, at the close of each quarter from 1 April 2004 to 30 September 2005. An active vacancy is one which a probation area is actively trying to fill through a recruitment process. The table also shows active vacancies as a percentage, shown in brackets, of total available posts. This shows the proportion of vacancies being carried by each area relative to the size of the work force in that area.

The National Probation Service is unable to provide figures on the number of inactive vacancies. This is because not all probation areas operate a set establishment against which inactive vacancies can be measured.

Notes:
1. London figures are not included because the area is currently undertaking a recruitment exercise to achieve a 10 per cent. increase in staffing levels this year. The London probation area has only been able to provide active vacancy information from quarter 1 2005-06.
2. The Greater Manchester and West Midlands probation areas have also been omitted as they are not able to provide active vacancy figures at present.

Racially Motivated Attacks

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many racially motivated murders took place in (a) England and Wales and (b) London in each of the last 24 months for which figures are available. [71181]

Mr. Byrne: The available information relates to 2002-03 and 2003-04. Data extracted from the homicide index are given in the following table:

Right-to-Work Permits

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance his Department has issued to other Government Departments and agencies on the need to verify the right-to-work permits of non-UK citizens undertaking (a) contracted and (b) sub-contracted work. [73624]

Mr. Byrne: Section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996 is the primary measure for combating illegal working. It provides employers with a statutory defence from conviction if they check and record certain specified documents belonging to potential employees. To support employers in meeting their responsibilities under section 8, IND produced short (summary) guidance which was distributed widely among other Government Departments and agencies. If further guidance on this legislation is required, the booklet refers the reader to the immigration and nationality directorate website where comprehensive guidance is available, and there is also a reference to the Employers' Helpline which offers a dedicated service for employers by advising on the legislation on preventing illegal migrant working. The Employers' Helpline also disseminates hard copies of the comprehensive guidance on request. The comprehensive guidance makes clear that this legislation covers contracted and sub-contracted employment.

Secure Training Centres

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions oxygen was used on (a) staff and (b) trainees following incidents involving the use of restraint in (i) Hassockfield, (ii) Medway, (iii) Oakhill and (iv) Rainsbrook secure training centres between (A) January and June 2005, (B) July and December 2005 and (C) January and May 2006. [72305]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Oxygen was administered to trainees at Rainsbrook following a restraint incident twice during the first six months of 2005 and twice during the last six months. On each occasion the trainee had been hyperventilating or appeared to be feeling faint. None of the trainees had lost consciousness. In each case, oxygen was administered as a precaution and no other treatment was required.

These were the only occasions during the specified periods on which oxygen was used at any of the secure training centres in connection with a restraint incident.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times restraint was used in (a) Hassockfield, (b) Medway, (c) Oakhill and (d) Rainsbrook secure training centres between (i) January and June 2005, (ii) July and December 2005 and (iii) January and May 2006. [72306]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested—apart from the figures for May 2006, which are not yet available—is given in the following table. It includes all occasions on which any form of physical intervention was necessary, including low-level interventions such as a young person being led away from a potential incident.

Use of physical intervention in secure training centres

	January to June 2005	July to December 2005	January to April 2006

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions (a) staff and (b) trainees lost consciousness during incidents involving the use of restraint in (i) Hassockfield, (ii) Medway, (iii) Oakhill and (iv) Rainsbrook secure training centres between (A) January and June 2005, (B) July and December 2005 and (C) January and May 2006. [72321]

Mr. Sutcliffe: No trainees or staff lost consciousness in the course of restraint at any of the secure training centres during the specified periods.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions (a) staff and (b) trainees were injured during incidents involving the use of restraint in (i) Hassockfield, (ii) Medway, (iii) Oakhill and (iv) Rainsbrook secure training centres between (A) January and June 2005, (B) July and December 2005 and (C) January and May 2006. [72322]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is given in the following table, apart from the figures for May 2006, which are not yet available. The table shows all injuries that required treatment by a medical practitioner.

Serious and Organised Crime Agency

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of posts in the Serious and Organised Crime Agency are unfilled. [71551]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 17 May 2006]: The Serious Organised Crime Agency was established on 1 April 2006 with a staff of around 4,300, the vast majority of whom came from the precursor agencies. SOCA has identified shortages in some specific skills which it is now seeking to fill through external recruitment and internal promotion and staff moves.

Terrorism

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many terrorist suspects have been detained by the police at UK airports since July 2005. [66869]

Mr. McNulty: Information in the precise form requested is not held centrally. Records of arrests and charges generally under the Terrorism Act 2000 are available on the Home Office website (http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/security/terrorism-and-the-law/terrorism-act/) for the period September 2001 to September 2005.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons the consultation period on the Draft Code of Practice for the detention, treatment and questioning of persons under section 41 and schedule 8 to the Terrorism Act 2000 lasts from 2 May to 25 May; and what account was taken of the Cabinet Office Code on consultation criteria when the consultation period was set. [72394]

Mr. McNulty: The Government undertook to produce a Code of Practice before bringing into force the provisions of the Terrorism Act 2006 which relate to extended detention. These provisions were discussed extensively during the passage of the Act, and given the urgent need to have these powers in place as soon as possible, I hope my hon. Friend will understand why the period of consultation agreed by the Government and the main opposition parties is shorter than usual.

The Code of Practice is also based largely on the revised Code of Practice for the detention, treatment and questioning of persons by police officers (Code C), issued under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, which was subject to extensive consultation before being issued on 1 January 2006.

The Consultation Paper issued with the Draft Code of Practice stated clearly that this consultation process was not being carried out within the usual Cabinet Office guidelines.

Violent Crime

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which crimes are recorded under the general heading of violent crime in his Department's statistics. [71702]

Mr. McNulty: Violent crime comprises the offence groups of violence against the person, sexual offences and robbery. The individual offences in each group are shown in Appendix two of "Crime in England and Wales 2004-05", and are available at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1105append.pdf

Work Permits

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received about work permits from (a) farmers and (b) the National Farmers Union. [69739]

Mr. Byrne: Since the beginning of 2006 my predecessor, my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, East (Mr. McNulty), has received four representations from farmers and growers in the UK regarding the future of the seasonal agricultural workers scheme (SAWS) and a comprehensive reply from the National Farmers Union (NFU) in response to the consultation document "Selective Migration: Making Migration Work for Britain". There is also close contact with the NFU through the Illegal Working Stakeholder Group.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Capita Group

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what meetings (a) he and (b) Ministers in his Department have held with directors and senior executives of (i) Capita Group plc. an (ii) its subsidiaries since 1 January 2004; and whether (A) Capita Group plc. and (B) its subsidiaries have provided input (1) in writing and (2) in person to policy discussions in his Department since 1 January 2004. [61082]

Bill Rammell: This question could be answered only at disproportionate cost.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) when she will answer the letter to her dated 8 March from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Dr. D. Ziegeler; [67491]

(2) when he will answer the letter to his predecessor dated 8 March from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Dr. D. Ziegeler; [72165]

(3) when he will answer the letter to his predecessor dated 8 March from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Dr. D. Ziegeler. [72668]

Alan Johnson: I responded to my right hon. Friend's letters on 23 May.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he will reply to the letter to his predecessor dated 20 March 2006 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Debbie Burton. [73849]

Jim Knight: I responded to my right hon. Friend's letter of 20 March, and his subsequent letter of 20 April, on 22 May.

Departmental Expenditure

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from his Department in each of the last five years. [71797]

Alan Johnson: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The payments system used by the Department for Education and Skills does not currently hold sufficient detail about the nature of its suppliers to be able to easily and accurately collect this information.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he will answer the letter to his predecessor dated 4 April from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mrs. J. Watson. [72167]

Alan Johnson: I responded to my right hon. Friend's letter on 22 May.

Education and Inspections Bill

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the level of administration required to implement the provisions of the Education and Inspections Bill. [73781]

Jim Knight: The Education and Inspections Bill is generally deregulatory in nature, providing a legislative framework to establish a new relationship between government, local authorities and schools. However, there are additional costs for some elements of the Bill. These are set out in the Bill's Regulatory Impact Assessment which is available on the Department's website at:

www.dfes.gov.uk/publications/educationandinspectionsbill.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations he has received from hon. Members representing Scottish constituencies on the Education and Inspections Bill. [73910]

Jim Knight: We have received three representations on the Education and Inspections Bill from MPs representing Scottish constituencies. These have raised a number of issues, including:

The faith character of trust schools;

Whether the Bill has implications for the Barnett formula; and

A request for a response to the National Union of Teachers' leaflet about the Bill.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what system of inspections he will put in place to ensure the maintenance of nutritional standards in schools following introduction of the measures proposed in the Education and Inspections Bill; [73912]

(2) what estimate his Department has made of the likely costs of the nutritional school meals proposed in the Education and Inspections Bill; and what assessment he has made of the impact of the proposals for the costs of school meals to (a) schools, (b) local education authorities and (c) parents. [73913]

Jim Knight: The responsibility for ensuring that the nutritional standards are being met will rest with either the local authority or the school governing body, depending on the model of provision. Ofsted are already inspecting schools' general approach to healthy eating as part of the new inspection framework for schools. They have also already carried out, alongside nutritionists, a pilot thematic study in three local authorities, looking at the standard of food provided in a sample of schools. A further larger-scale thematic study is planned for next year.

We have published a full Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) which considers the financial impact that the new nutritional standards will have. In compiling the RIA, account was taken of the report written for the School Meals Review Panel (SMRP) by PricewaterhouseCoopers on the costs of implementing the Caroline Walker Trust's recommendations, which are closely mirrored by the recommendations of the SMRP.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate his Department has made of the likely costs of the free transport provisions of the Education and Inspections Bill. [73914]

Jim Knight: The Education and Inspections Bill includes provisions that place a general duty on local authorities to promote sustainable school travel and extend the entitlement to free home to school transport for low income families. It will also enable a small number of local authorities to run Pathfinder schemes which will include innovative arrangements supporting school choice; and increase the proportion of pupils travelling by sustainable means.

In 2004/05 local authorities in England spent £772 million on free and assisted home to school transport. This will be supplemented by £4 million per annum to fund the new general duty to promote sustainable travel; £40 million per annum to extend the entitlement to free transport to low income families, and £12 million per annum to support Pathfinder schemes.

Energy Conservation

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what advice and assistance is available to schools to enable them to reduce their energy bills and use. [73306]

Jim Knight: There is extensive guidance available for schools to improve their energy efficiency on the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) webpages[1] including the Department's Energy and Water Management Guide. The DfES launched a consultation on its framework for sustainable schools on 15 May. The framework promotes eight doorways to sustainability for schools, one of which is energy and water. The framework promotes a whole school approach to water and energy management in schools. A comprehensive website which will go live on 9 June this year combining management tools with curriculum resources for all of the eight sustainability themes[2]. The Energy Certification Scheme for Schools[3] and the Carbon Trusts programmes[4] also provide advice and assistance to schools.

Field Courses

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what representations his Department has received regarding the effects of educational field courses on the academic performance of pupils; [73455]

(2) when the Education Outside the Classroom Manifesto is expected to be published; and what resources will be made available for schools to implement the aims of the manifesto; [73456]

(3) what steps his Department is taking to encourage teachers to take up fieldwork courses offered by science learning centres. [73457]

Jim Knight: The Department works closely with organisations such as the Field Studies Council (FSC), National Association of Field Study Officers (NAFSO), Royal Geographical Society (with IBG), Geographical Association and Association for Science Education on field work in schools including its contribution to improving academic performance. As part of the emerging Education Outside the Classroom Manifesto, a group of leading organisations from the fieldwork sector (including those listed above) submitted a report to the Department on the benefits of fieldwork and recommendations to promote and support field studies in schools.

We aim to launch the Education Outside the Classroom Manifesto before the end of the summer term when DfES will announce its pledges.

Science Learning Centres, a £51 million joint initiative by the Department and the Wellcome Trust, provide high quality professional development for science teachers.

To help encourage teachers to attend Science Learning Centres courses, the Department have provided funding to help subsidise the costs of the courses for the first two years of operation.

Learning and Skills Councils

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the costs were of (a) closing training and enterprise councils, (b) the creation of learning and skills councils and (c) the merging of learning and skills councils. [70499]

Bill Rammell: The Learning and Skills Council was established in 2001 to replace the 72 Training and Enterprise Councils and the Further Education Funding Council. It was estimated that this would result in savings of some £50 million per annum. These savings have been realised and a significant proportion has been reinvested in better training in local areas.

Building on this, the Learning and Skills Council is currently undertaking a second major restructuring exercise which will further streamline the organisation and strengthen its capacity to work strategically with partners at local and regional level. This will involve the merger of some local offices, and the LSC estimates that, once completed, the restructuring will release up to £40 million per annum nationally.

The national costs incurred to date in (a) closing the Training and Enterprise Councils (TECs) and (b) creating the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) are £83 million. TECs, which were independent local companies, will also have incurred some local costs connected with the ending of the TEC network, but we do not have details of the amounts involved. Although the majority of TECs have now been formally wound up, there will be some additional costs involved in winding up those remaining. It is not possible to disaggregate the costs associated with (a) and (b).

Online Learning

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what plans he has to extend access to personal online learning space as outlined in the Schools White Paper to the further and higher education sectors; [72803]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure all schoolchildren have access to a personal online learning space by 2008 as outlined in the Schools White Paper. [72804]

Phil Hope: The Department is working closely with Becta, JISC and other stakeholders to establish the extent to which the approach to providing access to a personal online learning space in schools can be shared with further and higher education, and what can be learned from these sectors' experience with learning platforms by schools.

DfES will provide funding to local authorities in 2006-07 and 2007-08 to provide access to a personalised online learning space (through a learning platform) for all their schools by 2008. Our expectation is that local authorities will use the expertise of Regional Broadband Consortia to make best use of the funding (for example, through aggregated procurement) and to make sure that schools' needs are met effectively. Guidance has been made available to local authorities and schools to allow them to plan and meet their requirements in time to meet the 2008 personal online space target. Becta is procuring a national framework (with preferred suppliers), which will help purchasers to select appropriate learning platforms. This framework will be available to all educational institutions from January 2007.

Private Finance Initiative

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many complaints his Department has received about the operation of private finance initiative contracts in schools over the last 12 months. [73487]

Jim Knight: I do not have a tally of the number of complaints which the Department has received about private finance initiative contracts, but I will write shortly to the hon. Lady with this information. We have been working consistently to improve the delivery of operational private finance initiative contracts in response to problems that have been brought to our attention. We have, for instance, provided additional support directly and through Partnerships UK for those schools and authorities which had contracts with Jarvis plc., and where there were undoubtedly exceptional problems because of the financial difficulties of that firm.

Ensuring satisfactory delivery of the services included in a private finance initiative contract is the responsibility of the authority which is signatory to the contract. However, the Department is always happy to advise and support where there are individual problems that cannot be resolved locally. It also continues to work with Her Majesty's Treasury and with other Departments to improve the delivery of public services through private finance initiatives. This is done by a process of continuous improvement of the contracts, and also by providing additional support through the recently formed Operational Task Force. This will support and intervene on wider structural issues like benchmarking, market testing, payment mechanisms and variations.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether his Department has undertaken a study to evaluate the amount of (a) time and (b) money spent by schools and local education authorities on the administration of private finance initiative contracts. [73488]

Jim Knight: The Department published last autumn a study on "Post-Signature PFI Contracts", commissioned from Partnerships UK, which is available through:

www.teachernet.gov.uk/schoolsprivatefinanceinitiative

This shows that overall the schools and authorities surveyed are satisfied with the services which are delivered through their private finance initiative contracts. However, it also reports some areas for improvement, and makes a series of recommendations which the Department accepts and is acting upon.

One area for improvement is the high level of resources some schools and authorities have to devote to maintaining their contracts. In March, Her Majesty's Treasury published "PFI: Strengthening Long-term Partnerships", which supported our own findings. Among its recommendations are that authorities should plan to give a proper level of resources to operational contacts. It also announced the formation of a PFI Operational Taskforce with cross-government backing, including from the Department, to provide greater support to projects that are already operational.

The Department will continue to work with Her Majesty's Treasury and with authorities and schools, directly and through Partnerships UK, to support them and ensure that schools benefit as intended from their private finance initiative contracts.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether his Department has undertaken a study to assess the compliance of private finance initiative contractors with the terms of their contracts. [73489]

Jim Knight: All private finance initiative contracts include mechanisms for ensuring that the private sector partner delivers the services which are contracted, with financial penalties imposed where this does not happen. Contracts are made between individual authorities and the private sector partners, and the Department does not monitor them.

In autumn 2004, the Department published a "Post-signature Review" of schools private finance initiative projects which it had commissioned from Partnerships UK. This showed that overall there was satisfaction with the quality of buildings and services delivered by the operational contracts at the schools and authorities surveyed, but it also highlighted some areas where improvement could be made, and made a series of recommendations which the Department accepted and has acted on. Many of the lessons which this survey highlighted had already been included in more recent contracts. This survey is available through: www.teachernet.gov.uk/schoolsprivatefinanceinitiative

These findings were also borne out in a further study which Her Majesty's Treasury published at the time of this year's Budget, "PR: Strengthening the Long-term Partnerships". This paper included setting up an Operational Task Force to support and intervene where there are major issues.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the quality of the buildings being constructed under a private finance initiative contract at Cumberland School in the London borough of Newham. [73490]

Jim Knight: Private finance initiative contracts are made between local authorities and the private sector partner, following a due procurement procedure which includes consideration of design and value for money. Design details are decided locally, and the local authority has responsibility for ensuring that the private sector partner delivers to the output specified in the contract. The private sector partner has of course the responsibility for fully maintaining and repairing the building throughout the length of the contract.

Contracts include mechanisms for financial penalty where the private sector partner does not deliver to contract.

We work closely with the Commissioners for Architecture and the Built Environment and other bodies with design interests. We have recently published Design Quality Indicators for school buildings, after consultation with relevant bodies. We strongly encourage all local authorities to use these resources.

Recycling

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) grants are available for and (b) assistance is offered by (i) his Department and (ii) its agencies to schools and colleges for the promotion of education about recycling. [73860]

Jim Knight: On 15 May the Department launched a consultation for a framework of action for schools to become models of sustainable development in their communities. One of the key areas covered is developing sustainable policies on purchasing and waste by increasing recycling and conservation. The consultation will run until 1 September. By 2020, our aim is for all schools to be models of resource efficiency, recycling, repairing and reusing as much as possible.

Our sustainable schools website being launched on 9 June will include a section on grants available to promote sustainable development projects in schools. The site identifies approaches to the challenge of sustainability, award schemes, learning resources, training opportunities, research and local support.

School Meals

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment he has made of the benefits of using omega 3 and 6 fish oil supplements in school meals. [73659]

Jim Knight: The Food Standards Agency comments as follows:

"The Food Standards Agency is currently conducting a systematic review of research looking at the effect of nutrition and diet on performance and behaviour of children in schools. This includes investigating studies that have used omega 3 and 6 fish oil supplements in schools.

Government is committed to ensure that children are provided with the food and nutrients they require during the school day and as such has recently published minimum standards for school food."

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what support he provides to councils who wish to introduce initiatives to improve the health benefits of school meals. [73660]

Jim Knight: The School Food Trust will work with local authorities, and others, to understand and where possible overcome the barriers to transforming school food, and to develop a strategy to increase the demand for healthier food in schools. The School Food Trust will produce guidance for local authorities and schools. This will supplement the 'Food in Schools Toolkit' which includes materials and guidance on, for example, tuck shops, before/after school clubs, water provision and the dining room environment.

In addition DfES has:

published guidance on procuring healthy school meals and other school food;

established a School Food Reference Group, which consists mainly of local authority officials from across the country who are involved in school meals, to help identify issues and problems and share good practice;

compiled and made available a number of case studies to give examples of how particular schools and local authorities have implemented healthy eating initiatives; put in place a Level 1 Vocationally Related Qualification which aims to give school cooks and caterers the basic knowledge and skills to deliver a healthier meals service. We are also developing qualifications at Levels 2 and 3 in cooking skills which will be available from September 2006 and form part of the Training and Development Agency's Support Worker in Schools qualification.

Schools (Pre-1970 Construction)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which schools in (a) Southend on Sea, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire and (d) the Metropolitan Police area of London were built before 1970; and when. [71961]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the House Libraries.

Student Loans

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total value is of payments made by people repaying student loans but not allocated to student loan accounts in each year since 2002; what the total amount outstanding is; and if he will make a statement. [71098]

Bill Rammell: Student loans are collected by employers alongside income tax and national insurance contributions and passed to Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs. At the end of each financial year, HMRC reconciles the loan repayments and passes the information to the Student Loans Company which updates borrowers' accounts. In a small number of cases, HMRC needs to check the returns made by employers, and this can lead to delay in sending statements to borrowers.

There are no outstanding reconciliations relating to 2002-03 or earlier years; some 1,500 accounts (0.4 per cent. of the total) have still to be reconciled from 2003-04 with a value of about £400,000. HMRC expects to have reconciled nearly all of the 2004-05 returns by the end of June 2006.

The total amount of student loans outstanding at the end of financial year 2004-05 under the income contingent repayment scheme was £14,147 million. This includes loans not yet due for repayment: borrowers are not required to repay until they are earning £15,000 or more per annum[1].

[1] This figure also includes hardship loans and loans made to part-time students but does not include amounts lent under the old mortgage style loans system.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Coroners

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list coroners in England; what the date of appointment of each was; and how many inquests each has performed. [65228]

Ms Harman: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Court Orders (Repossessions)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many court orders have been issued for the repossession of homes in Coventry, South in each of the last five years. [70330]

Ms Harman: Although figures for Coventry, South constituency are not available, the following table shows the number of mortgage possession orders made at Coventry county court in the last five years. This is the only such court in the Coventry area.

The civil procedure rules provide that all claims for the repossession of land must be commenced in the district in which the land is situated. However, Coventry county court covers areas other than Coventry, South and therefore not all possession actions entered in that court necessarily relate to the Coventry, South area.

These figures do not indicate how many houses have been repossessed through the courts, since not all the orders will have resulted in the issue and execution of warrants of possession.

Number of mortgage[1] possession orders made at Coventry county court, 2001-05

	Possession orders made[2]
2001	147
2002	132
2003	137
2004	153

[1] Local authority and private

[2] The court, following a judicial hearing, may grant an order for possession immediately. This entitles the claimant to apply for a warrant to have the defendant evicted. However, even where a warrant for possession is issued, the parties can still negotiate a compromise to prevent eviction.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what incentives her Department offers to encourage staff to share vehicles when travelling to work. [73006]

Vera Baird: Vehicle sharing is one of a number of green transport initiatives the DCA promotes, often within a site specific travel plan. The DCA researches and disseminates publications to its staff such as "Making car sharing and car clubs work" and "Making Smarter Choices Work" and encourages the promotion of travel planning and inclusion of car sharing and car club schemes. Other measures supporting sustainable travel include secure cycle parking and showers and events to promote walking and cycling etc. Interest free loans for bicycles are also available to staff to encourage more sustainable travel.

DCA is also a member of a Civil Service Travel Group, which comprises all major Government Departments. Its key aim is to improve travel sustainability across the entire civil service by developing and delivering on action plans for each Department.

Divorce

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many divorces there have been in Coventry, South in each ethnic group in each year since 2000. [71752]

Ms Harman: The divorce information requested is not collected centrally by constituency area. In addition, the ethnicity of the parties is not collected at all. Therefore it could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Elections

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps the Government took to tackle electoral fraud in the local elections. [70080]

Bridget Prentice: The Government take the issue of electoral fraud seriously, and prior to the elections worked with administrators, the Electoral Commission, the police, and the political parties on improving both the legislation and practical awareness and responsiveness to the issue on the ground.

Regulations were passed prior to the May 2006 local elections which contained measures to tackle fraud, including:

A requirement for Electoral administrators to write to everyone who has applied for a postal vote acknowledging receipt of their application and confirming the outcome—thus alerting people to false applications for postal votes on their behalf.

Giving administrators more time to check postal vote applications—people now have to apply for a postal vote 11 working days before the close of poll, (rather than six days as previously).

In addition, the Electoral Commission and the Association of Chief Police Officers produced practical guidance for police forces on the prevention and detection of electoral fraud, and the Commission produced a Code of Conduct on the handling of postal vote applications and ballots, which the major political parties signed up to.

Freedom of Information Requests

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many requests for information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 have been referred to the Access to Information Central Clearing House since 1 January 2005, broken down by Department; and what percentage of requests received by each Department this represents. [71949]

Ms Harman: This information is contained in the 'First Annual Report on the operation of the Freedom of Information Act in Central Government in 2005' which was published on 22 May and can be found at www.foi.gov.uk.

Ministerial Travel (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what discounts are available in relation to hotel accommodation used by (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in her Department. [69027]

Vera Baird: My Department has access to a contract for hotel booking services in connection with official travel undertaken by the Department's staff. Figures available for the year ending December 2005 show a saving to my Department of 38 per cent. compared with the full room rates. My Department also benefits from a rebate of 3 per cent. of the annual expenditure on the contract.

All bookings made by the Department for Special Advisors share the same discounts.

Post-mortems

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what factors decide who should carry out a post-mortem. [65537]

Ms Harman: Any decision will rest with the coroner, who may be expected to take into account the availability and experience of pathologists, as well as the views of others. Rule 6 of the Coroners Rules 1984 sets out the criteria.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list those Private Members' Bills in respect of which her Department adopted a policy of neutrality in each session since 2001-02; and if she will make a statement. [72109]

Vera Baird: My Department adopted a neutral stance on the Human Rights Act 1998 (Making of Remedial Orders) Amendment Bill from the 2003-04 session. The Bill completed all stages in the House of Lords but was dropped before second reading in the House of Commons.

Private Sector Fund Recipients

Chris Huhne: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from her Department in each of the last five years. [71806]

Vera Baird: The 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from my Department in the financial year 2005-06 were as follows:

Electronic Data Systems Ltd

Fujitsu Services

Liberata UK Ltd

Accenture UK Ltd

National Westminster Bank Ltd — (as Government Procurement Card provider)

Gartside Ltd

Land Securities Properties Ltd

Kelly Services (UK) Ltd

Initial Security Ltd

The Techologies Group

This analysis excludes payments made by the Department's executive non-departmental public bodies, for example, the Legal Services Commission.

Information for 2001-05 would require the commissioning of a special report which could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Unspent Budget

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much of the budget for her Department remained unspent in the 2005-06 financial year. [70510]

Vera Baird: The Department's underspend against its DEL budget will be included in the Provisional Outturn White Paper, which is due to be published before the summer recess in July.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

China

Mr. Hands: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what steps he has taken through the China Task Force to promote human rights and non-violent responses to demonstrators in China; [72270]

(2) what representations he has made to his Chinese counterparts in the China Task Force on promoting women's rights in the People's Republic of China. [72274]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The Government regularly raises human rights concerns with Chinese interlocutors, through ministerial engagement, the UK-China Human Rights Dialogue and EU mechanisms.

The China Task Force makes recommendations to the Government on its policy towards China in seven key areas: trade and investment, education, science and technology, health, culture, environment and sustainable development, and development issues. Its remit does not cover human rights issues.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what work the China Task Force has undertaken to combat climate change. [72271]

The Deputy Prime Minister: During the 2004 UK-China summit, the China Task Force proposed the creation of a UK-China Working Group on climate change, focusing on four key areas: the review and development of ongoing climate science collaboration between the UK and China, energy efficiency, the restructuring of the energy market towards a low carbon future, and adaptation mechanisms.

Sustainable development is also an important part of the China Task Force's remit. The Task Force instigated the UK-China High-level Dialogue on Sustainable Development during President Hu's State Visit in November 2005. This Dialogue provides a framework for further work with China on Sustainable Development issues affecting climate change, including Sustainable consumption and production and energy for Sustainable development.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he last met Tang Jiaxuan to discuss the work of the China Task Force. [72272]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I last met State Councillor Tang on 21 February this year in Beijing, and had extensive talks on a number of Task Force areas, and discussions on how we can best take forward Task Force recommendations.

I will be contacting Councillor Tang over the summer on how best to take forward the priorities of the China Task Force in the UK, and the UK Task Force in China.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had through the China Task Force on combating avian influenza in (a) China and (b) the UK. [72273]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The remit of the China Task Force was expanded in October 2005 to include Health. The China Task Force discussed epidemics in China at its October meeting last year. In February this year I visited Ditan Hospital, a leading infectious disease hospital in Beijing. I was accompanied by Chinese Health Minister Gao Qiang and discussed preparations China is making to handle the possible emergence of a pandemic influenza strain.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the work of the China Task Force. [72275]

The Deputy Prime Minister: At the request of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, the China Task Force was created in 2003 and I was asked to be its chair.

The Task Force has developed into a high level contact mechanism, which is recognised and valued by the Chinese Government. It has contributed fresh thinking on Government policy on China in the areas under its remit, and made recommendations on the further development of those policies. The Task Force has added value to a number of key issues, including an agreement to annual Prime Minister level UK-China summits, the signature of a Sustainable Development Dialogue, and support of strategic progress in key trade and investment sectors.

At the end of 2005 UK exports to China grew by 16 per cent., which was faster than all our EU competitors except France.

Ministerial Meetings

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what meetings he attended in (a) Shanghai relating to the 2010 International Expo and (b) Beijing relating to the 2008 Olympics; and what the outcome of the meetings was. [73559]

The Deputy Prime Minister: During my visit to China this February, I had a meeting in Beijing with Liu Qi, President of the Beijing Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and visited part of the Olympic site. We discussed work under way to establish a "sustainability bridge" linking London and Beijing's Olympic games. This will involve an exchange of expertise and good practice on how we are respectively approaching the sustainable development dimensions of the Games, complementing other ongoing initiatives.

In Shanghai, I held a meeting with Mayor Man at which we discussed EXPO 2010. We discussed the possible use of United Kingdom expertise in developing the project.

Ministerial Travel

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his findings in relation to his trip to China in February; what the itinerary was; and what the cost was. [73558]

The Deputy Prime Minister: During my trip to China in February I undertook 28 engagements across five cities, covering all of the themes of the China Task Force, including meetings with Premier Wen Jiabao, Jia Qinglin, State Councillor Tang and Donald Tsang, Chief Executive of Hong Kong.

The engagements covered issues such as health, education, sustainable development, urban regeneration, and the Olympics as well as maintaining high level political contacts.

Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year and total costs of all ministerial overseas travel. Copies are available in the Library.

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many miles he travelled in his ministerial car in April. [73885]

The Deputy Prime Minister: This information is not collected centrally. All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the guidance "Travel by Ministers".

CABINET OFFICE

Consultants

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what advice she receives from consultants and public relations companies when providing strategic thinking on the general direction of Government policy and the values underpinning it; what contract Portland PR has to assist with these responsibilities; what contractual relationship she has with a public relations company which wholly or in part assists with the discharging of her ministerial responsibilities; and what the terms are of the contract. [72171]

The Minister without Portfolio: I have not appointed any consultants.

Pensions

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many and what percentage of staff in her Department are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension. [73047]

Hilary Armstrong: Members of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) can pay additional contributions to top up their pension either through the Civil Service Additional Voluntary Contributions Scheme (CSAVCS), a money purchase arrangement, or by buying added years of service in the PCSPS. As an alternative to membership of the PCSPS recruits from 1 October 2002 have been able to join a stakeholder arrangement, the partnership pension account.

The number and percentage of staff in the Department who are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension as at 30 April 2006 are shown in the table.

	Number	Percentage
CSAVCS	30	1.6
Added Years	87	4.6
Partnership	35	1.8

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

1976 Drought (Economic Impact)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of lessons to be learned from the economic impact of the 1976 drought on the UK economy; [73636]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact on the economy of a stand-pipe regime under a drought order in London and the South East; and if he will make a statement. [73640]

Ian Pearson: I am not aware of any assessment undertaken of the economic impacts of the 1976 drought.

Standpipes for the supply of water can only be authorised through an emergency drought order. The likelihood of any such orders being required as a consequence of the current drought in South East England is very small.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what factors were taken into account when deciding which measures relating to animal welfare should be included in the Government's preferred options for the England Rural Development Programme 2007 to 2013; [72710]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact on animal welfare standards of the preferred options for the England Rural Development Programme 2007 to 2013; [72711]

(3) whether he took account of the animal welfare measures to be included in the Rural Development Programmes for Wales and Scotland in determining the England Rural Developement Programme 2007 to 2013. [72712]

Barry Gardiner: The recent consultation on the priorities for the next Rural Development Programme for England was informed by our extensive analysis of economic, environmental and social issues facing rural areas.

In line with this principle, we proposed that the most effective way to use the next Rural Development Programme in England to address our animal health and welfare objectives, as part of our wider aim of making farming more competitive and sustainable, is through increased opportunities for training and knowledge transfer.

We shall make decisions on the priorities for the next Rural Development Programme in England in the light of the responses to the consultation, and in the context of the EU Rural Development budget allocations and our own discussions on the use of voluntary modulation and associated match funding.

There will continue to be separate Rural Development Programmes for England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland for the new programming period, 2007-2013. This is necessary to reflect the different priorities and needs identified within each part of the UK.

Avian Influenza

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether John Pointon and Sons Ltd. have been appointed as renderers to deal with the carcasses of birds affected by avian influenza; and whether the company has a valid licence. [72398]

Mr. Bradshaw: John Pointon and Sons Ltd. have not been appointed as renderers to deal with the carcasses of birds affected by avian influenza. However, they are on the list of potentially suitable renderers that would be approached in the event of an outbreak of a notifiable exotic disease. The company is expected to apply to the Environment Agency for a permit under the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations 2000.

Badgers/Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the most accurate methods of estimating the badger population are; and what the margins of error are. [73569]

Mr. Bradshaw: For small scale surveys, of individual or a small number of social groups, Defra-funded research has used DNA fingerprinting of faecal samples obtained from badger latrines to identify the number of individuals present. Due to cost this method is not appropriate for use over large areas.

Widescale national surveys have been based on counting the number of active badger setts, but this method cannot identify the number of animals using each sett and is insensitive to changes in social group size. In these circumstances night-time lamping surveys can be used to estimate badger densities on pasture. The margins of error of each method depend on the number of samples collected and no generalisations can be made.

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of the success of methods of containing bovine tuberculosis other than the culling of badgers; [70800]

(2) what evidence he has assessed on the effectiveness of alternatives to badger culling in significantly reducing bovine tuberculosis. [71833]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 23 May 2006]: The Government have assessed and implemented a range of alternative measures to reduce bovine tuberculosis (TB):

In addition to the routine TB testing programme prescribed by EU legislation, we introduced compulsory pre-movement testing of cattle in England on 27 March to help reduce the risk of spreading TB through cattle movements. The legislation applies to cattle over 15 months of age moving from one and two year tested herds (phase 1 of the policy). It will be extended to movements of cattle over 42 days old on 1 March 2007 (phase 2). We estimate that phase 1 will achieve a reduction in new TB incidents of about 500 each year, with reductions of about 700 under phase 2.

We plan to extend the use of the gamma interferon test as an adjunct to the TB skin test in order to improve diagnosis of the disease.

We have a wide-ranging research programme in place looking at developing a TB vaccine for cattle and badgers, and investigating ways to limit interactions between cattle and badgers.

Based on the findings of past research, DEFRA has issued farmers with guidelines on good husbandry practices to try to minimise the transmission of bovine TB. More details are available on the DEFRA website: www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/abouttb/index.htm#protect

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the potential costs of bovine tuberculosis outbreaks caused by the perturbation effect resulting from badger culling; and whether these costs were included in the cost-benefit analysis included with his Department's consultation document. [70801]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 23 May 2006]: The partial regulatory impact assessment and cost benefit analysis published with our "Consultation on controlling the spread of bovine tuberculosis in cattle in high incidence areas in England" made clear that the potential cost of any perturbation effect was not included as data were not available at the time.

The existing cost-benefit model is now being updated to include the effects of perturbation resulting from badger culling.

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in what ways he takes into account public opinion in determining the Government's policies on bovine tuberculosis control. [71857]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 25 May 2006]: The 'Government strategic framework for the sustainable control of bovine tuberculosis in Great Britain', published in March 2005, sets out our commitment to work in partnership with our stakeholders, including farmers, consumers, vets, wildlife groups and conservation groups, in developing policies on bovine tuberculosis (bTB).

We worked closely with stakeholder groups in developing the Strategic Framework itself, and in developing our policy for pre-movement testing in England. Between December 2005 and March 2006 we consulted on the principle and method of badger culling in high incidence areas of England, and held a number of citizens' panels to provide further information to feed into the consultation process.

On 6 March we held our first annual bTB meeting for Great Britain, which allowed a two-way exchange of information between the Government and our stakeholders on the latest bTB developments and provided opportunities for constructive discussion. In addition, we are in the process of setting up a new national bTB stakeholder body to advise on the development and delivery of new bTB policies.

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how his Department plans to weight responses to the consultation document 'Controlling the Spread of Bovine Tuberculosis in Cattle in High Incidence Areas in England: Badger Culling'; [71858]

(2) how many responses were received to the consultation document 'Controlling the Spread of Bovine Tuberculosis in Cattle in High Incidence Areas in England: Badger Culling' by (a) post, (b) email, (c) telephone, (d) e-petition and (e) other methods. [71859]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 25 May 2006]: 47,474 consultation responses were received by post and email; further responses were received in the form of petitions. The specific method was not recorded for each response as it is not relevant to the analytical process.

Responses are not being weighted. They are classified and analysed by the type of respondent (e.g. stakeholder or public) and the content of the response (e.g. standard campaign letter, brief yes or no statement or detailed response).

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions his Department has had with Prionics AG since its acquisition of the Bovigam gamma interferon bovine tuberculosis test; and what alternatives to this test are available to the Department. [72247]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Veterinary Laboratories Agency is working closely with Prionics to refine the Bovigam test and further evaluate its performance. There are currently no equally sensitive alternative blood-based tests.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the terms of reference are for the current trials using snares for catching badgers; where the trials are being conducted; and when (a) the trials will end and (b) the results will be published. [73519]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 25 May 2006]: The objective of the current trial is to assess whether a specially designed body snare for badgers is an effective and humane method of restraint. The body snare is intended to be non-lethal and the purpose of the proposed trials is to assess the snare. The study will follow the principles laid down in the draft EU Directive on Humane Trapping Standards whereby the humaneness of a trapping device is first assessed under controlled conditions in pen trials before, if its humaneness is deemed to be acceptable, field trials of the device are conducted to confirm its humaneness and to assess its efficacy and non-target risks. The aim is to release all captured badgers taken during the trial back into the wild unharmed.

Pen trials have now been completed and field trials have commenced. Following completion of the trials and peer review a full report will be published by the end of the summer.

Research in relation to wildlife can be sensitive and controversial. There are real concerns over the security of the sites and the personal safety of the staff involved in this particular work and therefore I regret that I cannot supply this information.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the most recent statistics are for the incidence of bovine tuberculosis in cattle; what assessment he has made of the impact on the results of the use of new tuberculin in tests; and if he will make a statement. [73520]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 25 May 2006]: Latest provisional statistics show that the estimated incidence of bovine TB in Great Britain was 2.9 per cent. in the first quarter of 2006, compared to 4.8 per cent. in the same period of 2005 and 3.4 per cent. in 2004[1].

It is too early at present to draw any conclusions about the reduction in incidence from 2005 to 2006, as this may be due to one of a range of reasons or a combination of factors. The possible causes are currently under investigation.

[1] Confirmed new herd incidents as a percentage of tests on unrestricted herds. Provisional data downloaded from DEFRA's animal health database (Vetnet) on 24 May 2006. Subject to change as more data become available.

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the extent to which the total eradication of bovine tuberculosis is achievable. [70830]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 24 May 2006]: The 'Government Strategic Framework for the sustainable control of bovine TB in Great Britain', published in early 2005, focuses on our assessment of what is achievable within a 10-year timeframe. The vision set out in the Strategic Framework is to slow down and prevent the geographic spread of bovine TB to areas currently free of the disease, and achieve a sustained reduction in disease incidence in cattle in high incidence areas.

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what definition his Department uses of (a) satisfactory, (b) control, (c) reduction, and (d) contain in its summary of the advice from veterinary surgeons in the report Controlling the Spread of Bovine Tuberculosis in Cattle in High Incidence Areas in England: Badger Culling. [70831]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 24 May 2006]: The definitions the department have used are as follows:

Satisfactory: disease control and humaneness requirements are met by the policy.

Control: a halt in the increase in the incidence of bovine tuberculosis (bTB) in cattle.

Reduction: a decline in the number of outbreaks of bTB in cattle in high incidence areas.

Contain: prevention of the spread and establishment of bTB in cattle herds in areas clear or with a low incidence of TB in England.

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the total coalesced land area involved would be if (a) badger culling boundaries were set at (i) one kilometre and (ii) 2.5 kilometres from the boundaries of all tuberculosis-infected farms in England and (b) if badger culling areas of 300 square kilometres were established around the boundaries of all such farms, using 2005 as the reference year; [72949]

(2) what the total coalesced land area is in the example of coalescence over (a) one kilometre and (b) 2.5 kilometres from the boundaries of farms in high tuberculosis incidence areas in England, in Figure 3, page 37, of the consultation document, Controlling the Spread of Bovine Tuberculosis in Cattle in High Incidence Areas in England: Badger Culling. [72950]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 23 May 2006]: The area covered by a cull would be dependent on the culling policy. No decision has been taken on whether to introduce a culling policy nor the precise way this would be done.

The Government have made it clear that if a decision was to be taken to cull badgers to reduce the incidence of bovine tuberculosis (bTB), culling would be limited to land in high incidence areas in England, (i.e. with repeated herd breakdown) and not to any farm infected with bTB.

The maps of coalesced culling areas presented in the consultation document, "Controlling the Spread of Bovine Tuberculosis in Cattle in High Incidence Areas in England: Badger Culling", are for illustrative purposes only. The coalesced area they illustrate is based on only one possible approach to culling and is estimated as a range of 19,650 km^2-25,200 km^2.

Bridleways

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when guidance was last issued to local authorities on the use of traffic regulation orders to counter unauthorised motorised vehicles on bridleways. [71689]

Barry Gardiner: Guidance was last issued in December 2005. It is contained within "Regulating the use of motor vehicles on public rights of way and off road—A guide for Local Authorities, Police and Community Safety Partnerships".

Buncefield

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Government have made of the effect on the local environment of perfluorooctane sulphonate use during the Buncefield Depot fire. [70023]

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Government have made of the effect on the local environment of the use of perfluorooctane sulphonate during the Buncefield Depot fire. [70630]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency started to monitor for perfluorooctance sulfonate (PFOS) in the vicinity of the site following the fire in order to give a better understanding of the impact of the incident on the environment.

The agency has been closely monitoring the River Ver, and have detected low levels of PFOS in the river both during and after the Buncefield incident. No evidence to date has been observed of any impact on fish or other wildlife in the river as a result of this contaminant.

Water samples have been taken from the network of groundwater boreholes both on the Buncefield site and in the surrounding area. These samples have also shown evidence of the presence of PFOS mainly at low levels or below the limit of detection. Two samples however showed elevated levels of PFOS at 4.5 and 5.9 micrograms/litre. Repeat testing of the sample giving the higher result, showed a much lower level of 0.20 micrograms/litre.

The latest results of this groundwater monitoring were the subject of an Environment Agency press release on Friday 12 May. Details can be found on the agency website at: http://www.environment-agency.gov.uk/news/1387272.

The agency has instigated a significant programme of work to further monitor the presence and extent of PFOS in both surface and ground waters in the environment around Buncefield. This programme will also look at background levels of PFOS in the wider environment in England and Wales.

The Environment Agency will continue to make public its findings as they emerge.

Corporate Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on how many occasions he has accepted corporate hospitality in the last 12 months. [67530]

Barry Gardiner: Paragraph 5.28 of the Ministerial Code sets out the rules on the registration of hospitality.

Correspondence

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he will reply to the letters of 8 March and 18 April 2006 from the right hon. Member for West Derbyshire concerning a constituent Mr. John Wood of Winster, Derbyshire, and legislation in respect of the protection of bats. [71904]

Barry Gardiner: I apologise for the delay in replying to the right hon. Member's letter. A response will be issued shortly.

Countryside Access

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many applications were made under the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 for new rights of access in each district of Gloucestershire in each year since the Act came into force; and how many were successful. [73521]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 25 May 2006]: I assume that the question seeks the number of appeals made either in relation to the mapping of land as open country and registered common land or decisions on restrictions and exclusions of the right of access under Part I of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000. Defra does not hold figures for either type of appeal broken down by local authority district, or by local authority area. This information could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Emissions Trading

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to discuss changes to the EU emissions trading scheme with his EU counterparts. [72730]

Ian Pearson: The Government continues to support the Commission in its efforts to improve and strengthen the EU Emissions Trading Scheme in the longer term, including work to include aviation emissions in the scheme. The UK works closely with the Commission's Aviation Working Group, which is considering how best to include aviation in the scheme. We are continuing to press the Commission to present a legislative proposal by the end of 2006.

The UK welcomes the review of the scheme that the Commission is undertaking. This will be a key opportunity for the Commission to strengthen the scheme post-2012 by mapping out a long-term policy framework that will help create security and confidence for business and facilitate significant investment in cleaner technologies. The Government are already considering their priorities for the review and intend to work closely with the Commission and other member states throughout the process. We look forward to the Commission's report this summer outlining how the work will be taken forward.

Energy Efficiency

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the contribution that energy efficiency could make to meeting the Government's climate change targets. [72726]

Ian Pearson: Energy efficiency is an integral part of our action to tackle climate change. We have a strong package of energy efficiency policies and measures, as most recently updated in the 2006 Climate Change Programme, which will deliver savings of 10.2 million tonnes of carbon per year across the economy by 2010. This will equate to between 36 and 43 per cent. of the overall carbon savings in the Climate Change Programme, depending on the level of savings delivered through the EU Emissions Trading Scheme.

We expect energy efficiency to continue delivering against our climate change goals on a similar scale throughout the next decade.

Energy Saving Accreditation

Mr. Malik: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he is taking to extend energy saving recommended accreditation to consumer electronic goods. [72656]

Ian Pearson: The Energy Saving Trust's Energy Saving Recommended (ESR) scheme was extended to cover consumer electronic goods in January 2006 when integrated digital TVs were added. To date nine manufacturers have been successful in securing endorsement for 90 products.

The Energy Saving Trust hopes to be able to extend the range of consumer electronic products covered by ESR later this year. Priorities include integrated digital recording equipment and set top boxes.

English Nature

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of the funding provided by English Nature for land managers in upland areas and commons was spent (a) on grants to farmers and (b) in administration expenses in each year since 2001. [74176]

Barry Gardiner: English Nature does not separately record the administrative costs incurred in setting up agreements. However, the Wildlife Enhancement Scheme was specifically designed to reduce administrative costs by the use of standard agreements and standard payments. Prior to this, each agreement was individually negotiated and could take up to a year to complete.

Environment Agency (Flood Defences)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding was made available in 2005 to the West Midlands division of the Environment Agency for flood defences. [73398]

Ian Pearson: £19.1 million was allocated to Environment Agency flood defence projects and maintenance works in the West Midlands area in the financial year 2005-06.

Environmental Protection Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the operation of section 82 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990; what recent representations he has received about the operation of this (a) section and (b) Act; and what amendments have been made to the Act. [72463]

Mr. Bradshaw: Section 82 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 allows a person with a complaint of statutory nuisance, for example, noise, smell or smoke, to take private action through the magistrates court. If the court agrees that a statutory nuisance exists and/or is likely to recur, it will issue an abatement notice on the person responsible for the nuisance, requiring that the nuisance be ceased or abated within a specified timescale. It may, but does not have to, specify the steps to be taken. Anyone causing a statutory nuisance could also be liable to a fine.

The statutory nuisance provisions of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 have been amended by measures implemented on 6 April 2006 in the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005, which introduce insects, and artificial light, to the list of potential statutory nuisances. The Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005 also introduces an optional seven-day deferral for serving of an abatement notice for statutory nuisance from noise in order to pursue alternative steps before formal action is taken.

The Government work as a matter of course with stakeholders and, on statutory nuisance from noise in particular, we will be seeking stakeholder views on the Noise Strategy, which will be the subject of full public consultation early in 2007.

A large number of amendments have been made to the 1990 Environmental Protection Act and the cost of collating a list would be disproportionate. As there is no central record of representations received by the Department that would enable officials to identify those about the operation of the whole Act, it would also incur disproportionate cost to do so.

Factory Farming

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the welfare conditions of (a) factory farmed poultry, (b) egg-laying hens in battery cages and (c) factory farmed fish. [71820]

Mr. Bradshaw: This Government are committed to high standards of farm animal welfare. In Great Britain, we have some of the strictest legislation in the EU to protect the welfare of farmed animals.

The State Veterinary Service (SVS) conducts regular programmed inspections of farmed premises to check the welfare of poultry. All complaints and allegations about poor welfare on-farm are investigated. In addition, a range of Government-funded research and advisory programmes are supporting our commitment to high standards of animal welfare.

The Fish Health Inspectorate (FHI) undertakes regular inspections of premises in England and Wales to check on the health and welfare of farmed fish and shellfish. Defra has funded a number of research projects on fish welfare. This includes work to develop a non-invasive procedure that can be used by fish farmers to establish whether the welfare of their fish has been compromised.

Farm Subsidies

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been paid in subsidies to farmers in Bassetlaw directly by (a) the Government and (b) the EU or its predecessors in each of the last 30 years. [71890]

Barry Gardiner: This information is not kept on a constituency basis, and information we do hold could be gathered only at disproportionate cost.

Fisheries

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average time taken to enter fisheries data on to the fisheries database was (a) in the last period for which figures are available and (b) in each year since 1997. [73391]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Marine Fisheries Agency has an operational target to enter all information from fish markets, merchants, fishing log books, landing declarations and sales notes on to the fisheries database within five working days of receipt. This target relates to the processing of returns for which no follow-up or investigative action is required to resolve errors or anomalies.

The capture of information on the date of receipt of forms at port offices was introduced in April 2003, and information for earlier periods cannot be provided.

Period	Percentage of forms entered within five working days
2005-06	94.5

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make an assessment of the likelihood of a recurrence of foot and mouth disease; which countries have outbreaks; and what procedures are in place to prevent food imports from those countries. [71899]

Mr. Bradshaw: The risk of the introduction of foot and mouth disease (FMD) to Great Britain remains low.

A very large number of countries experience regular foot and mouth outbreaks. We carry out constant surveillance of the animal health situation around the world, and publish preliminary outbreak assessments, qualitative risk assessments and summary reports on our website:

www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/diseases/monitoring/index.htm

All animals and animal products from countries outside the European Union are checked when imported to ensure they meet the necessary veterinary import conditions. Since 2003, additional resources have been made available to tackle illegal imports of products of animal origin. This increased enforcement activity has resulted in a three-fold increase in seizures. Enforcement is based on risk, including information provided by Defra on the animal health situation around the world, with assessments on new disease outbreaks.

Forest Certification Schemes

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 23 May 2006 to question 72426, on forest certification schemes, what representations the Prime Minister of Australia made to (a) the Prime Minister and (b) other Government Ministers on the programme for the endorsement of forest certification schemes. [74295]

Barry Gardiner: The Prime Minister of Australia wrote to the Prime Minister expressing concern over the UK Government's assessment of the Programme for the Endorsement of Forest Certification schemes (PEFC) and the impact that could have on the procurement of Australian forest products.

My hon. Friend the Member for Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley), Elliot Morley, then Minister of State for Climate Change and Environment met with Senator the Hon. Eric Abetz, Australian Minister for Fisheries, Forestry and Conservation, to discuss this matter.

Senator Abetz and other officials were able to clarify how the PEFC requirements are adopted and applied in Australia. The clarification of Australia's position was valuable in helping to consider the effectiveness of recent changes made by the PEFC scheme to its system requirements.

GM Crops

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Government will base the co-existence and liability regime governing the growing of GM crops in England on the assumption that the growing of GM crops may become widespread. [73238]

Ian Pearson: We cannot be certain about the extent to which authorised GM crops may be grown in England in the future. However, our assumption is that this would start off at a relatively low level, becoming more widespread over time if there is market acceptance. We will review the coexistence regime introduced for England in the light of developments in the scale of any GM cropping. On-going Defra and EU research will also provide more evidence to help us judge what coexistence measures might be needed if GM crops become widespread.

H5 Virus

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many separate cases of the H5 virus have been discovered in the UK since 1997. [73246]

Mr. Bradshaw: Two. Highly pathogenic H5N1 avian influenza was detected in a parrot in a quarantine facility in Essex in October 2005 and a swan in Cellardyke, Scotland in April 2006.

Live Calves (Export)

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 23 March 2006 to the hon. Member for Dover (Gwyn Prosser), Official Report, column 485W, on live calves (export), what steps he has taken to assist farmers to rear and market veal calves in the UK. [73507]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1296W.

Marine Fisheries Agency

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to his written statement of 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 48WS, on the Marine Fisheries Agency performance targets 2006-07, what measures the agency has in place to monitor the quota stocks target; and what the risk weightings referred to are. [73392]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Marine Fisheries Agency, along with other fisheries administrations in the UK, operates systems as required by EU legislation to monitor and control the activity of UK fishing vessels to ensure quotas allocated to the UK are not exceeded. This involves maintaining dedicated systems for the collection and collation of information from vessel logbooks and landing declarations, as well as information from sales notes from registered buyers and sellers of fish. The information from UK systems is collated to produce reports on the level of uptake of quotas that are updated on a daily or weekly basis as appropriate. These reports are used by fisheries administrations, producer organisations and other groups in the UK to manage the individual quota allocations during each year. Monthly reports are provided to the European Commission, with measures also in place to check and validate information received by the Commission from other member states on landings by UK vessels outside the UK. The agency takes management action, as necessary, to control or close activity in particular fisheries to ensure quotas limits are complied with.

The risk weightings relate to enforcement of sea fisheries legislation. The Marine Fisheries Agency aims to deploy 60 per cent. of its inspection and enforcement resources to high risk fisheries, 30 per cent. to medium risk and 10 per cent. to low risk. The specific risk weightings take account of a number of factors, including the nature of the fishery, the area and the type of fishing activity. For instance, we would consider vessels fishing in an area and for a species for which specific recovery measures have been introduced to be classified as 'high risk'. The agency is developing a computer model to assist in analysing a wide range of factors to determine compliance risks in fisheries for the medium to long term so that its resources can be deployed and utilised to best effect.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) under and (b) over 10 metre licences were issued by the Marine Fisheries Agency in each year since 1997. [73393]

Mr. Bradshaw: The following table sets out the number of licences issued to fishing vessels administered in England and Wales by (a) vessels of 10 metres and under in length, and (b) vessels of over 10 metres in length.

	(a) 10 metres and under	(b) over 10 metres
1997	0	1,000
1998	3,342	1,070
1999	0	938
2000	3,203	890
2001	0	842
2002	3,041	805
2003	0	731
2004	3,004	696

Licences for fishing vessels over 10 metres in length were issued annually. Since 1996 licences for vessels of 10 metres and under in length have been issued biennially. Licences for fishing vessels of 10 metres and under in length will be issued again in June 2006.

Licences for vessels in Scotland and Northern Ireland were issued by the Scottish Executive Environment and Rural Affairs Department and the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development respectively.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many 10 metre licences have been issued by the Marine Fisheries Agency. [73394]

Mr. Bradshaw: In December 2005 the Marine Fisheries Agency issued licences for 649 fishing vessels of over 10 metres in length administered in England and Wales.

Licences for fishing vessels in Scotland and Northern Ireland were issued by the Scottish Executive Environment and Rural Affairs Department and the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development respectively.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when (a) Ministers and (b) officials from his Department last met representatives from the Composting Association. [73403]

Mr. Bradshaw: I met representatives from the Composting Association on 22 August 2005; my officials met a representative on 25 May this year.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on how many occasions (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department have stayed overnight in (i) five star, (ii) four star and (iii) three star hotels in each of the last three years. [69092]

Part-time Ministerial Post

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what factors he took into account when deciding that the post of Minister of State (Sustainable Farming and Foods) should be a part-time post. [73210]

Barry Gardiner: The post of the Minister of State (Sustainable Farming and Foods) is full-time. In accordance with long standing practice Lords Ministers with particular departmental responsibilities also act as spokesmen for other Departments in the House of Lords. Lord Rooker acts as spokesman for Northern Ireland and is also deputy leader of the House of Lords.

Pesticides Safety Directorate

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 46WS, on the Pesticides Safety Directorate (Performance Targets 2006-07), who is responsible for progress on each of the targets; to whom each person reports; what recent discussions he has had about implementation of each target; and if he will make a statement. [73243]

Ian Pearson: The Pesticides Safety Directorate's performance targets are set by the Minister of State and published in the agency's Business Plan. The executive responsibility for delivering these targets lies with the agency's chief executive who is supported by three operational directors and one non-executive director who together are responsible for the day-to-day management of the agency and its business. In addition, the strategic direction and performance of the agency is monitored on behalf of the Minister by the Department's Regulatory Agencies Strategy Board. The agency's achievements against its targets, along with membership details of its management board and that of the Regulatory Agencies Strategy Board, are given in the agency's Annual Report and Accounts.

Poultry Meat

Albert Owen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the impact on the UK poultry industry of imports of surplus meat from other EU countries following outbreaks of avian influenza. [72069]

Mr. Bradshaw: Imports of poultry meat into the UK from some EU countries have affected the domestic wholesale market. There is nothing illegal about this practice, which is consistent with Single European Market principles. Further, it is anticipated that recent high levels of imports will begin to fall away as surplus European supplies diminish.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in his private office in each of the last five years. [69095]

Barry Gardiner: Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each pay band. For information relating to the last financial year I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158-61WS.

Information on special advisers for this financial year is currently being collected and will be published in the normal way when it is ready.

Queen's Flight

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what occasions she has travelled on the Queen's Flight since 2002; what the (a) departure point, (b) destination, (c) distance travelled and (d) cost was of each flight; how many (i) other Ministers and (ii) officials travelled on the same flight; how the costs are calculated; and on what basis decisions are made on whether such flights are cost effective. [64606]

Barry Gardiner: The use of 32 Squadron flights is governed by time and cost considerations. The rules on the use of special flights are set out in "Travel by Ministers". The annual lists of overseas travel by Cabinet Ministers costing over £500 are set out when special flights are used, and the purpose of each trip. Copies are available in the Library. Carbon dioxide emissions arising from 32 Squadron flights are included in the Government's carbon offsetting commitment. Carbon emissions arising from the use of these flights have been recorded and offset in the same way as the use of scheduled flights since April 2005.

Rural Enterprise Scheme

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what grants have been allocated under the Rural Enterprise Scheme in the South West in each month since December 2005. [73274]

Barry Gardiner: The following figures show the number of applications approved in the South West region, in each month from December 2005 onwards. The numbers have been broken down by measure, to show the type of activity for which funding has been approved.

The funding awarded covers activity to take place across financial years 2005-06 to 2008-09.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assistance his Department has provided to farmers to facilitate applications to the Rural Enterprise Scheme. [73275]

Barry Gardiner: Across the country, Regional Appraisal Panels have awarded Rural Enterprise Scheme (RES) grants to a number of facilitation projects and co-ordination bodies, totalling approximately £1.5 million, which includes significant support for farmer applicants. For example, one project in the West Midlands regions was awarded over £150,000 as a co-ordination body to facilitate the development of broad, high quality innovative and collaborative new projects in rural Warwickshire that had the potential to be funded under RES.

When the Rural Enterprise Scheme guidance notes for applicants were updated in 2004, an additional booklet providing advice on preparing a business plan for socio-economic projects was also developed and provided to prospective applicants.

Rural Development Service staff across the country have continually provided help and advice to prospective applicants as part of their day-to-day activity running the scheme. This has included pre-application clinics, advice and direction on priorities for funding, and site visits to discuss projects.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many applications have been received for the rural enterprise scheme in (a) England and (b) each Government region; how much money has been made available as part of the scheme in (i) England and (ii) each Government region; what percentage of the funds in each area have been allocated; to what extent funds allocated to the south west have been withdrawn to compensate for overspends in other parts of the country; and if he will make a statement. [73733]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 25 May 2006]: The following table provides details on the rural enterprise scheme which operates within the 2000 to 2006 England Rural Development Programme. Figures provided are up to date as of 23 May 2006:

[1] National covers projects that span a number of regional boundaries.

No funds have been withdrawn from the south west region's allocation.

Under the EU regulations supporting the rural enterprise scheme, 50 per cent. of funding comes from the European Union. These European funds are allocated on an annual basis and it is generally not possible to transfer any unspent EU funds to a later financial year. This scheme, therefore, requires close and careful financial management. To this end, each region is given an annual budget within which it must manage the grant awards it has made. This will include any delays to project expenditure and therefore delays to claims, as well as any under or over-claims by beneficiaries.

The performance of approved projects is subject to continuous review to establish the true value of any 'headroom' in annual budgets. For 2006-07, a detailed exercise is in place to ensure that budgets are used to the maximum extent possible. In this regard, it is expected that some additional monies will be identified as available to support new grant awards before the closure of the scheme at the end of June. The precise value of funds available for grant awards will be confirmed by mid-June.

There will continue to be significant competition for the remaining funds; the Rural Development Service will continue to manage the position carefully in 2006-07, with a view to the possible redirection of funds between regions where regional interest in the scheme is genuinely lower than anticipated.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether money allocated to the South West for grants to be made under the Rural Enterprise Scheme has been subsequently transferred to other areas. [74090]

Barry Gardiner: No funds have been withdrawn from the South West under the Rural Enterprise Scheme for transfer to other areas.

The detail supporting each of the years in the tables can be found in RPA's Annual Report and Accounts under House of Commons publication numbers HC 1197 (for both 2000-01 and 2001-02), HC 940, HC 1009 and HC 82 respectively.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many claim forms for the 2006-07 Single Payments Scheme (a) were sent by the Rural Payments Agency to potential applicants before 13 April 2006 and (b) have been sent on or since 13 April 2006; and if he will make a statement. [68880]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency issued 84,334 SPS application forms to potential applicants before 13 April 2006 and a further 33,902 application forms have been issued on or since 13 April 2006.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people have been sent a set of application forms for payments in 2006 by the Rural Payments Agency; how many completed applications have been returned; and how many forms remain to be issued. [68930]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency issued 118,236 SP5 application forms between 21 March 2006 and 26 April 2006 to known customers. As of 25 May 2006, 90,225 completed application forms have been returned and logged. No forms remain to be issued.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what proportion of e-mails to the Rural Payments Agency have been (a) acknowledged within one working day and (b) replied to within 15 working days in each month since October 2001. [71517]

Barry Gardiner: The following information refers to e-mails sent to the Rural Payments Agency's Customer Service Centre (CSC), e-mail address CSC@rpa.gsi.gov.uk. The CSC was established in February 2005 and the following information is based upon statistics collected from 29 April 2005 to 16 May 2006.

All emails to CSC@rpa.gsi.gov.uk are acknowledged automatically. The acknowledgement includes a set of frequently asked questions aimed at answering the customer's general questions immediately.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many telephone calls to the Rural Payments Agency Customer Service Centre resulted in left messages in the last 12 months; and what proportion of those calls were returned within one working day. [71532]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payment Agency's (RPA) Customer Service Centre (CSC) provides an inquiry response facility and, outside business hours, a recorded messaging service, referring customers to RPA's website. As such the CSC seeks to answer inquiries as they are made. A proportion of the inquiries that are answered require a follow up response from a CSC operator or a member of RPA's processing staff. Moreover, RPA provides an electronic ordering facility for those customers seeking to acquire an application form or other scheme literature.

RPA launched a CSC on 14 February 2005. This was done to streamline single payment scheme and customer registration telephone inquiries into the Agency through one route, to allow staff to concentrate on processing. More importantly, this system aims to ensure that customers receive consistent answers and that any more complex inquiries can be directed to specialist areas of the business to call the customer back.

The main call centre is based in Workington with facilities for calls to be diverted to staff at other RPA sites during periods of unusually high demand.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what IT contracts the Rural Payments Agency has with private businesses; what the cost of each is; and what assessment he has made of their value for money. [71539]

Barry Gardiner: Details of expenditure on major IT contracts in the year 2005-06 were:

To provide assurance on the effectiveness of controls, continuous improvement and value for money the RPA purchasing and contract management functions are subject to regular audit and value for money assessments.

The question relates to the "cost" of contracts. As there are several interpretations of this, and to give the best clarity and comparison, I have provided expenditure figures for 2005-06.

The scope of "IT contracts" is also open for interpretation. In addition to the contracts which include "tangible" IT goods and communications I have also included detail of the expenditure under the IT consultancy contracts, as the majority of work under these contracts is for IT or IS consultancy, or is IT project/programme related.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the backlog is of Rural Payments Agency cases for (a) single farm payments and (b) entry level scheme payments; what plans he has to reduce each backlog; and by what date the Rural Payments Agency will have cleared its backlog. [71540]

Barry Gardiner: The information is as follows:

(a) By close of business on 23 May 2006, 93,710 single payment scheme claimants had received either a full or substantial partial payment. The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) is working hard to ensure that outstanding payments are made as quickly as possible.

(b) At 12 May, 93 per cent. of environmental stewardship payments due in the first three payment rounds (February-April) had been made, leaving 654 outstanding of a potential total of 9,097. The Rural Development Service, who administer the scheme, and RPA, who make the payments, are working hard to ensure that outstanding payments are made as quickly as possible.

The deadline for application under the single payment scheme in 2005 was 16 May. The regulatory payment window for the scheme is from 1 December 30 June, but RPA announced in early 2005 that the most probable time frame for payments to begin being made was in February 2005. This target was met, as the first payments were issued on 20 February. Full payments were continuing to be made until 5 May, when it was announced that substantial partial payments were going to be made to a large number of farmers yet to receive a payment. These were made by 12 May with full payments and top up payments currently being made.

RPA is working hard to ensure that outstanding payments will be made as quickly as possible.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what factors have contributed to the increases in the cost of running the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) since 2003-04; and what the original budget allocation was for the RPA at the beginning of (a) 2003-04 and (b) 2004-05. [73220]

Barry Gardiner: The original running cost budget allocations for the Rural Payments Agency were:

	£ million
2003-04	196.170
2004-05	193.161

These allocations did not include any funding for non-cash costs such as depreciation and the cost of capital, nor the Agency's contribution to the corporate costs of its parent department, the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs.

RPA running costs have increased as a result of additional responsibilities taken on by the Agency over the last three financial years. These include:

The merger with the British Cattle Movement Service;

Structural Funds;

National Fallen Stock Scheme;

Reform of the Common Agricultural Policy including the introduction of the Single Payment Scheme.

In each of the years since 2003-04 the original budget allocations have been supplemented by additional funding provided by DEFRA, to cover these additional responsibilities. In particular, the Agency has reduced the number of permanent staff and introduced IT systems to make efficiency savings in the longer term.

Securing the Benefits (Grant Applications)

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many grant applications for the fishing industry made under the scheme set out in Securing the Benefits have taken longer than eight weeks to process in 2006; what the average processing time has been; and how many applications were processed within the eight week target in 2005. [73797]

Mr. Bradshaw: For the period 1 January 2006 to 19 May 2006, 55 out of 57 grant claims made under the financial instrument for fisheries guidance scheme (96 per cent.) were processed within eight weeks. The average processing time was 19 working days including the time taken to chase additional necessary information from the claimant.

For 2005, 123 out of 136 grant claims (90 per cent.) were processed within eight weeks. The average processing time was 23 working days including the time taken to chase additional necessary information from the claimant.

Single Farm Payments

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact on the Department's targets to pay applicants for single farm payment of the rejection of entitlements which are declared invalidated. [59350]

Barry Gardiner: The rejection of Single Payment Scheme claims because they are not valid does not affect the Rural Payments Agency's target to make 96.14 per cent. of valid SPS payments by the end of the payment window on 30 June 2006.

The deadline for the Single Payment Scheme in 2005 was 16 May. The regulatory payment window for the scheme is from 1 December to 30 June, but the Rural payments Agency announced in early 2005 that the most probable time frame for payments to begin being made was in February 2005. This target was met, as the first payments were issued on 20 February. Full payments were continuing to be made until 5 May, when it was announced that substantial partial payments were going to be made to a large number of farmers yet to receive a payment. These were made by 12 May with full payments and top-up payments currently being made.

The Rural Payments Agency is working hard to ensure that outstanding payments will be made as quickly as possible.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will take steps to ensure that all validated single payment scheme (SPS) entitlement statements are issued by the end of March; and how many farmers in Devon have received (a) validated and (b) unvalidated SPS statements. [59660]

Barry Gardiner: 120,367 applications were received for the Single Payment Scheme (SPS). By the end of Monday 22 May, 93,710 claimants have received a full or partial payment. This represents 78 per cent. of the customer base now having received a total of £1.322 billion. This equates to 88 per cent. of the £1.5 billion fund.

The remaining payments will be made as soon as legally possible following the positive action set out in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's written statement on 16 March 2006, Official Report, column 104WS, the response to the hon. Member for South-East Cambridgeshire on 27 March 2006, Official Report, column 543, and the written statement on 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 13WS.

The Rural Payments Agency does not have data available on a regional basis, as the scheme is not administered in this way.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what percentage of 2005 Single Farm Payment Scheme claims he expects to be paid by 30 June 2006; what the value of each such payment will be; and whether those claims unpaid by that date will be (a) subject to EU reimbursement and (b) met from public funds. [66171]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) is working hard to ensure that outstanding payments will be made as quickly as possible. By 16 May some £1.3 billion had been paid, representing 87 per cent. of the total projected expenditure. The value of each payment will depend on the size of the claim and the proportion that is determined as eligible.

Any 2005 scheme claims unpaid by the end of June 2006 will be subject to a sliding scale of EU reimbursement. The reduction in the rate of reimbursement will not apply to the first 4 per cent. of the expenditure and any subsidy paid after 15 October 2006 will not be reimbursed.

My officials have approached the European Commission to request an extension to the 2005 SPS payment window, although as yet, no response has been received.

The deadline for the Single Payment Scheme in 2005 was 16 May. The regulatory payment window for the scheme is from 1 December to 30 June, but RPA announced in early 2005 that the most probable time frame for payments to begin being made was in February 2006. This target was met, as the first payments were issued on 20 February. Full payments were continuing to be made until 5 May, when it was announced that substantial partial payments were going to be made to a large number of farmers yet to receive a payment. These were made by 12 May with full payments and top-up payments currently being made.

RPA is working hard to ensure that outstanding payments will be made as quickly as possible.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what percentage of eligible claimants for the Single Payment Scheme (SPS) had lodged their SPS claim forms by 15 May 2006; if he will estimate how much and what percentage of total SPS monies for 2006 these claims represent; and if he will make a statement. [72834]

Barry Gardiner: 52,204 Single Payment Scheme applications were received on or before 15 May 2006.

The Rural Payments Agency is not able to determine how many of these forms are valid until they have been through level 1 validation checks to ensure that basic information is present on the form.

Until these forms are entered into the computer system the RPA is unable to establish the value of the eligible claims.

118,236 Single Payment Scheme application forms have been sent to potential claimants plus an additional 1,500 application forms requested by potentially new applicants to the 2006 scheme.

A copy of the 2006 application form is also available for customers to download and complete from the RPA website. Customers can also collect blank application forms from RPA offices and drop-in centres located around the country.

As announced on 5 May, applications to the 2006 SPS received between 16-31 May will not attract late claim penalties.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of the delivery of single farm payments to farmers. [74173]

Barry Gardiner: By close of business on 23 May 2006, 93,710 single payment scheme claimants had received either a full or substantial partial payment. The Rural Payments Agency is working hard to ensure that outstanding payments are made as quickly as possible.

United Nations Fish Stocks Agreement Meeting

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what issues he plans to raise at the United Nations Fish Stocks Agreement meeting in New York on 22 to 26 May. [73395]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK played an active role in the preparation of the EU position for this meeting and at the meeting itself. This included looking at the 15 elements chosen for assessing the adequacy and effectiveness of the UN Fish Stock Agreement, and suggesting means of strengthening the substance and methods of the Agreement's implementation.

In addition, the UK hosted a State meeting at the conference to profile the report of the High Seas Task Force into Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated (IUU) fishing, and presented the UK's action plan for taking forward the report 's recommendations. The event was well attended by representatives of State, NGOs and other interested bodies.

Venezuelan Discounted Oil (Environmental Impact)

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the potential environmental impact of the supply of discounted oil to London by Venezuela; and if he will make a statement. [73599]

Ian Pearson: We are not aware of any firm commitment by the Government of Venezuela to supply oil or oil products at discounted rates to the UK. In the absence of this and any specific details I am unable to speculate on the potential environmental implications of this proposal.

Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding (a) his Department and (b) the Environment Agency has (i) allocated to and (ii) spent on supporting charitable organisations in preparation for the implementation of the waste electrical and electronic equipment directive. [73776]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra has not allocated or provided funding to charities specifically in preparation for the implementation of the waste electrical and electronic equipment (WEEE) directive.

In April 2005, Defra awarded a total of £3 million to 36 community groups working with waste in England, under the Waste Partnership Fund (WPF). A number of the community projects that are being taken forward will support the reuse and recycling of waste electrical and electronic equipment.

The Environment Agency (EA) has provided some support to charitable refurbishers at a local level. Nationally, support has been given through work with Envirowise on their national programme of WEEE seminars. The EA has agreed an interim position on WEEE permitting which has saved many small-scale WEEE refurbishers the cost of obtaining a waste management licence in the period before new licensing exemptions are available.

Water

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will introduce legislation to allow householders to reverse a decision to accommodate a water meter once installed; and if he will make a statement. [73325]

Ian Pearson: Water customers have, since 2000, had some choice in how their charges are calculated and customers who would benefit from a metered charge can request a meter to be installed free-of-charge. Customers also have the corresponding right to revert back to an unmeasured charge within a year if they feel that it does not best suit their needs.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs at what level of available water supply a water company may apply to take remedial action to avoid water shortages. [73826]

Ian Pearson: All water companies have drought plans setting out how the company will continue to meet its duty to maintain an adequate supply of water during a short-term water shortage. These plans are now a statutory requirement. The plans contain various triggers to initiate a range of actions at differing stages depending on the severity of a drought. One of the actions may involve applying to my Department for drought orders to restrict non-essential uses of water.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures he is taking to ensure that residents of Tendring do not run out of water. [74128]

Ian Pearson: Water companies' plans for meeting demand were set out in their 25-year water resources plans, prepared in 2004. The Environment Agency reported on those plans in "Maintaining Water Supply", which is available from its website at:

http://www.environment-agency.gov.uk/commondata/acrobat/mws_837514.pdf

Water companies also have drought plans which set out how they will meet their duties to supply adequate quantities of wholesome water during drought periods with as little recourse as possible to drought orders and permits. The plans contain various triggers to initiate a range of actions at differing stages depending on the severity of a drought.

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department has taken to assess the merits of (a) cloud seeding and (b) desalination as ways of meeting the UK water supply requirements. [74182]

Ian Pearson: Water companies are responsible for considering the need for increasing provision of water in fulfilment of their duties to maintain adequate supplies of water. The companies' plans for meeting demand were set out in their 25 year water resources plans, prepared in 2004. The Environment Agency reported on those plans in "Maintaining Water Supply", which is available from its website.

No water company has plans to seed clouds in its water resources plan. The merits of desalination on a significant scale are currently the subject of a public inquiry following Thames Water's appeal against refusal of planning permission for a plant in the Thames estuary.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of Thames Water's spending on the renewal of its water distribution network. [72852]

Ian Pearson: The Water Services Regulation Authority (Ofwat) sets price limits for water companies. In the price limits for 2005-10, Thames Water was allowed £279 million to renew its water infrastructure. This will enable Thames to increase activity to maintain its pipes, including the renewal of about 1,400 km of water distribution mains.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what schemes are being promoted by his Department to provide (a) low cost water butts and (b) other water use reduction devices in areas of England subject to hosepipe bans. [69380]

Ian Pearson: Under the Water Industry Act 1991, water companies have a duty to promote the efficient use of water by their customers. As part of the activities they undertake to meet this duty, many water companies offer subsidised water butts to customers as well as other water saving devices, such as those that lower toilet flush volumes. This duty is exercised regardless of whether a hosepipe ban is in place, though publicity advertising the availability of water saving devices is likely to be increased during these periods.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on the impact of water saving regimes under drought orders in London and the South East on incoming tourism. [73637]

Ian Pearson: I have had no such discussions with the Secretary of State of Culture, Media and Sport; however drought orders are unlikely to impact to any significant extent on tourism in London and the South-East.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what new water-saving measures have been introduced in departmental offices in London and the South East since 1 January. [73627]

Ian Pearson: No specific new measures have been introduced within Defra offices in London and the South East since 1 January. However, water consumption at all sites is monitored on a regular basis and compared with targets set out in the framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate (SDiG). Leaks and metering problems are taken up with suppliers and appropriate efficiency measures are put in place to deal with other causes of high consumption.

All refurbishment projects involving Defra offices have included water saving measures. Waterless urinal systems and low flush cisterns have been successfully installed at a number of sites to provide consistent savings in water consumption. Percussion or spray taps or taps with sensors are also delivering significant savings.

These initiatives will continue to be extended to other sites across the estate. Other issues under consideration are the sub-metering of areas where there is a high water use, for example in catering sites and crèches.

As part of the World Environment Day campaign, water hogs were made available for use within Defra sites and also for staff to take home.

Defra's published responses to SDiG targets are available at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/sdstrategy/operations/partc.htm.

House of Lords Nominations

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those nominated by the public to the House of Lords Appointments Commission as non-party-political peers since the Commission was established; and which of those nominated were selected. [74538]

The Prime Minister: I understand that since the House of Lords Appointments Commission was established in 2000, it has received approximately 4,090 nominations from members of the public for non-party-political peerages. The Commission has undertaken to treat all information supplied by nominees in confidence. This also accords with the principles of the Data Protection Act 1998.

A list of those selected for appointments is available on the Commission's website. A copy has also been placed in the Library of the House.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by his Office in each year since 2001; in what capacities they were employed; how many were discovered as part of a criminal investigation; and what the nature of the charges brought against them were. [73959]

The Prime Minister: None.

Ministerial Visits

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Prime Minister if he will visit Shrewsbury in summer 2006 to attend Shrewsbury Flower Show. [74765]

The Prime Minister: I have no current plans to do so.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Prime Minister how many times he has visited China since becoming Prime Minister. [73551]

The Prime Minister: Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. Copies of these lists are available in the Library of the House. Information on the number of officials accompanying Ministers on overseas visits is included in the list. All Ministers' travel arrangements are in accordance with the arrangements for official travel set out in chapter 10 of the ministerial code, and the accompanying guidance document, "Travel by Ministers". Information for the year 2005-06 will be published as soon as it is ready.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Prime Minister when he next plans to visit (a) Nigeria and (b) South Africa. [73629]

The Prime Minister: I have no current plans to do so.

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister what discounts are available in relation to hotel accommodation used by (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Office. [69248]

The Prime Minister: All travel by civil servants and special advisers is conducted in accordance with Section 8,2 of the Civil Service Management Code, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Official Residences

Mr. Heald: To ask the Prime Minister what the name is of the official residence recently vacated by the right hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett). [75282]

The Prime Minister: Government House, Pimlico.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Prime Minister what the (a) notional market rent, (b) estimated capital value and (c) total annual cost of (i) rent, (ii) security, (iii) utilities, (iv) facilities management and (v) general maintenance was for (A) Flat 1 Admiralty House, (B) Flat 2 Admiralty House, (C) Flat 3 Admiralty House, (D) Government House in Pimlico, (E) No. 1 Carlton Gardens, (F) Bute House, (G) the Chancellor of the Exchequer's residence in Downing street and (H) his residence in Downing street in the last year for which figures are available. [75283]

The Prime Minister: Expenditure on official residences is a matter for the relevant Ministers' Departments.

The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. For the cost of routine maintenance on the flat above 11 Downing street I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) on 10 March 2006, Official Report, column 1836-37W.

Pensions

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister how many and what percentage of staff in his Department are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension. [73043]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Hilary Armstrong) on 1 June (73047).

Sovereign Strategy

Chris Huhne: To ask the Prime Minister on what dates over the last 12 months (a) he and (b) his officials have met a representative of Sovereign Strategy. [72345]

The Prime Minister: My officials and I have meetings with a wide range of organisations and individuals on a wide range of subjects. Information relating to internal meetings, discussion and advice is not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Antiquities (Illegal Trading)

10. Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures she is taking to tackle the illicit international trade in antiquities, with particular reference to the London art market. [74926]

Mr. Lammy: Since 2000, with support from other Government Departments, the police, HM Revenue and Customs, the art trade and the museums, libraries and archives communities, we have introduced a series of measures to combat the illicit trade in antiquities, in particular:

The Dealing in Cultural Objects (Offences) Act, which makes it illegal to deal in tainted cultural property; and

The publication of guidance for museums, libraries and archives to ensure that, in practice, they acquire cultural property legally and ethically.

Digital Television

11. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of television viewers in the Border Television area cannot receive digital television. [74927]

Mr. Woodward: Currently digital terrestrial television is available to over half of the population of Border region, and the vast majority of households can receive digital TV services via digital satellite, terrestrial or cable. 70 per cent. of households in Border have already chosen to take up digital TV.

After switchover, which takes place in Border in 2008, UK digital terrestrial television coverage will match the current analogue coverage of 98.5 per cent.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether Ofcom's digital dividend review of the value of the spectrum released by full digital switchover will inform Government policy on the extent of the costs of digital switchover to be paid for through the BBC licence fee. [71608]

Mr. Woodward: There is no relation between the Digital Dividend Review, on which we expect Ofcom to consult towards the end of this year, and the switchover costs to be paid by the BBC, which will be part of the licence fee settlement.

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans her Department has to increase its audio description targets for digital television. [75172]

Mr. Woodward: The Department currently has no plans to increase its audio description targets for digital television. The Communications Bill gives Ofcom a requirement to produce, publish and from time to time review a Code relating to provision for the deaf and visually impaired and the means by which such services should be promoted. Ofcom are in the process of reviewing the code, and have suggested in their consultation that it would be better to review the statutory target for audio description when it is clearer how many potential beneficiaries will use it.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the cost of digital switchover will be ring-fenced in the accounts of the BBC. [73549]

Mr. Woodward [holding answer 25 May 2006]: We are considering how best to account for the BBC's digital switchover costs, including the cost of the targeted help scheme, as part of discussions about the level of the licence fee.

Sport (Participation)

12. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to increase mass participation in sport. [74928]

Mr. Caborn: The Department is committed to its public service agreement target of increasing levels of participation in sport by priority groups by 3 per cent. by 2008. Working through Sport England, we are implementing a range of measures to achieve this.

Gambling

13. David Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent estimate she has made of the number of people with a gambling addiction. [74929]

Mr. Caborn: The current estimate is that 0.6 per cent. of the adult population in Great Britain are problem gamblers. This figure is drawn from the last national prevalence study published in 2000. The Gambling Commission is currently conducting a further prevalence study.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the Gambling Commission on the size of the sample to be used in future prevalence studies on problem gambling; and if she will make a statement. [74567]

Mr. Caborn: My Department has had discussions with the Gambling Commission about all aspects of the design, conduct and management of the prevalence study.

The sample size to be used in the prevalence study to be conducted this summer will be 10,000, which is greater than that used in the 1999 study. The sample size to be used in future prevalence studies has yet to be decided.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what criteria will be used to assess the level of problem gambling in an area surrounding a new casino licensed under the Gambling Act 2005. [74867]

Mr. Caborn: My Department is in the process of tendering for a scoping study to establish the best means of identifying, measuring and assessing the social and economic impacts of the 17 new casinos that are being permitted under the Gambling Act 2005. The study is scheduled to be completed in the autumn and will be published once the Department has had the opportunity to consider it.

Digital Audio Broadcasting

14. Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent progress there has been in the take-up of digital audio broadcasting; and if she will make a statement. [74930]

Mr. Woodward: Progress has been impressive with sales of DAB sets doubling in the last 12 months to April. Sales now exceed 3 million. The Government have established a regulatory regime which has allowed for this growth, and we continue to work closely with Ofcom and industry to encourage that development further. According to the Digital Radio Development Bureau, the UK leads the way in take up of DAB sets.

Olympic Games

15. Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of possible cost over-runs on the 2012 Olympics. [74931]

Tessa Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Ludlow (Mr. Dunne).

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the potential role for the arts in the London 2012 Olympics; and if she will make a statement. [73564]

Mr. Caborn: The arts will play a crucial role in the cultural events supporting the 2012 Olympic Games and Paralympic Games. The Cultural Olympiad will begin in 2008, offering an unprecedented opportunity to showcase the range of high class and diverse art from across the UK.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what contingency plans her Department has for overspend on the 2012 Olympic games. [74507]

Tessa Jowell: We will make every effort to avoid cost overruns. However, should they arise, we will look at all the options available at the time.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she has received a copy of the The Business of the Games report by the Economic Development, Culture, Sports and Tourism Committee of the Greater London Assembly; and if she will make a statement. [74568]

Mr. Caborn: I have seen a copy of this report and I endorse the London Assembly's recognition of the importance of ensuring that small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) are equipped to benefit from the many opportunities that the 2012 Games will bring. Small businesses across the value chain, in a wide variety of sectors and throughout the nations and regions, have much to gain from the commercial opportunities arising from the Games. The Government are determined to maximise those opportunities both for SMEs and British business as a whole. All the Olympic partners and stakeholders are working together to identify the best model to achieve this, taking into account best practice from previous host cities.

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures her Department has put in place to co-ordinate a cross-Government approach to achieving a legacy for the 2012 Olympics. [73313]

Tessa Jowell: The Government Olympic Executive (GOE) has been set up within DCMS to co-ordinate Government input into the 2012 games. The Executive acts as a link between Departments on the one hand and LOCOG (London Organising Committee) and the ODA (Olympic Delivery Authority) on the other. The GOE works closely with all Departments through the Inter-Departmental Steering Group (senior officials responsible for Olympic related activity in Departments), supported by Departmental Olympic Co-ordinators who handle the day-to-day liaison. Through these groups the GOE is ensuring a joined up inter-Departmental approach to delivering the benefits and legacy of the 2012 games.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) principles and (b) guidelines are in place relating to the exploitation of the Olympics for party political purposes in elections up to 2012. [73615]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 25 May 2006]: Arrangements were agreed before the May 2005 general election in respect of the London 2012 bid. The principle of cross-party working still applies and is an important element of the success to date. I am committed to continuing to work openly and constructively with all parties in delivering the 2012 Games, and we have a series of working arrangements in place to ensure this happens.

Tourism

16. Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations have been made by her Department to the Lyons review with regard to the potential impact of a bed tax on tourist accommodation. [74932]

Mr. Woodward: The Lyons Inquiry is an independent review, and it has not yet made any recommendations. Sir Michael Lyons is scheduled to report by the end of this year and my Department will respond, as is appropriate, at that point.

18. Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the role of local authorities in promoting tourism in the UK. [74935]

Mr. Woodward: Local authorities play vital roles in supporting tourism, investing over £122 million into the sector in 2004-05. My Department works closely with the Local Government Association and a range of other organisations representing local councils, and is ensuring that local authorities are fully involved in work to prepare for the tourism opportunities of the 2012 Olympic games and Paralympic games.

Cricket (Television Coverage)

17. Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to meet the England and Wales Cricket Board and the major broadcasters to discuss television coverage of test match cricket. [74934]

Mr. Caborn: As I made clear, both at the Select Committee hearing on 29 November and in my response to the Committee Report, published in March, I am willing to convene a meeting between the terrestrial broadcasters and BSkyB, but only upon the understanding that the broadcasters are willing to negotiate with BSkyB. To that end, I wrote to the major broadcasters on 16 May to canvass their views on whether such a meeting would be useful. We have yet to receive all the responses.

Sports Events (Alcohol Sales)

19. Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with sporting bodies on the possible effect on antisocial behaviour of the sale of alcohol at sporting events. [74936]

Mr. Woodward: I have had no discussions with sporting bodies on the impact of the sale of alcohol at sporting events on antisocial behaviour. The licensing of sales of alcohol was devolved to individual licensing authorities by the Licensing Act 2003. The prevention of crime and disorder is one of the licensing objectives which licensing authorities have to take into account when relevant representations are made on a licence application. The police can also seek a review of a licence if they have concerns about crime and disorder.

Air Miles

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many air miles have been accrued by senior civil servants in her Department from official business in each of the last three years; and how they were used. [70487]

Mr. Lammy: DCMS uses an agent to book air travel and, as part of this cross-Government arrangement, the individual does not accrue air miles.

BBC

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport who will monitor the BBC's efficiency targets. [73547]

Mr. Woodward [holding answer 25 May 2006]: As stated in the White Paper, the Government believe that one of the overriding duties of the Trust should be the effective stewardship of the licence fee on behalf of licence fee payers: making sure that it is spent with maximum effectiveness and efficiency and always providing value for money. It will be part of the Trust's role to secure and demonstrate continuing improvements in the BBC's efficiency, increasing the return provided by its commercial services and bearing down on the costs of proposed investments. The Government also welcome the proposal of the current Chairman of the BBC that the Trust should ask the NAO to consider the extent to which future "self-help" targets are being met and that the results of this work will also be reported to Parliament.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will require the BBC to submit a revision of its Red Book figures before making a decision on the licence fee. [73546]

Mr. Woodward [holding answer 25 May 2006]: The Government are currently conducting a funding review to determine the level of the licence fee to apply from April 2007. As part of this process the BBC has submitted an assessment of its future funding needs. That assessment made clear that projected costs in some areas would be subject to revision. The BBC has undertaken to make revisions to its assessment available to the Government as work progresses. The Government will announce the details of the settlement in due course.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to ensure the independence of the BBC Trust from (a) the Corporation and (b) the Government. [75061]

Tessa Jowell: The new governance structure is designed to strengthen the BBC's independence from Government and will be reinforced by very clear separation between the Trust and the Executive Board. This clear separation will be achieved through the distinct and different roles of the Trust and Executive Board. The Trust's overarching responsibility will be to represent the interests of the licence fee payer. The new system will also deliver effective oversight of the Executive Board's activities by the Trust, in the public interest; at the same time, it will prevent micro-management of the executive Board's activities by the Trust in a way that would distract from the Trust's strategic role.

Better Regulation Unit

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what role her Department's Better Regulation Unit has played in (a) the review of the Licensing Act 2003 and (b) the guidance issued under section 182 of that Act; and if she will make a statement. [71692]

Mr. Woodward: The Department's team responsible for promoting better regulation is involved at all stages of the review of the guidance issued under section 182 of the Licensing Act 2003, and in our wider monitoring and evaluation work around the implementation of the Act.

Betting and Gaming

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what regulations govern the sponsoring of terrestrial television programmes by gambling companies; and if she will make a statement. [72967]

Mr. Woodward: The matter raised is the responsibility of the Office of Communications as independent regulator. Accordingly, my officials have asked the chief executive of Ofcom to respond directly to my hon. Friend. Copies of the chief executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what consideration her Department has given to introducing a levy on betting and gaming in connection with other sporting activity analogous to that which applies to horse racing. [74132]

Mr. Caborn: The horse race betting levy recognises the unique relationship between that sport and the betting industry. Horse racing is a sport whose primary purpose is to provide a betting product. In that respect, it is a symbiotic relationship not shared by other sports, except perhaps greyhound racing which has a separate arrangement with bookmakers. Consequently, the Government currently have no plans to introduce a betting levy for other sports.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the Gambling Commission has powers to make the prohibition of lottery-style betting games by gambling operators a licence condition. [73439]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 24 May 2006]: The Gambling Act 2005 sets out the definitions of different types of gambling activity, and provides that it is a criminal offence to offer facilities for gambling without authorisation. It would be inappropriate for the Gambling Commission to duplicate these provisions through the introduction of licence conditions.

The Commission does, however, have powers under section 79 of the Act to impose conditions on operators which relate to the manner, nature and circumstances of licensed activities (including lottery style betting games), should the Commission consider that there is a regulatory need to do so.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received on the uprating of gaming machine stake and price levels. [75037]

Mr. Caborn: We have received many representations on this issue from gambling operators, trade bodies, and from Members of Parliament.

We will be publishing our proposals for gaming machine stake and prize limits under the Gambling Act 2005, for consultation, in the near future. This will give everyone with an interest an opportunity to comment on the proposed stake and prize levels that will operate from September 2007 onwards.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will next uprate gaming machine stake and prize levels. [75038]

Mr. Caborn: The stakes and prizes that will apply from September 2007 when the Gambling Act 2005 comes into force were set out at the time the Gambling Bill was introduced into Parliament in October 2004. This remains Government policy.

These proposals involve raising the maximum stake on Category C gaming machines (currently all cash amusement with prizes machines) from 30p to 50p, and raising the maximum stake on Category B3 and B4 gaming machines (currently jackpot machines in bingo premises and registered clubs respectively) from 50p to £1.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures are in place to assist (a) the Gambling Commission and (b) sports governing bodies to monitor betting placed from outside the UK on sporting events which take place within the UK. [74117]

Mr. Caborn: While the Gambling Commission has no jurisdiction over betting operators licensed outside Great Britain, it is continuing to build upon its co-operative relationships with overseas gambling regulators.

The Government have worked with sports governing bodies to develop a 10-point plan which facilitates information sharing between sports bodies and betting operators. So far 11 sports bodies have signed up to the voluntary plan and an increasing number have a Memorandum of Understanding with betting operators allowing for the sharing of information about suspicious betting patterns or individuals betting with those operators here or abroad.

Big Lottery Funding

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on progress with the work of the Big Lottery Fund. [74137]

Mr. Caborn: The Big Lottery Fund is the operating name of the National Lottery Charities Board and the New Opportunities Fund, working jointly together. A UK-wide framework of themes and outcomes for their work has been agreed, and within that relevant priorities for each of the four parts of the UK have been set.

The Fund has announced a range of new programmes following extensive public consultation, including children's play; support for the voluntary and community sector, the environment and well-being; and international grants.

The National Lottery Bill currently before Parliament will establish the Big Lottery Fund as a new statutory NDPB. A recruitment campaign for Board and Committee positions on the Big Lottery Fund is currently under way.

Black/Asian Employees

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in her Department's press office. [74363]

Mr. Lammy: The Department currently has 14 members of staff employed in the press office of which six have declared they are white and the remainder have not declared their ethnicity. Information on ethnicity is collected on a voluntary basis.

Charles Darwin

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will allocate funds to Shrewsbury borough council to help it promote the town as Darwin's birthplace in the run up to the bicentenary of Darwin's birth in 2009. [74767]

Mr. Lammy: This Department has no funds to allocate to Shrewsbury borough council to help promote the town as Darwin's birthplace or assist with events leading up to the bicentenary of Darwin's birth in 2009. However, Darwin at Downe, Charles Darwin's home and workplace, was this year nominated for inclusion in the World Heritage List and will be considered by the World Heritage Committee in 2007.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will reply to the hon. Member for West Worcestershire's letter of 31 March (departmental ref. 40297). [73897]

Mr. Lammy: I wrote to the hon. Member on 23 May 2006.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to her answer of 23 May 2006 to question 72575 on the delay in responding to a letter from a constituent, what the reasons are for the delay. [74429]

Mr. Caborn: I have received several letters about Holme Pierrepont over recent months and officials have been working with Sport England and others to ensure that our response to those inquiries is as complete and up to date as possible. I hope to be able to respond to the hon. Member's inquiry immediately after the Whitsun recess.

I shall also be meeting representatives of Nottinghamshire county council in the near future to discuss progress.

Departmental Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what facility is available for senior civil servants in her Department to use credit cards supplied by the Department. [70486]

Mr. Lammy: If an officer has a business need they can apply for a Government Procurement Card. This is a debit card facility and utilises an agreement set up by the Office of Government Commerce.

Departmental Expenditure

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many staff from her Department attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event in London in 2005; and what the total cost was to her Department of allowing them to attend. [73013]

Mr. Lammy: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster wrote to the hon. Member on 1 June with details of the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event. Copies of her letter are available in the Library of the House.

Departmental Funding

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from the Department in each of the last five years. [71803]

Mr. Lammy: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many and what percentage of staff in her Department are making voluntary contributions to their pension. [73011]

Mr. Lammy: Members of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) can pay additional contributions to top up their pension either through the Civil Service Additional Voluntary Contributions Scheme (CSAVCS), a money purchase arrangement, or by buying added years of service in the PCSPS. As an alternative to membership of the PCSPS recruits from 1 October 2002 have been able to join a stakeholder arrangement, the partnership pension account.

The number and percentage of staff in the department who are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension as at 1 May 2005 are shown in the table.

	Number	Percentage of Headcount (excl Ministers and Special Advisers)
CSAVCS	5	0.95
Added Years	19	3.6
Partnership	5	0.95

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many staff in her Department have had (a) five or more, (b) four, (c) three and (d) two periods of sick leave of less than five days in each of the last three years. [73012]

Mr. Lammy: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Sick absence figures are contained in the annual report entitled Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service published by the Cabinet Office. Table A of the report gives details of both the average working days absence per staff year and the number of staff years on which that calculation is based. The most recent report for the calendar year 2004 was published on 1 November 2005, copies of which are available in the Library. This report and those for 1999, 2000, 2001, 2002 and 2003 are available on the Cabinet Office website at: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/occupational_health/publications/index.asp

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many non-pensionable bonuses were awarded to members of her staff in each of the last three years; and at what total cost. [73016]

Mr. Lammy: The information is in the following table:

	Number of non-pensionable bonuses	Total cost of non-pensionable bonuses (£)	Percentage of paybill
2003-04	232	229,096	1.2
2005-06	276	332,109	1.6

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many staff in her Department did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represented of the total number of staff in each case. [75121]

Mr. Lammy: In each of the last three years, the number of employees who did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report totalled less than five. The actual numbers and the percentages these represent of the total number of staff cannot be released on grounds of confidentiality.

Engagements

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will visit Shrewsbury to discuss the proposed theatre project with the council. [74762]

Mr. Lammy: Neither my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State nor I have plans to visit Shrewsbury at the current time. I am however aware of plans to build a new theatre in the town and understand that Arts Council England's West Midlands office is in contact with the council over the project.

The Public

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much has been paid by the Arts Council to the consultant Paul Lamb in connection with his work for the arts organisation The Public in West Bromwich in each of the last 10 years. [69133]

Mr. Lammy: The information requested in this question is commercial-in-confidence and as The Public is currently in administration, it would not be appropriate to release it at this time.

Mr. Fiello: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the Arts Council paid the consultant Gary Jones to examine the management structure of the arts organisation the Public in West Bromwich; and if he will list other projects he has assessed for the Arts Council. [70244]

Mr. Lammy: The information requested in the first part of this question is commercially sensitive and as The Public is currently in administration, it would not be appropriate to release it at this time.

Gary Jones' company, Blackbushe, has received direct payments from Arts Council England for work on three projects since January 2004. These are for work on the Derby Playhouse (January 2004), the Ocean Music Trust (October 2004) and The Public (March 2005).

Government Art Collection

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the Answer to the hon. Member for South Holland and The Deepings (Mr. Hayes) of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1018W, on the Government Art Collection, whether there are plans to insure further items in the Government Art Collection. [73806]

Mr. Lammy: The Government Art Collection is not commercially insured. As a general rule, the Government does not purchase commercial insurance for the risks it faces as, in general, it is cheaper for Government to cover its own risks. The Government Art Collection does not plan to insure further items beyond those works of art on display in non-government buildings.

Hylas Spacecraft

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her Department has had with Digital UK on the use of the

Hylas spacecraft to increase digital television reception in rural areas; and if she will make a statement. [73470]

Mr. Woodward [holding answer 25 May 2006]: Neither I nor my officials have had any discussions with Digital UK regarding the use of the Hylas satellite.

Leased Land

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) land and (b) property her Department (i) leases and (ii) leased in (A) 1979, (B) 1983, (C) 1987, (D) 1992 and (E) 1997 in (1) the Southend, West constituency, (2) Essex, (3) Hertfordshire and (4) the Metropolitan Police area of London. [72122]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport does not have and has never held leases in the Southend, West constituency, Essex or Hertfordshire.

In the Metropolitan Police area of London, the Department currently leases the following properties: 2 to 4 Cockspur Street; Oceanic House, 1a Cockspur Street; Grove House, 2 to 6 Orange Street; Queen's Yard, 179a Tottenham Court Road; 55 Blandford Street.

The Department was created under its previous name, the Department for National Heritage, in 1992. It thus held no leases in 1979,1983 or 1987. In 1992, the Department leased 2 to 4 Cockspur Street and 2 Sheraton Street. In 1997 the Department leased 2 to 4 Cockspur Street; 2 Sheraton Street; Grove House, 2 to 6 Orange Street; and Haymarket House, Oxendon Street.

Libraries

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many static public libraries there are in England. [73859]

Mr. Lammy: The number of static public libraries in England in each of the last five years was as follows.

Static libraries in England (by hours open per week)

	60 plus	45 to 59	30 to 44	10 to 29	<10
2000-01	19	469	1,206	1,331	130
2001-02	28	493	1,199	1,311	115
2002-03	42	598	1,168	1,240	91
2003-04	51	683	1,143	1,186	80
2004-05	69	727	1,139	1,106	96

The original source for these statistics is the Public Library Statistics Actuals, published by the Chartered Institute for Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA). These are published annually, most recently in January 2006.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the level of funding for libraries. [75000]

Mr. Lammy: In terms of public libraries, there is no ring-fenced Government core funding: such funding is via the Local Government Financial Settlement administered by the Department for Communities and Local Government.

It is for the 149 library authorities in England to decide upon the level of funding for their services bearing in mind their statutory responsibility to make comprehensive and efficient provision.

The public library statistics published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy show that library authorities made net expenditure (excluding capital charges) of £817,216,604 in 2004-05 (the latest figure available). The comparable figure for the previous year was £781,990,546.

Additional examples of funding for public libraries from within my Department's portfolio are the £120 million of National Lottery support for the People's Network, around £130 million of DCMS Private Finance Initiative Credits for library or part library projects, and the ongoing DCMS funding of £2 million per annum for the Framework for the Future Action Plan programme. I also look forward to the Big Lottery Fund's £80 million community library funding programme which will be launched later this year.

My Department is also responsible for sponsorship of the British Library, the UK's national library. Grant-in-aid funding to the British Library over the 2004 Spending Review period is as follows:

2005-06	Estimated outturn	96.3
2006-07	Planned	102.2
2007-08	Planned	104.4

Licensed Premises

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many outlets in (a) the county of Greater Manchester, (b) Tameside metropolitan borough and (c) Stockport metropolitan borough have been prosecuted under the Licensing Act 2003. [72647]

Mr. Woodward: This information is not held centrally.

Licensing Act

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the Government will publish the first part of the review of its Guidance in respect of the Licensing Act 2003. [73329]

Mr. Woodward: Following the initial review, which covers issues where a broad consensus exists among stakeholders, it is expected that supplementary Guidance will be laid before Parliament in June 2006.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the Government's proposed timetable is for the completion of the second part of the review of its Guidance in respect of the Licensing Act 2003. [73330]

Mr. Woodward: We expect to lay a revised version of the Guidance before Parliament by the end of 2006.

Live Music

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps the Government are taking to support live music. [74136]

Mr. Woodward: The Government are committed to supporting live music in all its forms. Through the Live Music Forum, we are working to ensure that opportunities for the promotion of live music are realised to the full. We are also achieving this through increased investment—funding for music through Arts Council England has more than doubled since 1997 to over £100 million in 2006.

Lotteries

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to restrict the ability of gambling operations to market lottery style betting games. [74566]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State does not have any plans to impose conditions to operating licences under section 68 of the Gambling Act 2005 in relation to lottery style betting games.

The Gambling Act 2005 sets out the definitions of different types of gambling activity, and provides that it is a criminal offence to offer facilities for gambling without authorisation.

However, should the Commission consider that there is a regulatory need to do so, it does have powers under section 79 of the Act to impose conditions on operators which relate to the manner, nature and circumstances (including marketing) of licensed activities (including lottery style betting games).

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will announce her decision on the review by the Gambling Commission, of the legal limits on the size of (a) prizes and (b) proceeds of society lotteries. [71627]

Mr. Caborn: We are currently considering the Gambling Commisaion's review of the limits on the prizes and proceeds for society lotteries, and will make an announcement in due course.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether it is Government policy to encourage competition between the National Lottery and society lotteries. [71629]

Mr. Caborn: The Government believe that society lotteries and the National Lottery can co-exist happily. Both types of lottery play an important role in raising money for good causes, and it is our policy to ensure that appropriate and proportionate regulation applies in each case. Society lotteries are required to abide by strict limits on proceeds and prizes, currently up to £2 million and £200,000 respectively in any single lottery. We are supporting the work of society lotteries by introducing a range of deregulatory measures through the Gambling Act 2005, and by strengthening the protection for society lotteries from illegal lotteries that purport to be prize competitions in certain media outlets. The National Lottery continues to be regulated under separate legislation.

Museums and Galleries

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many items in national museums and galleries have not been on public display in the last three years. [74511]

Mr. Lammy: The number of collection items in the DCMS-sponsored museums and galleries that have not been on public display in the past three years was estimated to have been around 105 million in October 2005. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for East Devon (Mr. Swire) on 11 October 2005, Official Report, column 459W.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the most recent estimate is of the size of the reserve collections of the national museums and galleries. [74512]

Mr. Lammy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for East Devon (Mr. Swire) on 11 October 2005, Official Report, column 459W.

National Lottery

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her Department has had with the Department for Education and Skills on the use of lottery funding for projects in schools. [74506]

Mr. Caborn: We have regular discussions with colleagues at the Department for Education and Skills about joint programmes, such as those that receive funding from the Big Lottery Fund and the Arts and Sports Councils. For example, this includes the £750 million New Opportunities for PE and Sport (NOPES) programme which is bringing about a step change in the provision of sporting facilities for young people and the community more generally.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the current balance is of lottery funds held in the national lottery distribution fund on behalf of the Millennium Commission. [74508]

Mr. Caborn: The Millennium Commission's balance held in the national lottery distribution fund at the end of April 2006 was £56.1 million of which £34.5 million has been committed under existing grant programmes and for operating costs. The uncommitted balance is allocated to the Millennium Commission's final funding programmes, and decisions will be made on these in due course.

Under the provisions of the National Lottery Bill, the Big Lottery Fund, as the Millennium Commission's successor body, would take on any remaining balance and funding commitments.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the (a) cost to date and (b) projected cost is of the merger of the Community Fund and the New Opportunities Fund to create the Big Lottery Fund. [74509]

Mr. Caborn: The cost to date of the administrative merger of the Community Fund and the New Opportunities Fund to create the Big Lottery Fund is £4.976 million. The administrative merger is now effectively complete, though some minor costs will be incurred in effecting the legal merger, if the National Lottery Bill is passed. Savings of £3.5 million a year on costs have already been achieved and overall the merger will lead to savings of 10 to 20 per cent. of pre-merger costs, which equates to around £6 million to £12 million per annum.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the national lottery operator has paid to the National Lottery Commission in licence fees in each year since 1994. [74510]

Mr. Caborn: The information is as follows:

	Amount (£)
1994-95	110,000
1995-96	260,000
1996-97	340,000
1997-98	400,000
1998-99	380,000
1999-2000	480,000
2000-01	620,000
2001-02	544,000
2002-03	820,000
2003-04	428,000
2004-05	316,000
2005-06	371,000

The figures for licence fees between 1994-95 and 1998-99 are cash-based and from 1999-2000 accruals-based. The figure for the year ending 31 March 2006 is not yet available, but will be published when the accounts for that period are laid before Parliament in July 2006.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many members of the public her Department consulted on the proposed changes to the National Lottery; and how many responses were received. [74513]

Mr. Caborn: My Department held a public consultation between 25 November 2005 and 28 February 2006 about Lottery funding for the good causes of arts and film, heritage and sport after 2009. The consultation could be accessed online through the Department's website and respondents could also reply by postage-paid questionnaire. The consultation received 11,476 responses. The same consultation was also carried out by Camelot, on its players' website, for the two weeks to 28 February 2006, receiving 175 responses. My Department also commissioned a series of focus groups across the UK.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what amount of National Lottery prize money remains unclaimed; and if she will make a statement. [74565]

Mr. Caborn: Amounts in respect of unclaimed prize money are paid to the National Lottery Distribution Fund (NLDF)180 days after the relevant draw, or 180 days after the end of the relevant scratchcard game.

From the launch in 1994 to 28 April 2006, £824.4 million in unclaimed prize money has been paid to the NLDF.

During the 180-day period, unclaimed prize money is held in Player Trust Accounts. The figure for unclaimed prize money held in Player Trust Accounts is calculated on the last Friday of every month. The figure on 28 April 2006 was £54.5 million.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the total amount (a) allocated and (b) distributed by each of the lottery distribution bodies in (i) 2005 and (ii) 2006. [73872]

Mr. Caborn: The table shows the value of grants awarded and how much has been spent by each lottery distributor, using the financial years closest to those in the question.

The information in table (a) is derived from the Department's lottery award database, searchable at www.lottery.culture.gov.uk, which uses information supplied by the lottery distributors. The 2006 figures are the latest available, but will exclude awards yet to be reported to the Department and included on the database.

It often takes time for projects that are awarded lottery money to start spending on a project; consequently awards are often spent wholly or partly in different years from those in which they are made.

The expenditure figures are the sum drawn down from the National Lottery Distribution Fund by each distributor for the years in question, and include operating costs.

National Sports Foundation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the progress of the work of the National Sports Foundation. [75001]

Mr. Caborn: I am very pleased that the National Sports Foundation has made its first award. This was to the Lords Taverners for £177,500, to support their excellent work to promote the growth of grass roots cricket through the provision of cricket equipment bags to junior cricketers. This funding, which will help ensure that we capitalise on the explosion of interest in cricket among our young people following last summer's Ashes series, was matched by a donation from the England and Wales Cricket Trust.

I understand that the Foundation is in continuing discussions with potential sponsors as well as sporting organisations and they are hopeful that further awards will be announced shortly.

Paddington Station

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans have been made for the conservation of the fourth span at Paddington station; and if she will make a statement on the station's future as a Grade I listed building. [73858]

Mr. Lammy: Paddington station was listed at Grade I in 1961. In March English Heritage received an application to amend the list entry in relation to Span Four. Once we have received English Heritage's advice, the Secretary of State will determine whether the list entry for Paddington should be revised.

Shrewsbury (Sports Village)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will visit the new sports village in Shrewsbury to see the facilities provided by the borough council. [74185]

Mr. Caborn: I am always keen to visit new sports facilities—especially those that have received significant Government and Lottery investment such as the new sports village in Shrewsbury. I would be delighted to pay a visit if my diary allows.

Small Change Big Difference

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department and its agencies have taken following the launch of the Government's Small Change Big Difference Campaign. [72010]

Mr. Caborn: The Department has not yet taken specific steps as a direct result of the launch of the Small Change Big Difference campaign. However, working largely through Sport England, the lead national body for promoting grassroots participation in sport, we are supporting a range of initiatives to help increase participation in sport and active recreation which reflect and support the campaign's advice.

As the programme of work develops, the Department of Health will be working across all of government to ensure the programme joins up to promote maximum impact. DOH is leading the implementation for this initiative as part of its cross-government commitment to deliver the public health White Paper Choosing Health.

Television (Wales)

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to ensure access to (a) BBC Wales, (b) ITV Wales and (c) S4C in north-east Wales after digital switchover. [72673]

Mr. Woodward: Digital Switchover will enable digital terrestrial coverage to match the current 98.5 per cent. analogue level. Switchover for the HTV Wales region will happen in the second half of 2009.

After switchover, viewers in Wales who currently receive BBC Wales, ITV Wales and S4C in analogue terrestrial form, will continue to receive those services in digital form. But these services are also available on satellite to the whole country.

Television Advertising

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which organisations Ofcom has met to discuss restrictions on television advertising of food products targeting children since she asked Ofcom to examine the issue on 1 December 2003; and on what dates. [73193]

Mr. Woodward: The matter raised is the responsibility of the Office of Communications as independent regulator. Accordingly, my officials have asked the Chief Executive of Ofcom to respond directly to my hon. Friend. Copies of the Chief Executive's letter will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Television Licence (Second Homes)

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the BBC raised in licence fees from second homes in each of the last five years. [73548]

Mr. Woodward [holding answer 25 May 2006]: The information requested is not collected centrally. The fact that a property is a second home is not relevant to the television licensing requirements, except for people aged 75 or over, who receive free licences for their main address only.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Electoral Commission

25. Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask my hon. Friend the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission, what the total cost of the Electoral Commission has been in each financial year since its inception. [74912]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission estimates its net resource out-turn expenditure in 2005-06 to be £21.924 million. The corresponding figures for earlier years are given in the Commission's annual reports and accounts for the years concerned. These have been laid before the House and may be viewed in the Library.

Boundary Proposals (Election Periods)

Paul Rowen: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission whether it is the policy of the Electoral Commission not to issue Boundary Committee proposals during an election period. [74911]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission's responsibilities in relation to boundary matters extend only to local authority ward boundaries in England. I am informed that its statutory committee, the Boundary Committee for England, has not issued proposals for new local authority electoral arrangements during an election period since April 2002.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Heald: To ask my hon. Friend the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission, what research the Commission has undertaken of the number of (a) failed asylum seekers and (b) foreign nationals not from the Commonwealth or Irish Republic who are fraudulently on the electoral register. [73920]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that it has undertaken no research into these issues.

Where it appears to an Electoral Registration Officer that an attempt has been made by any individual to register fraudulently, it would be for them to make inquiries and, if appropriate, alert the police.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Cathedrals

Mark Pritchard: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what central funding the commissioners expect to receive in 2006-07 for repairs to cathedrals. [74916]

Sir Stuart Bell: None. In this period grant aid for repairs paid directly to English cathedrals from English Heritage will be £1 million, which has been the level since 2005.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Departmental Bills (Amendments)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will list the occasions when an amendment has been moved by (a) a Labour backbencher, (b) an Opposition backbencher and (c) an Opposition front bench spokesman to a Bill sponsored by his Department that has been accepted by his Department during the current session; and if he will make a statement. [72132]

The Solicitor-General: My Departments have not sponsored any legislation in the current session.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will list those Private Members' Bills in respect of which his Department has adopted a policy of neutrality in each session since 2001-02; and if he will make a statement. [72130]

The Solicitor-General: The information requested is not collected by my Departments and providing it would incur disproportionate costs.

SCOTLAND

Devolution

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what devolution issues the Advocate General has considered since 9 May. [75053]

David Cairns: Since 9 May, 37 devolution issues have been intimated to the Advocate General. Of these 37 devolution issues, 20 arose in civil proceedings and 17 in criminal proceedings.

Eid-Ul-Adha

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff from his Department attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event in London in 2005; and what the total cost was to his Department of their attendance. [73056]

David Cairns: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has written to the hon. Member with details of the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

International Meetings

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will encourage the Scottish Executive to participate in UK delegations as appropriate at relevant international meetings; and if he will make a statement. [74672]

David Cairns: Arrangements for the Scottish Executive participating in UK delegations to international meetings are clearly laid out in the Memorandum of Understanding and Supplementary Agreements—specifically the Concordats on the Co-ordination of European Union Policy Issues and International Relations.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a substantive reply to Question 63598, on electors in Scottish constituencies, tabled by the hon. Member for Glasgow East on 14 April. [74606]

David Cairns: As my hon. Friend is aware, I replied on 24 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1804-05W.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

32 (The Royal) Squadron

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the occasions on which she has used 32 (The Royal) Squadron since 2001; what the approximate take-off and landing times were of each flight; whether the carbon emissions were offset in respect of each flight; which other transport options were considered for each flight; why other transport options were not used; for what official duties each flight was used; and if she will make a statement. [66161]

Barry Gardiner: The rules on the use of special flights, including 32 Squadron, are set out in "Travel by Ministers". The annual lists of overseas travel by Cabinet Ministers costing over £500 set out when special flights are used, and the destination, cost and purpose of each trip. Copies are available in the Library. Carbon dioxide emissions arising from 32 Squadron flights are included in the Government's carbon offsetting commitment. Carbon emissions arising from the use of these flights have been recorded and offset in the same way as the use of scheduled flights since April 2005.

Agricultural Ties

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what restrictions an agricultural tie places on occupants of a house so registered; and if he will make a statement. [74172]

Barry Gardiner: An agricultural tie is a condition attached to the planning consent for a house or another similar dwelling. The precise conditions that the tie brings will vary from case to case. However, these will usually limit occupation of the property to an agricultural worker, or their widow or widower.

Agricultural Waste

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he expects to bring into force regulations to bring agricultural waste within the controls of the waste framework and the landfill directives. [74547]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Waste Management (England and Wales) Regulations 2006 came into force on 15 May 2006. These Regulations apply to agricultural waste the same national waste management controls that have long applied to other sectors of industry. The Regulations comply with the Waste Framework Directive (75/442/EEC as amended) and the Landfill Directive (1999/31/EC).

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Agricultural Waste Stakeholders Forum has determined how farm plastic waste can best be collected and recovered; and if he will make a statement. [74548]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Agricultural Waste Stakeholders' Forum (AWSF) has been awarded £1 million worth of funding under the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste (BREW) Programme over three years. This is to develop a programme of work examining how farm plastic waste can best be collected and recovered within the formal structure of a producer responsibility scheme. Producer responsibility regulations are already in place for producers placing packaging on the market. It is likely that any new collection scheme will be set up to collect both packaging and non-packaging farm plastics.

This programme of work is feeding into the development of statutory producer responsibility regulations. These are currently being developed to increase the collection and recycling of non-packaging farm plastics.

An advisory group, operating as part of the existing Advisory Committee on Packaging, is also being established to assist with the development of the regulations. This group will include producers of both packaging and non-packaging farm plastics, the farming community, the waste industry and relevant Government Departments and Environment Agencies.

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether he plans to develop a national producer responsibility scheme for the collection and recovery of farm plastics. [74553]

Mr. Bradshaw: Research has shown that most farmers and growers are keen to recycle waste non-packaging farm plastics.

On 21 March this year, Defra announced plans to develop statutory producer responsibility regulations to increase the collection and recycling of non-packaging farm plastics. This was in response to a consultation carried out in December 2004, which put forward proposals for such a scheme. The regulations will be developed in collaboration with the devolved administrations, covering England, Scotland and Wales. Northern Ireland will consider introducing separate regulations following consultation.

Producer responsibility regulations are already in place for those producers placing packaging on the market. It is expected that any collection scheme would be set up to collect both packaging and non-packaging farm plastics.

Badgers/Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) on what scientific evidence he based his estimate of culling efficiency in the Krebs Trial; [73570]

(2) what methods of estimating the badger population were used to monitor the effectiveness of badger culling in the Randomised Badger Cull Trial; [73571]

(3) what factors account for the size of the range in his Department's figure for badger culling efficiency; [73874]

(4) whether the Independent Scientific Group validated his Department's badger culling efficiency figure; and if he will make a statement. [73875]

Mr. Bradshaw: Culling efficiency in the proactive trial areas is calculated by taking the proportion of the badger population that is available to be trapped within the whole trial area (the trapping efficacy) and correcting this to reflect the degree of landowner consent.

At the time of publishing the consultation document, "Controlling the Spread of Bovine Tuberculosis in Cattle in High Incidence Areas in England: Badger Culling", experts at the Central Science Laboratory (CSL) estimated the culling efficiency within the proactive areas of the Randomised Badger Culling Trial (RBCT) to have been 20 to 60 per cent. during the initial proactive culling operations. This figure was based on a trapping efficacy of 50 to 80 per cent. and landowner consent of 43 to 82 per cent.

The Independent Scientific Group (ISG) on cattle TB believe the trapping efficiency may be greater than the 20 to 60 per cent. estimate. I have asked CSL to carry out further analysis on both these estimates, using the latest data from the RBCT. Variations in trapping efficiency will reflect the season, the weather, the differing amount of non-consent land within each proactive removal area, and trap interference. The approach and results from the revised estimates will be discussed with the ISG.

At the end of the trial, following the completion of all culling, the relative density of badgers in the proactive and survey only areas was assessed using a technique known as distance sampling. This found that there was an average difference of 58 per cent. (range 26 to 93 per cent.) in the relative density of badgers in the proactive and survey only areas at the end of the proactive treatments.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research he has collated on the levels of tuberculosis in badgers. [74328]

Mr. Bradshaw: Data from the Road Traffic Accident (RTA) survey and the Randomised Badger Culling Trial (RBCT) have been used to estimate the prevalence of bovine tuberculosis (TB) in badgers. RTA badger prevalence data for 2002 to 2004 are available on the Defra website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/isg/publications/isg1430.pdf

Data on the prevalence of TB in badgers culled in the initial proactive culls of the RBCT can be found in table 2 of the paper from the Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB entitled "The Spatial Association of Mycobacterium bovis in cattle and badgers". Further information about this paper is available on the Defra website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/isg/isgpublications.htm

Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list the occasions when an amendment has been moved by (a) a Labour back bencher, (b) Opposition back bencher and (c) Opposition front bench spokesman to a Bill sponsored by his Department, which has been accepted by his Department during the 2005-06 Session; and if he will make a statement. [72477]

Barry Gardiner: The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, has sponsored the following Bills during the current session.

Animal Health and Welfare Bill

Commons Bill

Natural Environment and Rural Communities Bill (received Royal Assent on 30 March 2006)

Information on amendments moved and accepted during the Committee and Report Stage on these Bills is published in the Official Report.

Biomass

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what tonnage of woodchip from forests and woodlands in each region was used in biomass (a) boilers and (b) electricity generators in the last year for which figures are available. [74100]

Ian Pearson: The Forestry Commission are currently compiling data on the use of forestry woodfuel in each region of England. Usage ranges from 1,000 to 10,000 green tonnes (gt) per region per year. In total each year, around 36,000 gt are estimated to be used for biomass boilers and 50,000 gt for co-firing in electricity generators.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to paragraph 9.5 of the Government's Response to the Biomass Task Force, by what date he expects the planned two million tonnes per annum production to be achieved. [74101]

Ian Pearson: The Forestry Commission will be submitting options for delivery to the Government in its report at the end of September 2006.

Brownfield Development

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations his Department has received on the effect of the definition of waste on the use of soil and aggregates in the context of land remediation and brownfield development. [73839]

Mr. Bradshaw: The most recent representations received by the Department on this issue are contained in a letter dated 4 May from the Environmental Industries Commission, to which I will be responding shortly.

Climate Change

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with (a) companies and (b) others with large energy bills on plans to restrict carbon dioxide emissions. [70304]

Ian Pearson: In 2005, the Government commissioned research from the Carbon Trust and Ecofys to assess alternative policies to increase carbon savings from the non-energy intensive business and the public sector. The Carbon Trust held five stakeholder workshops with energy-intensive sectors, non-energy-intensive sectors (hosted by CBI), the public sector, NGOs and suppliers of energy-efficient equipment.

In October 2005, DEFRA, DTI and the Climate Group co-hosted a major international conference for business entitled "Climate Change: The Business Forecast". This was attended by over 300 delegates from the UK, other EU and G8 countries, and the major emerging economies of China, Mexico and South Africa.

Energy-intensive industries are covered by the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. DEFRA and DTI have consulted extensively with industry during the development of the phase 2 National Allocation Plan, which sets out our plans to restrict carbon dioxide emissions between 2008-12. A questionnaire canvassing stakeholders' initial views on the longer term future of the EU ETS, post-2012, has recently issued to feed into the Commission's review of the scheme.

Negotiations are continuing with sectors that became eligible for entry into climate change agreements under S159/2006 and 60/2006, which came into force on 21 January 2006. To date, six new sectors covering approximately 180 companies have joined the agreements. A further six sectors covering approximately 140 companies are awaiting state aid approval and the laying of further regulations before their agreements can be signed.

Correspondence

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what average time was taken by Ministers in his Department to respond to correspondence from hon. and right hon. Members in the last period for which figures are available; and what targets he has set for this process. [72402]

Barry Gardiner: Departmental performance in responding to correspondence to Ministers from hon. and right hon. Members, including Members of the House of Lords, is reported annually to Parliament by the Cabinet Office. The latest annual report shows that Defra received 14,305 letters in 2004 and replied to 81 per cent. of these within the Department's target of 15 working days. In 2005, Defra received 12,051 letters and replied to 75 per cent. of these within its target.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Nottingham, North on organic food dated 16 March. [75063]

Mr. Bradshaw: A reply was sent to my hon. Friend on 11 April 2006. I will arrange for a further copy to be sent.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) land and (b) property his Department and its predecessors (i) leases and (ii) leased in (A) Southend, West constituency, (B) Essex, (C) Hertfordshire and (D) the Metropolitan police area of London in (1) 1979, (2) 1983, (3) 1987, (4) 1992 and (5) 1997. [72476]

Barry Gardiner: The Department was not created until 2001. Leased property occupied by its predecessor, MAFF, prior to 1990 was acquired for the Ministry by the Property Services Agency (PSA). The dates on which such property was acquired are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Leased property held in 1992 and acquired between then and 1997 is listed as follows. No land was leased in these areas during the years concerned.

Departmental Expenditure

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff from his Department attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event in London in 2005; and what the total cost to his Department was of their attendance. [73096]

Barry Gardiner: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will write to the hon. Member with details of the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event. Copies of her letter will be placed in the Library.

Departmental Funding

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what procedures he will use to assess the socio-economic effects of reductions in funding by his Department to research establishments following the effects of publication of the Research Council Institute's Public Sector Sustainability Survey. [72850]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 22 May 2006]: Decisions on where to place research contracts are taken on assessment of how the identified research need can best be met. Socio-economic considerations are not part of the scientific review process when assessing research proposals.

Departmental Staff

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff by (a) headcount and (b) full-time equivalent work on his blog, broken down by (i) grade and (ii) office or directorate of his Department in which the staff work; and if he will make a statement. [72801]

Barry Gardiner: The Secretary of State writes his own blog. Two staff in Defra's Communications Directorate—at Grade 7 and Higher Executive Officer grades—have integrated the blog into Defra's website, and continue to oversee operation. For the two weeks following the recent ministerial changes, approximately 30 to 40 per cent. of their time was spent on work in some way connected to the blog. This is expected to decrease.

The blog promotes a new and more direct form of communication between the public and the Secretary of State.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff in his Department have had (a) five or more, (b) four, (c) three and (d) two periods of sick leave of less than five days in each of the last three years. [73095]

Barry Gardiner: The number of staff in Defra, the State Veterinary Service, the Marine Fisheries Agency and the Government Decontamination Service that had two or more periods of sickness absence of fewer than five days in 2005 was as follows:

Number of periods of absence	Number of staff
(a) 5 or more	633
(b) 4	429
(c) 3	682
(d) 2	1,085

The number of staff in Defra, SVS, MFA and GDS in 2005 was 7,315 full-time equivalents.

Data on sickness absences for Defra's other Executive Agencies are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Data for other years are unavailable.

In Defra, managers are responsible for managing sick absence levels and encouraging a working environment where people want to come to work and where they support each other. They discuss each occasion of absence with the employee upon their return to work to determine any action or individual support needs. A new contract for the provision of occupational health services ensures that assistance is available to managers who have particular concerns over an individual's general health or sickness absence.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what incentives his Department offers to encourage staff to share vehicles when travelling to work. [73098]

Barry Gardiner: The majority of larger Defra and Agency sites have Green Travel Plans which apart from promoting other forms of travel to work, such as cycling, include local arrangement where priority parking provision for the drivers of shared vehicles is made available where space permits.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what percentage of staff in his Department are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension. [73099]

Barry Gardiner: Members of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) can pay additional contributions to top up their pension either through the Civil Service Additional Voluntary Contributions Scheme (CSAVCS), a money purchase arrangement, or by buying added years of service in the PCSPS. As an alternative to membership of the PCSPS recruits from 1 October 2002 have been able to join a stakeholder arrangement, the partnership pension account.

The number and percentage of staff in the department who are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension as at 31 May 2006 are shown in the table.

	Number	Percentage
CSAVCS	127	1.6
Added Years	460	5.9
Partnership	172	2.2

These figures, taken from the DEFRA payroll also include agency staff in the: Pesticides Safety Directorate, State Veterinary Service, Veterinary Medicines Directorate, Marine Fisheries Agency and Government Decontamination Service.

Fisheries

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will propose to his EU colleagues a ban on EU fishing in the waters of Western Sahara in view of the fact it is a disputed territory. [74820]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK's position on the EU-Morocco fisheries agreement remains that Morocco, the de facto administering power of Western Sahara, is obliged under international law to ensure that economic activities under their administration do not adversely affect the interests of the people of the Western Sahara.

Ivory

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what documentary proof his Department requires to determine the age of an ivory item claimed to be of antique status; [75076]

(2) what action his Department has taken to curb the illegal ivory trade in the UK since 2004. [75080]

Barry Gardiner: The "antiques derogation" as defined in Article 2 of Council Regulation EC 338/97 states that

"worked specimens that were acquired more than 50 years previously shall mean items that were significantly altered from their natural raw state for jewellery, adornment, art, utility or musical instruments"

"50 years previously" is defined as pre 1 June 1947.

An item that satisfies this derogation does not require any application for sale within the ED, and no specific documentary proof is required. Similarly, no permit is needed for re-export, providing that the item is carried in the personal luggage of the traveller. Only where the specimen is being re-exported by an antique dealer and being sent to a purchaser outside the EU is a CITES permit required.

In these circumstances, where an application has been made, it would be usual to accept the assurances of a reputable antiques dealer that an item is pre-1947. However if there were to be any doubt my officials have an agreement with the British Antique Dealers Association (BADA) for an independent expert to make an assessment on our behalf.

It is unrealistic to specify documentary evidence as in many cases this simply will not exist. If documentary evidence is thought necessary an affidavit from an independent expert will usually suffice.

Last year officials prepared a specific guidance note for antique dealers in consultation with the British Antique Dealers Association concerning the control of trade in endangered species. It explains the requirements dealers must comply with when they are engaged in the sale of antique items in the UK, or their export overseas, and the ramifications of non-compliance with the regulations. This has been distributed to trade associations, and to applicants and other people with antique queries.

Statistics from the Elephant Trade Information System (a global monitoring system established to track and assess the scale of illegal trade in ivory) has not revealed any significant problems of illegal ivory trade in the UK.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by her Department in each of the last five years. [67021]

Barry Gardiner: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1226W by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Transport (Dr. Ladyman).

Ministerial Portfolios

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the portfolios of the Ministers within his Department. [74073]

Barry Gardiner: Ministers' portfolios remain substantially unchanged from those held by their predecessors.

Organic Food

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what views (a) consumer organisations, (b) the Soil Association and (c) supermarkets have expressed to him regarding the European Commission's proposal to revise Council regulation 2092/91, on organic production, which will impose a requirement for all organic food produced by British farmers to be labelled with an EU logo and/or the words EU organic. [73242]

Mr. Bradshaw: Stakeholders in the organic sector have been consulted on the possibility of the compulsory use of the EU logo or the indication EU organic through a written consultation and meetings with the Organic Action Plan group. The Advisory Committee on Organic Standards has also been consulted. In line with the majority of responses we have negotiated on the basis that the UK would prefer a voluntary approach to the use of these indications.

Pest Control

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will reconsider the decision to ban the use of strychnine for mole control by dairy farmers; and what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effectiveness of alternatives. [72732]

Mrs. McGuire: I have been asked to reply

The UK Government have not banned the use of strychnine for mole control by dairy farmers.

The use of strychnine for mole control is controlled under the Biocidal Products Directive administered in the UK by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) as the UK Competent Authority.

This Biocidal Products Directive aims to harmonise controls for marketing and use of biocidal products across Europe, while ensuring a high level of protection for human health and the environment. This includes the assessment of the active substances (such as strychnine) in biocidal products, followed by the authorisation of individual products containing those substances. These risks assessments should be based on scientific data packages provided by industry or other interested parties.

Industry did not submit any such data to support the continued marketing and use of strychnine, and so under the requirements of the directive, strychnine must be removed from the market by 1 September 2006.

However, the directive does allow member states, on behalf of applicants, to apply for a temporary exemption for substances considered to have 'essential use' in those member states. The HSE has received an application for the 'essential use' of strychnine to control moles from the British Pest Control Association (BPCA) and will forward this to the European Commission for consideration.

If this application is successful, it will allow strychnine to continue to be used until 14 May 2010. However, in the meantime, industry will need to develop alternative methods for controlling moles in the future.

On research into alternatives to strychnine, the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) published in 2004 a report produced by the Central Science Laboratory which reviewed the range of mole control methods that exist across the EU. The report is available on DEFRA's website at: (http://www.defra.gov.uk/wildlife-countryside/vertebrates/reports/mole-review.pdf).

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list those Private Members' Bills in respect of which his Department has adopted a policy of neutrality in each session since 2001-02; and if he will make a statement. [72475]

Barry Gardiner: The information requested is not collected by the Department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Recycling

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps are being taken to increase recycling in England. [74160]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government's vision for sustainable waste management in England and Wales and their plan of action are set out in their document, "Waste Strategy 2000", available on the Defra website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/waste/strategy/policy.htm. This is currently under review and our revised strategy will put forward a range of measures to build on recent improvements in recycling.

Defra has set national targets to increase household waste recycling to 25 per cent. by 2005-06, 30 per cent. by 2010 and 33 per cent. by 2015. The amount of household waste which is recycled has doubled in the last four years and is continuing to rise.

Local authorities are working hard to improve their performance in household waste recycling, however, Defra is proposing more targeted intervention and engagement with the poorest performers. Those local authorities with the lowest recycling rates in England have had their targets for 2007-08 raised from 18 per cent. to 20 per cent.

The Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund and its successor (the Waste Performance and Efficiency Grant) have provided funding totalling £294 million over the three years to 2005-06 for specific projects to expand recycling operations. Through the Private Finance Initiative (PFI), credits worth £355 million have been made available over the same period as an extra source of funding, with a further £535 million available in 2006-07 and 2007-08.

The Business Resource Efficiency and Waste (BREW) Programme has been developed to give £284 million in additional landfill tax revenues back to business in a revenue neutral way. This is being done by funding resource efficiency and waste projects that will benefit business, including recycling.

On a national basis, the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) is working to promote sustainable waste management by creating stable and efficient markets for recycled materials and products. WRAP also runs the Recycling and Organics Technical Advisory Team (ROTATE), which is available to all local authorities in England to provide support and advice on the separate collection of dry recyclables and organic wastes.

Rural Enterprise Scheme

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much is available to support applications to the Rural Enterprise Scheme in the South West in 2006-07; how much has been allocated; which applications are being considered; and what the deadline is for applications. [73273]

Barry Gardiner: The England Rural Development Programme's Project Based Schemes, including the Rural Enterprise Scheme (RES), will close to new applications on 30 June 2006.

RES is a competitive scheme that has been very popular and successful in the South West and across the country. The announcement that the scheme would close on 30 June has lead to an increased number of applications, and that has meant that competition for funding has been much higher than usual.

Over £5.2 million has been allocated to RES in the South West in 2006-07 and a substantial amount of this is now fully committed. Around 100 applications are currently being considered in the South West and the large number of applications will inevitably mean that some projects are unlikely to be funded.

The Rural Development Service is working to make the best use of funds under the current England Rural Development Programme—to ensure that as much of the money allocated to this programme is spent. RDS will continue to review the funding situation across these schemes and across the country as a whole.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the costs to farmers of making applications to the Rural Enterprise Scheme. [74089]

Barry Gardiner: No specific assessment of the cost of making an application to the Rural Enterprise Scheme has been carried out, but we know from our work with applicants to schemes run by my Department that the costs associated with applications can vary considerably from case to case. This will depend on the project size and complexity and is usually in proportion to the amount of grant being requested.

My Department recognises that costs to applicants can be significant. Indeed, the costs of preparing a project and its supporting documentation (which may include feasibility studies, technical development work and preparation of a detailed business case), are themselves eligible for funding. Development costs will not be funded in respect of unsuccessful Rural Enterprise Scheme applications, however; and it is clear throughout the guidance that work is undertaken at the applicant's own risk

In 2003 we introduced a fast-track system for smaller projects to reduce the detail required. This has helped to keep the costs of applying for small amounts of grant to a minimum.

Rural Payments Agency

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what systems have been established to monitor the quality of Rural Payments Agency staff responses to (a) telephone calls and (b) electronic mail. [71512]

Barry Gardiner: The information is as follows:

(a) Telephone calls

Customer Service Centre (CSC) telephone agents are monitored by their team leaders and given feedback reports each week. Team leaders also listen into calls on a regular basis. From this, agents are given more specific feedback and advice on call handling techniques. The results of these checks are recorded with the weekly feedback to show where development is required and where progress is being made.

Team leaders also carry out sample checks of customer records on the main computer application to ensure that calls are being logged to the required standard and all relevant information is noted.

(b) Electronic mails

A call tracking system logs all incoming e-mails and date stamps their receipt. The e-mail is assigned to the appropriate Rural Payments Agency site for a response and the time taken to reply is tracked against published charter targets. Using this system, RPA can measure its e-mail handling performance and also identify bottlenecks in the process and allocate resources efficiently to remove them.

Once the member of staff has investigated the customer's query and drafted a response it is checked by their line manager to ensure that the reply fully answers the customer's query and that the spelling and grammar is correct. This is then forwarded to the monitoring office for a final review where the reply is checked for plain English, spelling, grammar and layout.

RPA launched a CSC on 14 February 2005. This was done to streamline single payment scheme and customer registration telephone enquiries into the agency through one route, to allow staff to concentrate on processing. More importantly, this system aims to ensure that customers receive consistent answers and any more complex inquiries can be directed to specialist areas of the business to call the customer back.

The main call centre is based in Workington with facilities for calls to be diverted to staff at other RPA sites during periods of unusually high demand.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what records he keeps of calls back (a) promised and (b) made by Rural Payments Agency staff. [71514]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency maintains a central computerised database of callers to its customer service centre that require a return call. The system is used when a member of staff is unable to answer a customer's question during the incoming call. All calls requiring a follow up response are logged on a database. Progress in clearing follow up responses is managed by a central team and reported daily to Senior Managers.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many complaints about Rural Payment Agency (RPA) payments have been received by RPA staff in each of the last five years; and how complaints were (a) identified and (b) defined. [71516]

David Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 10 May 2006 to Question 66634, on single farm payments, how many such complaints have been received for England. [72291]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) does not separately monitor official complaints made to its Customer Relations Unit that specifically relate to payments.

Since the establishment of RPA in October 2001, 1,325 official complaints have been received covering all areas of its business. The table shows these broken down by calendar year.

	Number
2001	3
2002	212
2003	197
2004	206

RPA operates an appeal procedure to deal with appeals from customers about decisions reached by RPA which affect the amount of payment which they receive. The Integrated Administration and Control System (IACS) appeal procedure in England was introduced on 1 April 2002 and was extended in April 2004 to cover some 60 non-IACS schemes and in November 2004 to cover the Single Payment Scheme (SPS). To date 260 IACS, 15 non-IACS and 51 SPS appeals have been received. In addition, the appeal procedure has dealt with 181 appeals against the Moorland Line and 280 appeals against the historic element of the SPS prior to payments being made.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many telephone calls to the Rural Payments Agency Customer Service Centre (a) were answered and (b) went unanswered in each month since 2001. [71533]

Barry Gardiner: The figures show calls to the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) Customer Service Centre (CSC) Number 0845 603 7777. The CSC went live on 14 February 2005 and therefore we only have the number of calls answered for the last two weeks of February.

The figures for May, June and July 2005 are gathered from a number of sources and include the use of an external call centre.

[1]The November 2005 figure was the result of an emergency evacuation when approx 600 calls (with a high number of repeat calls) were lost.

RPA launched a CSC on 14 February 2005. This was done to streamline single payment scheme and customer registration telephone enquiries into the agency through one route, to allow staff to concentrate on processing. More importantly, this system aims to ensure that customers receive consistent answers and any, more complex enquiries can be directed to specialist areas of the business to call the customer back.

The main call centre is based in Workington with facilities for calls to be diverted to staff at other RPA sites during periods of unusually high demand.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average time taken for the Rural Payments Agency to process applications for payments to farmers and agricultural businesses has been in each year since 2001, broken down by scheme. [71537]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency does not hold this information and as such it could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the differences between the Rural Payments Agency's computer systems at the offices in Reading and at the offices in Newcastle. [74069]

Barry Gardiner: The primary computer systems used by the Rural Payments Agency are the same at each office, including Newcastle and Reading. A specialist Document Management Unit (DMU), supported by dedicated computer systems, operates only at the Newcastle office. Dedicated teams of staff at each office are assigned to work on specific schemes or supporting activities and they will use the computer system relevant to that scheme or activity.

Sea Turtles

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many live sea turtles were imported into the UK in each of the last five years, broken down by species; from which countries they were imported; how many live sea turtles were exported from the UK in each year, broken down by species; and to which countries they were exported; [73881]

(2) what the weight of sea turtle products (a) imported into and (b) exported from the UK was in each of the last five years; from which countries such products were imported; and to which countries such products were exported. [73882]

Barry Gardiner: During the last five years, 21 live sea turtles were imported or exported into the UK as follows:

	Species	Origin	Quantity and further information
2001	Caretta caretta	Israel	One seized by Customs and returned to Israel for re-introduction (re-export)

Single Farm Payments

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what provision the Government have made to reimburse farmers for the interest incurred due to delays in paying the single farm payment; and if he will make a statement. [68901]

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if his Department will repay the interest charges on loans taken out by those farmers who have not received single farm payments. [70755]

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether interest will be paid on any element of single farm payments unpaid after 20 June 2006. [73218]

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether interest will be paid on late payments of single farm payments to farmers across England. [75048]

Barry Gardiner: The question of interest only arises in respect of payments made after the legal deadline of 30 June. We have not reached that point yet and I do not want to deflect from the Rural Payments Agency in the interim period from concentrating on its main priority, which is to ensure that outstanding payments are made as soon as possible.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many single farm payments have been made of (a) less than £1, (b) between £1 and £1.99, (c) between £2 and £4.99, (d) between £5 and £9.99, (e) between £10 and £19.99, (f) between £20 and £49.99, (g) between £50 and £99.99, (h) between £100 and £199, (i) between £200 and £499, (j) between £500 and £999, (k) between £1,000 and £1,999, (l) between £2,000 and £4,999, (m) between £5,000 and £9,999, (n) between £10,000 and £19,999, (o) between £20,000 and £49,000, (p) between £50,000 and £99,999, (q) between £100,000 and £199,999, (r) between £200,000 and £499,999, (s) between £500,000 and £999,999, (t) between £1 million and £1,999,999 and (u) between £2 and £5 million; what percentage of total payments each category represents; and if he will make a statement. [73411]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency intends to follow a cycle of publishing single payment scheme payment details in the autumn and payment details of other subsidies in the spring each year.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to help farmers in hardship because of the late payment of single farm payments. [66735]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 27 April 2006]: To date, over £1.3 billion has been paid out under the 2005 Single Payment Scheme (SPS), representing some 88 per cent. of the total sum to disburse. SPS claimants will be best served by the Rural Payments Agency maintaining its focus on ensuring that outstanding sums are paid as soon as possible. In addition, in view of the cash-flow problems faced by some farmers, the Department has substantially increased the amount of funding available to key rural support organisations who help farmers deal with hardship issues.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department has undertaken into levels of personal debt incurred by farmers due to the late payment of single farm payments. [66756]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 27 April 2006]: No specific research has been conducted. However, Ministers keep in close contact with a range of stakeholders, including representatives of the major banks, in order to help ensure that a full picture is maintained of the issues facing farmers in relation to the timing of payments under the 2005 Single Payment Scheme.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Government will extend the deadline for making 2005 single farm payments from 15 May to 9 June to avoid paying penalties of 1 per cent. per working day. [75047]

Barry Gardiner: The 15 May 2006 deadline for submitting applications under the 2006 Single Payment Scheme is fixed in EU legislation and is not a matter for national discretion.

However, as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State explained in his written statement on 9 May 2006, Official Report, column 10WS, farmers have been advised that the normal 'late claim' penalties will not apply to applications received between 16 and 31 May 2006.

Small Change Big Difference

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department and its agencies have taken following the launch of the Government's Small Change Big Difference Campaign. [72005]

Barry Gardiner: A number of Defra activities fit well with this important campaign.

Considerable work is being done by Defra to promote healthy living and a better understanding of the natural world through increased access to the English countryside and urban green spaces. This is for people of all ages and backgrounds. Defra has recently launched a public consultation exercise, in collaboration with the Countryside Agency, called "Access for All?". This seeks views on a draft action plan that aims, over a 10 year period, to increase the number of people who choose to make use of outdoor recreational facilities. In particular, the plan is aimed at the nine million disabled people and the five million people from ethnic minority communities in the UK, often living in areas of high urban density, who do not currently access proportionate benefit from England's green areas.

Following the Countryside and Rights of Way Act (CROW) 2000, since 31 October 2005, about 750,000 hectares of English land have been made available to the public. This "right to roam" means that walkers can freely explore such land without having to stay on footpaths.

As the programme of work develops the Department of Health (DoH) will be working across all of government to ensure the programme joins up to promote maximum impact. DoH is leading the implementation for this initiative as part of its cross-government commitment to deliver the November 2004 White Paper "Choosing Health: Making healthy choices easier".

Our Food Industry Sustainability Strategy (FISS), published in April 2006, shows how we are following up the March 2005 paper "Choosing a Better Diet: a Food and Health Action Plan" that arose from the White Paper. This follow-up action will include Defra membership of a new Government working group to establish and develop nutritional standards for food procured by the NHS, armed forces and HM prisons. Defra will act as the group's link to the Public Sector Food Procurement Initiative, which is working with buyers to ensure that as much as possible of the £1.8 billion spent per annum on food supply and catering services for the public sector is sustainably produced.

Sovereign Strategy

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what dates over the last 12 months (a) he and (b) (i) Ministers and (ii) officials in his Department met a representative of Sovereign Strategy. [72341]

Barry Gardiner: There have been no meetings between any Defra Ministers or officials with any persons in their role as representatives of Sovereign strategy in the last 12 months.

All such contacts are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code, Civil Service Code, Code of Conduct for Special Advisers and Guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government.

Sustainable Farming

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding her Department has provided for research into sustainable farming in each of the last 10 years; how much of that funding was spent on contracts with the Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research (IGER); and if she will make a statement on the future of the IGER. [59299]

Barry Gardiner: Figures are provided from 2001-02 (the year when Defra was formed), since it was from this time that sustainable farming became the main objective for R and D programmes in the agriculture area. The figures are:

£ million

	Defra R and D funding into sustainable farming	Sustainable farming R and D funding with IGER[1]
2001-02	41.2	5.8
2002-03	39.5	6.1
2003-04	39.2	6.4
2004-05	37.5	6.4
2005-06	37.7	5.8

[1] Figures exclude Defra contributions to consortia projects of which IGER is a partner.

Defra procures research to support Government policies relevant to sustainable farming at a range of research establishments including IGER. As IGER is a Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council (BBSRC) research institute, its future is a matter for the BBSRC and the institute.

However, as a customer for the services provided by IGER, Defra has an interest in the maintenance of areas of expertise and service provision that relate to our present and developing needs. IGER is, and will continue to be, a very important research partner for Defra, as reflected in my Department's continuing significant investment; we are committed to investing over £5 million in research programmes at IGER in 2006-07. The reduction in IGER's contractual income from Defra is a consequence of certain projects and programmes reaching their natural end point. No active research programmes are being terminated early.

Television Stand-by Switches

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to his Answer of 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 729W, on television stand-by switches, what estimate he has made of the percentage of televisions in use which consume three to eight watts in stand-by mode. [74192]

Ian Pearson: The Government's Market Transformation Programme (MTP) estimates that of the 60 million televisions in UK homes around half use more than 3 watts in stand-by mode. The MTP considers that this percentage will fall as older televisions are replaced with newer models which use on average less than 3 watts in stand-by mode.

Thames Water

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the maximum capacity was of Thames Water storage facilities in each of the last five years for which figures are available; [73824]

(2) what the level of water available in Thames Water storage facilities was on 1 April in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [73825]

Ian Pearson: Annual figures for both the maximum useable volume possible and actual useable volume for water in the Thames Water area for the period April 2001 to April 2006, in mega litres (Ml) are given in the following table which also includes a column depicting the percentage of maximum available water being used.

Useable volume is always less than actual useable volume because of issues such as water quality, location of pumps, etc.

1 April:	Maximum usable volume possible (Ml)	Actual useable volume (Ml)	Percentage of total volume being used
2006	216197	213017	98.5
2005	216173	207476	95.9
2004	214651	210219	97.9
2003	206045	203703	98.8
2002	216162	197400	91.3
2001	216162	204347	94.5

Waste Management

David Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how his Department promotes reusable products as part of its policies on waste prevention and sustainability; and if he will make a statement; [72555]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the comparative impact of reusable and single-use products on the waste stream; [72554]

(3) what programmes (a) run by and (b) supported by his Department promote reusable products. [72557]

Mr. Bradshaw: Reuse has an important role in sustainable waste management. It is second only to waste minimisation in the waste hierarchy.

In reviewing the Government's Waste Strategy, we are looking to put greater emphasis on waste prevention and resource efficiency, including re-use. This includes work to improve the evidence base and taking a life cycle approach to identifying priority products so that we target our intervention at the most significant areas. Our existing consultation exercise seeks views on how re-use and re-manufacture could be further stimulated.

Some parts of the waste stream already have well-developed re-use networks, including textiles, second-hand vehicles, electrical and, to a lesser extent, electronic goods. In other areas the voluntary and community sector plays a valuable role through the work of charity shops, furniture and appliance re-use projects, the Community Re-Paint initiative, Fareshare's food programme and scrapstores using spare materials for educational purposes.

The Government's Business Resource Efficiency Programme (BREW) programme will be supporting a number of reuse activities through the Business Reuse Fund in 2006-07. In addition, the Packaging, End of Life Vehicles, and Waste Electrical and Equipment Directives all serve to encourage more re-use.

The Defra-funded Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) also supports a variety of reuse projects, including the Choose To Reuse shopping bag campaign and the use of real nappies. Further information is available on the WRAP website:

www.wrap.org.uk

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the amount of waste created by the (a) public and (b) private sectors in each of the last five years; what steps he is taking to reduce these amounts; and if he will make a statement. [74648]

Mr. Bradshaw: Various surveys are carried out on the amounts of controlled and non-controlled waste generated. Detailed figures and statistics on waste and recycling in England and Wales are available from the Defra website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/statistics/waste/index.htm.

Good progress has been made on the minimisation and recycling of waste since the publication of the "Waste Strategy for England and Wales 2000", which sets out Government's strategy for sustainable waste management.

Lesser amounts of most kinds of waste are being landfilled, and recycling and composting of household waste has doubled in the last four years. The latest figures show that local authorities in England recycled 22.9 per cent. of household waste in 2004-05 compared to 10.3 per cent. in 2001-02. More packaging waste is being recovered and recycled, rising from 33 per cent. to 56 per cent. between 1998 and 2004. The re-use and recycling of industrial and commercial waste has also increased, together with construction and demolition waste.

However, we still have much more to do. In 2000, our waste strategy set targets to recycle or compost at least 30 per cent. of household waste by 2010 and 33 per cent. by 2015. The Government have provided local authorities with greater levels of funding to enable them to meet their targets, and the majority of local authorities are working hard to improve their performance. Defra is proposing more targeted intervention and engagement with the poorest performers, and those local authorities with the lowest recycling rates in England have had their targets for 2007-08 raised from 18 per cent. to 20 per cent.

A number of programmes including the Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund and its successor the Waste Performance and Efficiency Grant, the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste (BREW) Programme, and the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) have been set up to support and increase waste recycling and provide efficient markets for recycled materials.

A review of the Government's waste strategy is currently underway. The new strategy will support the use of waste as a resource. It will also focus on waste prevention and resource efficiency, the development of a recycling culture, and a more joined up approach across waste streams—particularly for business and local authority waste.

Water

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what definition the Government uses of water poor. [73188]

Ian Pearson: The issue of water affordability is one which the Government takes very seriously, but there is no Government definition of 'water poor'. The percentage of households spending more than 3 per cent. of their income on water charges is used as an indicator of water affordability among DEFRA's sustainability indicators.

The Government are currently working with industry and regulators to follow up the recommendations of the cross-Government Review of Water Affordability in December 2004.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what effect the declaration of a drought situation has on the economic levels of leakage method of calculating acceptable levels of leakage by water companies. [72854]

Ian Pearson: The declaration of a drought situation will not change a water company's published long-term Economic Level of Leakage (ELL), but it should have an impact on leakage activity in the short-term.

In a drought situation, companies should apply the maximum available effort to reducing demand and increasing supply. This will have the effect of producing a new short-term ELL based on setting the costs of additional leakage reduction options against the economic valuation of other available short-term options such as increasing abstraction and hosepipe bans. As the cheaper longer term options are excluded from this calculation, the short-term ELL in a drought is lower than the published ELL.

TRANSPORT

A21 Dualling

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce his decision on the scheme to dual the A21 between Tonbridge and Pembury and between Kippings Cross and Lamberhurst recommended by the South East England Regional Assembly in January. [73989]

Dr. Ladyman: We are currently considering advice from the South East region on the priority it attaches to these schemes within the indicative regional funding allocations announced in July 2005. We hope to announce our response before the summer recess.

A27 (Folkington Link)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his plans for the A27 between Beddingham and Polegate, with particular reference to the Folkington link. [73883]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has completed its initial review of improvement schemes to the A27 at Selmeston and Wilmington. The Folkington link is a sub-section of any improvement at Wilmington. We are currently considering the advice from the regions on transport investment priorities and have yet to make decisions on the extent and future timing of schemes.

Galileo System

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the most recent estimate is of the (a) initial development and (b) yearly ongoing costs of the EU's Galileo system. [73928]

Dr. Ladyman: The definition and development phase of Galileo is a joint European Commission and European Space Agency project. The cost is expected to be around £1.25 billion. The deployment phase will be a PPP, funded one third by the public sector and two thirds privately.

The draft EC financial instrument for funding Galileo during 2007 to 2013 has yet to be ratified. It is expected to be brought to the Council and the European Parliament around the end of this year. There has been no political discussion of potential funding commitments for the public sector beyond 2013.

The European Commission is taking the position that the overall cost and future commitments for the public sector will not be known, until the detailed contract negotiation are concluded with the consortium bidding for the PPP. My officials, in collaboration with Treasury and other interested departments, continue to press for more transparency on cost. It is agreed that an assessment will be submitted to Council before the PPP contract is signed. We have proposed robust criteria for this assessment and will continue to press them.

Highways Agency Vehicles

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in what circumstances and upon whose authority Highways Agency vehicles use observation parking bays marked 'for police vehicles only' on motorways. [73666]

Dr. Ladyman: The Police are able to stop on any part of a motorway, including the observation platforms, by virtue of Regulation 16 of The Motorways Traffic (England and Wales) Regulations 1982. Regulation 16 allows a Police officer to stop where they do so in the exercise of their duty.

These Regulations were amended by The Motorways Traffic (England and Wales) (Amendment) Regulations 2004 to give Highways Agency Traffic Officers the same ability to stop in the exercise of their duty as the Police.

The use of these observation platforms by Highways Agency Traffic Officers provides a visible reassurance that an official vehicle is available to assist and support road users, if needed, and allows Traffic Officers to park on the motorway, minimising fuel usage, while still maintaining an appropriate response capability in the event of an incident.

MOT Certificates

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many MOT test certificates have been delayed due to computer malfunctions in the last 12 months. [73822]

Dr. Ladyman: During the period April 2005 to date, the 18,300 MOT garages in Great Britain have issued some 15.4 million MOT certificates via the new computer system.

Because the booking of MOT tests is the responsibility of individual garages and is managed outside of the MOT computer system, it is not possible for VOSA to ascertain if any MOT tests were delayed because of computer malfunctions.

In order to ensure that road safety is not compromised, VOSA has however made contingency procedures available to garages in the event of either hardware failure at an individual site or a more widespread disruption to the MOT service. These arrangements ensure that there should be little or no impact on motorists both in terms of having their vehicles tested and receiving their MOT certificates.

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for how many days the IT system for MOT tests was not working in the last 12 months. [73823]

Dr. Ladyman: The IT system for MOT tests was rolled out to garages between 18 April 2005 and 29 March 2006. During this period of 378 operational days there has not been an entire day when the system has been unavailable to all garages on-line. There have been 28 days when a technical problem affecting 10 or more garages occurred.

For 20 of these 28 days, at least 95 per cent. of garages on-line experienced no disruption to MOT testing.

Motoring Offences

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were penalised for speeding in (a) the London borough of Bexley and (b) London in 2004-05. [73128]

Mr. Coaker: I have been asked to reply.

Data on speeding offences are not collected centrally by local authority area.

Available information on the number of speeding offences dealt with by official police action within the Metropolitan and City of London police force areas combined for 2004 (latest available) is given in the following table.

2005 data will be available early in 2007.

Speeding offences[1] dealt with by official police action[2], London[3], 2004

	Total offences dealt with[2] (number)
2004	120,700

[2] Includes written warnings, fixed penalty notices and court proceedings.

[3] Metropolitan and City of London police combined.

Resilience Exercises

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what (a) assessment he has made of and (b) lessons have been learned from (i) Exercise Atlantic Blue in January 2006 and (ii) Exercise Northern Synergy. [72354]

Derek Twigg: Exercise Atlantic Blue and Exercise Northern Synergy were both classified Government exercises. It is therefore not in the national interest to comment on these exercises.

Lessons learned from these exercises have been fed into classified contingency plans for responding to a wide range of terrorist threats. These plans are regularly tested, reviewed and updated in the light of changing circumstances; this ensures that all agencies involved are prepared to respond to a terrorist incident.

The hon. Member may wish to refer to the generic guidance contained in the publication "Dealing with Disaster", which can be found on the UK Resilience website:

www.ukresilience.info

Road Accident Fatalities

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many road accident fatalities there were in Paisley and Renfrewshire, South constituency in 2005-06; [73643]

(2) how many road accident fatalities there were in Hammersmith and Fulham constituency in 2005-06. [73644]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not yet available. Main results on personal injury road accidents reported to the police in 2005 will be published shortly. Figures for 2006 will become available in summer 2007.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road accident fatalities there were in Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency in 2005-06. [74333]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not yet available. Main results on personal injury road accidents reported to the police in 2005 will be published shortly. Figures for 2006 will become available in summer 2007.

Road Pricing

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the average cost per mile that would need to be charged following the introduction of his proposed national road pricing scheme in order to ensure that the scheme is revenue neutral and all administration and technology costs are covered. [71873]

Dr. Ladyman: The appropriate level of charges for any national road pricing scheme would depend on a wide range of factors. It is not currently possible to estimate what price levels would be appropriate. The costs of any national scheme would depend on technology and systems used and the manner of implementation.

Road Traffic (Cumbria)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the total mileage travelled on the roads in Cumbria by (a) all vehicles and (b) cars in each year between 1995 and 2004. [73873]

Dr. Ladyman: The following table gives the information requested:

Dr. Ladyman: The following table gives the information requested for each year from 1995 to 2004 (the latest year for which estimates are available):

Trunk Roads

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on trunk roads in Paisley and Renfrewshire, South constituency in 2005-06. [73641]

Dr. Ladyman: This is a matter for the Scottish Executive and the hon. Member may wish to write to them.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on trunk roads in Hammersmith and Fulham constituency in 2005-06. [73642]

Dr. Ladyman: The Greater London Authority Act 1999 made provision for the transfer of the trunk road network in London from the Secretary of State for Transport to the Mayor. These roads now form part of the Transport for London Road Network (TLRN). Further information on the TLRN in the Hammersmith and Fulham area can be obtained from:

Vehicle Tax Discs

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many applications for vehicle tax discs the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency has received through the online service since its introduction; and how many of those applications resulted in tax discs being delivered within the target of five working days. [74528]

Dr. Ladyman: Since the online service was introduced DVLA has received a total of 2,438,361 transactions of which 2,019,952 were successfully completed. A total of 418,409 transactions failed to process as a result of insurance failures and customers not having the correct MOT certificate. There is no mechanism in place with Royal Mail to monitor the time it takes to deliver individual tax discs to applicants addresses. All tax discs are despatched to Royal Mail by first class mail within one day of the application successfully processing. Royal Mail's first class mail delivery target is 91.5 per cent. within two days of posting.

TREASURY

Capital Gains Tax

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue implications of abolishing capital gains tax taper relief and reducing the annual exempt amount for individuals and trustees to £1,000 in each year from 2004-05 to 2009-10; and if he will make a statement. [73828]

Dawn Primarolo: The total estimated yields on an accruals basis from abolishing taper relief and abolishing capital gains tax annual exempt amount (AEA) for individuals and trusts in 2004-05 and 2005-06 are published in table A3.1 in the Budget Report 2006. These figures exclude any behavioural response to the tax change. Similar information for years from 2006-07 onwards is not available.

Figures for 2004-05 and 2005-06 regarding revenue implications of reducing the annual exempt amount for individuals and trustees to £1,000 are available only at a disproportionate cost. For current figures for 2006-07 I refer the hon. Member to my answer given to him on 18 May 2006, Official Report, column 1132W. Similar information for years from 2007-08 to 2009-10 is not available.

Census

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration has been given to including a question on scheduled caste in the next census. [73901]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 5 June 2006:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking what consideration has been given to including a question on scheduled caste in the next census. (73901)

An extensive consultation exercise was undertaken last year with users of census data which resulted in over 2,000 responses. No requirement for a question on scheduled caste was identified and so such a question is not being considered for the 2011 Census. A report on the findings of the consultation exercise was published on 8 March 2006—'The 2011 Census: Assessment of initial user requirements on content for England and Wales' and can be found on the National Statistics website at http://www.statistics.gov.uk/about/consultations/2011Census_response.asp

It is not possible to confirm what questions are to be included in the 2011 Census until the consultation and testing programme is complete and formal approval is given by Parliament in 2010. A White Paper setting out the Government's proposals is scheduled to be published in Autumn 2008.

Child Poverty

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the likely change in spending on (a) child care, (b) child benefit and (c) child tax credit required to meet the child poverty reduction target for 2010; and if he will make a statement. [75179]

Dawn Primarolo: Between the mid-1970s and mid-1990s, relative child poverty more than doubled. This Government have committed to halve child poverty by 2010 and to eradicate it by 2020. In 2004-05 there were 700,000 fewer children in relative poverty than in 1998-99.

The Child Poverty Review, published in July 2004, set out a multi-faceted strategy for halving child poverty. Child care, child benefit and child tax credit all have important roles but must be combined with wider interventions such as work for those who can, tackling material deprivation and improving public services for poor children.

As a solid foundation for meeting the target to halve child poverty by 2010, at Budget 2006 it was announced that the child element of the child tax credit would continue to be uprated at least in line with earnings until the end of this Parliament. Any current projection of the number of children in poverty in 2010 would, however, be subject to large uncertainties around future income growth, changes in the income distribution and individual changes in behaviour in response to policy changes.

Civil Servants

Peter Viggers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil servants were employed in his Department before the Gershon Report; what net reductions were proposed in the Gershon Report; how many reductions have been made; and how many civil servants are expected to be employed in his Department in the Gershon target month of April 2008. [74289]

John Healey: The information requested is given in HM Treasury's Departmental Report which was published on 11 May 2006 and is available at: http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/about/departmental_reports/dept_report2006.cfm.

Table 6 in Annex B sets out Treasury Group Staff Numbers between 2001 and 2008, and Annex C sets out plans and progress on Treasury Group's efficiency programme (including headcount reductions).

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 31 March. [74448]

Dawn Primarolo: I have done so.

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 8 March, PO reference: 1/43139/2006. [74450]

John Healey: I have done so.

Data Protection Act

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many responses to requests to his Department for information under the Data Protection Act 1998 were completed (a) within 40 days, (b) between 40 and 59 days, (c) between 60 and 100 days and (d) over 100 days after receiving the original letter in each of the last five years; and how many are outstanding. [74486]

John Healey: For 2005: (a) 8; (b) nil; (c) nil; (d) nil. There are nil responses outstanding.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what procedure his Department uses to respond to requests for information under the Data Protection Act 1998; and what steps the Department takes to ensure that responses to such requests are completed within 40 days. [74487]

John Healey: The Treasury provides internal guidance to all its staff on both the principles of the Data Protection Act and how to process subject access requests. Requests are routed through a central team to ensure that responses are dealt with within the time permitted.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how and by whom redactions are made to documents to be disclosed following a request under the Data Protection Act 1998; and whether a record is kept of (a) who made each redaction and (b) why it was made. [74488]

John Healey: Redactions are made by the central unit with responsibility for Information Rights, most commonly redactions protect personal data belonging to another individual, or information that is not relevant.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department has a policy of setting a minimum font size at which it prints electronic documents to be disclosed under the Data Protection Act 1998 to assist those with reduced eyesight. [74489]

John Healey: Treasury has a long standing policy to provide enlarged print size on request to assist those with reduced eyesight. Documents that may be within scope of subject access requests are internal by nature, may not be in electronic format and can be very varied as such there is no standard font size applicable to such documents.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the longest period of time elapsed is between his Department (a) receiving the administration fee and providing the information requested and (b) receiving a request for information and providing the information requested under the Data Protection Act 1998. [74490]

John Healey: Elapsed time for processing subject access requests under the Data Protection Act is:

(a) no request has taken longer than 40 days to process from receipt of the administration fee.

(b) No request has taken longer than 40 days to process.

Departmental Press Office

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in his Department's press office. [74348]

John Healey: Three and 14, respectively.

Devolved Countries (Protocols)

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what protocols are in place between HM Treasury and the Scottish Executive on the operations of the devolved countries and regions Treasury team. [74745]

Mr. Timms: The concordat between the Treasury and the Scottish Executive is available on the Treasury website at http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk./media/7CB/25/scottish_assembly_concordat_070305.pdf and on the Scottish Executive website at http://www.scotland.gov.uk/concordats/hmt.asp.

Financial relations between the Treasury and the Scottish Executive are governed by the Treasury publication "Funding the Scottish Parliament, National Assembly for Wales and Northern Ireland Assembly, A Statement of Funding Policy" which is available on the Treasury website (www.hm-treasury.gov.uk).

Discounted Oil

Mr. Hands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the potential economic impact on (a) London and (b) England of the supply to London of oil at discounted prices by Venezuela. [73600]

John Healey: If Venezuela wishes to supply oil or oil products at discounted rates to the UK that is a commercial decision for Venezuela. We are not presently aware of any firm commitment by the Government of Venezuela to do so. In the absence of this and any specific details I am unable to speculate on the potential implications for the UK economy.

Eid-Ul-Adha

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil servants from his Department attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event in London in 2005; and what the total cost of their attendance was to his Department. [73037]

John Healey: I understand that the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has written to the hon. Member with details of the Civil Service Islamic Society id-Ul-Adha event and that a copy of her letter has been placed in the Library.

Election Expenses

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether benefits enjoyed by the spouse of a candidate in an election which have been declared as election expenses, have been paid for by a third party and were provided to the spouse by virtue of his/her relationship to the candidate in connection with their activities as a candidate are taxed as a benefit in kind. [74813]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 1079W.

Energy Efficiency

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to launch a further consultation exercise on economic measures to encourage residential sector energy efficiency. [74045]

John Healey: The Government consider consultation exercises an important part of policy development. A number of recent reviews have looked at how to encourage residential sector energy efficiency, most recently the review of the Climate Change Programme, published in March this year, which was the subject of extensive consultation. Residential energy efficiency was also covered by the Energy Review consultation which closed on 14 April 2006. The Government keep economic measures under review and any further announcements will be made as part of the Budget process.

EU Budget

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the United Kingdom contribution to the European Union budget for the period 2005 to 2008; what changes have occurred in this estimate since the Budget in March; what the reason is for these changes; and if he will make a statement. [74077]

Ed Balls: The Government's latest estimates of United Kingdom contributions to the EU budget are presented in table C11 of the Budget (HC 968). Any revision to these forecasts will be included in the pre-Budget report later this year.

Financial Statistics

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the gross value added per capita was for (a) the UK and (b) each NUTS3 region in each year since 2002. [75256]

John Healey: The information requested falls with the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 5 June 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about Gross Value Added[1] (GVA) per capita estimates for the UK and NUTS3 regions in each year since 2002. (75256)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) published NUTS3 GVA data up to and including 2003, the latest year for which data is available, in December 2005. UK and NUTS3 per capita data can be accessed in table 3.2 in the following link: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/downloads/theme_economy/NUTS3_Tables_1-12.xls.

[1] Gross Value Added (GVA) is Gross Domestic Product (GDP) less taxes (plus subsidies) on products. These data are current price estimates which are not adjusted for changes in prices over time.

Firearms Seizures

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions firearms were seized by HM Revenue and Customs in each (a) region and (b) country of the UK in each year since 2000-01. [75245]

Dawn Primarolo: My answer of 20 October 2005, Official Report, column 1193W, to the hon. Member for Torbay (Mr. Sanders) provided details of firearms seized by HM Revenue and Customs from 1999 onwards.

This national information for firearms seizures made by HM Revenue and Customs since 2000 is contained in the annual reports for HM Customs and Excise and HM Revenue and Customs. The figures for the year ending 31 March 2006 will be published in the next annual report.

More detailed information cannot be disclosed as this would provide information of value to those seeking to circumvent HM Revenue and Customs' controls, thereby prejudicing the prevention and detection of crime.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what accumulated growth in gross domestic product has been in (a) Wales, (b) Scotland, (c) London and the South East and (d) the UK since the second quarter of 1997. [74809]

John Healey: The information requested falls with the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 5 June 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about accumulated growth in gross domestic product in Wales, Scotland, London and the South East, and the UK, since the second quarter of 1997 (74809). (74809)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) only compile annual estimates of regional Gross Value Added[1] (GVA) covering the countries and regions of the UK. These data are at current basic prices, and so the changes over time shown by these data include the effects of inflation as well as any increases in economic output.

Estimates of annual growth in these regions for the years 1997 to 2004, based on data published by the ONS in December 2005, are shown in table A below.

Table A - Growth in headline[2] GVA at current basic prices by region, 1997 and 2004[3]

Region[4]	Growth in GVA 1997 to 2004 (Percentage)
Wales	38.0
Scotland	35.1
London and the South East	48.2
UK	43.5

[1] Information presented here is gross value added (GVA) which is gross domestic product (GDP) less taxes (plus subsidies) on products.
[2] The headline regional GVA series for this publication have been calculated using a five-period moving average.
[3] 2004 data is provisional.
[4] Wales and Scotland are NUTS (Nomenclature of Units for Territorial Statistics) regions, but the ONS does not recognise the combined region of London and the South East as a standard geography.

HM Revenue and Customs

Mr. Hands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the projections of staffing levels in HM Revenue and Customs are for the next three years. [73634]

Dawn Primarolo: Current projected levels of full time equivalent staff in post in HM Revenue and Customs are:

	Number
1 April 2007	90,034
1 April 2008	86,035

No detailed projection has yet been made of staff levels at 1 April 2009.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of staff reductions in HM Revenue and Customs on tax enforcement. [73635]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC are satisfied that significant improvements in productivity from improvements in risk processes, re-designing audit and inspection processes, reforming HMRC's range of interventions, and developing better electronic tools for communicating with taxpayers will not only mitigate the impact of the staff reduction in tax enforcement but also result in an overall improvement in performance.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were employed full-time by HM Revenue and Customs in each year since 1997. [74496]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs became a legal entity on 18 April 2005. Before then its business had been conducted by the Inland Revenue and HM Customs and Excise.

The numbers of staff employed in civil service departments and agencies, including the Inland Revenue, HM Customs and Excise and HM Revenue and Customs are available on the Cabinet Office's "Civil Service Statistics" website at http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/statistics/index.asp. The effects of changes in departmental responsibilities on staff numbers are also available on the website.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by his Department in each year since 2001; in what capacities they were employed; how many were discovered as part of a criminal investigation; and what the nature of the charges brought against them were. [73960]

John Healey: No illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by HM Treasury since 2001.

Inheritance Tax

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost of abolishing inheritance tax; and if he will make a statement. [74123]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 551W to the hon. Member for Harwich (Mr. Carswell).

Junior Doctors

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will re-designate essential expenses of junior doctors as tax-deductible. [74370]

Dawn Primarolo: Employed junior doctors are subject to the same rules as any other employee and there are no plans to introduce special rules.

Landfill Taxes

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the impact of landfill taxes on the amount of waste going to landfill in each area of the UK. [75182]

John Healey: The increases in the standard rate of landfill tax are contributing to a move away from over reliance on landfill in the UK. Provisional figures show that over the period 1997-98 to 2005-06 the total amount of waste landfilled in the UK at sites registered for landfill tax fell by 25 per cent. while the amount of active waste landfilled fell by 14 per cent.

Regional assessments of the impact of landfill tax are not available.

Large Print Documents

Joan Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made towards making all HM Revenue and Customs literature available in large print format. [73821]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs' (HMRC) Visually Impaired Media Unit (VIMU) will produce on request any piece of HMRC literature in alternative formats for the visually impaired. This includes large print, Braille and audio versions, and the offer of home visits when more suitable.

Missing Trader Intra-community Fraud

Mr. Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what (a) human and (b) financial resources committed to tackling missing trader intra-community (MTIC) fraud; and what plans he has to allocate more (i) existing and (ii) new staff to investigate MTIC fraud; [74784]

(2) whether he has developed a specific strategy for tackling missing trader intra-community fraud. [74789]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 1090W.

HMRC have had a strategy for tackling missing trader intra-community (MTIC) VAT fraud since September 2000. In recent months they have committed significant additional resources to strengthen their strategy, including re-deploying 420 compliance staff and 55 detection staff, and recruiting 48 new criminal investigators. There are now over 1,000 staff engaged in tackling MTIC fraud. HMRC will continue to review their strategy, including the deployment of resources, to ensure that it remains effective. HMRC's financial accounts do not provide financial resource figures for individual strategies.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how the revenue lost through (a) VAT and (b) missing trader intra-community fraud is measured; [74785]

(2) what estimate he has made of (a) attempted and (b) actual missing trader intra-community fraud in each year since 2000; and what the basis for such an estimate is. [74787]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC's latest estimates of attempted MTIC fraud, overall VAT losses, and the methodology for estimating the latter were published in 'Measuring Indirect Tax Losses—2005', which is available from the following website: www.hmrc.gov.uk/pbr2005/mitl2005.pdf.

The methodology for estimating MTIC fraud was first published in 'Measuring Indirect Tax Fraud—2001'. This was updated in 'Measuring and Tackling Indirect Tax Losses—2004', which can be found on the following website: http://customs.hmrc.gov.uk/channelsPortalWebApp/channelsPortalWebApp.portal?_nfpb=true&_pageLabel=pageVAT_ShowContent&id=HMCE_PROD_011582&propertyType=document.

Neonatal Mortality Rate

Ms Keeble: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the neonatal mortality rate among (a) premature babies and (b) all births was in each of the last five years. [74658]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 5 June 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what the neonatal mortality rate among (a) premature babies and (b) all births was in each of the last five years. (74658)

Information on the neonatal mortality rate among premature babies is not available as gestation is not collected at registration on live births in England and Wales.

The neonatal mortality rate among all live births in England and Wales from 2000 to 2004 (the latest year for which figures are available) are shown in the table below.

Neonatal mortality rate[1], England and Wales, 2000-2004

	Neonatal mortality rate[1]
2000	3.9
2001	3.6
2002	3.6
2004	3.5

[1] Per 1,000 live births

Public Spending

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the ratio of public spending to gross domestic product was in each of the UK regions in 2005-06. [74807]

Mr. Timms: Total identifiable public expenditure on services by country and region is set out in table 7.1 of "Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 2006" (Cm 6811). The latest outturn data available are for 2004-05 with data for spending plans provided for 2005-06.

Gross value added (GVA), (which is the Government's preferred measure of economic output), for each region is available on the Office for National Statistics website (http://www.statistics.gov.uk/articles/economic_trends/ET627_Marais.pdf). The latest available data are for 2003-04.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much (a) public spending was undertaken and (b) revenue was collected in (i) Wales, (ii) Scotland, (iii) London and the South East and (iv) the UK in 2005-06. [74810]

Mr. Timms: Total identifiable public expenditure on services by country and region is set out in table 7.1 of Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 2006 (Cm. 6811). The latest outturn data available are for 2004-05 with data for spending plans provided for 2005-06.

Current receipts at the UK level are set out in table C8 of the Budget 2006 report (HC 968). Receipts are not hypothecated to particular regions and comprehensive data on the regional distribution of tax receipts are not readily available.

Public Transport

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what incentives are available to encourage members of his staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75088]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 1912W. The Treasury is located in Westminster and is well served by public transport. Very few staff travel to work by car and no special incentives exist to encourage car sharing except when public transport is disrupted.

The Treasury offers all staff interest free loans for the purchase of season tickets and bicycles, and has a designated bicycle parking area within the premises.

Savings Incentives

Natascha Engel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to introduce tax incentives to encourage children under 18 years and born before September 2002 to save. [73803]

Ed Balls: The Government introduced the Child Trust Fund in April 2005. To show we understood the issue of older children the Government backdated the eligibility date to all children born on or after 1 September 2002 to align with school years. It is important to recognise that to realise the full benefits of the Child Trust Fund for future generations we must draw a line somewhere.

There already exists considerable scope for tax-relieved savings for children. All children have their own personal tax allowance and parents are taxed on income generated from contributions to their child's account only when those gifts produce more than £100 gross income per parent per year.

In addition, the market offers a wide range of savings and investment accounts designed especially for children from a range of financial services providers.

Scottish Executive (Infrastructure Project Funding)

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will take steps to allow long-term borrowing by the Scottish Executive to fund major infrastructure projects; [74746]

(2) if he will make Barnett Formula bypass funding available to the Scottish Executive to fund major infrastructure projects. [74747]

Mr. Timms: There are no plans to give the Scottish Executive borrowing powers to fund infrastructure projects. Scottish local authorities have prudential borrowing powers. The funding arrangements for the Scottish Executive are detailed in the Treasury publication "Funding the Scottish Parliament, National Assembly for Wales and Northern Ireland Assembly, A Statement of Funding Policy" published in July 2004.

Stamp Duty

Joan Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many properties sold in England and Wales in 2004 attracted stamp duty at (a) 0 per cent., (b) 1 per cent., (c) 3 per cent. and (d) 4 per cent. [73807]

Ed Balls: The following table gives the estimated number of property transactions in England and Wales falling into each stamp duty band in 2004:

Price range	Stamp duty rate (percentage)	Number of property transactions 2004 (thousand)
£0-£60,000 (residential)	0	481
£0-£150,000 (non residential)
£60,001-£250,000 (residential)	1	1,076
£150,001-£250,000 (non residential)
£250,001-£500,000	3	181
£500,001 and above	4	42

The numbers paying stamp duty will be lower due to the use of various reliefs eg disadvantaged area relief, group relief, registered social landlord relief etc.

Standpipes

Mr. Hands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with business on the economic impact of a stand-pipe regime introduced under a drought order in London and the South East. [73639]

John Healey: No such discussions have taken place with Treasury Ministers, so far as I am aware.

Student Loans

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amount of interest incurred by people paying student loans which was attributable to delays by the Inland Revenue in transferring payments to the Student Loan Company in the last year for which figures are available. [74724]

Dawn Primarolo: Student loan borrowers do not pay any additional interest if there is a delay in their repayment information reaching the Student Loan Company. This is because repayments are credited to borrower's accounts retrospectively in the year that they were actually paid. There is no interest penalty because when the credit is made the account is adjusted to reflect the payment date and interest is adjusted accordingly.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what total amount payable to the Student Loans Company on behalf of graduates was retained at the Inland Revenue for (a) one month, (b) up to three months, (c) up to six months, (d) up to 12 months and (e) 12 months or more after the end of the tax year in question in each year since student loans were introduced; [74727]

(2) what period of time elapsed between the end of the tax year and payments being made by the Inland Revenue to the Student Loans Company on behalf of graduates in each year for which figures are available. [74730]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) does not make payments to the Student Loan Company (SLC). Employers deduct student loan repayments from earnings exceeding £15,000 during the year and send these to HMRC who make payments to the Department for Education and Skills (DfES) every quarter.

Suicide Statistics

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 26 April 2006, Official Report, columns 1177-78W, on suicide statistics, what the circumstances were of each case of death from injury to the ulnar artery; and what contributory factors led to the death in each case. [73990]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 5 June 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking, pursuant of 26th April 2006, Official Report, column 1177-8W, on suicide statistics, what the circumstances were of each case of death from injury to the ulnar artery; and what contributory factors led to the death in each case. (73990)

ONS does not release details of the circumstances of individual deaths, as this would compromise the National Statistics protocol on data access and confidentiality. However, ONS routinely publishes data by underlying cause and nature of injury. The table supplied in the previous answer were for all injuries occurring to the ulnar artery, of these 3 were suicides, 2 were accidents, and 1 had an underlying cause of injury of undetermined intent.

Background Note:

The table below was supplied in answer to the question '...how many individuals have died as a consequence of their ulnar artery being severed in each year since 1997.'

Number of deaths from injury to the ulnar artery,[1] England and Wales, 1997 to 2004[2]

	Number of deaths
1997	0
1999	0
2000	0
2001	2
2002	1
2004	1

[1] The cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision(ICD-9) code 903.3 for the years 1997 to 2000, and the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) codes S55.0 and S65.0 for the years 2001 to 2004.

[2] Figures are for deaths occurring in each calendar year.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average time taken to answer a call to the tax credit helpline was in each of the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [70256]

Dawn Primarolo: For April to October 2005 I would refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 2248W.

The remaining figures are:

2005-06	Average waiting time (minutes: seconds)
June[1]	1:02
November	0:44
December	0:33
January	0:39
February	0:46
March	0:16

[1] The figure for June 2005 given on 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 2248W, was only for the period up to 25 June 2005.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many telephone calls there were to the tax credit helpline in each month between January and May 2006; how many of these calls (a) were answered, (b) were abandoned, (c) received an engaged tone and (d) were missed; and if he will make a statement. [70257]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table shows the number of tax credit helpline calls that were (a) answered, (b) abandoned or (c) received an engaged tone.

2006	Handled[1]	Abandoned[2]	Thousand Engaged[3]
January	1,771	54	4
February	1,442	47	2
March	1,539	12	6
April	1,571	21	2

[1] Where the caller spoke to an adviser.

[2] Where the caller selected an option from the call steering menu and was put in a queue to speak to an adviser but the call was terminated before the caller spoke to an adviser.

[3] Call attempts where the caller was played an engaged tone, before they were placed in a queue to speak to an adviser.

HMRC contact centres do not report the number of "missed" calls and this information is therefore not readily available.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the correspondence dated 26 January regarding incorrect tax credit payments to a constituent of the hon. Member for Preseli Pembrokeshire reference SLD 4/23386/2005, what the (a) system fault affecting the calculation of tax credit awards and (b) the further system fault affecting HM Revenue and Customs' records of tax credit payments was. [50115]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is as follows:

(a) The hon. Member refers to a system fault that caused details of working tax credit (WTC), payable by his constituent's employer in 2003-04 and 2004-05, to be duplicated on HM Revenue and Custom's (HMRC) records.

(b) The further system fault prevented a 'stop notice' being sent to his constituent's employer and WTC payments continued to be made, after their entitlement had ended.

HMRC are working hard to put things right in the specific case raised by the hon. Member to ensure their constituent receives their correct entitlement as quickly as possible.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many manual payments have been made by the Tax Credit Office in each month since April 2004, broken down by (a) working tax credit and (b) child tax credit. [73178]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available in the format requested.

For the estimated number of manual payments between April 2004 and October 2005, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 29 November 2005, Official Report, columns 343-44W. The number of manual payments made in each month since November 2005 was around:

	Number of payment (Thousand)
November	35
December	30
January	35
February	35
April	20

The allocation of payments to precise payment dates requires a degree of estimation and are therefore rounded to the nearest 5,000.

Details for May 2006 are not yet available.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of tax credits on (a) housing costs and (b) basic food costs in areas of high deprivation; and if he will make a statement. [75177]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government have not made any assessment of the impact of tax credits on housing or food costs at a local level, and are not aware of any evidence of such an effect.

However, tax credits have raised the incomes of six million families containing 10 million children, increasing the income available for housing, food and other expenditure.

As a result of the Government's reforms to the tax and benefit system since 1997, and the introduction of the national minimum wage, by October 2006, in real terms, families with children will be, on average, £1,500 a year better off, while those in the poorest fifth will be, on average, £3,400 per year better off.

Recent research by Gregg, Waldfogel and Washbrook has shown that low income families have been able to spend significantly more on housing services, and on food, as a result of tax credits and other financial support.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the total costs of tax credit (a) administration and (b) write offs of overpayments since April 2001; and if he will make a statement. [63044]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers I gave him on 4 July 2005, Official Report, column 101W, 10 October 2005, Official Report, column 282W, 18 October 2005, Official Report, column 949W, 27 October 2005, Official Report, column 497W, 15 November 2005, Official Report, column 1214W, 26 January 2006, Official Report, columns 2249-50W, and 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 567W, and to the Comptroller and Auditor General's (CAG's) standard report for 2003-04 attached to the Inland Revenue's annual report for 2003-04 and the CAG's standard report that formed part of the Inland Revenue's accounts for 2004-05. Both publications are available in the Library of the House. Around £1.65 million was written off in March 2006 due to official error.

Tax Office (Isle of Wight)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 1086W, on the tax office, Isle of Wight, what the core catchment area is of the Newport Isle of Wight tax office. [74461]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 1086W. HMRC's inquiry centre at Newport serves the whole population of the Isle of Wight.

Tax Receipts

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the income tax receipts from pension income in the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [73829]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated liability to income tax from occupational and personal pensions can be found in table 7.9 "Cost of relief for approved pension schemes" on HM Revenue and Customs website at http://www.hmrc.gov.Uk/stats/pensions/7_9_sep05.xls

VAT Registration Applications

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints HM Revenue and Customs received about the time taken to process VAT registration applications between (a) 1 March and 19 May 2005 and (b) 1 January and 28 February 2006. [75156]

Dawn Primarolo: Between 1 March and 19 May 2005, around 36 complaints were received by HMRC/ Customs and Excise about the time taken to process VAT registration applications.

Between 1 January and 28 February 2006, HMRC received around 101 complaints about the time taken to process VAT registration applications.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of complete and accurate VAT registration applications have been processed within 21 days of receipt since 1 March. [75159]

Dawn Primarolo: For VAT registration applications received during March and April that were complete and accurate at receipt, HMRC estimate that 65 per cent. were fully processed within 21 calendar days.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 24 May 2006, to Question 73180, on VAT registration applications, how many such complaints were from companies seeking VAT registration to conduct business activities relating to (a) mobile telephones, (b) other electrical equipment and (c) other activities. [75215]

Dawn Primarolo: Of the 170 complaints that HM Revenue and Customs received about the time taken to process VAT registrations between 1 March 2006 and 19 May 2006:

(a) 76 were from mobile phone companies;

(b) 26 were from companies related to other electrical equipment;

(c) 68 were from companies related to other activities.

Voluntary Arrangements Service

Charles Hendry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance HM Revenue and Customs gives to the Voluntary Arrangements Service with regard to rules for the acceptance of Independent Voluntary Arrangements; and what changes have been made to these rules in the last two years. [74080]

Dawn Primarolo: The criteria for acceptance of a voluntary arrangement are contained in leaflet CWL5 entitled "The Voluntary Arrangements Service - Inland Revenue and HM Customs and Excise – Working together for you" first published in 2001.

The Voluntary Arrangements Service applies these criteria to proposals for all voluntary arrangements and will support a Voluntary Arrangement where:

There is full and honest disclosure

A fair and optimum offer is made to creditors

Provision is made for payment of all future statutory liabilities on time

There are no overriding reasons for rejection.

A revised version of the leaflet is being produced to reflect the creation of Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs which will be issued to Insolvency Practitioners in the summer. The acceptance criteria remain the same but a requirement has been added that all creditors who participate in the arrangement do so receiving equal treatment within their creditor groups.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Claim Processing

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average time taken to rate a claim for (a) jobseekers' allowance and (b) income support was in Ribble Valley in each of the last 10 years. [73201]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 23 May 2006]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the average time taken to rate a claim for Jobseeker's Allowance and Income Support in the Ribble Valley in each of the last ten years.

The information is not available in the format you have requested. The information that is available provides details of the average time taken to process claims to Jobseeker's Allowance and Income Support. This is known as the Actual Average Clearance Time.

Claims from Ribble Valley residents are handled by the processing team at our Blackburn site and it is not possible to separate the Ribble Valley claims. The information about claims handled in Blackburn is set out below.

Days

	Income support		Jobseeker's allowance
	Standard	Achievement	Standard	Achievement
2002/03	12	11.1	12	11.4
2003/04	12	12.4	12	12.6
2004/05	12	12.5	12	11.3
2005/06	12	14.6	12	13.2

Notes:

1. The figures quoted include claims to Jobseeker's Allowance and Income Support made by customers in Accrington, Blackburn, Clitheroe and Darwen. Figures for individual offices/areas are not obtainable.

2. Information is only available from 2002 as clearance times were not measured in this way before then.

I hope this is helpful.

Departmental Programmes

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of his Department's building programme in the 2005-06 financial year included (a) energy self-generation and (b) water recycling measures. [71463]

Mr. Plaskitt: None of the Department's building programme in the 2005-06 financial year included (a) energy self-generation or (b) water recycling measures. However, all buildings newly built or acquired for DWP must meet the BREEAM "excellent" standard, which will ensure that opportunities continue to be considered in future programmes. DWP is working under a PFI partnership deal with Land Securities Trillium to deliver energy and water saving projects across its existing estate of approximately 1,500 buildings.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action is being taken through departmental programmes to encourage into work (a) those aged over 50 years and (b) those above state pension age. [72237]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Like all other customers, people aged 50 and over, including those above state pension age, can benefit from the range of services provided by Jobcentre Plus, including access to jobs and help and support to find work.

Additional help is provided to older people who do not find work quickly. New deal 50 plus, which is a voluntary programme, provides people with advice and guidance from personal advisers, and access to in-work financial help through the 50 plus element of the working tax credit. Since April 2000, the programme has been successful in helping more than 150,000 older workers into employment. Once in work, new deal 50 plus customers can claim a Training Grant of up to £1,500 for training of which up to £300 can be used for life-long learning.

People aged 50 and over are also eligible for help from new deal 25 plus. People who have been claiming jobseeker's allowance (JSA) for 18 months and who have not previously participated on new deal 25 plus, are already required to attend the Gateway stage of the new deal 25 plus programme. This is a period of up to 4 months of intensive job search and specialist help and support to improve job prospects. This is followed by the Intensive Activity Period (IAP) which is currently voluntary for people aged 50 and over. The IAP provides further support and pre-work training to help people return to work.

Since April 2004, we have been piloting mandatory participation in the new deal 25 plus IAP for people aged 50-59 who have been claiming JSA for 18 months. The pilot has offered people in this age group more extensive help back to work. Interim pilot data has yielded positive results and, as announced in our Welfare Reform Green Paper, we will be commencing a phased national rollout.

New deal 50 plus is a voluntary programme for those who have been claiming benefits, including those claiming the pension credit, for six months. However, our Green Paper also announced our intention to pilot mandatory participation in new deal 50 plus activities for people aged 50-59 who have been claiming JSA for six months. This will involve attendance at work-focused interviews and the development of action plans to help participants move into employment. Pilot locations have not yet been confirmed.

Since October 2004, pension credit has been a qualifying benefit for the majority of Jobcentre Plus programmes. This enables people aged 60 and over who are claiming pension credit to take advantage of the wide range of back to work help available.

In spring 2005 there were three million people claiming incapacity benefits in Great Britain, of which 1.3 million were aged 50 or over. As nearly half of all benefit claimants aged 50 or over are on IB, they will be able to benefit from the rollout of the successful Pathways to Work service across the whole country which will be completed by 2008. Pathways offers new IB customers early support from skilled personal advisers and direct access to a 'Choices Package' of employment programmes and clear financial incentives to make work pay. Any IB customer will be able to access the support and help available on a voluntary basis.

Our Age Positive Campaign works with employers and others to promote the business benefits of an age diverse workforce and best practice on age in recruitment, training and promotion. In May 2005 we launched the 'Be Ready' national information campaign to raise employer awareness of, and ability to adopt, flexible employment and retirement opportunities to support the recruitment and retention of older workers in advance of age legislation due in October 2006.

The number of people working past State Pension Age has been increasing and now stands at over one million. We have introduced more attractive state pension deferral options with a higher rate of increment (10.4 per cent.) and the option of taking a lump sum instead of a weekly increase if individuals defer taking their pension for 12 months or longer.

Framework for Vocational Rehabilitation

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made in implementing the Framework for Vocational Rehabilitation. [67424]

Mrs. McGuire: Following the publication of the Framework for Vocational Rehabilitation, the strategy 'Health, Work and Well-being: Caring for our future' launched in October 2005 set out how the Government is working in new ways to rehabilitate people back to employment. A National Director for Health and Work has now been appointed holding specific responsibility for vocational rehabilitation and on 3 May 2006 the Government held a summit for stakeholders.

The Government are also working with stakeholders to find ways to provide earlier and better rehabilitation as part of its wider programme of work on tackling perceptions of a compensation culture and improving the system for valid claims.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will ensure that all Jobcentre Plus staff, including those based in Plymouth, are aware of the provisions of SI 2002 No 2905 which affect hon. Members' ability to make representations on behalf of their constituents. [72023]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about ensuring that Jobcentre Plus staff, including those based in Plymouth, are aware of the provisions of SI 2002 No 2905 which affect Hon. Members' ability to make representations on behalf of their constituents. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

All staff in Jobcentre Plus are aware that they must use the Personal Information Policy Guide when dealing with requests for personal information relating to our customers or staff. This is the primary guidance within the Department for Work and Pensions in respect of dealing with personal customer information and when it may be passed to third parties. The Guide contains specific instructions for staff to follow when a request is received under The Data Protection (Processing of Sensitive Personal Data Elected Representatives) Order 2002: SI 2002 no 2905.

I am sorry that your office has experienced some difficulty in obtaining information in respect of your constituents. To address this, Louise Ferris, Customer Service Manager, Plymouth Benefit Delivery Centre (Tel: 01752 - 272012), has agreed with your office that future requests should be sent to her for a response.

I hope this is helpful.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department spent on providing Jobcentre Plus services in each London Jobcentre Plus district in each of the last five financial years, broken down by (a) head count related expenditure, (b) non-head count related expenditure and (c) capital expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [72747]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 22 May 2006]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the information requested.

Letter from Leslie Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions asking how much his Department spent on providing Jobcentre Plus services in each London Jobcentre Plus district in each of the last five financial years, broken down by (a) head count related expenditure, (b) non-head count related expenditure and (c) capital expenditure. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The table below gives the details of expenditure by District for the last four years. Prior to 1 April 2002, Jobcentre Plus did not exist and therefore there are no corresponding figures available for the 2001/02 financial year.

(b) Non-headcount related costs	8,675	11,754	14,476	13,341

Headcount related costs includes the costs of permanent salaries, casual and temporary staff, superannuation costs and overtime. Non Headcount related cost includes office costs, utilities, telephone costs and the cost of training programmes e.g. New Deal.

The capital figures exclude the cost of Jobcentre Plus Rollout (refurbishment and acquisitions) which is met from a centrally managed national programme budget.

During the period since Jobcentre Plus was created London region has undergone major restructuring to move from one region covering London and South East to two regions. The number of districts in the region has also reduced from 30 to 9. This reorganisation makes comparison of expenditure between years difficult. The continued centralisation of benefit processing has reduced costs directly held in regions over the period.

The 2005-06 figures have not been finalised and may be subject to change following the annual audit.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the cost of maintaining the Job Centre Plus website in each year since its creation. [73922]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the costs of maintaining the Jobcentre Plus website in each year since its creation. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as chief executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The information you have requested is in the table.

2004-05	610,200
2005-06	637,000

I hope this is helpful.

Pathways to Work

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have started on the Pathways to Work scheme in each pilot district since the scheme's introduction. [73573]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 25 May 2006]: The information requested is in the table.

Individuals starting Pathways to Work, by district

	Number
Bridgend, Rhondda, Cynon and Taf	19,980
Renfrewshire, Inverclyde, Argyll and Bute	17,980
Derbyshire	30,010
Gateshead and South Tyneside	12,740
East Lancashire	17,000
Essex	27,420
Somerset	10,680

Notes:
1. Data is to the end of October 2005.
2. All figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.
3. As requested the answer is based on the number of individuals who have started Pathways to Work. The total number of Pathways starts is higher as an individual can have multiple spells on Pathways.
4. The first three Pathways to Work pilots (Bridgend, Rhondda, Cynon and Taf; Renfrewshire, Inverclyde, Argyll and Bute; Derbyshire) commenced on 27 October 2003. The four pilots in the second phase of Pathways to Work (Gateshead and South Tyneside; East Lancashire; Essex; Somerset) commenced on 5 April 2004.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Arm's Length Management Organisations

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the impact on tenant (a) rents and (b) satisfaction with their accommodation of the transfer of housing stock to arm's length management organisations. [71007]

Yvette Cooper: Local authorities do not transfer their housing stock to arm's length management organisations (ALMOs). The stock and the ALMO remain wholly owned by the local authorities. ALMOs are set up by local authorities to manage all or part of their housing stock.

There is no direct impact on rents when an ALMO is set up as the power to set rents remains with the local authority. The Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG) issues rent setting guidance to all local authorities, whether or not they have an ALMO, on the rent restructuring rules. Rent restructuring will result in actual and assumed rents converging over time.

DCLG as yet does not have sufficient definitive data covering ALMOs to assess the impact of ALMOs on tenant satisfaction.

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much funding will be made available for the next round of transfers to arm's length management organisations. [71018]

Yvette Cooper: The ALMO (Arm's Length Management Organisation) programme has received a budget of £3.7 billion under the two most recent spending reviews for the five years up to 2007-08. £3.3 billion of this has been allocated to existing ALMOs. Spend in 2007-08 by any ALMOs that apply for the next round, along with further allocations for continuing ALMOs, will be met from the remaining provision. Funding for ALMOs beyond 2007-08 will be considered in the context of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Carol Vincent

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if his Department will investigate the management of the Metropolitan Housing Trust following the discovery of the remains of Carol Vincent in one of the Trust's properties. [66970]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Housing Corporation is the independent regulator for registered social landlords (RSLs) such as MHT. Its assessment is that no mismanagement has occurred on the behalf of MHT in relation to the case of Carol Vincent. However, I understand that MHT is reviewing its procedures to consider what checks it could or should carry out to try to ensure it has contact with those residents who, though not vulnerable and not in contact with the association because of any repair or maintenance issue, do not contact the association for a significant period of time.

Compulsory Land Purchases

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much was spent on compulsory land purchases in (a) Guildford constituency, (b) Surrey and (c) England in 2005-06. [73282]

Yvette Cooper: This information is not collected by the Department.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when the Minister of State will reply to the hon. Member for West Worcestershire's letter of 24 April, about council tax on secondary homes. [73896]

Angela E. Smith: A response was sent to the hon. Member on 31 May 2006. I apologise for the delay.

Council Tax

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many and what proportion of properties in each council tax collecting local authority area were recorded as being entitled to second home council tax relief in (a) 1995, (b) 2000, (c) 2005 and (d) 2006. [71603]

Mr. Woolas:

A table detailing the information for 2005 has been made available in the Library of the House. The table gives, for each billing authority, both the number of second homes in the local authority area and the number of second homes as a proportion of the housing stock in the area. The data are from a snapshot taken in October 2005, as recorded on CTB1 forms submitted by each local authority.

Data for 1995 and 2000 are not available on a robust consistent basis. The snapshot for 2006 is not yet available.

Departmental Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list those (a) Acts and (b) parts of Acts which received Royal Assent between 1976 and 2006 for which her Department has policy responsibility and which remain in force. [70393]

Angela E. Smith: There is no centrally held record of this information and it could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Transition Costs

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the cost of re-organising her Department. [74696]

Angela E. Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to the hon. Members for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. Pickles) and North Cornwall (Mr. Rogerson) on 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 989W and to the hon. Member for Ryedale (Mr. Greenway) on 18 May 2006, Official Report, column 990W.

Deprivation

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list the local authority wards in (a) Tamworth constituency and (b) Staffordshire which are in the top 30 per cent. of wards in England by multiple deprivation indicators; and if she will make a statement. [71244]

Mr. Woolas: The following table lists the super output areas (SOAs) in Tamworth constituency and Staffordshire that fall within the 30 per cent. most deprived SOAs in England. The most deprived SOA in the area is located in Newcastle-under-Lyme.

Euro-preparation Group

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when the local authorities' euro preparations group will next meet. [70591]

Ed Balls: I have been asked to reply.

The Euro Preparations Unit (EPU) in HM Treasury takes the lead in co-ordinating appropriate euro preparations across the economy. As part of its regular programme of activities with stakeholders, EPU intends to host a further meeting between local authorities and central Government officials in the autumn.

Fire Service

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what payments have been made by her Department to the Chief Fire Officers' Association in each year since 2002. [73401]

Angela E. Smith: Grants to Chief Fire Officers' Association or its predecessor organisation, Chief and Assistant Chief Fire Officers' Association were as follows:

	£ Amount
2006-07	203,750
2005-06	815,000
2004-05	687,842
2003-04	404,317
2002-03	150,000

The 2006-07 payment is the first of four proposed payments totalling £815,000.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the (a) staffing and (b) administrative costs of its Fire Service Group have been since 2002. [73402]

Angela E. Smith: Since 2002 responsibility for fire services within the Department has been restructured several times and historic figures are not available in the form requested. The current staffing in relation to fire and rescue service is 173 and expenditure for 2005-06 on administration was £9.4 million.

Flood Protection

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list those councils which offer their council taxpayers a flood protection product discounted scheme. [74326]

Mr. Woolas: The Department is not aware of any local authority which offers assistance to residents for the purchase of flood protection products by means of council tax discounts.

Growth Areas Fund

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much funding will be allocated to the Stansted-Cambridge-Peterborough Growth Corridor by her Department for public parks and green spaces under the auspices of the Growth Areas Fund in the next five years; and if she will make a statement. [73074]

Yvette Cooper: The London Stansted Cambridge Peterborough Growth Area will benefit from £17.7 million investment in 17 projects over the period 2004 to 2008, for the improvement and creation of new green spaces. This includes £1 million for the Peterborough Green Park South project, which compliments other flagship projects such as Coton Countryside Reserve and the Wicken Fen Vision. These projects will be delivered by local authorities and a number of specialist organisations, including the Wildlife Trusts and Groundwork.

This significant funding package represents part of the £38 million the Department for Communities and Local Government is investing in the three newer growth areas through the Growth Areas Fund (GAP) to support the delivery of green infrastructure, meeting our 10 per cent. funding commitment set out in the Government's response to the Barker report. Growth Area Funding post 2008 is subject to the outcome of the comprehensive spending review 2007.

Home Information Packs

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate the Government have made of the number of individuals likely to be fined each year for attempting to sell a home without a home information pack once the proposal is implemented. [70602]

Yvette Cooper: Home information packs offer benefits for sellers as well as buyers. We do not expect widespread failure to comply with the home information pack duties. The main focus of enforcement by local weights and measures authorities will be aimed at providing information and advice to help estate agents and others to comply with the duties. Penalty charges are likely to be reserved for serious breaches—for example a persistent failure to comply with home information pack obligations.

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the cost of including information on water metering in the home information pack. [71032]

Yvette Cooper: A drainage and water search is obtained by most buyers now and will therefore be a required document in the home information pack. The search currently costs around £30 plus VAT and includes information on a range of matters relating to drainage and water other than water metering. The search will include information on the location of water meters, whether the water supply is currently metered and whether this arrangement is likely to change following a change of occupancy.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will delay the introduction of home information packs to take account of concerns expressed by the industry. [73898]

Yvette Cooper: We have published the timetable for implementation and are on track to meet the 1 June 2007 target. Home information packs are being introduced to benefit consumers.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has to review the requirements for home information packs; and if she will make a statement. [73907]

Yvette Cooper: The regulations which we plan to lay shortly will contain details of the content of home information packs. These have been widely consulted upon, and are well understood by the principal stakeholders, the details of the home information packs will be tested as part of the dry run.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what representations she has received expressing concerns about the introduction of home information packs; from which organisations such representations have come; and what the nature is of the concerns expressed. [73908]

Yvette Cooper: A wide variety of views have been received over many years and discussions take place regularly with all the major stakeholders. Some of those who make money out of the current system for buying and selling homes are opposed to home information packs and have always been. The main organisation representing consumers is strongly in favour of home information packs.

Home Inspectors

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many of the candidates registered for home inspector training have no (a) previous qualification and (b) practical work experience related to property (i) surveying and (ii) construction. [72421]

Yvette Cooper: The latest figures provided by the assessment centres in May indicate that 60 per cent. of the candidates were chartered surveyors. We have no detailed breakdown of the remainder. All those qualifying as home inspectors will have reached the appropriate national standard irrespective of their experience or previous qualifications.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether an individual convicted of a criminal offence will be eligible to become a certified home inspector. [46947]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Currently, there are no checks on the criminal records of people conducting home surveys and valuation inspections. The 2004 Housing Act requires home inspectors to be fit and proper persons to carry out inspections. Those wishing to become home inspectors will therefore be subject to a full background investigation, involving a Criminal Records Bureau check. We are working with the Home Office on developing an approach similar to that used for people wishing to become police officers.

Housing

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many dwellings would be constructed in an acre of residential development with a density of (a) 30, (b) 50 and (c) 70 dwellings per hectare. [70697]

Yvette Cooper: One acre is 0.405 hectare and therefore basic maths shows that the number of dwellings on one acre of land, on the basis set out, would be: (a) 12, (b) 20 and (c) 28 dwellings.

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which councils have firm plans in place to meet the decent homes standard for existing housing stock. [71024]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 12 May 2006]: The majority of councils now have time plans in to meet the decent homes standard for existing stock. Seven councils have plans for delivery but are awaiting Government Office sign off (Birmingham, East Devon, Stroud, Isles of Scilly, North Tyneside, Ribble Valley and the London borough of Merton) 46 authorities have firm plans in place but are waiting for the bidding round for arms length management organisations and stock transfers which will be launched shortly. Two currently have no plans in place (Camden and Ellesmere Port.)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she make a statement on the provision of affordable housing in Coventry South. [70956]

Yvette Cooper: It is not possible to provide separate figures for Coventry South.

Allocations to provide new affordable housing are made from the national Affordable Housing Programme, on the recommendation of the Regional Housing Board, and through a local bidding process to the Housing Corporation.

For 2004-06 the city of Coventry was allocated £7.4 million from the Housing Corporation to provide 174 units of affordable housing.

For 2006-08 just over £9 million has been allocated to fund 255 units, and this represents a 21 per cent. increase in funding from the Affordable Housing Programme to Coventry city council.

During 2004-06 the city delivered 208 new affordable homes in Coventry, of which:

95 were achieved through planning gain (section 106 agreements), providing 64 homes for rent and 31 for shared ownership;

An additional 57 homes for rent were provided through an acquisition and refurbishment programme.

During 2006-08 the city council expects to provide 320 new affordable homes in Coventry, of which:

160 are expected to be achieved through planning gain (section 106 agreements); providing 80 for rent and 80 for shared ownership;

An additional 30 homes for rent are expected to be delivered through an acquisition and refurbishment programme.

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what discussions she has had with church authorities on releasing land and buildings for social housing. [72499]

Yvette Cooper: My officials have had occasional discussions with a number of housing providers and landowners, including the Church Commissioners, on the issue of affordable housing provision. The Church Commissioners consider that they have a legal obligation to obtain the best possible long term return on property disposals.

Jaywick

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what funds have been made available for the regeneration of Jaywick; over what period of time these funds may be spent; from what sources the funds have been provided; and if she will make a statement. [74000]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is subject to the Jaywick Options Assessment Report which has been prepared by the consultants Llewelyn Davies Yeang. The report has been circulated to the Jaywick Agencies Group who will decide on a way forward for Jaywick and the project on these matters at their next meeting, due to take place before the end of June 2006. I have asked my officials to write to the hon. Member once this information is available.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the merits of the proposals outlined for consultation in the Jaywick regeneration plan for the compulsory purchase of homes; and if she will make a statement. [74001]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is subject to the Jaywick Options Assessment Report which has been prepared by the consultants Llewelyn Davies Yeang. The report has been circulated to the Jaywick Agencies Group who will decide on a way forward for Jaywick and the project on these matters at their next meeting, due to take place before the end of June 2006. I have asked my officials to write to the hon. Member once this information is available.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which of the agencies involved in the Jaywick master plan will take overall responsibility for ensuring that the plan takes the concerns of local residents into account. [73197]

Yvette Cooper: Tendring district council and EEDA have joint responsibility for managing the master plan project and ensuring that the plan takes the concerns of local residents into account.

The master plan tender contract with the consultants Llewelyn Davies Young included a clause about the need for community engagement to ensure that the interests of all residents are taken into account. The consultants have organised and held a number of public meetings in 2006 to gain an understanding of local needs. The outcome of these meetings will inform the detailed masterplanning, due to be completed in June 2006.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether overall responsibility for the Jaywick master plan proposal lies with (a) the East of England Development Agency, (b) the Government Office of the East of England (Go-East), (c) Tendring district council, (d) her Department and (e) another organisation. [73198]

Yvette Cooper: Responsibility for the master plan project lies jointly with of the East of England Development Agency and Tendring district council, on behalf of the Jaywick Agencies Group (East of England Development Agency, GO-East, Essex county council, Tendring district council, Environment Agency). The project is being funded by EEDA.

Local Government Finance

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what was the total cost of (a) collecting and (b) administering council tax in each of the last five years. [55766]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The total cost of collecting council tax (including administration costs) in England in each of the last five years is as follows:

2000-01	301,539
2001-02	301,535
2002-03	311,135

	£000
2003-04	333,197
2004-05	340,911

Notes:
1. The data include the administration costs of collecting council tax. They are not available separately.
2. The total cost of collecting council tax in England is local authority gross expenditure net of any income relating to the collection of council tax. Gross expenditure on council tax collection includes the cost of sending out bills and pursuing late payers. The related income is mainly made up of recovered court costs.

Comparisons across years may not be valid due to changes in the method of reporting the information. In particular, the outturn data for 2000-01 to 2002-03 have been calculated on a non-FRS (Financial Reporting Standard) 17 basis while the outturn data for 2003-04 to 2004-05 have been calculated on an FRS 17 basis.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much central Government funding Shropshire received in 2005-06. [73397]

Mr. Woolas: In 2005-06, Shropshire county council received £176,106,706 in formula grant, comprising revenue support grant and redistributed business rates.

In addition Shropshire county council will have received some special grant. Information on authorities income from special grants will be collected and available later in the year.

Lyons Inquiry

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the council tax liability of landlords of student properties is being considered by Sir Michael Lyons' Inquiry into local government. [75262]

Mr. Woolas: The terms of reference for Sir Michael Lyons' independent inquiry into local government require him to make recommendations on how best to reform council tax. It is for Sir Michael to consider what particular aspects he should consider within those terms of reference.

Milton Keynes South Midlands Growth Area

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) whether the work being undertaken by the West Midlands Regional Assembly into the implications of the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area for the West Midlands region will be integrated into the national spatial approach and the developing Midlands Way strategy; [73061]

(2) whether the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area plans will take specific cognisance of the needs of the West Midlands region, as illustrated by the West Midlands Economic Strategy and the West Midlands Spatial Strategy; [73063]

(3) what monitoring mechanisms will be put in place to measure the impact of the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area in spatial and economic terms on the West Midlands region; [73064]

(4) what consideration has been given to planning in the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area for commercial developments in response to representations by the regional business community, and work undertaken by the West Midlands Regional Assembly on economic linkages between the West Midlands region and the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area. [73065]

Yvette Cooper: The Milton Keynes South Midlands Sub-Regional Strategy sets out plans for growth in one of the four key areas identified in the Government's Sustainable Communities Plan 2003. The Strategy recognises the important connections that already exist with other areas—notably London and the West Midlands conurbation—and that these must continue to be developed. Local partners will continue to work together across the regions to ensure these connections are strengthened.

The growth area provides opportunities for businesses in the East and West Midlands. Consultants are currently developing proposals for the Midlands Way on behalf of a Steering Group which is led by the two Regional Development Agencies and includes the Government Offices, Assemblies, business and local authority partners. The West Midlands Business Council has been leading a group which is considering the implications of the Milton Keynes South Midlands Growth Area and the results are being fed through to the Midlands Way Steering Group. The Midlands Way is likely to have a strong economic focus and links to neighbouring areas, both north and south will be reflected in its actions.

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on what criteria the decision was made not to include West Midlands regional public agencies on the Inter Regional Board for the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area; and whether this decision will be reviewed. [73062]

Yvette Cooper: The Milton Keynes South Midlands Inter-regional Board was established in 2004 to facilitate the delivery of sustainable growth within the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area. The Inter-regional Board brings together senior representatives from agencies with responsibility for growth points within the growth area, which includes the relevant agencies from East of England, East Midlands, and South East regions.

There are no current plans to review the membership of the Inter-regional Board.

New Deal (Liverpool)

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of provision for black and ethnic minority communities in the Kensington New Deal Project in Liverpool. [74556]

Mr. Woolas: Last year Kensington Regeneration undertook the annual performance management framework assessment, which included the mandatory theme of diversity and equality. Kensington Regeneration's self-assessed score was good and this was confirmed by the Audit Commission's moderation.

The partnership has taken a mainstreaming approach to black and ethnic minority provision but additional customised support is provided in areas of employment, housing and adult learning.

Planning (Chester)

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of the capability of Chester city council adequately to address planning applications for developments with national environmental and employment implications [64158]

Angela E. Smith: I have been asked to reply.

Local planning authorities such as Chester city council are responsible for day-to-day planning matters in their administrative areas, including the determination of planning applications. Successive governments have taken the view that local authorities should be free to carry out their responsibilities with the minimum of interference from central Government since they are ultimately answerable to their electorate for discharging their duties.

The First Secretary of State has no powers under statute to investigate the manner in which local authorities conduct their affairs.

Planning Policy Statement 3

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what representations her Department has received regarding draft Planning Policy Statement 3, on housing density and infill development. [74075]

Yvette Cooper: The former Office of the Deputy Prime Minister received a number of representations, following the consultation exercise which closed on 27 February, on the application of the density policies set out in draft Planning Policy Statement 3 "Housing" (PPS3) to small scale infill development. The Department for Communities and Local Government will be taking these representations into account in finalising the draft policy, and will publish a summary of them when publishing PPS3 in its final form later this year.

Regional Assemblies

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether there are plans to give further powers to regional assemblies. [73437]

Yvette Cooper: The 2004 Barker Review of Housing Supply recommended that Regional Planning Bodies and Regional Housing Boards be merged. The Government have now formally invited the eight regional assemblies to add this housing responsibility to their existing planning role later this year.

The Government have no current plans to give further powers to regional assemblies.

Urban Regeneration

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what funds his Department provided to urban regeneration companies in each of the last eight years. [67106]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not normally provide funding directly to any Urban Regeneration Company (URC). Instead, funding is provided by the partners in each URC; this covers, separately, revenue and capital costs. The usual partners of a URC comprise the local Regional Development Agency (RDA), the local authority or authorities, and English Partnerships (EP). The table shows the estimated revenue funding provided to the individual URCs for the latest financial year, 2005-06. Allocations for previous years were of a similar order for each URC. Note that URCs have been created at different times over the past seven years.

Information on funding allocations for capital projects in each URC is not held centrally. Funding for capital projects is not normally provided directly to the URCs; rather, expenditure on projects is incurred by the partners themselves, on the basis of strategies agreed with the URCs.

Exceptionally, and in addition to the above quoted data, ODPM does provide special direct funding to the URC in Peterborough, under the Growth Areas programme, and to the URC in Southend, as part of the Thames Gateway programme; this is done to support the work that these two companies are carrying out under these initiatives, in addition to their standard URC regeneration activities.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which countries have funded alternative livelihoods programmes in Afghanistan; what funding each provided in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005; and what funding is forecast for 2006. [74141]

Hilary Benn: Alternative livelihoods help people in the transition from income from poppy to income from legal activities. Alternative livelihoods activities include assisting farmers to acquire assets and creating a favourable regulatory and institutional environment for non-poppy farming.

According to the United Nations Office for Drugs and Crime (UNODC) a total of US$490 million of international aid was committed to Alternative Livelihoods in Afghanistan in the Afghan year 2005-06. There are no reliable collective figures for international aid prior to this date.

The details for 2005-06 are as follows:

	US$ million
Afghanistan Reconstruction Trust Fund, managed by the World Bank, funded by 25 donors (including the UK) to Afghanistan	158
Additional funding for Alternative Livelihoods includes:
USA	154
UK	67
European Commission	41
Other (Japan, Switzerland, Germany, Denmark, Norway, Aga Khan Foundation)	70

Responsibility for collection of the data for 2006-07 has been transferred from UNODC to the Afghan Ministry of Counter Narcotics. A UK-funded consultant is supporting ministry staff to do this. The results are planned to be released at the end of June.

Grenada

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much humanitarian aid and financial assistance the UK has given to Grenada since 2001; and when he expects an assessment team to be sent to Grenada to determine whether further financial or humanitarian aid is necessary. [73836]

Mr. Thomas: Between the financial years 2000-01 and 2004-05, the UK has provided a total of £8.15 million of aid to Grenada. Of this total, £1.65 million was provided over the period as financial assistance, and £6.5 million was provided as emergency assistance following the impact of Hurricane Ivan on the country in September 2004.

Following Hurricane Ivan in 2005, DFID committed a total of £325,000 to provide: consultancy support in the forestry sector; a chartered surveyor to assess the hurricane damage done to the Governor-General's compound and Parliament; and, with the US Agency for International Development, co-finance debt advisers to develop proposals for the restructuring of Grenada's debt. In addition, our share of the European Commission's humanitarian support and additional reconstruction funds following the impact of the hurricane was £1.18 million.

Since Hurricane Ivan, we have remained closely engaged with the Government of Grenada, with regular visits to the island by DFID staff based in the Caribbean. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development, made it clear in meetings with Prime Minister Keith Mitchell in 2005, that DFID recognised the Government's success at leading the reconstruction efforts, and the continuing challenges facing Grenada. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development, made a commitment to review the case for additional budget support to Grenada. We will keep the situation under close review and, in the absence of another disaster, make any future judgment based on input from the Government of Grenada, the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, the European Commission, and other development partners.

India

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the projects in India that are supported by his Department that are specifically aimed at Dalit peoples. [73902]

Mr. Thomas: DFID is committed to supporting the Government of India in its efforts to combat caste discrimination and social exclusion in all its forms. Dalits (also known as Scheduled Castes), like other minorities, have a right to be included in all the mainstream Government programmes that DFID supports. DFID does not support particular programmes aimed at minority communities but promotes social inclusion in all its programmes.

India's constitution safeguards the rights of all its citizens and the Government of India's policies provide the necessary framework to tackle discrimination. The challenge is to implement these policies effectively and for this reason DFID is engaging with the Government of India and other development partners to help to implement their commitments.

For example, in education, DFID supports India's National Programme for achieving universal primary education (Sarva Shiksha Abhiyan—SSA). One of the objectives of this programme, which was launched in September 2004, was to narrow the gaps that existed between the enrolment of Scheduled Caste and other children.

The recent mid-term review of SSA indicates that the programme has been effective in increasing the enrolment of Scheduled Caste children into mainstream education. The proportion of Scheduled Caste children in the school population has increased from 19 per cent. in 2003 to 21.3 per cent. in 2005. This means that millions of Dalit children are now in schools alongside other children and the proportion of Dalit children in mainstream Government schools now exceeds the proportion of Dalit children in the general population. This success has been achieved through a range of strategies that have helped to tackle discrimination at all levels.

Special efforts are needed to ensure that Dalits are able to exercise their rights to access mainstream services. DFID is providing £75 million over five years to UNICEF in India to help reduce child mortality to tackle social exclusion in health and education services. Under this partnership, UNICEF has signed a memorandum of understanding with the Indian Institute of Dalit Studies. This will increase understanding of how to tackle the constraints and barriers that Dalits face in accessing services.

Maldives

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with President Gayoom on the matter of political reform in the Maldives. [74438]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not had discussions with President Gayoom of the Maldives on political reform. Our new High Commissioner in Colombo, also accredited to the Maldives, presented his credentials to the President on 22 May. The High Commissioner subsequently met with Government Ministers, members of the Maldivian Democratic Party and others for discussions. Additionally, there have been a number of recent meetings between officials and Maldivian Ministers in London and Malé. All of these discussions included the subject of political reform. I also refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave him today (UIN 74794).

Nepal

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support the Government have provided to the UN Human Rights monitoring mission in Nepal. [74179]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

The UK has provided substantial funding for the UN Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) operation in Nepal. This was the largest single project in the Global Conflict Prevention Pool's (GCPP) Nepal Strategy for 2005-06, from which we made a contribution of £610,000. We also provided a further £200,000 from the Global Opportunity Fund.

Particularly since the King's take-over of power in February 2005, human rights have been a major area of focus of our policy, which is reflected in the projects we have funded.

Using GCPP funds we have appointed a human rights adviser who works closely with OHCHR providing reports and analysis of human rights developments and recommendations to ensure due regard for human rights is mainstreamed into policy making in Nepal.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the Private Members' Bills on which his Department has adopted a policy of neutrality in each session since 2001-02; and if he will make a statement. [72103]

Hilary Benn: Since the 2001-02 parliamentary session, the International Development (Reporting and Transparency) Bill is the only Private Members' Bill related to international development that has reached its Second Reading (in January 2006). The Government support this Bill.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Broadband

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to expand the (a) roll-out and (b) take-up of broadband in rural areas. [71633]

Margaret Hodge: 99.8 per cent. of UK households can now access broadband. Broadband coverage in rural areas stands at 99.2 per cent. of households. Some households are, however, not able to receive broadband services, or only at very low speeds, due to local technicalities such as distance from a home to the local exchange or because of the poor quality of networks.

The broadband market is dynamic, where research and competition are stimulating rapid developments and innovative solutions to technical problems. There is a range of private and public sector funded pilot projects emerging across the UK aiming to identify solutions to further improve access to broadband services.

The DTI and DEFRA produced a CD-ROM "A New Way to Live, Work and Play" last year. It contains hundreds of stories and examples of how people obtained and gained benefits from broadband. The CD-ROM was sent to parish councils, rural community councils, regional development agencies, devolved Administrations, intermediary organisations and other interested parties. The material is also available via the DTI website. The Department also has regular contact with the regional development agencies and devolved Administrations to discus future broadband developments and the impact of initiatives to promote its take-up.

In addition, the DTI continues to explore broadband deployment in the UK and has initiated a debate and review of next generation access for broadband in the UK, through the Broadband Stakeholder Group, involving public and private sector stakeholders and including exploring technical solutions to the inhibitors of broadband access, such as line lengths.

The DTI is separately engaging organisations such as the Royal National Institute for the Deaf; Help the Aged, the Royal National Institute for the Blind and organisations such as Citizens on-line and the Alliance for Digital Inclusion and other industry organisations to develop options for disadvantaged people to access ICT and broadband.

"Connecting the UK: The Digital Strategy", launched in April 2005, is the Government's initial response to bridging the digital divide. It sets out a number of actions aimed at driving take-up and use of ICT, particularly among typically excluded groups.

The DTI is working in partnership with other Government Departments to assist delivery of their programmes including the DfES's e-Strategy 'Harnessing Technology: Transforming learning and children's services', the DCLG's Digital Challenge, to which the DTI has committed £250,000 for the prize fund, and the Cabinet Office's 'Transformational Government'.

The DTI is also working with stakeholders to develop and promote the support services, which enable access for those without their own equipment, or necessary IT skills such as UK On-line Centres. The Department is active in a European context in supporting the European Commission's i2010 initiative, including supporting the recent Commission communication on Bridging the Broadband Gap, which aims to promote the use of existing measures and initiatives to further broadband access within the European Union.

Cold Calling

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to combat cold calling by telephone to British citizens by foreign companies; and if he will make a statement. [73971]

Margaret Hodge: The Department introduced the Telephone Preference Service (TPS) scheme in 1999, under the Telecommunications (Data Protection and Privacy) Regulations, which were updated by the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations in 2003. The TPS scheme provides protection to UK consumers from cold calling by foreign companies if the calls are made on behalf of UK companies and the consumer has previously notified the caller that they do not wish to receive such calls or has been registered with the TPS for at least 28 days. Therefore, those making cold calls are legally required not to call a number that has registered on the TPS list. The Information Commissioner has responsibility for the enforcement of the TPS scheme and considers complaints about breaches. However, cold calls from non-UK companies marketing a service or product are not covered by the TPS scheme, as the companies and products have no link with the UK.

Company Closures

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for trade and Industry, how many firms in the UK have ceased trading in each year since 1997, broken down by region. [71353]

Margaret Hodge: Value added tax (VAT) de-registrations are the best official guide to the pattern of business closures. DTI data on VAT de-registrations in the UK from 1997 to 2004 are shown in the following table. For comparison, data on each year's VAT registrations and the ratio of de-registrations to registrations are also shown.

Source:
Business Start-ups and Closures: VAT Registrations and De-registrations 1994-2004, Small Business Service, available at http://www.sbs.gov.uk/vats

In England and Wales together and the UK as a whole, the stock of VAT registered businesses has increased each year since 1997, as registrations have exceeded de-registrations throughout this period.

VAT registration and de-registration data do not capture all business activity. Businesses are unlikely to be registered if their turnover falls below the compulsory VAT threshold, which has risen in each year since 1997. Similarly, businesses that de-register will not necessarily have closed. Only 1.8 million out of 4.3 million businesses (42 per cent.) were registered for VAT at the start of 2004.

Barclays Bank provides estimates of the total number of business closures each quarter in England and Wales, based on closures of business bank accounts. Barclays estimate that there were 321,500 business closures in England and Wales in 2004. However, Barclays does not publish a regional breakdown of closures.

Competition Authorities

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which of the competition authorities is responsible for monitoring (a) regulatory compliance of companies involved in the food supply chain and (b) fair trade between suppliers and retailers. [72822]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 22 May 2006]: The Office of Fair Trading (OFT) is responsible for monitoring compliance with the Supermarket Code of Practice which seeks to put transactions between supermarkets and their direct suppliers on a clearer and more predictable basis. The Competition Commission is responsible for the undertakings that form the basis of the code.

Any evidence of alleged anti-competitive practices it should be sent to the OFT.

Computer Sciences Corporation

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what discussions (a) he and (b) his officials have had with (i) the Computer Sciences Corporation and (ii) trade unions on a support package for those affected by redundancies; [72143]

(2) what discussions (a) he and (b) his officials have had with the Computer Sciences Corporation (CSC) on the implications of the announcement to cut 1,200 jobs for the agreement reached between CSC and Amicus in August 2005. [72144]

Margaret Hodge: There have been no discussions between Ministers or officials and either Computer Sciences Corporation (CSC) or the trade unions in respect of a support package for those potentially affected by the announced redundancies. There have also been no discussions on the implications of the announcement on the agreement CSC reached with Amicus in 2005.

However, we do know that CSC notified the Insolvency Service of its intention to make some of its employees redundant, as all companies planning to lay off 20 or more people from any one site are legally required to do under the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992.

Under the Employment Rights Act 1996, the DTI is permitted to offer redundancy support packages for employees of companies that become insolvent. In this particular case CSC has not become insolvent and we are therefore not able to offer financial support to those affected. Support is offered to individuals through the Jobcentre Plus network to help those individuals return to work.

I am also aware that CSC struck an agreement with Amicus, but the detail of this remains between the interested parties concerned.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions (a) he and (b) his officials have had with the Computer Sciences Corporation on the implications of the announcement to cut 1,200 UK jobs for (i) the UK economy and (ii) trends in the outsourcing of UK jobs in the computing industry. [72147]

Margaret Hodge: There have been no recent discussions between Ministers or officials with Computer Sciences Corporation (CSC). Prior to the UK announcements, officials were in touch with the company headquarters concerning the implications of their global announcement, including possible effects in the UK.

Clearly, I very much regret any job losses, and the impact this has on individuals and their families.

However, recent Labour Market Statistics data (May 2006) show that employment levels remain around record levels, with nearly 2.5 million more people in work then there were in 1979. The loss of jobs with the Computer Science Corporation needs to be seen in the context that every month there are approximately 200,000 people moving into, and out of, work.

The Office for National Statistics does not record the number of jobs outsourced. However in ICT-enabled jobs, which are among those more likely to be affected by outsourcing, employment has over the last four years grown by 8.8 per cent., nearly three times the national average of 3.2 per cent.

Globalisation is changing the shape of skills requirements in the UK workforce. The Department is working with e-skills UK as the lead UK body in addressing these skills challenges. Ministers and officials have supported the work to improve professionalism in IT led by the British Computer Society and other UK bodies. These and other initiatives aim to improve the competitiveness of the UK's skills as well as enhance the basis for lifelong learning and career development. The Department also continues to monitor information from the IT industry in the light of offshoring as an input to policy.

Consumer Protection

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the operation of the Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000; and what recent representations he has received about the operation of the Regulations. [72465]

Mr. McCartney: The Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 implement European Council Directive (97/7/EC) to increase consumer protection throughout the EU and give consumers confidence when buying at a distance. Distance selling is where there is no face-to-face contact between the supplier and consumer, such as by phone, mail order, via the internet or digital TV.

It lays down basic requirements to suppliers of goods and services on the information to be given to consumers before and after they buy, including deadlines for the delivery of goods or performance of services and protection against credit card fraud. The Regulations provide a seven day "cooling off period" during which the consumer can withdraw from the contract, this gives consumers an opportunity to examine the goods. Consumers who exercise their right to cancel must be refunded all money paid within 30 days.

Following representations from stakeholders, the Regulations were amended on 6 April 2005, making changes to the requirements to provide information and to cancellation periods for the supply of services.

Designated enforcers such as the Office of Fair Trading and Trading Standards Services have a duty to consider complaints about possible breaches of the Regulations. To ensure compliance enforcers may apply for a court injunction or accept undertakings from a supplier that they will comply.

The European Commission has begun a review of eight consumer directives known as the Consumer Acquis, which includes the Distance Selling Directive. The review of the Acquis aims to simplify and improve these eight directives. The Commission will review each Directive looking at how successful they are at protecting consumers and enhancing the internal market across the EU. My Department has consulted and continues to consult UK business and consumer stakeholders as part of this process.

Copyright, Designs and Patents Act (Section 107A)

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when section 107A of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988 will be implemented; when trading standards authorities will be provided with related funding; and if he will make a statement. [73430]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Effective implementation of this provision requires agreement with local authorities on how it will be funded and implemented. The Patent Office is working together with the Department for Communities and Local Government and the Local Authority Co-ordinators of Regulatory Services on a number of proposals to achieve this.

Digital Television (Yorkshire)

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people in (a) Beverley and Holderness and (b) Yorkshire and the Humber have switched to digital television; what percentage of the population this represents; and if he will make a statement. [73578]

Margaret Hodge: Ofcom collates and publishes information on the take-up of digital television as part of their "Communications Market: Nations and the Regions—English regions" report. Their latest report shows that by the end of 2005, 67 per cent. of all households in the Yorkshire and Humberside region had converted at least one television set in the house to digital TV via either satellite, cable or terrestrial. This is an increase of 10 per cent. since December 2004.

It is not possible to extrapolate how many people in Beverley and Holderness have switched to digital TV.

Domestic Fuel

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many households in England spent over 10 per cent. of their disposable income purchasing fuel for their homes (a) in 2003 and (b) in the last period for which figures are available. [74113]

Malcolm Wicks: The proportion of households in England that spent over 10 per cent. of their disposable income purchasing fuel for their homes was 5 per cent. in 2003-04 and was also 5 per cent. in 2004-05. There was no statistically significant change between 2003-04 and 2004-05.

Energy Policy

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library the evidence obtained from the public consultation run by his Department on energy policy from May 2002 to the publication of the Energy White Paper in March 2003, including the results of polling and focus group research. [73226]

Malcolm Wicks: A written statement by my right hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, West (Ms Hewitt) (the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry), and a summary of the White Paper were placed in the Libraries of the House in February 2003. Supporting analysis for the 2003 White Paper is available on the DTI website at:
www.dti.gov.uk/energy/policy-strategy/energy-white-paper/supporting-analysis/page21345.html

Environmental Technology Industries

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the potential for job creation from the environmental technology industries; and if he will make a statement. [73227]

Margaret Hodge: The Government's manifesto says that we will work with the environmental goods and services sector to promote new green technologies and industries. We are working with the Environmental Innovations Advisory Group to enable greater innovation in the environmental industries sector. This includes work on procurement, technology support, state aids, finance and regulation. We also work with the regional development agencies and the devolved Administrations to estimate the size of the sector, and we published data in 2004 showing that the sector already employed over 400,000 people.

EU Anti-dumping Legislation

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the European Commission on which additional sectors will be covered by future EU anti-dumping legislation. [70094]

Mr. McCartney: The European Commission website (europa.eu.int/comm/trade/issues/respectrules/anti_dumping/stats.htm) lists the following current anti-dumping investigations. EU member states were consulted when each of these investigations was initiated. In cases marked with an asterisk (*) provisional anti-dumping measures have, after consultation with member states, been imposed by means of a Commission regulation. Member states will be consulted on all cases when the Commission has completed its investigation on a proposal either to terminate the investigation or to impose definitive anti-dumping measures by means of a Council regulation.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the percentage of EU exports to Vietnam coming from (a) the UK, (b) Germany, (c) France and (d) Italy in 2005. [74335]

European Energy

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department has undertaken research on the extent to which other European Union countries (a) are self-sufficient in gas and oil production and (b) have nuclear power stations. [74317]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department's preferred approach when making international comparisons with other EU countries is to rely on data compiled by the International Energy Agency (the IEA) or the European Commission. The IEA conducts periodic reviews of member countries' energy policies, which are published in a variety of forms. A review of a member country's energy policies will typically include an analysis of supply, demand and energy mix including whether the country uses nuclear power to generate electricity.

Franchising

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps (a) to examine the contents of his Department's file originally referenced as FT851 and (b) to re-examine his Department's view that the two master franchiser companies in the UK of a foreign-based franchise-trading scheme were both exempt from the provisions of the Fair Trading Act 1973 Part XI and its amendments, including the Trading Schemes Act 1996. [72827]

Mr. McCartney: The matter has been reviewed and it remains the Department's view that it is possible for two identical but separate trading schemes, each with one master franchiser and a number of franchisees at the same level below that franchiser to operate in the UK in such a fashion as to be exempt from the provisions of the Fair Trading Act 1973 Part XI and its amendments, including the Trading Schemes Act 1996.

Furniture Industry

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice and support his Department has given to the furniture industry; and if he will make a statement. [73831]

Margaret Hodge: Since September 2003 UK First, the Furniture Industry Forum, has been supported by DTI with £1.75 million over 41.5 years, to introduce productivity and process improvements to the sector. Savings to date for companies in the sector have exceeded £2.5 million. We also supported the establishment of the Furniture Industry Strategy Group in 2003 to help the sector to address key areas affecting productivity and competitiveness. The Strategy Group has led to the establishment recently of the British Furniture Confederation which is working to promote the interests of the sector.

Grant Applications

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will put in place measures to ensure that where, during any grant application process, (a) a person and (b) a business discloses required technical innovation information to a UK Government official outside the Patent Office, prior to a related UK patent application, that patent cannot subsequently be invalidated on the grounds of public disclosure; and if he will make a statement. [74131]

Margaret Hodge: The sharing of technical information with UK Government officials does not constitute public disclosure.

UK Government officials have a duty to protect all confidential information they receive in the course of their duties. This responsibility extends to unprotected intellectual property disclosed during the process of applying for Government grants. Staff employed by non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) have the same duty of confidentiality.

In the case of external advisers, confidentiality agreements are in place to ensure there is no public disclosure.

No further measures are needed and I have no plans to make a statement.

Illegal Internet Traffic

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what guidance his Department has issued to internet service providers on their responsibilities for illegal traffic hosted on their networks. [72674]

Margaret Hodge: The Department works closely with internet service providers, both in a number of initiatives to deal with disruptive internet traffic such as spam, and to combat illegal content such as child abuse images.

In matters regarding internet content, the general law applies on-line as it does off-line. For example, the Obscene Publications Act 1959 applies to material published on the internet and the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 extended the laws on obscenity to cover material available on computer networks. Similarly laws relating to such subjects as sales of goods, copyright and libel, apply on-line as much as off-line.

The Department provides guidance to industry, including ISPs, on its website regarding the Electronic Commerce (EC Directive) Regulations 2002 (http://www.dti. gov.uk/sectors/ictpolicy/ecommsdirective/ecommsdirectiveguidance/page10142.html) which, under certain circumstances, exempt on-line service providers from liability for information they host until they are made aware of it, at which point they are required to act expeditiously to remove or disable access to it.

Illegal Shipments

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has undertaken investigations into recent illegal shipments of goods between Bangladesh and the UK. [74114]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

HM Revenue and Customs is responsible for investigating alleged illegal importation of goods into the UK, and they inform me that some 10,800 investigations have been mounted in connection with goods unlawfully shipped to the UK from Bangladesh since 2003.

Israel/UK Trade

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has (a) taken and (b) plans to take to increase trade between Israel and the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [72177]

Mr. McCartney: UK Trade & Investment (UKTI) provides a range of support services to British companies wishing to trade with or invest in Israel, through commercial teams based in both the UK and the British embassy in Tel Aviv.

UKTI support focuses, in particular, on business opportunities in high technology sectors, including Biotechnology, Healthcare, Aerospace, Information and Communication Technology, the Environmental Industries and Financial and Legal Services. Recent initiatives have included trade missions to Israel, inward missions by Israeli firms to trade fairs in the UK and promotional events aimed at encouraging Israeli companies to list in London.

Further information on business with Israel is available on the UKTI Portal at www.uktradeinvest.gov.uk

Miners' Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of the vibration white finger claims submitted by the 50 solicitors making the most claims on behalf of miners include a claim for services; and what percentage of the total claim was represented by services in each case. [73182]

Malcolm Wicks: The following table of the 50 solicitors who have submitted the most vibration white finger claims provides the number of claims for general damages and services submitted; the number settled by payment; the compensation paid for general damages and services; and the proportion of total compensation represented by services and general damages.

Noise-induced Hearing Loss

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 26 April 2006, Official Report, column 1125W, on noise-induced hearing loss (mining), how many of the agreements had fixed costs in excess of £1,000 per claim. [73187]

Malcolm Wicks: One agreement had fixed costs in excess of £1,000 per claim.

Npower Renewables

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what level of public funding the company Npower Renewables will receive in connection with the development and operation of the Rhyl Flats offshore wind farm. [73774]

Malcolm Wicks: Npower Renewables will receive a capital grant of £10 million towards the development of the Rhyl Flats offshore wind farm.

The Government have committed a total of £107 million in grant support towards the capital installation of 11 early offshore wind farm developments.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the company Npower Renewables have applied for public funding in respect of the development of the proposed Gwent y Mor offshore wind farm. [73775]

Malcolm Wicks: Npower Renewables have not made an application for public funding for the Gwent y Mor offshore wind farm.

Nuclear Safety

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research has been conducted by his Department into the threat posed to the stability of coastally-located licensed nuclear sites from (a) coastal erosion and (b) inundation due to sea level rise. [73605]

Malcolm Wicks: The DTI does not conduct research into the threat to coastally-located licensed sites from coastal erosion and inundation due to sea level rises.

Operators such as British Nuclear Group and British Energy are responsible for flood defences and coastal erosion at nuclear sites. Nearly all the sites are situated on the coast and rest behind sea defences, which are maintained to a very high standard. Reviews are made periodically to monitor long-term protection, and regional shoreline management plans have been developed on behalf of the coastal authorities.

Parcelforce

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the options for the long-term ownership structure of Parcelforce. [73590]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Government have made it clear that it will not privatise Royal Mail. Parcelforce is an operating division of Royal Mail (and there are no plans to privatise it).

Patent Applications

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many patent applications were made by (a) individuals and (b) small and medium sized enterprises in each of the last three years; and in how many of these cases an application had previously been made for Government grant support. [74130]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The number of UK patent applications filed by individuals in each of the last three years was 10,292 in 2003, 9,626 in 2004 and 8,624 in 2005. Patent law does not require applicants for patents, where they are not individuals, to disclose the size of their company, and so the Patent Office does not have data on the number of small and medium sized enterprises which applied. Moreover, information is not held centrally which would show in how many of these cases the patent applicants have also previously applied for Government grants. This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Pensioners (Internet Access)

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate his Department has made of the number of pensioners who (a) have and (b) do not have access to internet services in (i) England and (ii) Beverley and Holderness; and if he will make a statement. [73576]

Margaret Hodge: The Department does not collect information of this nature. However, the Office for National Statistics provides statistics regarding internet access broken down by region and age group on its website (http://www.statistics.gov.uk/).

Personal Debt

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Government are taking to reduce levels of personal debt; and if he will make a statement. [73348]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 25 May 2006]: Personal debt has risen substantially over the last 10 years, both in real terms and as a proportion of income. By the end of 2005 borrowing stood at approximately £1.3tn, or 151 per cent. of income. This compares to a real value of £530 billion in 1995, or 75 per cent. of income.

Despite these significant rises in the uptake of borrowing in the UK we do not believe that personal debt constitutes a major problem. The large majority of consumers continue to use credit in a productive and prudent way.

However, the Government recognise that for a small but significant number of individuals debt causes serious problems. Current estimates suggest that the number of individuals experiencing such debt problems stands at around 5 per cent. of the adult population.

In recognition of these problems we are doing much to help those with personal debt problems as outlined in the Government's 2004 "Tackling Over-indebtedness: Action Plan" and the subsequent 2005 Annual Report. DTI examples include the recently launched £45 million Face-to-Face Debt Advice Project, which will result in hundreds of new debt advisers, and the multi-million pound support given to the National Debtline phone service.

The DTI also recognizes that over-indebtedness is an issue that can only be resolved through the close co-operation of a number of different Government bodies, and actively supports programmes by other Departments including major financial education policies currently being implemented by the Financial Services Authority and Department for Education and Skills.

Furthermore, the DTI is committed to the continued monitoring of the over- indebtedness picture in the UK and will report again in early 2007 on the extent of the problem.

Post Office

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what capital assets have been transferred from public ownership to private companies under the post office franchise arrangements. [58248]

Barry Gardiner: Transfers of capital assets are operational matters for Post Office Ltd. and details are commercially confidential. However, I understand that the company's chief operating officer has written to the hon. Member about this and other matters he has raised about post office franchising arrangements, and that a meeting has also been arranged with him.

Private Copying Levy

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the merits of a private copying levy on blank recording media and devices; and if he will make a statement. [74933]

Jim Fitzpatrick: No assessment of the merits of private copying levies on blank recording media and devices has been made since the introduction of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act in 1988 in the UK. However, the European Commission has commissioned a study which will look at the whole body of copyright legislation in Europe and has indicated it will review levies in 2007. Currently, the Gowers Review of Intellectual Property is looking at the whole UK IP framework, and analysing a number of copyright issues, including private copying. The Review will report to Government in the autumn.

Royal Mail

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to change the rules which prevent the Royal Mail taking out a fully commercial loan from the private sector. [73592]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Changes to guidelines on the ability of public sector bodies to borrow from the private sector are a matter for the Treasury. The Treasury's policy on commercial lending is set out in DAO GEN1304 and can be found at: http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/meddia/698/21/6982130E-BCDC-D4B3-lC19D3292B571825.pdf

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether any of the operating profit made by the Royal Mail in the 2005-06 financial year will be returned to the Government. [73995]

Jim Fitzpatrick: None of Royal Mail's operating profit will be returned to the Government.

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the statement by Adam Crozier, chief executive of the Royal Mail, that he could meet the legal obligations for post office service provision with approximately 4,000 post office branches. [73996]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The minimum legal obligations for post office service provision are determined according to the universal service obligations set by the postal services regulator, Postcomm and are reflected in Royal Mail's licence. The Royal Mail chief executive's reference to a network of 4,000 post office branches reflects a hypothetical network geared solely towards fulfilling licence criteria for provision of mail services. However, the Government's track record shows that it has made a substantial investment in the post office network in recognition of the many more services it provides, for example access to cash and other Government services.

Sunday Trading

David Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he received on the Sunday Trading Act 1994 from (a) retailers and (b) others prior to 13 January. [72552]

Mr. McCartney: On 14 November the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced that he was asking officials to carry out a full cost benefit analysis of the scope for further liberalisation of Sunday trading. This led to representations from a range of stakeholders, including retailers.

David Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research his Department has (a) conducted and (b) plans to conduct on the likely impact of proposed changes to the Sunday Trading Act 1994 on shops of under 3,000 square feet. [72593]

Mr. McCartney: The DTI appointed Indepen Consulting Ltd. to produce an economic cost benefit analysis of easing the restrictions on Sunday shopping. We published Indepen's report on 5 May on the DTI website:

www.dti.gov.uk/consumers/buying-selling/Sunday%20Shopping

This includes analysis of the impact on small and large stores.

From 13 January to 14 April we asked for views and evidence on all aspects of extending Sunday shop opening hours. We are currently analysing the large number of responses we received. We intend to publish a summary of the responses on the DTI website within three months of the close of this consultation. Ministers and officials also met with a wide range of stakeholders, including representatives of small retailers, to discuss Sunday shopping.

In addition, on 8 February the DTI held a focus group for small retailers specifically exploring the impact of liberalising Sunday shopping. We intend to publish a report of this event on our website shortly.

Also, on 10 May the DTI held a stakeholder conference where Indepen presented their cost benefit analysis and participants were able to discuss the assumptions and findings. This was followed by optional forums on specific themes; one of the themes was the impact on the retail sector. We intend to publish a report of this event on our website shortly.

Should we decide to proceed with the review of the current legislation restricting Sunday shopping hours, we will formally consult.

UK Trade and Investment

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Government have any plans to give regional development agencies any greater control over UK Trade and Investment's remit in respect of inward investment. [73498]

Mr. McCartney: No. We have no plans to alter current arrangements involving UKTI's leadership of the UK inward investment network through the Committee on Overseas Promotion.

UK Trade Targets

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list his targets relevant to UK trade with (a) India, (b) China, (c) the EU and (d) the USA. [72081]

Mr. McCartney: In 2004, DTI's Five Year Programme set the framework to create the right conditions for business success, including when trading with other nation states. The relevant targets to UK trade with the countries listed that underpin this are:

1. PSA 3: To promote fair competitive markets by ensuring that the UK framework for competition and for consumer empowerment and support is at the level of the best by 2008, measuring the effectiveness of the regime through international comparisons, supported by a broader evidence base.

2. PSA 5: To ensure that the EU secures significant reductions in EU and world trade barriers by 2008 leading to improved opportunities for developing countries and a more competitive Europe. Joint with the Department for International Development (DfID).

3. PSA 8: To deliver by 2008 a measurable improvement in the business performance of UK Trade and Investment's international trade customers, with an emphasis on new to export firms; and maintain the UK as the prime location in the EU for foreign direct investment. Joint with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Union Recognition (Retail Industry)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number and percentage of relevant employees who are members of unions which are formally recognised by retailers. [72060]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Unfortunately the DTI does not hold this type of information.

VAT De-registration

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many VAT de-registrations there were in the retail sector in the county of Northumberland in each year since 1995. [71511]

Margaret Hodge: Information on VAT de-registrations in the retail sector in Northumberland for 1994 to 2004 (2005 figures are not yet available) is set out as follows:

Analysis showing the count of VAT de-registrations in Northumberland County SIC2003 Division 52-Retail, data taken as at May 2005

	Northumberland County
1995	130
1996	120
1997	110
1998	100
1999	105
2000	85
2001	95

Analysis showing the count of VAT de-registrations in Northumberland County SIC2003 Division 52-Retail, data taken as at May 2005

	Northumberland County
2002	105
2003	105
2004	100

Notes:
The figures presented here are at enterprise level and roughly equate to the number of independent retail shops. The data also differ slightly from those published by the Small Business Service (SBS) as adjustments for death lags have been applied only to the published data. Further information on business start ups and closures can be found in the National Statistics publication "VAT Registrations and De-registrations: Business Start-ups and Closures" available on the SBS website: www.sbs.gov.uk

Venezuelan Discounted Oil

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make a statement on the President of Venezuala's offer of subsidised oil for London; [73645]

(2) what account he has taken of the offer from the President of Venezuela to supply London with oil at a discount in the Government's review of energy policy; and if he will make a statement. [73648]

Malcolm Wicks: If Venezuela wishes to supply oil or oil products at discounted rates to the UK that is a commercial decision for Venezuela. But we are not presently aware of any firm commitment by the Government of Venezuela to do so. In the absence of this and any specific details I am unable to speculate on the potential implications for UK energy supplies.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Bullying/Harassment

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 43W, on harassment, what assessment she has made of the reasons for the change in (a) the number of complaints of bullying in the last year and (b) the percentage of complaints of bullying that have been upheld in the last year; what anti-bullying measures were in place in each of the last three years; and what new anti-bullying measures have been introduced following the increase in the number of upheld complaints of bullying in the last year. [65932]

Ms Harman: The information is as follows:

(a) In the last year 21 complaints of bullying were made.

(b) The percentage of those complaints that were upheld was 61 per cent.

(c) Over the last three years the Department for Constitutional Affairs has taken the following anti-bullying measures:

In 2002 the Department for Constitutional Affairs trained all staff in raising awareness of equality and diversity issues.

In 2003 the Department for Constitutional Affairs introduced a policy of zero tolerance of certain sorts of unacceptable behaviour, including bullying and all forms of discriminatory behaviour.

In 2004 Workplace Mediation was introduced across the Department. This offers an informal way to resolve disputes between people who work together, with the assistance of trained mediators.

Coroners' Inquests

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many inquests are open in each coroner's area in England. [70319]

Ms Harman: Data collected as part of coroners' regular annual statistical returns include the number of cases reported to coroners which have proceeded or will proceed to inquest, the number of inquests held, and the outcome of those inquests. Coroners are also asked to report the number of inquests outstanding at the end of the calendar year, but this figure might also include inquests not yet opened.

In order to ascertain the number of inquests currently open it would be necessary for every coroner to submit an extraordinary return, which would involve disproportionate cost.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1667W, on inquests, how many inquests in Oxfordshire are open; and how many of these were opened in each month from January 2000 to date. [70326]

Ms Harman: This information is not collected centrally and to obtain it would incur disproportionate cost.

Departmental Expenditure

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many staff from her Department attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event in London in 2005; and what the total cost was to her Department of their attendance. [73004]

Ms Harman: I refer the hon. Member to the letter to him by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. Copies of her letter have been placed in the Library.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what checks local electoral registration departments are required to make of individuals' (a) nationality and (b) eligibility to vote when they receive applications to go on the electoral roll from foreign nationals residing in the UK. [74084]

Bridget Prentice: Entitlement to vote in elections in the UK is based in large part on nationality but is not restricted only to those holding British citizenship. In recent years the addition of a "nationality" box in the registration form provides an opportunity for electoral registration officers (EROs), who would otherwise have no reason to know, to determine an individual's eligibility for inclusion on the basis of their stated nationality. Electoral registers are available for public inspection and anyone who believes that an ineligible person has been included may object and notify the ERO who may then make further inquiries as to the eligibility of that individual. The Electoral Administration Bill, currently under consideration, strengthens the objection process and creates a new offence of supplying false information of any kind to an ERO, or failing to supply information, in connection with registration.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Harper: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what her Department's policy is on local provision of magistrates courts. [74144]

Ms Harman: The Government are committed to provide through their Executive Agency, Her Majesty's Court Service (HMCS), a modern high quality court service to local communities. This includes mobile court services, and the use of alternative venues for court hearings.

Postal Voting

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) what estimate she has made of the number of postal votes that did not arrive at the home of the elector in each set of local elections in England since 2000; [70686]

(2) how many postal votes in each set of local elections in England since 2000 were cast fraudulently. [70690]

Bridget Prentice: The Government do not hold this information.

Estimating the number of postal votes that did not arrive at electors' addresses would require every elector with an undelivered postal vote to report this to their local authority, who would in turn have to report a figure to central Government. Estimating how many postal votes were cast fraudulently would require a full knowledge of the nature of every postal vote cast at an election, whether fraudulently or not.

The Government take election fraud seriously, and encourage anyone who did not receive their postal vote to report this to their local authority, and if they believe that a postal vote has been cast fraudulently they should report this to the police.

Separating Couples

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make early intervention and mediation mandatory for separating couples; and if she will make a statement. [74846]

Ms Harman: The Government believe that family mediation has significant advantages in resolving disputes, particularly in relation to children. The Government are taking forward a number of measures to give the strongest possible encouragement to mediation as an alternative to contested court proceedings. However, for mediation to be successful both parties have to enter into it freely and without constraint, and therefore the Government do not believe mediation should be made compulsory.

Under the provisions of the Children and Adoption Bill the courts will be able to direct people in disputes over contact with children to attend contact activities, which will provide a range of interventions including programmes, counselling and classes to facilitate contact and also meetings to receive information about mediation. The court will be able to direct people to the most appropriate intervention for the dispute concerned.

Special Advisers

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowances and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in her private office in each of the last five years. [69028]

Bridget Prentice: Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each payband. For information relating to the last financial year I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158-61WS. Information on special advisers for this financial year is currently being collected and will be published in the normal way when it is ready.

All official travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Travel and subsistence claims by special advisers are extremely rare. During 2005-06, one travel claim of £13 was made by a special adviser in respect of a taxi journey. Examining previous financial records for any similar claims would have to be done manually and this would incur disproportionate costs.

The Department for Constitutional Affairs has not paid any removal expenses to special advisers.

Victims Advocate

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether there are any plans to extend the Victims Advocate pilot schemes for murder and manslaughter cases to other types of cases. [73917]

Ms Harman: No. Decisions will be taken about the future of Victims' Advocates scheme when we have assessed the pilot schemes.

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the Victims Advocate pilot schemes for murder and manslaughter cases. [73981]

Ms Harman: The pilot schemes have only started recently so I cannot make an assessment of their effectiveness at this stage. The pilots will be independently evaluated.

Victims of Crime

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether (a) judges and (b) magistrates are required to meet victims of crime as part of their training process. [73974]

Ms Harman: There is no current requirement on either judges or magistrates to meet victims of crime as part of their training. However, they will be aware of local victim support schemes and local magistrates training often provides an opportunity to groups such as Victim Support, to give information and input as part of a general induction process.

Victims of crime must be informed of their option to submit a 'Victim Personal Statement' to be read by the judge/magistrates before sentencing. The statement focuses the Court's attention on the effect of the crime upon the victim. Given the number of judges and magistrates that there are nationally, it is quite likely that a number of them, or those personally known to them, have been victims of some form of crime at some point in time.

CABINET OFFICE

Cabinet Committees

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when a list of members of the Cabinet Committee on Post Offices will be deposited in the Library. [74561]

Hilary Armstrong: My right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, placed an updated list of Cabinet Committees, including their membership, in the Library on Thursday 25 May.

Committee on Standards in Public Life

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the expenditure was of the Committee on Standards in Public Life in each financial year since its creation; and what the Committee's budget is for (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08. [73933]

Hilary Armstrong: Resource expenditure incurred by the Committee on Standards in Public Life since its creation to 2005-06 and forward budget is shown in the table.

Merseyrail

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether Merseyrail is classed as a Category 2 responder under the Civil Contingencies Act 2004. [72943]

Edward Miliband: Merseyrail operates under Section 8 of the Railways Act 1993 and is therefore classed as a Category 2 responder under Part 1 of the Civil Contingencies Act 2004. A list of the types of organisations given Category 1 and 2 status can be found in Schedule 1 of the Civil Contingencies Act.

The roles and responsibilities of Category 1 and 2 responders are described in the Act's supporting guidance "Emergency Preparedness". Copies of this document are available in the Library.

Private Sector Fund Recipients

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if she will list the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from her Department in each of the last five years. [71785]

Sickness Absence

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many Cabinet Office staff have had (a) five or more, (b) four, (c) three and (d) two periods of sick leave of less than five days in each of the last three years. [73042]

Mr. McFadden: The information requested is shown in the table.

	5 or more absences lasting less than 5 days	4 absences lasting less than 5 days	3 absences lasting less than 5 days	2 absences lasting less than 5 days

2003	62	59	125	264

Cabinet Office is committed to managing sick absence effectively by making sure that managers proactively manage sickness absence and that they have the tools and training to do so.

Voluntary Sector

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether her responsibility for volunteering and voluntary organisations extends to the churches and other faith organisations. [73970]

Edward Miliband: My responsibilities for volunteering and voluntary sector organisations extend to all types of organisations in the Third Sector, including those associated with churches and other faith-based organisations. However, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government leads on general engagement with faith communities.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Advisers/Officials

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) special advisers and (b) full-time equivalent officials will be working for him; and what their tasks will be. [73884]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Members for Reading, East (Mr. Wilson) and for South Swindon (Anne Snelgrove) in the House on 17 May 2006, Official Report, columns 979-980.

As a Cabinet Minister, and in accordance with the terms of the Ministerial Code, I have two special advisers to assist me in the discharge of my official duties.

Black/Asian Employees

Keith Vaz: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in his press office. [74350]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Staffing arrangements to support me in my new role are still being finalised.

As an interim measure, I am being supported by press officers from the Department for Communities and Local Government.

Information on staff ethnicity is, in any case, collected only on a voluntary basis.

Dorneywood

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will list the guests he has entertained at Dorneywood since 1 January 2005. [73886]

(2) whom he last entertained officially at Dorneywood; and on what date. [73888]

The Deputy Prime Minister: This information is not collected centrally.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Heald: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Maidenhead (Mrs. May) of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1385W, on ministerial office/staff, in which Government building his private office is based while administrative support arrangements are being finalised. [75285]

The Deputy Prime Minister: My private office is based in an office at 26 Whitehall, as it has been since September 2002.

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. Harper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what official duties he carried out in 2006 in furtherance of his role to promote the interest of the North across Government; and whether he has retained this responsibility within Government since 4 May. [70026]

The Deputy Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister set out details of my new role and responsibilities in his answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 985W. It is a wide-ranging brief, focusing on improving the effectiveness of policy development across Government and carrying out international duties on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister. As part of this cross-cutting brief, I shall continue to champion the interests of the North in all aspects of the Government's work.

So far this year, I have visited a number of towns and cities in the North of England, to see for myself the progress that has been made since 1997 in regenerating our cities and making them places where people want to live and work. I am also very proud of the advances being made in growing the North's economy, improving its local environments and providing affordable and decent housing, for example through initiatives such as Housing Market Renewal Pathfinders and the Northern Way, which have demonstrated how the public, private and voluntary sectors can work together towards a common vision for creating sustainable communities. For instance, I continue to follow with interest the pilot projects being taken forward by the Northern Way, with funds from the £100 million Northern Way Growth Fund, to demonstrate how things can be done differently in the North to improve people's lives and how the £1.2 billion Housing Market Renewal Fund continues to turn around neighbourhoods which people were previously leaving, but where house prices have now doubled.

The Government and our partners have achieved a lot, but we are aware of the need to deliver even more, and to ensure we narrow the economic gap between north and south. We need to work across Government Departments to maximise the benefits of our policies. My new role will enable me to ensure that Cabinet Committees work even more effectively to deliver more integrated solutions across the full range of Government programmes and spending.

Ministerial Standards

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what role he has in overseeing the efficient development of Government policy on ensuring ministerial standards within Government are maintained and improved. [73887]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 985W, which sets out the responsibilities the Prime Minister has asked me to fulfil.

Official Engagements

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what domestic official engagements he will carry out in his new role. [69876]

The Deputy Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister set out the new responsibilities that he has asked me to undertake in his answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 985W. I shall carry out domestic engagements as appropriate to best enable me to fulfil this new role.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Academies (West Midlands)

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many academies there are in the West Midlands region; and how many are planned. [73916]

Jim Knight: There is one Academy open currently in the West Midlands: Walsall Academy in Walsall. There are two Academies currently being built: Grace Academy in Solihull and Sandwell Academy in Sandwell, both due to open in September this year. There are five Academies in the feasibility stage of development in Herefordshire, Sandwell, Coventry, Staffordshire and Solihull. Discussions are currently taking place for a further nine potential Academy projects in Birmingham and Dudley.

Adult Education

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the potential effects of his skills strategy on adult education in Liverpool. [74598]

Phil Hope: The Government's skills strategy is aimed at supporting low skilled adults to acquire basic skills and progress to level 2 and above, and ensuring employers have the skills they need to compete effectively. The strategy is vital to our continued economic success, and is supported by a funding strategy which gives clear priority to these areas.

Funding for colleges and other providers in Liverpool will be confirmed shortly, and will reflect these priorities for the funding of adult learning, as well as safeguarding funding for Personal and Community Development Learning. The Learning and Skills Council will continue to work closely with local colleges and other providers to review local provision, and to ensure that there continues to be a wide range of choice for learners in all areas.

Alcohol/Drugs

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken to educate young people on the adverse effects of (a) alcohol and (b) drugs. [74532]

Jim Knight: All maintained schools must provide drug education, including information about alcohol, as part of the National Curriculum. We recommend that schools deliver drug and alcohol education through the non-statutory framework for Personal, Social and Health Education (PSHE).

Since 2003, we have supported over 5,000 teachers in the PSHE certificate for teachers which supports standards in the teaching of drug and alcohol education. Over 2,000 teachers will be supported in 2006-07. We have also issued comprehensive guidance to schools on drugs including alcohol to help schools deliver more effective drug and alcohol education.

Together with the Home Office and the Department for Health, DfES is supporting the FRANK campaign which provides information, support and advice for young people on drugs and alcohol.

Asiatic Languages

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, columns 967-8W, on Asiatic languages, how many students have been awarded (a) GCSE and (b) A-level examination grades A to C in (i) Chinese, (ii) Arabic and (iii) Japanese since 1994. Children's Homes

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children's homes have (a) closed and (b) been de-registered by the Commission for Social Care Inspection in each of the last three years. [69337]

Mr. Dhanda: I understand from the Chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection that the number of children's homes de-registered for the last three years is as shown in the following table:

Inspection Year (1 April to 31 March)	Children's homes de-registered
2003-04	203
2005-06	284

De-registrations occur for a number of reasons, including: the voluntary closure of a home; enforced closure resulting from regulatory action; change of ownership; and change in the category of service provided. However, as details relating to the reason for de-registration are not recorded, the information requested on closures cannot be provided.

Departmental Bills (Amendments)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the occasions when an amendment has been moved by (a) a Labour backbencher, (b) an Opposition backbencher and (c) an Opposition front bench spokesman to a Bill sponsored by his Department that has been accepted by his Department during the current session; and if he will make a statement. [72120]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department for Education and Skills has sponsored the following Bills during the current session: the Children and Adoption Bill, the Childcare Bill, the Education and Inspections Bill, and the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Bill.

Information on amendments moved and accepted during the Committee and Report Stage on these Bills is published in the Official Report.

Education Spending

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent on education for pupils aged (a) five to 10, (b) 11 to 15 and (c) 16 years and over in (i) Cornwall and (ii) England in each year since 2002. [72791]

Jim Knight: The Department does not collect the information in the form requested. However, the following table gives a breakdown of the available information. The information for 2005-06 is not due to be collected until August 2006.

Educational Funding

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he expects schools in

Nottinghamshire to receive funding from the Building Schools for the Future programme. [74617]

Jim Knight: In February 2005, we informed Nottinghamshire that it has been allocated five Building Schools for the Future projects. The programme was prioritised on the educational and social needs of geographically coherent groupings of schools proposed by authorities. The following table gives details of when each of Nottinghamshire's groupings is currently expected to be invited to join the national programme. This timetable is subject to future public spending decisions.

Green Corns

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations he has received about the children's home operator Green Corns. [67825]

Mr. Dhanda: My predecessor met with six Members of Parliament from the West Midlands in June 2005 to discuss concerns raised by their constituents about specific proposals by Green Corns to develop children's homes in the West Midlands. In April 2006, my predecessor was contacted by my hon. Friend the Member for Wolverhampton, South-West (Rob Marris) and the Black Country Action Group about the issues raised by the development of children's homes, by providers such as Green Corns, and how these would be considered as part of the review of the Children's Homes National Minimum Standards.

Independent Children's Homes

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) planned and (b) unannounced inspections of independent children's homes took place in 2005. [69336]

Mr. Dhanda: I understand from the Chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) that the Commission does not collect the data requested by calendar year. However, CSCI carried out 1,273 announced and 1,302 unannounced inspections of independent children's homes (those run by the private and voluntary sectors) between 1 April 2004 and 31 March 2005; and 775 announced and 2,227 unannounced inspections of such homes between 1 April 2005 and 31 March 2006.

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent on information technology (IT) sourced from outside his Department in each of the last five years; who is responsible for such projects in his Department; and what IT (a) expertise and (b) qualifications they possess. [71795]

Phil Hope: The information as requested is not readily available centrally within the Department for Education and Skills. To respond fully would involve an extensive internal and external information collection exercise which would exceed the recommended disproportionate cost threshold.

However, to be helpful, I refer the hon. Member to the answers given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Children Young People and Families on 13 June 2005, Official Report, column 192W; and, 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1314W.

Merseyside Learning and Skills Council

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many redundancies he expects to take place as a consequence of the restructuring of the Merseyside Learning and Skills Council. [72831]

Bill Rammell: The Learning and Skills Council is undertaking a major restructuring programme designed to streamline the organisation and give local offices a more strategic role. The changes are expected to require 1,100 fewer staff across the whole organisation, and the LSC is doing all it can to avoid making compulsory redundancies.

Mark Haysom, the chief executive of the Learning and Skills Council, has written to the hon. Member explaining the more detailed arrangements for Greater Merseyside and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Libraries.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 1 June 2006:

I write further to your question to the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on restructuring at Greater Merseyside LSC.

It is currently not possible to give a figure for the number of redundancies in any part of the LSC although it is our policy to ensure that we minimise the number of job losses wherever possible. In Merseyside, we are proposing that the 106 staff presently employed will reduce to 40. Although this initially looks like a significant reduction, job losses in real terms will be much smaller. As part of our restructuring, we are ensuring that where it makes sense to carry out an activity at 9 regional sites as opposed to 47 individual sites, we will do so. A number of the roles presently carried out at the Greater Merseyside LSC will transfer to the North West Regional Centre, but will continue to support the Greater Merseyside LSC. The North West Regional Centre will be established in Manchester, which is approximately 35 miles from the Greater Merseyside LSC.

At the same time, we are recruiting staff into new roles both in Greater Merseyside and in the North West Regional Centre, which will also have an impact on the final number of redundancies. In addition, we are seeking volunteers for early retirement or voluntary severance. We have had 47 applications for voluntary severance from staff at the Merseyside office and all have been supported.

I trust this answers your question.

Mr. Des Smith

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when his Department first employed Mr. Des Smith; and in what capacity. [74605]

Jim Knight: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 11 May 2006, Official Report, column 472W, which states the basis on which Mr. Smith was employed by the DfES. Mr. Smith was first employed through Veredus Resourcing on 5 January 2004 under contract to support the City Academy, Bristol.

Northern Way

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what role his Department plays in the delivery of the Northern Way initiative. [74041]

Phil Hope: The Department welcomes the priority attached to skills in the Northern Way's Business Plan. We are committed to working with the Northern Way partners to ensure each of the Regional Economic Strategies for Yorkshire and Humber, the North West and North East are mutually reinforcing and maximise the opportunities offered by cross-regional working.

The Northern Way is a pan-regional growth strategy being taken forward by the three northern Regional Development Agencies and their partners. Its work has potential to play an important role in delivering Government's Regional Economic Performance Public Service Agreement. The Department for Communities and Local Government co-ordinates Government involvement with the Northern Way. The Department for Education and Skills works with the Northern Way where its activities relate to our responsibilities.

Out-of-classroom education

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment his Department has made of the barriers to out-of classroom education; and if he will make a statement; [73566]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the effects of educational field courses on the academic performance of pupils. [73567]

Jim Knight: Over the past few years the Department has both commissioned and jointly funded external studies to examine the benefits and potential barriers to out-of-classroom learning. We have commissioned a survey of schools and local authorities to assess the extent of education outside the classroom, gather their views on the benefits and look at some of the barriers. The results will be published in the autumn.

The Department has recently supported an Ofsted survey to be published in the autumn of effective fieldwork practice in schools and how this supports pupils' motivation and learning in geography. As part of the emerging Education Outside the Classroom Manifesto, 10 working groups of leading organisations from different out-of-classroom learning sectors (including field studies) submitted reports to the Department on the benefits of out-of-classroom learning, barriers to participation and practical recommendations to remove those barriers.

Personalised Learning

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to encourage the take-up of (a) high speed mobile technology and (b) other wireless technology in the education system to enhance personalised learning for students; and if he will make a statement. [74751]

Phil Hope: The Department encourages the appropriate use of a range of technologies, including high-speed mobile and wireless, to enable improvements in personalised learning, teaching and institutional management.

First, within an institution, current guidance recommends the provision of wireless access for learners to complement wired technologies.

Secondly, to support access to resources from outside the institution, Becta (British Educational Communications and Technology Agency) will this year carry out an investigation into the potential future use of WiMAX wireless microwave access technologies, as well as continuing discussions with mobile operators about the use of future generation wireless telecommunications technologies.

Other examples of work under way to explore the impact of mobile and wireless technologies include:

a pilot of an ultra-mobile personal computer (UMPC) with schools in Nottingham and Southwell work with Traveller children in Leicestershire to enable pupils to access their work and keep in touch using laptops and GPRS general packet radio service connectivity use of mobile units (equipped with laptops and GPRS) in the East Midlands to deliver courses in locations without internet connections e.g. church halls use of mobile telephony in Essex to support the curriculum

a pilot in Babington Community College in Leicester to test the potential of using wireless technology with a group of students and their families in a deprived area the Learning2Go project in Wolverhampton, involving provision of handheld devices to 1,100 students and their teachers across a range of institutions.

Physical Education (North Somerset)

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of schoolchildren in North Somerset meet the Government's target of two hours physical education each week in schools. [73984]

Jim Knight: Data from the 2004/05 survey of schools in school sport partnerships found that 75 per cent. of five to 16-year-olds in North Somerset took part in at least two hours high quality PE and school sport each week. This means that schools in North Somerset have reached the Government's PSA public service agreement target a year early.

Science and Geography

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the contribution of science and geography field courses in schools to sustainable development goals. [73810]

Jim Knight: The Department works closely with organisations such as the Field Studies Council (FSC), National Association of Field Study Officers (NAFSO), Royal Geographical Society (with IBG), Geographical Association and Association for Science Education on field work in schools. As part of the emerging Education Outside the Classroom Manifesto, a group of leading organisations from the fieldwork sector (including those listed) submitted a report to the Department on the benefits of fieldwork including its contribution to sustainable development education.

Staff Vetting

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) EU foreign nationals and (b) non-EU foreign nationals have been employed in his Department in each of the last five years; what vetting procedures are in place for each category of staff; and whether those procedures include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. [68012]

Mr. Dhanda: The information could be obtained in the form requested only at disproportionate cost.

All potential new appointments to DfES are subject to nationality, passport, proof of identity and reference checks before contracts of employment are issued. The need for an individual to undergo national security vetting, and the level of vetting that is appropriate depends on the particular post they are going to fill. For example, all post holders in Private Office, Board Members' Offices and the Security Team are vetted. Individuals who need regular access to Downing street and/or the Palace of Westminster are also vetted as are people who require substantial access to Secret and Top Secret assets.

The Department also has robust contractual arrangements in place and assurances from our suppliers that their non-EC national staff working in our buildings have UK residency and entitlement to work.

University Placements (Medicine)

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students with four A grade A-Levels were refused places to study (a) medicine, (b) dentistry and (c) veterinary science in 2005; and if he will make a statement. [66612]

Bill Rammell: The information requested is not held centrally. Admissions policies and practices are entirely the responsibility of the higher education institutions. The Government have no remit over admissions although they do have a legitimate interest in ensuring that admissions are fair and command the confidence of prospective students, parents and teachers.

DEFENCE

Army Parachute Association

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what security measures are taken when (a) civilians join the Army Parachute Association (APA) and (b) civilian members of the APA use military airfields. [75078]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence does not undertake any security measures/vetting procedures in relation to civilians joining the Army Parachute Association (APA) as it is a private club and it would be inappropriate for us to do so.

When civilian members of the APA use military airfields they undergo security procedures similar to those which apply to any visitors entering any Ministry of Defence establishment. This includes booking in at the establishment's Guard House, and producing proof of identity and membership of the APA.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the Atomic Weapons Establishment (AWE) at Aldermaston spent on hydrodynamic testing in each of the last 20 years; and how many scientists were employed by AWE on hydrodynamic testing of nuclear weapons in each year. [73815]

Des Browne: Over the past 20 years, Atomic Weapons Establishment (AWE) has spent approximately £5 million per year on hydrodynamic testing. The number of scientists employed by AWE on hydrodynamic testing over the past 20 years has remained stable at around 70, although not all are employed exclusively on these activities.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on the Atomic Weapons Establishment's core punch facility at Aldermaston in each of the last 20 years. [73819]

Des Browne: Core punch diagnostics was established at Atomic Weapons Establishment (AWE) in the early 1980s. Annual maintenance costs are in the order of £1 million.

Ballykelly Army Base

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) process and (b) timescale will be for the disposal of the married quarters accommodation associated with the Ballykelly army base. [74423]

Mr. Watson: As announced by my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, on 10 May 2006, Shackleton Barracks Ballykelly is scheduled for closure as part of the on-going normalisation programme. It will then be passed to Defence Estates (DE)—the Ministry of Defence (MOD) agency responsible for the defence estate—for disposal no later than April 2008. This will include the associated married quarters.

DE will "trawl" the property under local arrangements. These allow for surplus MOD sites in Northern Ireland to be offered to Northern Ireland Government Departments before being offered to former owners or on the open market.

Biological Diversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Minister in his Department is responsible for monitoring his Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if he will make a statement. [73946]

Mr. Watson: As the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence, I have ministerial responsibility for the defence estate which includes the monitoring of the Department's obligations under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department plans to take to monitor the extent to which public bodies which report to him comply, from October, with their duty to conserve biodiversity in exercising their functions, under section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006. [74405]

Mr. Watson: This Department is currently establishing which public bodies reporting to the Secretary of State for Defence will be required to comply with section 40 of Natural Environment and Rural Communities (NERC) Act 2006. We will develop audit and review mechanisms to ensure compliance as appropriate.

Black/Asian Employees

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in his Department's press office. [74358]

Mr. Watson: Information on ethnicity is collected on a voluntary basis. As there are less than five individuals from black and Asian backgrounds currently employed in the Ministry of Defence press office, the precise number has been withheld to preserve the individuals' confidentiality. The total number of people employed in the Department's press office, as at 25 May, was 23. This excludes the Director of News, who has wider responsibilities than overseeing the press office.

Conscientious Objectors

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rights to be recognised as a conscientious objector an individual has (a) before and (b) during military service. [74092]

Mr. Watson: The right to establish a conscientious objection to military service has long been recognised by the armed forces. As conscription no longer exists, it is unlikely that anybody who has an existing conscientious objection to military service would join the armed forces. Those who develop a genuine conscientious objection during service in the armed forces are able to follow well established procedures for their service to be terminated, and this includes an independent appeals procedure in any case where an application has been rejected. Information about the procedures is readily available.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 6 April, reference: 02321/2006. [74445]

Mr. Watson: I replied to the hon. Member on 15 May.

Departmental Estate

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what land in Oxfordshire his Department has (a) owned, (b) leased, (c) rented and (d) otherwise had (i) use of and (ii) access to at any point since 1 January 2003. [73994]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence has owned, leased, rented or otherwise used, numerous separate areas of land and buildings in Oxfordshire since January 2003. Full details are not held centrally and to provide them in the format requested would incur disproportionate costs.

However the information that is available has been placed in the Library of the House.

Gurkhas

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to publish the review of the terms and conditions which apply to Gurkha pensioners. [74146]

Mr. Watson: I have assumed that the hon. Member is referring to the review of Gurkha Terms and Conditions of Service (GTACOS) announced on 11 January 2005, Official Report, column 9WS, and that he is asking about pensioners, rather than prisoners. I refer the hon. Member to the written statement that I made to the House on 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 92WS.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what distinction he makes between Ghurka soldiers who retired (a) pre-and (b) post-1997 in terms of their (i) status and (ii) pensions. [74147]

Mr. Watson: All Gurkha soldiers who retire after service in the British Army do so under Gurkha Terms and Conditions of Service, including the Gurkha Pension Scheme. These differ from those applying to the wider British Army

1 July 1997 was the date when the Gurkhas became a UK-based force, on completion of the withdrawal from their previous base in Hong Kong. Under the terms of the HM Forces Immigration Rule (HMFIR), announced on 30 September 2004, a Gurkha discharged from the British Army on or after that date may apply for indefinite leave to enter the UK, and settle and work here. This requires the applicant to have completed at least four years service as a Gurkha with the British Army and to have been discharged in Nepal on completion of his engagement. HMFIR is based on the general principle of granting settlement on the basis of close personal ties with the UK, which Gurkhas are assumed to have developed as members of a UK-based force. Those who retired before 1 July 1997 and are not covered by the new Rule, can still apply, but would be expected to demonstrate that such ties exist.

The review of Gurkha Terms and Conditions of Service announced by the then Secretary of State on 11 January 2006 is looking again at the pension arrangements for those who retired on or after 1 July 1997. Pension arrangements for those who retired before that date will not be affected.

Iraq

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the circumstances in which Private Adam Morris and Private Joseva Lewaicei died in Basra, Iraq. [74190]

Des Browne: Private Adam Morris and Private Joseva Lewaicei were killed in a suspected Improvised Explosive Device attack in Basra City, Iraq on Saturday 13 May 2006. The circumstances surrounding the incident are currently under investigation and it would be inappropriate to comment any further until our investigations are complete.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his oral answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1183, on Iraq, what assessment he has made of the potential for partition of Iraq as a direction of travel to achieve permanent peace and stability should the present levels of violence continue or worsen into the long term. [74272]

Des Browne: The Ministry of Defence is engaged in Iraq in support of the wider UK Government's objective of ensuring a stable, united and federal Iraq, providing effective, representative and inclusive Government for all its people. The UK Government's policy reflects our support of the current Iraqi Constitution.

Low-flying Aircraft

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flights in each tactical training area in the UK, excluding the central Wales tactical training area, flew at between 250 and 100 feet between 1993 and 2005. [73292]

Mr. Watson: The statistics for the amount of military low flying that takes place in the tactical training areas in the UK is held in hours rather than by number of flights. The information is only available from the 1999-2000 training year as previously the data were compiled in a different manner. The figures for the training year 2005-06 are given in the table and will be published in the next statement on the pattern of military low flying that will be available in the House in summer 2006.

The information following reflects the actual amount of operational low flying carried out between 100 and 250 feet within 14T and 20T, the tactical training areas in northern Scotland and the southern Scotland/ Anglo-Scottish border area. These statistics are consistent with the information provided annually in the statement on the pattern of military low flying.

Marine Salvage

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which (a) listed and (b) designated maritime war graves are scheduled under the Protection of Military Remains Act 1986. [74292]

Mr. Watson: To date a total of 17 wrecked vessels, in military service when lost, have been designated under the Protection of Military Remains Act 1986. Statutory Instruments 2002 No. 1761 and 2003 No. 405 refer. The places containing the remains of HMS A7, HMS Affray, HMS Bulwark, HMS Dasher, HMS Exmouth, HMS Formidable, HMS H5, HMS Hampshire, HMS Natal, HMS Royal Oak and HMS Vanguard are designated as controlled sites. The wrecks of HMS Gloucester, HMS Hood, HMS Prince of Wales, HMS Repulse, RFA Sir Galahad and the U-boat U-12 are designated as protected places.

On 31 May I announced that the wrecks of the fourteen British ships sunk at the Battle of Jutland would be designated as protected places under the Act. The designations will come into effect later this year. Further designations will be considered as part of a rolling programme.

Nepal

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy that no further support will be provided to the Army of Nepal until arrangements have been put in place to ensure democratic accountability. [74178]

Mr. Ingram: The new Government in Nepal has already made significant steps towards achieving democratic accountability over its defence and security forces. On 18 May 2006 the Nepalese House of Representatives unanimously passed an historic declaration which announced itself as the sovereign body of the country, and renamed His Majesty's Government of Nepal as "Government of Nepal" and the Royal Nepal Army as the "Nepal Army". The King is no longer the Supreme Commander-in-Chief of the Army and the Nepalese Army are now subordinated to democratic control. Her Majesty's Government's goal in Nepal remains to help the country emerge from the current conflict with a sustainable peace, based on the principles of a civilian, accountable and democratic Government, as the necessary foundation on which to build a viable economy and climate for recovery and reform. Although much remains to be done, this can best be achieved through engagement by the international community with the new democratic Government and with the new Nepal Army to help it adjust to the new accountability. Our current support to the Nepalese Army includes help towards the development of democratic control of the military, human rights training and explosive ordinance disposal training (in support of their post-conflict role).

Nuclear Accident Exercises

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what basis Z Berth nuclear accident exercises do not rehearse arrangements for a worst case scenario (category B6) within a 40 kilometre diameter affected area; and if he will make a statement. [73796]

Mr. Ingram: Rehearsals of Z Berth nuclear accident response plans are undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Radiation (Emergency Preparedness and Public Information) Regulations 2001. They are designed to test the detailed emergency plans for responding to a reasonably foreseeable radiation emergency. Any questions relating to the requirement to rehearse arrangements for events that are not reasonably foreseeable should be referred to the Health and Safety Executive, Nuclear Installations Inspectorate.

RAF (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the RAF's future requirement for (a) accommodation and (b) land in Northern Ireland. [74416]

Mr. Watson: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces' written ministerial statement of 10 May 2006, Official Report, columns 19-21WS, about the future requirement for defence estates in Northern Ireland which included the military site at Aldergrove.

Work leading up to this announcement took into account the overall need for accommodation and land which was one of the factors in the retention of the RAF Station at Aldergrove as the base for the Joint Helicopter Force (Northern Ireland).

Recruitment

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Army has reduced its recruiting targets. [73792]

Mr. Watson: Recruiting targets for the Army fluctuate in accordance with the Army's staffing planning assumptions for inflow and outflow of soldiers to trained strength across the Army. Targets for enlistments in the current financial year and previous two years are as follows:

Financial year	Enlistment target
2004-05	11,580
2006-07	12,610

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff in his Department have had (a) five or more, (b) four, (c) three and (d) two periods of sick leave of less than five days in each of the last three years. [73089]

Mr. Watson: The following tables show the number of non-industrial and industrial MOD staff who had (a) five or more, (b) four, (c) three and (d) two periods of sick leave of less than five days in 2003, 2004 and 2005.

Woodbury Common

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether military training on Woodbury Common, East Devon has ever involved use of (a) toxic and (b) allergenic substances being used for chemical experimentation by his Ministry. [73890]

Mr. Watson: Woodbury Common has been used for military training since Napoleonic times. Neither Commando Training Centre Royal Marines (CTCRM), who currently conduct training on the common, nor Defence Science and Technology Laboratory Porton Down have any record of using toxic or allergenic substances for chemical experimentation. CTCRM use CS canisters as part of routine training, but there is no risk associated with CS gas used in this way.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Animal Testing

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent research he has assessed on animal testing and carcinogenicity. [74003]

Joan Ryan: Since humans can be exposed to low levels of chemicals in their diet, or in their environment, over a significant proportion of their lifespan, studies to evaluate lifetime exposure are conducted in animals to ascertain the potential for the chemical to cause cancer. The objective of carcinogenicity studies is to identify the potential of test materials to cause tumours in animals and to assess the relevant risk in humans. Carcinogenicity studies are time consuming and resource intensive and are only performed when potential or actual human exposure warrants the need for this information to be generated. Our implementation of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 ensures that this is the case, and that the studies that are undertaken avoid unnecessary animal use, do not cause unnecessary suffering and provide data of a sufficiently high quality to inform risk assessments and regulatory decisions.

We make every effort to keep abreast of developments in this and other areas relevant to the use of animals under the 1986 Act. For example, issues relating to the use of animals for carcinogenicity studies fall within the broader remit of the Inter-departmental Group on the 3Rs, which the Home Office leads and membership of which includes relevant United Kingdom regulators. We are informed of work on validation within Europe through the United Kingdom representative to the Scientific Advisory Committee to the European Centre for the Validation of Alternative Methods (ECVAM). In addition, our professional inspectorate maintains awareness of developments taking place within United Kingdom research laboratories, and of relevant publications.

In this latter context, People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) have recently published a report entitled "Creative Accounting" looking at carcinogenicity studies. We have referred the technical issues contained in the PETA report to the Committee on Carcinogenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COC) for scientific evaluation. We will consider any issues relevant to the implementation of the 1986 Act when we have received the Committee's advice.

Antisocial Behaviour

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department within what timescale he plans to roll out the facility across the country if the pilot in Southampton to provide a dedicated telephone line for reporting antisocial behaviour is successful. [72819]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 22 May 2006]: The 101 single non-emergency number service for community safety action, information and advice will be rolled out across England and Wales in a number of waves. The first wave will see the service launch in Hampshire (including Southampton) and four other areas in summer 2006. The service will be available across England and Wales by the end of 2008.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued to 10 to 17-year-olds since 1999 broken down by (a) age and (b) local authority area; how many have been breached in each case; and in what percentage of cases where a breach occurred a parenting order (i) had been and (ii) had not been applied; [71743]

(2) in how many antisocial behaviour orders issued to 10 to 17-year-olds since 1999 (a) a parenting order has also been applied and (b) no parenting order has been applied; [71744]

(3) how many custodial sentences have been imposed on 10 to 17-year-olds for breaching conditions of an antisocial behaviour order since 1999; [71745]

(4) how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued to 10 to 17-year-olds since 1999, broken down by (a) local authority and (b) offence; [72417]

(5) what the maximum length of time is for which the terms of an antisocial behaviour order can apply to a child under 18 years; [72280]

(6) how many under 18-year-olds have a criminal record as a result of breaches of the terms of an antisocial behaviour order. [72282]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 18 May 2006]: From commencement, 1 April 1999 to 31 May 2000, Antisocial Behaviour Order (ASBO) data were collected on aggregate numbers only by police force area. Tables A to H give the number of ASBOs issued to 10 to17-year-olds at all courts, as notified to the Home Office, from 1 June 2000 to 30 September 2005 (latest available), by individual age and the local authority area in which prohibitions have been imposed. Data collated centrally for statistical purposes do not identify the type of antisocial behaviour that led to the issuing of an ASBO.

ASBO breach data only cover breach proceedings where there has been a conviction. These data are available at criminal justice system area level only and are currently available from 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2003 for ASBOs issued since 1 June 2000. During this period, of the 392 persons aged 10 to 17 convicted for breaching their ASBO, on one or more occasions, 179 received a custodial sentence, of which 30 were for breach of ASBO alone. Within the same period and, as notified to the Home Office, no notification was received of the breach of an ASBO made at the same time as a parenting order.

The minimum duration of an ASBO is two years but there is no maximum period. It is for the court to decide the duration of the order depending on the severity of the anti social behaviour. The latest published figures up to September 2005 show that 62 per cent of anti social behaviour orders issued to young people aged 10 to 17 were for a period of less than three years. On 20 December 2005 we announced that we would put on a statutory footing the exisiting good practice guidance that agencies should conduct a one year review of ASBOs issued to children and young people, in order to ensure that they are receiving the help and support they need in order to avoid breaching the terms of the ASBOs.

In addition, it is always open to the defendant or the applicant authority to go back to the court to vary or discharge the ASBO if one or more of the terms is no longer needed or needs strengthening.

Copies of all the relevant tables have been placed in the Library.

Table A: The number of ASBOs issued to persons aged 10 years, as reported to the Home Office by all courts, where restrictions are imposed within local government authority areas, from 1 June 2000 to 30 September 2005—England and Wales

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been issued with an antisocial behaviour order in (a) the London borough of Bexley and (b) London since its inception. [73127]

Mr. McNulty: Data on antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) are available at criminal justice system area and local government authority (LGA) area level only. A table giving annual data on the number of ASBOs issued at all courts, as reported to the Home Office, up to 30 September 2005 (latest available), broken down by the LGA area in which restrictions are imposed is available on the Crime Reduction website at www.crimereduction.gov.uk.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued in (a) Coventry South and (b) the Midlands since 2002. [72304]

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how relevant requests made to the non-emergency 101 number will be passed on to services provided by local authorities. [60105]

Mr. McNulty: 101, the single non-emergency number will be delivered by local authorities and police working in partnership to handle calls and coordinate corresponding services. They will agree which partner is responsible for delivering which service. Requests for service will be passed to each partner accordingly in the most effective way using either existing information technology infrastructure and capability or through the provision of new solutions where necessary or appropriate.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many parenting orders have been breached since December 2004. [71832]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 18 May 2006]: Information notified to the Home Office Court Proceedings Database shows that 21 breach proceedings leading to conviction occurred for parenting orders during 2004, three of them in December.

Data for 2005 are not yet available.

Asylum Claims (Effect of Prison Sentence)

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether a prison sentence affects an individual's outstanding claim for asylum; and if he will make a statement. [73346]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 24 May 2006]: The Refugee Convention contains a number of exclusion provisions under which claimants will be refused asylum even if they have a fear of persecution in their own country.

Where an individual has committed a crime in the UK consideration will be given to the application of Article 33(2) of the Refugee Convention. This provides that an asylum seeker or recognised refugee may be expelled where there are reasonable grounds for regarding them as a danger to national security or who, having been convicted of a particularly serious crime, constitutes a danger to the community.

Section 72 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 provides an interpretation of Article 33(2) and defines the term "particularly serious crime" as one for which the person concerned has received a sentence of imprisonment of at least two years, or has been convicted of an offence specified by order of the Secretary of State, whatever the length of sentence imposed. It also contains a rebuttable presumption that such a person is a danger to the community.

A claimant would also be refused asylum where the crime committed is a crime against peace a war crime or a crime against humanity, or where it involves acts contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations.

Charitable Status

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the procedures for (a) applications for and (b) granting charitable status. [67219]

Edward Miliband: I have been asked to reply.

Ministers have no power to change the procedures for applications for, or granting of, charitable status. Those procedures are administrative matters for the Charity Commission as the independent registrar and regulator of charities.

Contracts (Voluntary Sector)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many contracts are let by his Department to voluntary sector organisations; how many of those are let on an annual basis; and how many of those had received finalised contracts for 2006-07 by 31 March. [63206]

Mr. Byrne: Funding for voluntary and community sector (VCS) organisations may come from various parts of the Home Office itself or from money which the Home Office has provided for other bodies to buy services on its behalf.

The Department is, however, moving towards multi-year funding relationships with the VCS. The recently announced strategic grants to representative parts of the VCS now cover a three to five-year period and involve over £5 million. Our grant funding of the charities Crime Concern and Crimestoppers now also provides three-year strategic partnership agreements which total nearly £5.3 million over three years. The recent National Offender Management Service programme of grant funding for VCS organisations totalling nearly £900,000 provided up to three-year grants where they were requested. Of the grants awarded six organisations received them for three years, five for two years and two for one year. The provision of drug treatments by Drug Action Team partnerships is funded through the Home Office and we have issued guidance to them advocating a minimum period of two years for contracts and preferably longer.

Correspondence

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Minister for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate of 31 January 2006 on behalf of Jeffrey Tichaendepi Zungunde (Home Office reference Z10635301). [72828]

Mr. Byrne: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood on 22 May 2006.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter of 18 April from the hon. Member for Walsall, North about a constituent, reference M9535/6. [73122]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 23 May 2006]: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 25 May 2006.

Criminal Justice Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what amendments have been made to the Criminal Justice Act 2003; for what purposes; and when. [70084]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I am arranging for the information requested to be placed in the Library.

Criminal Records Bureau

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many applications for compensation were received by the Criminal Records Bureau in each year since the office was set up; and how many were successful; [72369]

(2) what the value is of compensation paid by the Criminal Records Bureau due to maladministration in each year since it was set up. [72370]

Joan Ryan: The CRB operates a Redress Scheme which was implemented in September 2002. The following table provides a breakdown of the number of claims made, the number of awards made for maladministration and the sum of redress awarded in each year to December 2005.

The total number of awards made represent some 0.017 per cent. of the total number of disclosures issued during the same period.

	Number of disclosures issued	Number of claims	Number of awards	Total redress paid (£)
2002	927,163	366	293	31,970
2003	2,158,149	533	310	87,913
2004	2,082,728	415	331	68,981
2005	2,690,009	513	417	111,995

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases the Criminal Records Bureau has dealt with since its inception; how many errors have been made in identification in that period; and if he will make a statement. [73502]

Joan Ryan: The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) has issued 8.9 million Disclosures since its launch in March 2002 to 31 March 2006. In that time, there have been 2,273 occasions where Disclosure applicant details were matched by the CRB to a person with the same or very similar details who has a criminal record and, where the details had been challenged by the applicant, their dispute was subsequently upheld.

These cases are clearly regrettable, but represent a very small proportion of cases—0.025 per cent. of the total number of Disclosures issued. The CRB is acutely aware of the human consequences of making an incorrect matching decision and does not do so lightly.

However, the CRB must err on the side of caution when an individual has the same or very similar personal details to those of someone who has a criminal record. This is because it is better to be safe than run the risk of letting an inappropriate person through.

When a Disclosure is disputed it is resolved by asking the applicant to have their fingerprints taken at a local police station to help either confirm or overturn the original matching decision.

The CRB will always apologise if the original matching decision is later found to be incorrect. In the event of a dispute the CRB notifies the prospective employer who would be aware of the CRB's Code of Practice that asks them not to take any precipitative action and defer any employment decision until the dispute is resolved. When a Disclosure is disputed the CRB will inform all parties that this is the case, including the employer. Where the information contained in the Disclosure is found not to relate to the applicant, a fresh Disclosure will be issued free of charge to both the applicant and the Registered Body. 90 per cent. of disputes are resolved within 21 days.

A public consultation exercise was conducted in October 2003 about making greater use of fingerprinting at an earlier stage in the application process and to aid the matching and decision-making procedures. The overwhelming response was not in favour of such a measure.

It is worth noting that under the previous police checking arrangements, individuals were not able to see the criminal records information disclosed about them. The information would have been passed only to the prospective employer and not to the job applicant and the prospective employer would have had no obligation to pass on the contents of the information to the individual.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals in Wales have received an incorrect assessment from the Criminal Records Bureau since 1997. [73730]

Joan Ryan: The information sought by the hon. Member is not available. The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) is unable to provide information on Disclosure applications based on geographical areas.

In order to identify how many applicants reside in Wales and received an incorrect assessment, the CRB would need to perform a manual trawl, at disproportionate cost, of each application to ascertain whether the postcode falls within Wales. Furthermore, this may not provide a conclusive figure as applicants may live on the borders of England and Wales.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) leases and (ii) leased in (A) 1979, (B) 1983, (C) 1987, (D) 1992 and (E) 1997 in (1) the Southend, West constituency, (2) Essex, (3) Hertfordshire and (4) the Metropolitan Police area of London. [72099]

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the responsibilities which his Department has lost since 1997; what the (a) date and (b) destination Department was in each case; what responsibilities the Department has taken on since 1997; and what the (i) date and (ii) source Department was in each case. [71134]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 23 May 2006]: Ministerial responsibilities are set out in the List of Ministerial Responsibilities, which is updated regularly. A revised version will be published shortly. Copies of previous versions are available in the Library.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff from his Department attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event in London in 2005; and what the total cost to his Department was of this attendance. [73018]

Mr. Byrne: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will write to the hon. Member with details of the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event. Copies of her letter will be placed in the Library.

Disability Access

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any buildings in his Department fall short of disability access regulations. [73020]

Mr. Byrne: Building by building information on compliance with disabled access legislation is not held centrally. The Home Office has a large and varied estate comprising approximately 1,900 major sites and individual buildings. Some buildings inevitably are better suited than others for access by disabled people. The Home Office has carried out a significant amount of work in recent years to improve its facilities for those who are disabled. Policy is for all buildings to comply with all relevant legislation.

Dr. David Kelly

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which individual decided that Dr. Nicholas Hunt should be the pathologist chosen to investigate the death of Dr. David Kelly in July 2003. [73992]

Joan Ryan: The selection of the pathologist to undertake a post-mortem examination is made, by the coroner with jurisdiction, under the provisions of section 19 or s20 Coroners Act 1988. In cases of suspicious death, where there may be a prosecution, the coroner would consult the police (see Rule 6 Coroners Rules 1984) before making the selection. The death of Dr. Kelly took place within the jurisdiction of the Oxfordshire coroner and so the choice of Dr. Hunt would have been made by that coroner.

Drink Offences

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders were found guilty of (a) drunken and disorderly behaviour and (b) drunken and aggravated disorderly behaviour in (i) England and (ii) Tamworth constituency in each year since 1997. [71239]

Mr. Coaker: Data from the Court Proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of offenders convicted at all courts for offences relating to (a) drunken and disorderly behaviour and (b) drunken and aggravated disorderly behaviour in (i) England and (ii) Tamworth constituency in England, 1997 to 2004 are contained in the first table. It is not possible to separately identify Tamworth, as the data is not collected at this level of detail. Therefore, data for the Lichfield and Tamworth area have been provided instead.

Statistics for 2005 court proceedings will be available in the autumn of 2006.

Some drunkenness offences are now dealt with by penalty notice for disorder. The penalty notice for disorder scheme was brought into effect in all police forces in England and Wales during 2004. Under the scheme the police are able to issue persons believed to have committed specified minor offences with a fixed penalty notice. No admission of guilt is required and payment of the penalty discharges all liability to conviction of the offence. Data on the number of penalty notices for disorder issued in 2004 and 2005 (provisional data) for offences related to drunkenness are provided in the second table.

Drug Offences

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children aged under 18 years were arrested on suspicion of dealing drugs in (a) England, (b) each English region and (c) the Tees Valley in each year since 1997. [73650]

Mr. Coaker: Information requested is not collected centrally.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drug offences were recorded in (a) Devon, (b) Cornwall and (c) the south west region in 2005. [72796]

Mr. Coaker: The latest available information for small area crime data is for financial year 2004-05. The figures for drug offences are given in the following table.

Drug offences recorded in 2004-05

	Number of offences
Devon	3,220
Cornwall and Isles of Scilly	1,136
South west region	10,956

Notes:
1. Devon calculated by combining the three basic command units of north and east Devon, south and west Devon and Plymouth.
2. Cornwall is the basic command unit Cornwall and Isles of Scilly.

Europol

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 1036W, on Europol, what discussions he has had relating to the future of Europol. [73734]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 25 May 2006]: The Austrian presidency has initiated an EU-wide debate on Europol's future, most recently in the form of a Friends of the presidency group consisting of experts from the member States, the Commission and Europol.

In light of their discussions, the presidency has prepared an options paper which summarises the possible approaches that could be explored. The presidency intends agreeing council conclusions on the paper at the meeting of the Justice and Home Affairs Council on 1 and 2 June. These would provide a basis for taking the discussions further forward in the council working groups.

Foreign Prisoners (Release)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what correspondence he has received from prison governors on the release of foreign prisoners since 1999. [73671]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There is no record of any such correspondence.

Forensic Science

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last reviewed the code of practice for scene of crime officers. [49166]

Jean Ryan: The Home Office has not issued a code of practice for scene of crime officers and, as far as we are aware, there is no national code of practice as such. However, both the Forensic Science Service and the Association of Chief Police Officers have issued some good practice guidance for scenes of crime staff. This includes: The Scenes of Crime Handbook, the National Operational Standards for Scenes of Crime and a draft National Crime Scene Investigation Manual.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether evidence in reports for the Forensic Science Service is checked by outside agencies. [74608]

Joan Ryan: Evidence in reports prepared by the Forensic Science Service Ltd (FSS) is assessed externally to ensure that quality standards are met. The FSS is accredited to the ISO 17025 (2005) standard, which is an international testing standard for laboratories. This testing standard requires independent assessment of the FSS Quality Management System by an external body—in this case the United Kingdom Accreditation Service (UKAS). The UKAS assessment includes proficiency testing organised by other forensic provider networks within the UK, EU and UN, and covers the extent to which the FSS provides assurance that the results it provides meet the required quality standards. The FSS is also accredited to the wider ranging ISO 9001 standard that is assessed by the British Standards Institute (BSI).

Under disclosure rules, access to FSS files is available to the defence and the courts for scrutiny in any particular investigation. A proportion of cases in which the FSS has provided evidence for the prosecution are independently examined and checked by other forensic providers on behalf of the defence.

HM Young Offenders Institution Feltham

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what recent assessment he has made of the (a) management and (b) systems operation at HM Young Offenders Institution Feltham; and if he will make a statement; [73751]

(2) if he will make a statement on security arrangements at HM Young Offenders Institution Feltham; what action he has taken to improve security arrangements in the last month; and what investigations he has ordered into issues arising from an attempted escape; [73752]

(3) if he will make a statement on the role of Mr. Rod Eddington at HM Young Offenders Institution Feltham. [73763]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Management and related systems at Feltham are regularly reviewed by the Governor and area manager. The establishment continues to make significant progress, as described in the most recent HM Chief Inspector of Prisons' report following an inspection in May 2005.

The security arrangements at Feltham were fully assessed by the National Standards Audit unit in December 2005 in which Feltham scored 83 per cent. Feltham also conducts regular and frequent self-audits, the last being in March, which have confirmed the national markings. There is one current disciplinary investigation into a recent escape attempt but it would not be appropriate to comment further until this is complete.

A number of London prisons participated in a pilot organised by Business in the Community (BITC), an organisation that forges links between managers in the public and private sectors to enhance the skills and knowledge of participants. Mr. Rod Eddington was the chief executive of British Airways, selected by BITC to partner the Governor of Feltham as part of this initiative. Mr. Eddington visited the prison on two occasions, helped promote the positive aspects of the work of the prison and facilitated the use of BA facilities for a training event for Feltham managers. Mr. Eddington concluded his participation in January.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he (a) last visited and (b) intends next to visit HM Young Offenders Institution Feltham. [73750]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Home Secretary has yet to visit Feltham young offender institution. A visit to Feltham would be considered as part of a programme of visits across the prison estate by Home Office Ministers.

Immigration

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures are in place to enable employers to research the immigration status of foreign nationals applying for jobs; and if he will make a statement. [73336]

Mr. Byrne: Section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996 provides employers with a statutory defence from conviction if they check and record certain specified documents belonging to potential employees. To support employers to meet their responsibilities under section 8, detailed guidance is available in hard copy from the IND Employers' Helpline and electronically on the IND website. The Employers' Helpline offers a dedicated enquiry and information service on the prevention of illegal migrant working. The Home Office "Employing Migrant Workers" website provides employers with a step-by-step guide to the checks that they are advised to complete to ensure that a person is legally allowed to work in the UK. UKIS local enforcement offices can also provide employers with a presentation on preventing illegal working.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate he has made of the number of immigrants with tuberculosis who entered the United Kingdom at each point of entry in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [67428]

(2) how many people have been refused entry to the United Kingdom on the basis of (a) a positive test for tuberculosis and (b) other conditions with public health implications in each of the last five years. [67427]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office will shortly conduct a survey to provide more information about the extent to which immigration officers' decisions at points of entry, including refusal of entry, are based on the outcome of medical examinations covering all types of conditions. Between the introduction of pre-entry screening in autumn 2005 and 1 May 2006, nine cases of TB had been detected in approximately 12,000 visa applicants tested and entry clearance withheld until completion of treatment.

Indefinite Leave to Remain

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people living in Putney constituency applied for indefinite leave to remain in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [72749]

(2) how many people living in Putney constituency are awaiting a final decision on their application for indefinite leave to remain; how many people on average were awaiting a final decision in each of the previous five years; and if he will make a statement; [72750]

(3) how many people living in Putney constituency were issued a final decision, with no further right of appeal, on their application for indefinite leave to remain on average in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [72751]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 22 May 2006]: This information is not available on a constituency basis.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people living in the UK were issued a final decision, with no further rights of appeal, regarding their application for indefinite leave to remain, in each year from 2001 to 2005; and if he will make a statement; [72887]

(2) how many people living in the UK were awaiting a final decision regarding their application for indefinite leave to remain in each year from 2001 to 2005; and if he will make a statement; [72888]

(3) how many people living in the UK applied for indefinite leave to remain in each year from 2001 to 2005; and if he will make a statement; [72889]

(4) how many people living in the UK are awaiting a final decision regarding their application for indefinite leave to remain; and if he will make a statement. [72890]

Mr. Byrne: The Research, Development and Statistics Directorate (RDS) produce national statistics for on entry control, asylum, after entry control, grants of settlement, removals and appeals. These are available in the publication "Control of Immigration: Statistics, United Kingdom" published by The Stationery Office.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people living in each London borough were issued a final decision, with no further rights of appeal, regarding their application for indefinite leave to remain in each year between 2001 and 2005; and if he will make a statement; [72891]

(2) how many people living in each London borough are awaiting a final decision regarding their application for indefinite leave to remain; and if he will make a statement; [72892]

(3) how many people living in each London borough applied for indefinite leave to remain in each year from 2001 to 2005, broken down by London borough; and if he will make a statement; [72893]

(4) how many people living in each London borough were awaiting a final decision regarding their application for indefinite leave to remain on average in (a) 2001, (b) 2002, (c) 2003, (d) 2004 and (e) 2005; and if he will make a statement. [72900]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not collated on a local authority basis.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) many people living in Bexleyheath and Crayford constituency are awaiting a final decision on their application for indefinite leave to remain; how many people were awaiting a final decision in each of the previous five years; and if he will make a statement; [73452]

(2) how many people living in Bexleyheath and Crayford constituency were issued a final decision with no further right of appeal on their application for indefinite leave to remain in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [73453]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not collated on a constituency basis.

Iraq (Alleged Stolen Cultural Property)

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions there have been in connection with alleged stolen cultural property originating in Iraq in each police force area since January 2004; and if he will make a statement. [73431]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Dealing in Cultural Objects (Offences) Act 2003 came into effect on 30 December 2003. The Court Proceedings Database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform shows that in 2004 there were no prosecutions or convictions for dishonestly dealing in cultural objects in England and Wales. Statistics on court proceedings for 2005 will be available in the autumn of 2006.

The Iraq (United Nations Sanctions) Order 2003 came into force on 14 June 2003. The data held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform do not separately identify the offence under this order of dealing in cultural property originating in Iraq.

London Bombings

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his oral statement of 11 May 2006, Official Report, column 522, on the London bombings, when, and in what form, the Government plan to release details of the lessons learned exercise addressing aspects of the emergency response to the 7 July 2005 attacks. [72928]

Mr. McNulty: A document summarising progress in addressing the multi-agency lessons learned from the emergency response to the 7 July attacks is being compiled, and will be published before the summer recess. Copies will be placed in the Library.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much in respect of compensation orders made by magistrates courts remained unpaid to the end of 2005-06. [74133]

Ms Harman: I have been asked to reply.

Information on total financial penalty impositions and collections are provided by the 42 HMCS areas in England and Wales, but does not specifically and separately identify compensation from other impositions (fines and costs). The information could therefore be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

MI5 Files

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many MI5 files were extant at 31 December 2005; how many were categorised as (a) green, (b) amber and (c) red; and how many were (i) held on microfiche, (ii) held as hard copy and (iii) held on computer in each category. [68479]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The available information is that the Security Service held approximately 325,000 files in January 2005. The categorisations of these files were, on this date, as follows: 10 per cent. green, 46 per cent. amber and 44 per cent. red. 60,000 of these files were held on microfiche or microfilm, with the remaining paper based. No files at this date were held on computer.

National DNA Database

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many requests for information on the national DNA database his Department has received from other countries in each year since its inception. [73347]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 24 May 2006]: From the inception of the National DNA database in 1995 until comparatively recently, requests for international profiles were rare and therefore no data was collated by the NDNAD until 2004. Since 2004 here have been 519 such requests.

Pathologists

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the qualified pathologists his Department (a) uses and (b) used in July 2003; and for how long (i) each pathologist who is on the list has been on the list and (ii) each pathologist on the list in July 2003 had been on the list at that time. (73993)

Joan Ryan: The Home Office does not employ or instruct forensic pathologists but does maintain a register of forensic pathologists who have sufficient qualifications, training and experience to be instructed in cases of suspicious or violent death.

The following list shows those forensic pathologists who are on the Home Office Register (updated April 2006) and those that were on the register in July 2003. In each case the year in which they were added to the Register is also listed.

People Trafficking

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to enhance (a) inter-departmental co-operation and (b) a multi-agency approach involving non-governmental organisations in tackling the trafficking of people into the UK. [74837]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office chairs an inter-departmental ministerial group which meets quarterly and involves a number of Government Departments to discuss how the UK should tackle human trafficking.

We recently finished a public consultation on our strategy to combat trafficking in human beings. The objective of this consultation was to feed into the development of a National Action Plan. We received over 200 responses from non-governmental organisations (NGOs), religious organisations, law enforcement and other bodies.

We are exploring with the key NGOs and others the potential benefits and disadvantages of the approach set out in the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings. Regular meetings with NGO stakeholders are chaired jointly by the Home Office and the Solicitor-General. The first meeting of this new group took place on 15 February and focused on trafficking for sexual exploitation. The group recently met for the second time to discuss the trafficking of children, and will meet again in July. The Government will continue to listen carefully to NGO views to enhance the policies it puts in place to tackle human trafficking.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department has conducted on the number of men who come forward to assist police investigations after using the services of a prostitute where they suspect the prostitute to have been a victim of trafficking. [74838]

Mr. Coaker: No such research has been carried out by the Home Office.

Police

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much funding was awarded in police settlements (a) in England and Wales and (b) by each police authority in each year since 1997. [64065]

Mr. Byrne: The information has been placed in the Library.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been allocated to services to reduce to re-offending in each police authority area in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [71841]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Expenditure on reducing re-offending over 2001-02 to 2005-06 is estimated as:

2001-02	[1]795
2002-03	[2]391
2003-04	[1]870
2004-05	[1]918
2005-06	[3]1,034

[1] Based on expenditure from Home Office Departmental Report table 6.2 2004-05 for Correctional Services, Prisons Service, Probation Service and YJB.
[2] The 2002-03 figure has been inflated by an accounting adjustment.
[3] Based on planned expenditure per Home Office Departmental Report 2004-05

This is based on an assessment of the proportion of Correctional Services expenditure in England and Wales specifically aimed to reduce re-offending, though on a broader definition most of Correctional Services expenditure, much police expenditure and expenditure by other agencies working with offenders could have an impact on re-offending.

It is not possible to provide this information for each police authority area as funding to this level is not necessarily separately identified as being for reducing re-offending, and it is not all allocated on the basis of police authority areas.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there are in (a) Cornwall and (b) England per 100,000 of population. [72784]

Mr. McNulty: As at 31 March 2005, there were 212 police officers per 100,000 population in Devon and Cornwall police authority. In the same period, there were 267 police officers per 100,000 population in England and Wales Police forces.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police there were in (a) Devon and (b) Cornwall in March (i) 2002, (ii) 2003, (iii) 2004, (iv) 2005 and (v) 2006. [72795]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is set out in the table. Data on the deployment of police officers to basic command units are collected annually. Information for the position on 31 March 2006 will not be available until the end of July when it will be published on-line by our Research, Development and Statistics Directorate.

Number of police officers in Devon and Cornwall 2002 to 2005

2003	737	1,779

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) internal and (b) external meetings his officials have held on police force restructuring in the last 12 months; and how much staff time has been spent in each category of meeting. [68698]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 8 May 2006]: To answer this question would incur disproportionate costs.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were employed in (a) armed response units and (b) specialist firearms officers teams in the West Midlands regional police forces in each year since 1997. [72303]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 23 May 2006]: The number of authorised firearms officers within Staffordshire police, Warwickshire police, West Mercia constabulary and West Midlands police since 1996-97 are shown in the table. We do not hold information on whether these officers are in armed response units or specialist firearms officers' teams.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects a permanent chief constable to the Thames Valley police force to be appointed. [72259]

Mr. McNulty: The chief constable of Thames Valley police force is appointed by Thames Valley police authority. The current chief constable, Peter Neyroud, has been seconded to the National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA) since January 2006, as chief executive designate.

Subject to the passage of the Police and Justice Bill, the NPIA will be established on 1 April 2007. We expect the Bill to complete its parliamentary stages in October or November this year, and Thames Valley police authority are likely to advertise the post of chief constable after that date.

Pornography

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to reduce the transfer of obscene and pornographic material by mobile phone, with particular reference to the use of mobile phones by children. [62562]

Mr. Coaker: The distribution of obscene and pornographic material by mobile phone is already covered by current legislation including the Obscene Publications Act 1959 and the Communications Act 2003.

On 19 January 2004, following discussions with the Home Secretary's Task Force for Child Protection on the Internet, the mobile operators in the UK also published a self-regulatory Code of Practice for new forms of content on mobile phone services. Among other things, the code requires mobile providers: to undertake a process of age verification; to classify commercial content which they supply themselves as unsuitable for customers under 18 where appropriate; to moderate chat rooms made available to customers under 18, and to allow parents and carers to apply filters to the mobile operator's internet access services so that the internet content thus accessible is restricted. The Independent Mobile Classification body (IMCB), a subsidiary of the Independent Committee for the Supervision of Standards of Telephone Information Services (ICSTIS), fulfils the commitment in the Code to appoint an independent classification body to provide a framework for classifying commercial content that is unsuitable for customers under the age of 18.

Preventing Extremism

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to implement the proposal in his Department's Preventing Extremism Together report to subsidise the work of the Federation of Student Islamic Societies. [69271]

Meg Munn: I have been asked to reply.

The Preventing Extremism Together (PET) working groups convened last year suggested that further debate between young British Muslims and influential Muslim scholars and figures could help and encourage a stronger challenge to the message of extremism. As a result the Government have supported a campaign to help do this, led by grassroots British Muslim organisations such as Federation of Student Islamic Societies (FOSIS), Q News and Young Muslim Organisation (YMO) amongst other Muslim organisations. To date the initiative which was successfully launched in December 2005 has brought influential mainstream Muslims scholars and thinkers to speak to audiences of thousands of 18 to 30 year old British Muslims, a large percentage of whom have been young British Muslim women. To ensure that the message reaches a wider audience the organisers have also developed a website and are producing a range of other resources.

Prisoner Deportation

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account he has taken in exercising his discretion in implementing his policy on the deportation of foreign national convicted persons of (a) the Human Rights Act 1998 and (b) Article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights. [68888]

Mr. Byrne: Paragraph 364 of the Immigration Rules (HC 395) sets out how the Secretary of State should consider whether deportation is the right course on the merits, balancing the public interest against any compassionate circumstances and taking into account all relevant factors known to him. The factors listed in paragraph 364 include, but are not limited to, what would be relevant under the Human Rights Act.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary set out in his statement of 23 May that we are issuing new guidance to caseworkers which interprets the decision-making criteria much more tightly in the future.

Prisons

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of (a) the importance to prisoners of serving in open conditions close to their homes and (b) the impact of doing so on (i) the prospect of getting full-time employment upon release, (ii) successful reintegration into the community and (iii) re-offending rates. [55492]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There has been no formal evaluation of the impact on resettlement outcomes of open and resettlement regimes. Valuable work is undertaken with prisoners throughout their sentence and it might be misleading to ascribe resettlement outcomes only to the discharging prison. However, a new method of evaluation is now being tested within the National Offender Management Service which may facilitate a more sophisticated analysis of the impact of different regimes. If this methodology proves successful, the same approach will used, later this year, to evaluate the impact on re-offending of open and resettlement estate regimes, close to their homes; (b) or the impact of doing so on employment on release, successful resettlement or their re-offending rates.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons HMP Grendon and HMP Springhill receive lower funding than HMP Rampton and HMP Broadmoor. [65603]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have been asked to reply.

Rampton and Broadmoor are high security psychiatric hospitals, not prisons, and as such it is not appropriate to directly compare the funding they receive to that received by prisons such as HMP Grendon and HMP Springhill.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 7 February 2006, Official Report, column 1108W, on prisoners, how many (a) escapes and (b) unapproved absences there have been from English prisons since 7 February 2006, broken down by region. [73574]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Since 7 February 2006, there have been no escapes and 84 unapproved absences from English prisons as detailed in the following table.

Unapproved absences from English prisons from 7 February to 24 May 2006

Prison area	Number of unapproved absences

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 18 May 2006, Official Report, column 1212W, on Leyhill Open Prison, how many of those prisoners that escaped and have been subsequently detained have (a) been placed in a closed prison and (b) had their sentences extended as a result, broken down by original offence. [73597]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 25 May 2006]: On recapture, prisoners who absconded are invariably returned to closed conditions for re-categorisation and for any investigations into possible criminal activity to be carried out. Absconding is generally treated as a disciplinary offence which is dealt with by an independent adjudicator who may extend the prisoner's sentence within the boundaries of the sentence left to serve. Data on individual cases are not held centrally.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mobile phones have been found in each of the prisons in Wales in possession of serving criminals in each of the past five years. [73729]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Mobile telephone finds are not recorded separately on the central database that records incidents. Information on the number of finds has been obtained by examination of textual entries and is listed in the table.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of prisoners at (a) HM Prison Pentonville and (b) HM Prison Lewes were delayed leaving for court between 27 February and 3 March; and if he will make a statement. [74015]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information is as follows.

(a) There were 321 prisoners discharged to court from Her Majesty's Prison Pentonville between 27 February and 3 March. The discharge of 29 per cent. of these prisoners was delayed by 15 minutes or more.

(b) There were 43 prisoners discharged to court from Her Majesty's Prison Lewes between 27 February and 3 March. There were no delays.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what level of security clearance is required for (a) prison officers and (b) serving police officers; and if he will make a statement. [74022]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Prior to appointment as a prison officer, checks are conducted on an individual's identity, personal and employment references and criminal record history. Officers working in the High Security Estate are also subject to National Security Vetting at Counter Terrorist Check (CTC) level. In posts where prison officers have regular contact with juveniles a Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) check is also undertaken.

Before appointment as a police officer, criminal record checks are carried out on an applicant and their family. Employment and education history are checked and references obtained. Local intelligence checks, financial vetting and security vetting are also carried out. All police officers are CTC checked.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Category A prisoners had their status downgraded in the weeks prior to their trial in each year from 2000 to 2005. [74550]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information about numbers category A prisoners on remand who have their provisional categorisation downgraded in the weeks prior to their trial is not recorded centrally and is available only at disproportionate cost. Prisoners are categorised according to the risk they present, and prisoners' security category is assessed, decided, and kept under review in the light of all available information.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what targets his Department has set for the (a) maximum and (b) minimum time taken by prisoners to travel between courts and prisons. [74552]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There are no targets set for the maximum or minimum length of journey times between prisons and court. The contract sets agreed delivery times to court.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have escaped from prisons in England and Wales in each of the last 10 years, broken down by prison. [74563]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Data on escapes from prisons in England and Wales are given in the following table. Prisons that have had no escapes in the last 10 years have been excluded from the table. Data about escapes from prisons in Scotland and Northern Ireland are available from the Scottish Executive and Secretary of State for Northern Ireland respectively.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms exist to ensure that information provided to HM Prison Service headquarters by individual prison establishments is accurate; and if he will make a statement. [73764]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following protocols ensure that appropriate quality assurances are maintained: Prison Service Order 7100 explains how key Prison Service performance measures are defined; clear approval and validation mechanisms are in place in the networked system for data collation; and further assurances are obtained by independent internal audit, to ensure that the data provided and the methodology for collation is correct.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of night sanitation arrangements at (a) HP Prison Long Lartin and (b) HM Prison Albany; what action he plans to take to improve such facilities; and if he will make a statement. [73771]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Full reviews of sanitation arrangements at both establishments have been carried out recently. At Long Lartin the views of staff and prisoners were sought. A number of possible changes have been identified to improve access procedures as well as in-cell facilities. Revised access procedures are shortly to be the subject of a pilot trial. At Albany as a result of the review procedures were introduced to maximise the opportunity for prisoners to use the sanitation facilities.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms exist to ensure that governing governor staff at HM Prison establishments comply with the requirements of the Prevention of Corruption Acts of 1906 and 1916; what assessment he has made of the compliance with the provisions of that legislation in London establishments; and if he will make a statement. [73749]

Mr. Sutcliffe: A Professional Standards Strategy and the Professional Standards Unit were established in February 2003 to tackle staff corruption in the Prison Service. The strategy is contained in Prison Service Order 1215 "Professional Standards: Preventing and Handling Staff Wrongdoing." It sets out a policy framework and practical advice for staff, including governing governors, for obtaining, developing and dealing with information and intelligence on corrupt staff. It includes provision for confidential reporting and establishes the requirement to provide specialist professional standards managers at prison, area and national levels. The London Area Professional Standards Managers support and visit London establishments to monitor compliance with the strategy.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms are in place to ensure that personal relationships in the Prison Service do not affect the implementation of Prison Service (a) rules and (b) disciplinary investigations; what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of these mechanisms; when he last discussed the operation of these arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [63288]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The requirements on managers to ensure that personal relationships do not have detrimental impact on the implementation of prison rules and policies are set out in the staff handbook. In addition, senior managers commissioning disciplinary investigations are required to ensure that the investigating officer does not have a personal interest in the outcome of the investigation.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the policy of HM Prison Service regarding members of selection boards declaring interests in respect of particular candidates. [74009]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The policy of Her Majesty's Prison Service is that a panel member having a personal relationship with an applicant should declare this and withdraw from the panel.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the policy of HM Prison Service is on prison officers entering cells of inmates who are smokers; and if he will make a statement. [74010]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Each prison develops its no smoking policy in line with current health and safety advice and taking into account the type of establishment it is, its population and its particular needs. Local arrangements also require staff to be protected from the effects of passive smoking. The Department of Health has set up a joint committee to consider implementation in the Prison Service of proposed new legislation on smoking in the workplace.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of senior operational managers in HM Prison Service in the London area achieved an exceeded rating on their Staff Performance and Development record for the year 2005-06; and if he will make a statement. [74014]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Staff Performance and Development Records for 2005-06 are not due to be completed until 30 June 2006 and only two senior operational managers in London have so far had a marking recorded for 2005-06. One of these was an exceeded marking.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the incidence of bullying in the workplace in HM Prison Service; and if he will make a statement on the results derived from the most recent survey of Prison Service staff. [74025]

Mr. Sutcliffe: 19 per cent. of staff who responded to the 2005 Prison Service staff survey said they had experienced bullying in their current prison or headquarters group during the 12 months prior to the survey. The results have been discussed by the Prison Service Management Board and disseminated to staff. Local plans are being drawn up to take follow-up action.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what protocol governs the relationship between HM Prison Service area managers and the regional offender managers in the commissioning of services within the structure of the National Offender Management Service; and if he will make a statement. [74026]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The relationship between HM Prison Service area managers and regional offender managers is governed through the Service Level Agreements which came into force on 1 April 2006.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the phrase 'transitional facilities' is defined within the National Offender Management Service; and if he will make a statement on the aims and objectives of the project. [74031]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is recognised that [illegible] prisoners often have difficulty in finding accommodation and employment and consequently run a greater risk of re-offending. The National Offender Management Service is exploring the development of prototype transitional facilities to manage offenders back into the community and minimise the risk of re-offending. This is part of the estates strategy and consultation is planned on the proposals.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training is provided to governor grades at HM Prison Service establishments who authorise (a) release under the Criminal Justice Acts, (b) temporary release and (c) release on home detention curfew; and if he will make a statement. [74037]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The public sector Prison Service Training and Development Group provide courses on sentence calculation, which are attended by staff from all levels. They also provide a pocket guide to release on temporary licence, available in all establishments. In addition, there are a number of Prison Service Orders and Instructions available giving guidance to governors about release.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners convicted of either (a) theft and (b) possession of drugs have (i) attempted or (ii) committed suicide in UK prisons in each year since 1997. [18612]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There is no definition of what constitutes a 'suicide attempt' as it is very difficult to measure suicidal intent.

The number of apparent self-inflicted deaths involving prisoners in England and Wales sentenced for offences of theft and drugs possession (including with intent), 1997 to 2005, is shown in the following table.

Number of apparent self-inflicted deaths involving prisoners sentenced

	Theft	Drugs possession
1997	4	1
2002	5	1

Note:
NOMS employs the term 'self-inflicted death' rather than suicide. This includes all those deaths where it appears the person may have acted specifically to take his/her own life and not only those that receive a 'suicide' or 'open' verdict at inquest.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the quality of resettlement work undertaken at HM Prison Albany; and if he will make a statement. [73746]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Following the publication of a report by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons in April 2006, an action plan has been produced to address the recommendations contained in that report. These include the revision of the resettlement policy at Albany, based on a needs analysis, and the introduction of a case management model to ensure that prisoners' individual needs are adequately assessed and addressed.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to improve (a) reception and (b) first-night procedures at HM Prison Belmarsh; and if he will make a statement. [73768]

Mr. Sutcliffe: A new core day is being developed at Belmarsh prison, as part of a general improvement programme, which is expected to provide significant developments for prisoners in their first 12 hours in custody. This will include allowing prisoners more time out of cell and having the opportunity to see the doctor, the chaplaincy and listeners (Samaritans) and drug agencies. The purpose of the changes is to ensure that Belmarsh is able to effectively meet the immediate needs of the new prisoner.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the incidence of bullying at HM Prison Long Lartin; what action he is taking to reduce such bullying; and if he will make a statement. [73772]

Mr. Sutcliffe: To assist Long Lartin prison to target concerns raised by prisoners about violence in general, a violence reduction survey seeking prisoner views, including on bullying, has been completed. A report on the findings is expected to be available within the next month. The local violence reduction management team regularly meet to review areas of concern and consider improved management strategies including a review of bullying strategies.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the use of the segregation unit at HM Prison Long Lartin; and if he will make a statement. [73773]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The segregation unit at Long Lartin manages some of the most difficult prisoners in the high security estate. Prisoners will normally be located there while serving a punishment for disciplinary reasons, where an individual is being particularly disruptive, or for a prisoner's own protection. All prisoners located in the segregation unit are first subject to a health risk assessment.

The Long Lartin unit has seen a number of improvements over the past year, with a reduction of 30 per cent. in the number of prisoners located in the unit for a period greater than three months and the provision of safer cell facilities for those that may be at risk of self-harm.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the operation of the use of intermittent custody facilities at HM Prison Morton Hall; and if he will make a statement. [73769]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The operation of intermittent custody at Morton Hall prison is part of a wider exercise to examine extension across male and female low security prisons. The Government are currently reviewing the learning from the pilots of intermittent custody.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to improve support for vulnerable women at HM Prison Morton Hall. [73770]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There is adequate support in place for vulnerable women at Morton Hall, notably through the reception and induction procedure, health care assessments, the anti-bullying strategy and the suicide and self-harm prevention policy. A specific local strategy is now being developed.

Probation Service

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the evidential basis is for the Government's view that the introduction of contestability into the probation service will raise standards and reduce levels of re-offending. [44633]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The case for the introduction of contestability is strong. It is part of the Government's reform of public services and evidence from the National Audit Office supports our position. As demonstrated in the Partial Regulatory Impact Assessment, we expect performance to be driven up and resources to be released which can be reinvested in service provision.

Prolific and Priority Offender Strategy

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his Answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 1051W, on the Prolific and Priority Offender Strategy, what range of interventions are available to deal with youth offenders under the strategy in Peterborough; and if he will make a statement. [73240]

Mr. McNulty: Young offenders who are targeted under the Prevent and Deter strand of the Prolific and other Priority Offender programme will receive interventions based on an assessment of their needs and the risks related to the likelihood of future offending.

In Peterborough, these young people are reviewed on monthly basis by a multi-agency group which includes the Prolific and Priority Offender co-ordinator, the Youth Offending Service, the police, Connexions, Social Services, community safety staff and education and housing representatives. The group focuses on ensuring that the young people concerned do receive the appropriate interventions or support from the appropriate agencies to reduce the risk of further offending. The nature of the interventions received or support given will vary from case to case, so as to be responsive to the individual needs of the young person concerned.

Public Sector

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the Prime Minister's announcement on 15 May 2006, on public sector reform, what issues he has raised with the Prime Minister concerning this announcement. [73537]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 25 May 2006]: The Prime Minister wrote to the Home Secretary on the 15 May 2006 outlining his priorities for the Home Office and asked for a response in the form of an action plan by the end of June. The Home Secretary will respond to the Prime Minister's request within this timescale.

Rehabilitation of Offenders Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974; what recent representations he has received about the operation of this Act; and what amendments have been made to the Act. [73280]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Rehabilitation of Offenders Act provides that, following a set period of time dependent on sentence, an offender must be regarded as a "rehabilitated person" and have his conviction treated as spent. Generally, a spent conviction does not have to be disclosed in reply to questions about a person's past, and the existence of a spent conviction may not lawfully be used to prejudice someone in securing employment.

These rules do not apply to offenders who have been sentenced to a custodial period of more than 30 months, or to those applying for professions, occupations and licences covered by the Exceptions Order to the Act.

There have been no substantial amendments made to the Act since it came into force in 1974. However, in order to increase public safety, we have made regular additions to the list of professions and occupations which, due to their sensitive nature, are excepted from protection under the Act.

The legislation is intended to provide a balance between resettling ex-offenders and protecting the public and we receive regular correspondence recommending ways to best achieve that balance. In 2002 the Home Office produced a report entitled Breaking the Circle which proposed substantial reform of the ROA. It remains the case that the Government accept the majority of those proposals.

We are now considering what is necessary to improve the disclosure regime in the light of the Bichard Report which dealt with criminal records in the context of the protection of children and vulnerable adults.

Schools (Weapons Incidents)

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reported incidents there have been involving weapons at schools in England and Wales in each of the last five years, broken down by council area. [73586]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office collects recorded crime data on offences of possession of offensive weapons. Within that offence classification, there are two offences relating to possession of a blade or other offensive weapon on school premises. However, these offences cannot be separately identified from other possession of weapons offences.

Security Industry Authority

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many companies were visited by the Security Industry Authority (SIA) prior to the 20 March deadline as part of Operation Forewarn; how many of those have been revisited since 20 March; and how many enforcement personnel employed by the SIA have been employed in checking licences since 20 March. [63667]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 18 April 2006]: Operation Forewarn is one of a number of initiatives in a wider Security Industry Authority operation that will ensure senior employees of private security companies understand their legal obligations under the Private Security Industry Act 2001 (PSIA 2001).

Prior to 20 March, 84 companies were issued with warnings as part of this initiative.

Since 20 March the SIA has been carrying out a series of visits to customer sites as part of the next phase of compliance initiatives. At 7 April, 52 sites operated by 20 security companies were visited and security operatives checked. 55 SIA warning notices were issued to individuals who were found to be working unlawfully. Further details cannot be provided as this may prejudice ongoing and future operations involving compliance and investigation. An update will be provided and placed in the Library by the end of June.

The SIA has a regionally based compliance team of 33.

Sentencing Guidelines

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce a graduated sliding scale into sentencing guidelines for early guilty pleas in criminal cases; and if he will make a statement. [72644]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 22 May 2006]: The Criminal Justice Act 2003 established the independent Sentencing Guidelines Council to frame sentencing guidelines. It issued a guideline on "Reduction in Sentence for a Guilty Plea" in December 2004. A copy can be found at www.sentencing-guidelines.gov.uk.

Staff Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff surveys have been conducted in his Department in each of the last three years. [72879]

Mr. Byrne: The non-agency Home Office conducted staff surveys in 2004 and 2005. The Prison Service held three staff surveys, the Identification and Passport Service and the Criminal Records Bureau held one staff survey jointly and one staff survey each individually in the last three years.

Stolen Works of Art

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what recent discussions he has had with the police about the theft of works of art from private collections; [72292]

(2) what priority for policing he has made the recovery of stolen works of art; [72293]

(3) what resources he has made available to the police for the recovery of stolen works of art. [72295]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 22 May 2006]: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has not met with the police service to discuss the theft of works of art from private collections. However, I am aware that senior officers from a number of forces recently met with representatives of the art and antiques trade to discuss a range of issues.

The Government take all crime seriously and has a public service agreement target to reduce crime by 15 per cent. by 2007-08, and by more in high crime areas. This broader target gives police forces and authorities, together with communities and partners, flexibility to target the crimes that are of most pressing local concern.

Police authorities and chief constables are required to have regard to the national strategic priorities when drawing up their local policing plans. One of these is tackling serious and organised crime, which may include theft of works of art from private collections.

Both the National Criminal Intelligence Service and the National Crime Squad have in the past provided assistance to police forces in recovering art works and antiques. The Serious Organised Crime Agency will also play a role here.

US Extradition

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK citizens have been extradited from the UK to the US in each of the last five years; and on what charges in each case. [69360]

Joan Ryan: The Home Office does not keep a centralised record of the nationalities of those extradited from the UK. The Extradition Act 2003 contains a number of strong safeguards for all defendants—nationality itself does not determine an extradition request. Accordingly, while nationality may be noted in the records for some individual cases, complete figures of the type requested are not available.

Figures for all persons extradited from England and Wales to the US, for each of the last five complete calendar years, are given as follows. The figures do not include requests granted by Ministers in Scotland and Northern Ireland, who have devolved powers to grant requests.

The offences given in these figures do not represent detailed legal descriptions of all of the charges (which can be complex and multiple) within each request. Instead brief "headline" names are given for the principal offences in the requests concerned.

Vandalism (Cemeteries)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people aged (a) 0 to 17 and (b) 18 plus years were charged with criminal damage to cemeteries and subsequently convicted in each year since 1997. [73665]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is not possible to separately identify convictions for criminal damage to cemeteries, as this information is not collected at that level of detail from the Court Proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform.

It is also not possible to identify cases where people have been charged with criminal damage to cemeteries, as this information is not held centrally by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform.

Victim Support

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures are in place to ensure that victims of crime and their families are provided with all the necessary support throughout the criminal justice process. [73972]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The code of practice for victims of crime, introduced in April this year, gives victims a statutory right to receive information about their case at crucial points.

We fund the voluntary organisation Victim Support with £30 million annually to provide emotional support and practical information to victims and witnesses of crime. Last year Victim Support helped 1.3 million people and their witness service supported almost 400,000 witnesses, victims, families and friends.

In addition there are 165 Witness Care Units in England and Wales, ensuring that witnesses receive a tailor-made service, with their individual needs considered from the time a statement is first taken.

Weapons Offences

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were convicted of an offence involving (a) a knife and (b) a gun in (i) Gloucestershire and (ii) Stroud in each of the last five years; and how many of those convictions resulted in a prison sentence. [74499]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of people convicted of offences specifically relating to knives, firearms or offensive weapons in (i) Gloucestershire and (ii) Stroud, can be found in the table.

It is not possible to separately identify other offences which involved guns or knives as the circumstances of the offences are not collected.

Court statistics for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006.

Work Permits

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many work permit applications from foreign employees of farmers in Bassetlaw have been refused in each of the last five years. [73183]

Mr. Byrne: Only one work permit application (made in 2005) has been refused within the last five years. The data are from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for work permits for migrant workers his Department received from race horse trainers on behalf of trainee jockeys in the last year for which figures are available. [73184]

Mr. Byrne: Home Office records show that no work permit applications were submitted by race horse trainers in respect of trainee jockeys in the calendar year of 2005, the last full year for which figures are available.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

32 (The Royal) Squadron

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why 32 (The Royal) Squadron made two return flights to Brussels on 21 January 2003 on behalf of the Minister for Europe; and if he will make a statement. [66148]

Mr. Hoon: This Department has no record of my right hon. Friend the then Minister for Europe my right hon. Friend the Member for Rotherham (Mr. MacShane) using 32 (The Royal) Squadron on 21 January 2003.

Afghanistan

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the likely effect on the security situation in Helmand Province, Afghanistan of the increase in opium production in 2004-05. [74143]

Dr. Howells: According to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime figures, 2004-05 saw a 21 per cent. reduction in the level of opium poppy cultivation in Afghanistan. However, production decreased by only 2.4 per cent. as improved weather conditions and less disease resulted in higher yields per hectare. This was particularly the case in Helmand Province, where opium production increased despite a 10 per cent. fall in the area under cultivation.

It would be speculation to draw a link between an increase in opium production in 2004-05 and the security situation in Helmand. However, it is clear that the drugs trade flourishes in a lawless environment. It also contributes to the perpetuation of that environment and hinders the reconstruction process.

That is why the UK is supporting the Government of Afghanistan to implement its National Drug Control Strategy, including by co-ordinating international assistance designed to target the trafficker and the trade, strengthen and diversify legal rural livelihoods, build effective counter narcotics institutions and reduce domestic demand. More broadly, our wider military and civilian engagement in Helmand Province will help to create a more secure environment and develop Afghanistan's institutions and legitimate economy.

Arms Control

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress the Government are making in ensuring that the UN General Assembly mandates a start to negotiations for the international arms treaty in 2006; and if she will make a statement. [72388]

Margaret Beckett: We are working to build support for the launch of a UN based process to take forward the initiative for an international treaty on the arms trade. In 2005, support was secured from both the EU and the Commonwealth. In 2006 my hon. Friend the Minister for the Middle East made a speech making the case for a treaty while on a visit to the United Nations in Geneva. Speaking to the assembled diplomatic community, my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary also spoke about the UK's commitment to the arms trade treaty in a speech at Mansion House on April 26. In addition, we have conducted a global awareness raising and lobbying exercise through our network of diplomatic posts, and are in contact with a wide range of partners to secure the consensus needed for the start of a formal process to be agreed at the UN General Assembly later this year.

Ascension Island

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who owns the freeholds to the dwellings leased to Ascension Island workers. [71641]

Mr. Hoon: The Crown in right of Ascension holds the freeholds for all property on Ascension Island.

Various organisations on Ascension (the Users) have the physical use or occupation of various parcels of land by consent of the Crown.

The organisations provide residential property to workers on Ascension Island as required under the Workman's Protection (Ascension) Ordinance. The obligation under this legislation is to provide suitable living accommodation for the worker.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of the domestic dwellings on Ascension Island are (a) freehold and (b) leasehold properties. [71642]

Mr. Hoon: The Crown, in right of Ascension Island, holds the freehold of all domestic dwellings on Ascension Island. Ascension has a system of registered title to land; all land (including domestic dwellings) is registered as freehold land owned by the Crown; there are no registered leasehold interests on domestic dwellings on Ascension Island.

Ascension Island Government have entered into arrangements with four individuals to occupy properties on the basis that they are conducting business which is deemed to be essential to the functioning of the Island.

Biodiversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department plans to take to monitor the extent to which public bodies which report to her comply, from October, with their duty to conserve biodiversity in exercising their functions, under section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006. [74402]

Mr. Hoon: Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials will shortly be discussing with public bodies which report to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary their plans for complying with applicable requirements of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Minister in her Department is responsible for monitoring her Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if she will make a statement. [73944]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) monitors biological diversity on our UK estate as part of our Environmental Management Systems (EMS). We are currently integrating the EMS covering our two Whitehall buildings, which is certified to International Standards Organisation (ISO) 14001: 2004, with the EMS operating on our rural site at Hanslope Park in Buckinghamshire. We plan to extend ISO certification to Hanslope Park in the autumn.

To determine biological diversity at Hanslope Park we commissioned a survey of the site in 2004. This found no habitats or species that we have a statutory duty to conserve. An assessment of the FCO's two Whitehall buildings reached the same conclusion. We have therefore not nominated a Minister to be responsible for monitoring compliance under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000. We will keep this under review.

Black/Asian Employees

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in her Department's press office. [74367]

Mr. Hoon: Information on ethnicity is collected on a voluntary and in-confidence basis. Because of the small sample size we are unable to give the information requested on the grounds of confidentiality.

British Passport Holders

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people living permanently in (a) Nigeria and (b) Pakistan hold a UK passport. [72386]

Dr. Howells: We estimate that approximately 16,000 British nationals live permanently in Nigeria and hold a British passport and approximately 35,000 British nationals live permanently in Pakistan and hold a British passport. These figures are based on passport issues at our deputy high commission in Lagos and our high commission in Islamabad respectively.

Many Pakistanis are dual nationals who obtain a passport in the UK but live for a large part of the year in Pakistan. Consular officials estimate that there may be times when the actual figure of British passport holders residing in Pakistan could be as high as 80,000.

Burma

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of the extent of nuclear technology transfer from North Korea to Burma; and if he will make a statement. [68209]

Margaret Beckett: The Government are aware of media reports about the alleged transfer of nuclear technology from North Korea to Burma, but are not able to corroborate these reports.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations she has made to the Government of Burma about actions by the Burmese army against the Karen, Karenni and Shan peoples. [73801]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 893W, and the answer my right hon. Friend the Minister for Europe gave on 23 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1626-27W.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her assessment is of the prospects for the release of Burmese opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi; and if she will make a statement. [75138]

Margaret Beckett: The Government condemn the Burmese regime's decision to extend the house arrest of Aung San Suu Kyi. The Burmese Government have given no indication that she is likely to be released in the near future.

I issued a statement on 31 May expressing the Government's concern about the continued detention of Aung San Suu Kyi, calling for her immediate release and the release of all other prisoners of conscience in Burma.

The statement can be found on the Foreign and Commonwealth office website at: http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1007029391629&a=KArticle&aid=1148473573847.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have to engage with Burmese authorities following the recent visit to Burma of the UN Under Secretary General for Political Affairs. [75188]

Mr. McCartney: The Government have no plans to engage with the Burmese authorities regarding the visit of the UN Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs. The Government will continue to work with the UN and international partners to encourage the Burmese Government to bring about national reconciliation and the restoration of democracy.

Chile

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Government of Chile about the destruction of glaciers in the Andean Cordillera region as part of the Pascua Lama Project. [73509]

Mr. Hoon: We have not made any specific representations to the Chilean Government over the Pascua Lama Project, but we co-operate with the Chilean Government on a number of global and environmental issues including climate change. Any activity as part of the Pascua Lama Project that will have an impact on glaciers in the Andean Cordillera region will have to comply with Chile's environmental regulations. The Chilean Government takes this matter seriously.

China

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Chinese authorities in the case of Mr. Ching Cheong, a British national arrested under spying charges in China on 22 April 2005. [73396]

Mr. McCartney: We have pressed the Chinese authorities for information on the circumstances of Mr. Ching Cheong's detention, in demarches in October 2005 and March 2006 but received no reply. We will continue to seek information on his case. Although Mr. Ching holds a British National (overseas) passport he did not use this passport to enter China and Mr. Ching is deemed by the Chinese authorities to be a Chinese national.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Government of China on the limitation of information available on Google or Skype services in China; and if she will make a statement. [73683]

Mr. McCartney: It is for the companies involved to answer questions about their decision to co-operate with the Chinese Government on restrictions on the internet and on messages sent using their software. The government believes that freedom of information is essential to the development of a modern, stable and sustainable society. We are very concerned about the apparent hardening of Chinese policy on freedom of expression, including in relation to the Internet. We made this a theme of our bilateral human rights dialogue with the Chinese in June 2005 and the UK-led EU-China Human Rights Dialogue in October 2005. Freedom of expression will also be on the agenda for the next round of the dialogue in June. We continue to raise our concerns with the Chinese Government.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the recent report from the US Department of Defence entitled Annual Report to Congress: Military Power of the People's Republic of China. [75293]

Mr. McCartney: I have yet to assess the report in detail. However, the central themes of the report including China's need to increase transparency in its military planning and budgeting, to guard against the risks of miscalculation in the Taiwan Straits, and for China to build up its bilateral co-operation and engagement as a responsible stakeholder in the international community are ones which the Government broadly share.

Colombia

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment her Department has made of the human rights situation in Colombia. [73496]

Mr. Hoon: We keep the human rights situation in Colombia under constant review and frequently raise specific human rights cases with the relevant Colombian authorities. We remain concerned about the situation faced by civil society in Colombia. While the human rights situation clearly remains unacceptable, we feel that some progress has been made and it is important to recognise this. Figures for 2005 demonstrate that the number of murders, kidnappings, displacements and massacres generally decreased by comparison with those for 2004. Much more needs to be done, however. The UK's objective is to support both the Government of Colombia and civil society through projects that promote human rights, democracy and good governance.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations her Department has made to the Government of Colombia about the human rights situation in Colombia. [73497]

Mr. Hoon: We make frequent representations to the Colombian Government on human rights issues, through our embassy in Bogota, through the EU and other international groupings, and in contacts with visiting Colombian officials in London. We also regularly raise specific cases of concern with the Colombian Government. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, most recently did so with Foreign Minister Barco of Colombia on 12 May in the margins of the European Union-Latin America and Caribbean summit in Vienna. Human rights are at the heart of our policy towards Colombia. We consistently urge the Colombian Government to implement recommendations arising from successive annual reports of the United Nations Commissioner for Human Rights and have offered to help them to do so.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the prospects for peace in Colombia in the lead up to presidential elections. [74293]

Mr. Hoon: There are some encouraging signs. As indicated in the Ministerial Conclusions on Colombia of the Council of the European Union in October last year, we and other EU member states consider that the effective and transparent implementation of the Law on Justice and Peace, under which more than 30,000 paramilitaries in Colombia have now demobilised, will have a positive impact on peace-building in Colombia.

The Colombian Government are talking actively with the National Liberation Army, a left-wing illegal armed group. The last round of talks took place in Cuba last month, and further talks are scheduled for later this year. However, the Colombian Government's recent efforts to begin preliminary talks with the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, the countries biggest illegal armed group, have been consistently rejected by the guerrillas. We hope that, after the elections, the incoming government will continue actively to promote peace in Colombia. We will continue to support Colombia in its efforts to tackle the inter-connected problems arising from the internal armed conflict, the trade in illegal drugs and human rights abuses.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make representations to the Government of Colombia on the use of military justice for civilians caught up in violent episodes. [74294]

Mr. Hoon: We encourage the Colombian Government to ensure that the civilian justice system is used where appropriate, rather than the military justice system. Indeed, the UK is currently funding a project in support of the reform of the Colombian military justice system, aimed at making it more transparent and accountable. One of the additional objectives of the reforms is to ensure there is a very clear delineation between those cases where military justice procedures are applicable and those that should be dealt with by civilian courts. The subordination of the military justice system to the civil system is fundamental to this reform process. We will continue to work with the Colombian authorities to help improve this key area of governance.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when she expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 8 February 2006, transferred from the Department of Trade and Industry on 5 April. [74447]

Mr. McCartney: I replied to the hon. Member today.

Cuba

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the position of the UK Government will be at the EU review of the Common Position on Cuba in June 2006. [73515]

Mr. Hoon: The UK's policy towards Cuba, which is shared with our EU partners, is set out in the EU Common Position of 1996. The main objective of the Common Position is to encourage a peaceful transition to pluralist democracy in Cuba.

We are maintaining a close dialogue with our EU partners ahead of the review of the EU common position in June. As part of this process, we have been monitoring closely developments in the political and human rights situation in Cuba over the last year. Taking our findings into account, we will seek a consensus view with our EU partners in June.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what position the Government will take during discussion of the European Union's Common Position on Cuba in June; and if she will make a statement. [74736]

Mr. Hoon: The UK's policy towards Cuba, which is shared with our EU partners, is set out in the EU Common Position of 1996. The main objective of the Common Position is to encourage a peaceful transition to pluralist democracy in Cuba.

We are maintaining a close dialogue with our EU partners ahead of the review of the EU Common Position in June. As part of this process, we have been monitoring closely developments in the political and human rights situation in Cuba over the last year. Taking our findings into account, we will seek a consensus view with our EU partners in June.

Departmental Bills (Amendments)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list the occasions when an amendment has been moved by (a) a Labour Back Bencher, (b) an Opposition Back Bencher and (c) an Opposition Front Bench spokesman to a Bill sponsored by her Department that has been accepted by her Department during the 2005-06 Session; and if she will make a statement. [72117]

Margaret Beckett: There have been no such occasions. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has led on two Government Bills in the current Session. The European Union (Accessions) Bill passed through both Houses without amendment and has received Royal Assent. The European Union Bill has been read the first time in this House and has been printed, but has not made further progress.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make it her policy to furnish UK embassies and high commissions with furniture made in the UK; and if she will make a statement. [74637]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office aims to furnish embassies and high commissions with contemporary furniture taking account of health and safety, sustainability, the availability of supplies and local climatic factors. Decisions on procurement are taken in accordance with relevant UK and EU rules. Our missions furnish properties with furniture made in the UK when it represents best value for money to the British taxpayer.

East Timor

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support the United Kingdom is giving to East Timor following the deployment of UN troops as part of a peacekeeping mission. [75186]

Mr. McCartney: The East Timorese Government asked for the assistance of Australia, Portugal, Malaysia and New Zealand to dispatch defence and security forces under bilateral arrangements. We have, as a member of the UN Security Council, expressed our full support for these deployments and for the intention of the UN Secretary-General to send a special envoy to East Timor in order to facilitate the political dialogue.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the United Nations and member states about ensuring that Indonesian military officers named in the Report of East Timor's Commission for Reception, Truth and Reconciliation for either violations or command responsibility for troops accused of violations are brought to justice. [75206]

Mr. McCartney: We have had no discussions in the UN about the Report of East Timor's Commission for Reception, Truth and Reconciliation (CAVR). It is for the UN Secretary-General to decide whether to disseminate the report within the UN for discussion in the Security Council.

The UK has consistently expressed concern about impunity for those responsible for the human rights abuses in East Timor, particularly in 1999. We helped support the CAVR and the Special Panels processes, and we also helped fund the Commission of Experts' report.

We note the decision of the Government of East Timor to pursue these issues with Indonesia through their bilateral Commission for Truth and Friendship (CTF). We have encouraged both Governments to make the CTF a process that enjoys the confidence of the victims and the international community.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will publish the Government's response to the 'Report of East Timor's Commission for Reception, Truth and Reconciliation', officially submitted to her Department in February. [75263]

Mr. McCartney: We have made no formal response to the Report.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether she has made representations to the Government of East Timor about the alleged human rights violations recently committed by members of the police force in East Timor. [75264]

Mr. McCartney: Our ambassador in Dili speaks to the Government of East Timor on the subject of police behaviour on regular occasions, and we are involved in a training and development programme with the national police. We are encouraging the Government of East Timor to take all necessary steps to end the current violence with due respect for human rights and to restore a secure and stable environment.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the internal situation in East Timor; and if she will make a statement. [75268]

Mr. McCartney: We are concerned by the deterioration of the situation in East Timor and the resulting casualties and urge all concerned to bring an end to the violence and resolve the problems within the framework of the constitution and laws.

We welcome the quick response of the countries approached by the East Timorese Government to provide assistance and the wider support for this of the international community through the UN. We have, as a member of the UN Security Council, expressed our full support for deployment of international troops and for the decision of the UN Secretary-General to send a special envoy to East Timor in order to facilitate the political dialogue.

Our ambassador in Dili is liaising closely with the Government of East Timor and other embassies.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Government of Australia about the peacekeeping force being sent to East Timor. [75269]

Mr. McCartney: My right. hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no discussions with the Government of Australia about the international forces being deployed to East Timor, but our officials have been liaising closely with the Australians in Dili, Canberra and in the UN.

The East Timorese Government asked for assistance from Australia, Portugal, Malaysia and New Zealand to dispatch defence and security forces under bilateral arrangements. The UK has not been asked to provide troops but is fully supportive of these deployments and has played an active role in gaining the support of the UN Security Council.

Eid-Ul-Adha

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff from her Department attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event in London in 2005; and what the total cost was to her Department of their attendance. [73031]

Mr. Hoon: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will write to the hon. Member with details of the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event. Copies of her letter will be placed in the Library.

Engagements

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions in the last six months she or her predecessor has received a request to meet the ambassador or high commissioner of (a) Georgia, (b) Bulgaria, (c) Mozambique, (d) Kazakhstan and (e) Chile; and on how many occasions he or she acceded to such a request. [74505]

Mr. Hoon: I am not aware of any requests from the ambassadors or high commissioners of the named countries to meet my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, or her predecessor, in the last six months. However we maintain good relations with all the countries concerned and ambassadors and high commissioners routinely accompany senior level visitors from their countries on any ministerial calls in the UK.

Equatorial Guinea

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Government of Equatorial Guinea concerning the extradition request of UK citizen Simon Mann from Zimbabwe to that country. [74618]

Dr. Howells: We are aware that the Equatorial Guinean authorities are seeking Simon Mann's extradition from Zimbabwe. We are providing all appropriate consular assistance to Mr. Mann and his next of kin in the UK and will remain in contact with them as legal proceedings progress. At this stage, we have no plans to raise Mr. Mann's case with the Government of Equatorial Guinea.

Ethiopia/Eritrea

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the British Government have made to (a) the USA, (b) the EU, (c) the UN, (d) the African Union and (e) Nigeria as guarantors of the final and binding Eritrea-Ethiopia Boundary Commission ruling in 2001; what steps the British Government have taken directly in relation to the two countries to ensure that this agreement is implemented; what role the five guarantors have in such implementation; and what steps she is taking to reduce the tension arising as a result of the non-implementation of the agreement. [74621]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed the Ethiopia-Eritrea border dispute with the Chairperson of the African Union Commission, Alpha Konare, on 22 May. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, met the US Assistant Secretary of State on 16 May and Alpha Konare on 22 May and discussed a range of issues including the Ethiopia-Eritrea border dispute. Officials regularly discuss the question with EU colleagues at Africa working groups, and we play an active part in the preparation of relevant UN Security Council Resolutions; the most recent of which was agreed on 31 May. Nigeria is not a witness to the Algiers Agreement.

The witnesses to the Algiers Agreement met in New York in February, preparing the way for meetings of the Boundary Commission to resume in London.

Bilaterally we continue to urge both parties to implement the Boundary Commission's decision and to demarcate their common frontier. We continue to press Eritrea to lift its restrictions on the UN Mission to Ethiopia and Eritrea to allow it to fulfil its mandate. Alongside our commitment to the Boundary Commission decision, we urge on both sides and at the UN Security Council steps to normalise relations on either side of the border between Ethiopia and Eritrea.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Government of Ethiopia on the border dispute with Eritrea over Badme; what the Ethiopian Government's position was on the issue; when she expects demarcation to begin in and around Badme; and if she will make a statement. [74641]

Mr. McCartney: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, raised the Ethiopia-Eritrea border dispute with the new Ethiopian ambassador on 14 March and our ambassador in Addis Ababa discussed it with Prime Minister Meles on 20 May.

It is not for the Government to comment on the Ethiopian Government's position on this issue. The Ethiopian Government have engaged in two meetings of the Ethiopia Eritrea Boundary Commission in London to discuss border demarcation and further discussions are planned.

We continue to urge both parties to implement the Boundary Commission's decision and to demarcate their common frontier. In this context, we have taken an active role in the UN Security Council which confirmed, on 31 May (UN Security Council Resolution 1681), commitment to both resolution of the border demarcation and normalisation of relations between both countries on either side of the border.

EU External Relations

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the concept paper on EU external relations tabled by the Commission President. [74473]

Dr. Howells: The Commission President, Mr. Barroso, has yet to submit to the full Commission his paper on the EU's external relations. However, I understand that he plans to do this on 7 June 2006 and to then put the paper before the June European Council on 15-16 June 2006.

We will of course set out the Government's view of the paper in an explanatory memorandum to the House, once we have received it.

European Communication Policy

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her Department's timetable is for setting out its initial views on the Commission's White Paper on European Communication Policy published on 1 February 2006. [74312]

Mr. Hoon: The Government presented its broad approach to the European Commission's White Paper on European Communication Policy in its explanatory memorandum dated 10 March 2006. This memorandum summarises the most important points of the White Paper and sets out the Government's initial response. Officials have also given the Government's initial views on the White Paper at working level in Brussels. A formal response to the White Paper will be given by the Government before the end of the consultation period in July.

European Constitution

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what written submission the UK Government (a) has made and (b) plans to make in advance of discussions on a European Constitution at the Council of Ministers Meeting on 27th May. [74301]

Mr. Hoon: The Government did not produce any written submission in advance of the Klosterneuburg informal meeting, which took place on 27 and 28 May.

European Council

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether proposals were tabled by the British EU presidency for consideration by the European Council that council meetings should be held in public. [74313]

Mr. Hoon: A copy of the UK proposals on transparency was sent to the Chairman of the European Scrutiny Committee and the Chairman of the Select European Union Committee in November 2005. The Parliamentary Scrutiny Committees were informed of the agreed Council conclusions on increased transparency under cover of an explanatory memorandum in January 2006.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will publish prior to the June 2006 European Council her Department's evaluation of UK activities during the period of reflection, setting out the extent to which they have achieved the stated objectives of (a) generating broad debate and (b) building consensus around the future direction of the EU. [74205]

Mr. Hoon: The process of generating a broad debate and building consensus around the future direction of the EU is ongoing, including work in the House and more broadly in the public domain. The European Commission's recent report "A Citizen's Agenda for Europe" shows that the Commission and the EU are increasingly focused on the priorities that the UK has been promoting, namely delivering real benefits in areas that matter to citizens.

Internal evaluation of the cost effectiveness of all activities is continuing. We have no plans to publish a formal evaluation of UK activities beyond the response given to the presidency and General Secretariat of the Council in response to their questionnaire. A copy of the questionnaire and the UK response will be placed in the Library of the House on 15 June.

European Security and Defence Policy

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of the EU's External Relations budget line was spent on European Security and Defence Policy initiatives in the most recent period for which figures are available. [73846]

Mr. Hoon: In 2005, the most recent period for which complete figures are available, approximately 1 per cent. (€57 million) of the External Actions budget line was spent on activities carried out under European Security and Defence Policy (ESDP). In addition to ESDP, the External Actions budget line covered: aid, development assistance to non-EU countries, such as Balkan states and Latin America, reconstruction in Iraq, combating poverty-related diseases, the fight against drugs and regional programmes including reconstruction efforts in the tsunami hit areas.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether European Security and Defence Policy initiatives are financed exclusively from the Common Foreign and Security Policy budget line. [73931]

Mr. Hoon: Common costs, e.g. salary for Heads of Mission, office space and equipment, of civilian European Security and Defence Policy (ESDP) activities are paid for from the Common Foreign Security Policy budget which is part of the overall European Commission budget. Military ESDP initiatives are funded through the intergovernmental "ATHENA" mechanism, a facility set up to enable EU member states to contribute on a gross domestic product key towards common financing of certain aspects of EU operations with military and defence implications, such as incremental costs for, deployable or fixed, head quarters for EU-led operations, capital expenditure on communications equipment. Other costs for military ESDP operations "lie where they fall" on participating member states.

Extraordinary Rendition

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what investigations into flights to, from and over the UK in connection with the practice of extraordinary rendition the UK plans to make in response to the recommendations of the Council of Europe's interim assessment. [73979]

Dr. Howells: The Government have already carried out an extensive investigation into these allegations. The UK is fully co-operating with the ongoing inquiries by the Council of Europe.

Farsi Broadcasting

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking to encourage provision of television and radio broadcasts in Farsi by the BBC. [72745]

Mr. McCartney: I would refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary to the hon. Member for South-West Hertfordshire (Mr. Gauke) on 17 March 2006, Official Report, column 2531W.

The BBC World Service already provides a dedicated radio and online vernacular language service in Farsi. In October 2005, it announced its intention to also explore the development of a Farsi TV service as part of its 2010 strategy for a tri-media presence in its priority languages. BBC World Service is currently assessing the costs and benefits of launching such a service and will present its findings to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

France

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's objectives are for the forthcoming UK-French summit on 9 June. [74087]

Mr. Hoon: The Government's primary objective for the UK-France summit will be to further improve co-operation across a range of policy areas. These include energy, climate change, Africa/development, defence, foreign policy, Europe, immigration, counter-terrorism, education and consular co-operation. Agreements reached will be detailed in a summit communiqué.

We will also aim to produce a declaration on the defence relationship reaffirming the British and French Governments' commitment to work together, both bilaterally and within EU, NATO and UN frameworks. The focus here will be threats and challenges to our security and defence and to that of our allies and partners.

Education Ministers will also sign a renewed Memorandum of Understanding with a view to strengthening co-operation and making progress towards the Lisbon Agenda goals.

Future of the EU

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department has taken to ensure that the stocktaking exercise of the progress of national debates on the future of the EU to be prepared by the Austrian EU presidency at the June 2006 European Council takes account of the views of the British people. [74378]

Mr. Hoon: The Government believe that, at the June European Council and beyond, Europe needs to focus on the policies that deliver real benefits to its citizens, and on the economic reforms needed to make the EU competitive in today's global economy, rather than institutional issues.

The Commission's report on the Period of Reflection and Plan-D reflected the findings of a Eurobarometer poll of public opinion in the EU, including in the UK. It noted that:

"citizens tend to consider institutional questions abstract and complex and to show more interest in concrete policies affecting their daily life, such as employment, environment or energy".

Parliamentary and public debate will continue to feed into the policy process and be reflected in the UK position at the June European Council.

Gibraltar

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Minister for Europe's meeting with the chief Minister of Gibraltar on 22 May 2006 resulted in an agreement to publish the preamble to the Constitution prior to a referendum being held; and if she will make a statement. [74472]

Mr. Hoon: At our meeting on 22 May 2006, I agreed with the Chief Minister that we should take account of the concerns of the people of Gibraltar and publish the preamble to the Constitution prior to the referendum. Officials are now taking this forward. We will make a further announcement once the final text is settled.

Guinea

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the political situation in Guinea. [74842]

Mr. McCartney: The political and security situation in Guinea is worrying. Economic stagnation and uncertainty over the transition from the current regime leaves the potential for conflict. The withdrawal of opposition and civil society from national social dialogue is also of concern, and reduces the prospects of a constitutional transition of power. A ministerial reshuffle took place on 30 May and we will be monitoring the progress of this new team.

We are engaging with EU and the Economic Community of West African states partners to open a better dialogue with the political and military authorities in Guinea. At the International Contact Group Meeting on the Mano River Basin in Vienna on 23 May, the UK welcomed the regional focus on contingency planning and agreed the need for further EU engagement, including organising a seminar series in Guinea on democratic culture.

Honours

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list the individuals who are not UK citizens who were awarded honours in the period 1 January 2003 to 31 December 2003; and what (a) the date of announcement, (b) the honour concerned and (c) the reason for the award was in each case. [72027]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 18 May 2006]: As the information requested is lengthy, I will arrange for the information to be placed in the Library, and will send a copy directly to the hon. Member.

As honorary awards, to citizens where Her Majesty the Queen is not Head of State, are not formally announced, the date of the Queen's formal approval of such awards has been given.

India

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of staff employed at UK posts in India are from scheduled castes; and what recruitment policies are followed for local staff. [73905]

Dr. Howells: The Human Resources Section of our high commission in New Delhi does not hold records of the caste of locally employed staff at our diplomatic missions in India. They are working on the initial stages of a diversity agenda for local staff.

Our posts in India are equal opportunities employers and have a recruitment policy that is open to all, regardless of caste, ethnicity or religion.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make representations to the Indian Government on religious intolerance in parts of India. [74436]

Dr. Howells: Although the issue of religious intolerance in India is a matter for the Indian Government, we raise issues of attacks on or discrimination against religious minorities in response to legitimate UK public and parliamentary interest. Our high commission in New Delhi monitors such issues, with staff making regular calls on the appropriate Indian authorities.

Officials from our high commission in New Delhi last raised issues relating to religious minorities when they called on the National Commission for Minorities in April.

We will continue to insist that the right to freedom of religion is upheld, and that those responsible for attacks against people on grounds of their religion are brought to justice.

Iran

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received on whether Iran has acquired BM-25 missiles from North Korea; and if he will make a statement. [68204]

Margaret Beckett: The Government are aware of media reports about the transfer of BM-25 missiles from North Korea to Iran. However, the Government are not able to corroborate these reports.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of which countries supply arms to the Iranian armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [68205]

Margaret Beckett: Iran has traditionally sourced defence equipment from a broad range of supplier states. Iran's last return to the UN Register of Conventional Arms, in 1998, lists Russia as their main supplier of major conventional arms platforms and equipment. More recent estimates by a variety of independent researchers indicate that the great majority of Iranian arms imports continue to come from Russia. Policy on the export of such equipment from the United Kingdom to Iran was set out in the written answers from the then Foreign Secretary (Lord Hurd) to the then hon. Member for Finchley (Hartley Booth) on 1 March 1993, Official Report, column 8, and the then Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Tony Lloyd) to my hon. Friend the then Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Andy King) on 28 January 1998, Official Report, columns 273-74, respectively.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to his Russian counterparts regarding its proposed sale of Tor tactical surface-to-air missiles to Iran; and if he will make a statement. [68206]

Margaret Beckett: We are in close touch with Russia about Iran in our bilateral contacts, as part of the E3/EU and through the EU. We have made clear our concerns about their arms sales to Iran on a number of occasions. The Government take a close interest in all reports of arms transfers to and from countries whose current activities are of concern and monitors the situation closely.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of the degree of Iranian reliance on support from outside nations for the development and continuance of its nuclear programme; and if he will make a statement. [68207]

Margaret Beckett: Iran remains reliant on Russia to complete the civil nuclear power plant at Bushehr. Russia is also contracted to supply fuel for the reactor for 10 years, and has offered to continue supply for the lifetime of the reactor if the Iranians so choose.

Iran's gas-centrifuge technology, in particular the designs for P1 and P2 centrifuges, was acquired from an international proliferation supply network. Iran has yet to master the technology fully.

We do not believe Iran is capable of completing the research reactor moderated by heavy water under construction at Arak without external assistance, and are not aware of any country which is prepared to provide such assistance.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department have had with United States officials on the offer by Iran in May 2003 of direct talks with the United States. [70937]

Margaret Beckett: As the US announced at the time, between 2001 and 2003, officials from the US and Iran had occasional direct contact through what was known as the "Geneva process" to discuss practical matters regarding Afghanistan initially and then Iraq. Then as now, British Ministers and officials discussed Iran very frequently with their US counterparts.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes to the access of IAEA inspectors to nuclear sites in Iran have taken place since January; and if she will make a statement. [73718]

Margaret Beckett: As reported by the International Atomic Energy Agency to the Board of Governors on 27 February 2006, Iran informed the Agency on 6 February 2006 that it would suspend its voluntary implementation of the provisions of the Additional Protocol pending its ratification. It therefore requested that

"the Agency's inspector presence in the Islamic Republic of Iran for the verification activities should be scheduled only on the basis of the Safeguards Agreement" and that

"all the Agency's containment and surveillance measures which were in place beyond the normal Agency safeguards measures should be removed by mid February 2006."

The international community has made clear that it regards implementation of the provisions of the Additional Protocol by Iran as one of the confidence building measures deemed necessary by the Board for Iran to implement in order to resolve outstanding questions and build confidence in the exclusively peaceful nature of Iran's nuclear programme.

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on the proposal by Dr. El Baradei for the application of the North Korean model of security guarantees and energy aid to negotiations with Iran to encourage an end to enrichment and acceptance of tougher inspections. [73978]

Dr. Howells: When Javier Solana, High Representative for European Common Foreign and Security Policy, and the Foreign Ministers of UK, France, Germany, US, Russia and China, the E3 plus 3, met in New York on 8 May we agreed on a twin-track strategy, whereby we should present Iran with a choice, between the benefits that would flow from co-operating with the international community, or the isolation and costs that would follow an Iranian decision not to respond to the well-known requirements of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) Board of Governors and the UN Security Council. Officials, including at a meeting of E3 plus political directors in London on 25 May, have been making good progress on both elements of this strategy. These are complex, sensitive diplomatic negotiations and it would be inappropriate to comment on what might be included in either element.

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Iranian authorities concerning reported proposed legislation on dress codes based on religion. [74412]

Dr. Howells: On 14 May the Iranian Parliament approved the outline of a draft Bill on an Islamic dress code. The draft Bill set out regulations for the import of clothing and future Government support for Iranian clothing producers.

Canadian media reporting initially claimed that the draft Bill included a reference to religious minorities having to wear identifying signs or colours but there is no mention of this in the draft Bill. The Iranian embassy in London refuted these media reports and the Canadian newspaper in question issued an apology for its inaccurate reporting.

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the UK's policy is on the imposition of sanctions against Iran in the absence of agreement in the UN Security Council. [73977]

Dr. Howells: The United Nations Security Council has demonstrated its concern about Iran's nuclear ambitions in its Presidential Statement of 29 March, which was adopted by consensus. The full text of the statement is available on the UN website at:
http://www.un.org/News/Press/docs/2006/sc8679.doc.htm

We are currently discussing next steps with international partners. We hope that Iran will respond to the requirements of the international community, as set out in repeated International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) Board Resolutions and the Security Council's Presidential Statement. If it does not, then we anticipate that the Security Council will take the necessary action designed to ensure that Iran meets in full the requirements of the IAEA Board and the Security Council, including reinstating a full suspension of all enrichment related and reprocessing activities, and returns to a negotiation on long-term arrangements.

Iraq

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of civilians killed in (a) Al Basrah, (b) Al Muthanna, (c) Dhi Qar and (d) Maysan province in Iraq in (i) January, (ii) February, (iii) March and (iv) April 2006. [70935]

Margaret Beckett: The Iraqi Government are best placed to monitor the deaths of civilians inside Iraq. The Government do not collect figures for civilian casualties in Iraq. Both the Iraqi Ministries of Interior and Health published figures last year as part of an ongoing collection of statistics on Iraqi casualties. There is no 100 per cent. reliable and accurate assessment of casualties in Iraq in 2006. Estimates of the numbers of civilian deaths vary according to the methods used. We continue to press the Iraqi Government to release the most up-to-date figures.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the (a) independence and fairness of the judiciary and (b) the application of the rule of law in (i) Al Basrah, (ii) Al Muthanna, (iii) Dhi Qar and (iv) Maysan province in Iraq. [70938]

Margaret Beckett: The judiciary in Iraq is independent of government and there is an operational court system that includes a formal appeal process. The courts throughout Iraq apply the rule of law. We are working with the Iraqi authorities to help increase the capacity of the rule of law sector, for example in providing training for Iraqi judges in international law.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the extent of corruption by local officials in (a) Al Basrah, (b) Al Muthanna, (c) Dhi Qar and (d) Maysan Province in Iraq. [70939]

Margaret Beckett: We do not systematically collect province-by-province information on the extent of corruption of local officials in Iraq.

We are working to increase institutional capacity, transparency and accountability in the four southern provinces. The Department for International Development (DFID) has in place a £20.5 million project to build the capacity and effectiveness of the southern Provincial Governorates. This has provided support for, among other things, establishing Provincial Committees for Reconstruction and Development in all four provinces and building up the financial management and budgeting capacity of provincial institutions. DFID also has in place a £6.7 million project to strengthen independent broadcast media in the south, helping to hold the local government to account.

The UK, alongside the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and other donors, continues to work with the Iraqi Government to improve accountability and transparency in Iraq's public finances. This includes efforts to encourage Iraq to adopt international legal frameworks and standards in resource management, including the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative. This is a set of principles designed to ensure that the revenues from extractive industries such as oil are transparently managed and contribute to sustainable development and poverty reduction. For further information, the hon. Member can visit the following website: www.eitransparency.org.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in the establishment of provincial and local government in (a) Al Basrah, (b) Al Muthanna, (c) Dhi Qar and (d) Maysan Province in Iraq. [70942]

Margaret Beckett: Local governments are well established in the 18 governorates of Iraq including Al Basrah, Al Muthanna, Dhi Qar and Maysan Province. They are empowered to set priorities for the provinces to improve the delivery of public services and are funded from national budget allocations.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in the establishment of the Joint Committee to Transfer Security Responsibility in Iraq; and if she will make a statement. [70965]

Margaret Beckett: The Joint Committee to Transfer Security Responsibility from Multi-National Forces in Iraq (MNF-I) to the Iraqi civilian authorities was established by the then Iraqi Prime Minister Jafa'ari in July 2005. Membership includes Iraq's Interior and Defence Ministers, the National Security Adviser, the US and UK Ambassadors, the Commander of the MNF-I and the Deputy Commanding General.

Its remit is to describe the conditions required for a transfer of security responsibilities, at the provincial level, to Iraqi civilian control. These conditions are based on four broad categories: an assessment of the terrorist threat level; Iraqi Security Forces' ability to take on the security task; the capacity of provincial bodies to cope with the changed security environment; and the posture and support available from MNF-I.

As my right hon. Friend the then Defence Secretary informed the House on 13 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1151-53, the Joint Committee has begun the assessment phase to determine whether conditions have been met for some provinces in Iraq to begin the handover process. This will be taken forward with the new Government. In due course, we expect the Committee to make recommendations to the new Iraqi Prime Minister on which provinces or provincial capitals are ready for a transfer in security responsibilities.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what milestones have been set out for (a) police and (b) military reform in (i) Al Basrah,(ii) Al Muthanna, (iii) Dhi Qar and (iv) Maysan provinces in Iraq; and what progress has been achieved. [71047]

Margaret Beckett: Milestones have been set in five areas against which progress in the reform of the Iraqi police service can be measured:

Numbers trained, Police support infrastructure, Intelligence capability, Operational capability and Public support.

The following table outlines progress to date against the above benchmarks in Muthanna, Maysan and Basra. Responsibility for policing in Dhi Qar lies with the Italian contingent.

Military reform in Iraq is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence. I will ask him to write to the hon. Member separately on this matter.

Note:
Responsibility for police training in Dhi Qar lies with the Italian contingent.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations she has received regarding the Assyrian community in Iraq; and if she will make a statement. [74541]

Dr. Howells: We maintain regular contact with representatives from the Chaldo-Assyrian community in Baghdad and their representatives in the UK.

The Government remain committed to supporting the Iraqi authorities' efforts to promote inclusive, representative politics. The establishment of a genuine government of national unity is a positive step forward in this regard.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on links her Department will have with the new Iraqi Government. [74159]

Dr. Howells: We welcome the formation of the new Iraqi Government as a major step in Iraq's transition towards full democracy.

The Government remain committed to supporting the Iraqi authorities' efforts to build security and uphold the rule of law, promote inclusive, representative politics and secure sustainable economic growth.

We will continue to conduct the bulk of our relations with Iraq through our diplomatic posts in Iraq.

Israel

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the detention of Kate Maynard, a solicitor at the Islington firm of Hickman and Rose, by Israeli authorities at Ben Gurion airport. [75146]

Dr. Howells: On 24 May 2006, Kate (Catherine) Maynard was detained by immigration officials at Ben Gurión airport, questioned and subsequently refused entry into Israel. She would have been subject to deportation. Ms Maynard contacted our consul from our embassy in Tel Aviv, who then contacted the immigration desk at the airport to establish what was happening and to register our interest in her case. Our consul confirmed with Ms Maynard that she was being treated well and asked if there was anyone he could contact on her behalf.

Ms Maynard filed an appeal against her refusal and deportation. On the morning of 25 May 2006, a judge initially ruled that Ms Maynard be allowed into Israel to attend a conference, but that she should leave by 28 May. The judge later amended his original decision, choosing instead to issue a recommendation advising the Interior Ministry to allow Ms Maynard to enter the country until 28 May. The Interior Ministry declined the judge's suggestion. Ms Maynard was told she could take the matter to another judge, but Ms Maynard chose instead to return to the UK and departed on the evening of 25 May.

Consular officials were in contact with Ms Maynard throughout her detention. They offered her assistance and were also in touch with her colleagues in London. Decisions on who can enter Israel are for the Government of Israel, but we try to ensure all British citizens are treated appropriately.

Kyrgyzstan

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list the (a) dates and (b) duration of each visit of the UK ambassador to Kyrgyzstan since 1 January 2005. [74571]

Mr. Hoon: Our ambassador accredited to Kyrgyzstan is based in Almaty, Kazakhstan. Since 1 January 2005, he has visited Kyrgyzstan on 10 occasions—six times in 2005: 24-26 January, 24-25 March, 12-13 April, 6-8 June, 28-30 September and 28-29 November; and four times in 2006: 26-27 January, 14-16 February, 23-25 April and 22-24 May.

In addition to these visits, the Deputy Head of Mission has been to Kyrgyzstan on nine occasions during this period. Other members of the embassy team, including the Defence Attaché, have also visited on numerous occasions.

Libya

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans she has to improve relations with Libya; and if she will consider the merits of a visit to Tripoli. [74763]

Dr. Howells: The Government are committed to improving bilateral relations with Libya. Since my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's visit to Tripoli in 2004, the first by a British Prime Minister since 1943, there has been continued high-level contact. Most recently my right hon. Friend the former Home Secretary, my hon. Friend the Minister for Higher Education and my hon. Friend the former Minister of State for Trade, Investment and Foreign Affairs visited this year. Through these visits and contacts between officials we are working to improve relations across a range of areas, including health, education, trade and economy, counter terrorism and prison reform. With our EU partners we are working with Libya on measures to combat illegal migration, and to resolve the situation of the Bulgarian and Palestinian medical staff detained in Libya including providing assistance to those affected by the outbreak of HIV in Benghazi.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is still assessing her diary commitments. Her travel plans are currently under review and she is unable to commit to a visit at this point.

Maldives

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the trial and sentencing of Mohamed Nasheed, the Chairperson of the Maldivian Democratic Party. [74794]

Dr. Howells: We continue to be seriously concerned about human rights in the Maldives, in particular the use of the justice system in an apparently political manner. My hon. Friend the then Minister of State for Trade, Investment and Foreign Affairs spoke with Dr. Shaheed, Foreign Minister of the Maldives on 3 May. He welcomed the movement towards democratic reform in the Maldives but also raised the issue of jailed opposition activists, including their leader Mohamed Nasheed. Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials have had a number of recent discussions in London and Male with Maldivian Ministers at which they continued to press on the cases of Mohamed Nasheed and others.

The proper implementation of the Roadmap for the Reform Agenda would reflect the Government's stated commitment to democratic values and serve to promote an atmosphere in which all political groups in the Maldives can engage in dialogue on reform. We convey this message regularly to the Government of the Maldives bilaterally, and together with EU and other international partners. We also strongly support the efforts by the Commonwealth Secretariat and the Commonwealth Secretary-General's Special Envoy, to help facilitate constitutional change.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for Ministers of State in her Department on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [69069]

Mr. Hoon: Under the terms of the Ministerial Code and Travel by Minister's, when travelling on official business Ministers are expected to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements.

Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year; this information includes accommodation costs. Copies are available in the Library.

For Ministers below Cabinet rank, collecting the detailed information requested could not be done without incurring disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions Ministers of State in her Department stayed overnight in (a) five star, (b) four star and (c) three star hotels on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [69070]

Mr. Hoon: Under the terms of the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, when travelling on official business Ministers are expected to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements.

Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year; this information includes accommodation costs. Copies are available in the Library.

For Ministers below Cabinet rank, collecting the detailed information requested could not be done without incurring disproportionate cost.

Nepal

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the decision of the Nepalese Parliament to declare the country a secular state. [73169]

Dr. Howells: The UK does not take a position, either for or against, the decision of the Nepalese Parliament to declare the country a secular state. It is up to the people of Nepal to determine the nature of the state under which they are governed. The new Parliament has announced its intention to hold a Constituent Assembly to give the nation the chance to express its will over the future of the Nepalese constitution. The UK supports the efforts of the parties to find a democratic solution to Nepal's problems.

Nigeria

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the church authorities in Nigeria about the recent demolition of a church in Kazaure, Kano State. [73684]

Mr. McCartney: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 10 May 2006, Official Report, column 330W. The case of the destruction of a church in Kazaure, Kano State has not been brought to our attention, through either our high commission in Abuja, the Nigerian media or human rights organisations based in Nigeria.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of (a) levels of religious tension, (b) the incidence of attacks upon churches and (c) the use of Sharia Law in Jos, Plateau State, Nigeria. [73685]

Mr. McCartney: Conflict and tensions between religious communities in Nigeria remains a serious issue. We are funding the work of Coventry Cathedral's International Centre for Reconciliation to address religious tensions in Plateau State, which has been successful in reducing the level of violence there.

The decision to adopt Sharia Law is for Nigerians. We have made clear our view that extreme punishments such as stoning and amputation are inconsistent with international human rights standards. We are also funding work to ensure the correct and humane application of Sharia Law in those states that have adopted it.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role she will play in discussions in international fora on the future of the United Kingdom's nuclear deterrent; and if she will make a statement. [71853]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 18 May 2006]: No decisions have yet been taken, either in principle or in detail, on the future of the UK's nuclear deterrent. Officials have started work to understand the possible future threats, develop more precise options and assess their costs. However, this work will take some time and Ministers have not yet begun to consider the position in any detail.

Overseas Detainees

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many UK citizens detained in overseas gaols had a last residential address in (a) the East Midlands and (b) Leicester East. [74800]

Dr. Howells: As British nationals detained overseas are not required to inform local consular officials of their last UK residential address, I cannot provide the information requested by my hon. Friend.

Pakistan

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking towards ensuring elections in Pakistan next year are free and fair. [74849]

Dr. Howells: The UK, along with our EU partners, has welcomed the recent appointment of a Permanent Election Commissioner. We intend to support this office through the provision of technical assistance and advice, to ensure that he is able to do his job effectively. The UK is actively considering a range of activities to help ensure the election is free and fair, including supporting the Government of Pakistan with training election officials, and voter education campaigns. We are currently in discussions with EU and other partners about the scope for collectively monitoring the elections. As I have stated previously, officials in both London and Pakistan also meet regularly with members of the Pakistani Government, opposition parties and members of civil society to ensure that we remain abreast of developments. This also gives us an opportunity to stress the importance we attach to free and fair elections.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the efficacy of action taken by the Pakistani Government against Taliban forces within Pakistan. [74850]

Dr. Howells: The Government of Pakistan has made extensive efforts, at considerable loss of life, to improve the rule of law in the border areas. The Pakistanis remain committed to countering the threat posed by the Taliban and we will continue to support them in these efforts.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 18 May 2006, Official Report, column 1230W, on Pakistan, in what ways the UK is working with the Government of Pakistan to contain the threat posed by the Taliban. [74851]

Dr. Howells: As part of a common effort to counter terrorism, the Government are providing training and capacity building to the Pakistan authorities in their efforts to counter al-Qaeda and the Taliban in Pakistan.

Plan-D Events

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps her Department has taken to ensure that the events held under the European Commission Plan D include the whole political spectrum of views as required by the Commission document. [74303]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office keeps in close contact with the European Commission Representation in the UK about their programme of planned activities related to Plan D. The events that they have organised include debates and roadshows, which have been open to the public and designed for anyone to ask any questions or make any points about the EU.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list the events which (a) have been held and (b) are scheduled to take place in the UK to promote debate on the future of the EU as set out in the Commission document Plan-D. [74304]

Mr. Hoon: The Commission's UK representation has organised a range of events across the UK to promote debate on the future of Europe under its Outreach programme. These include: 'What is next for the East Midlands in Europe?' held on 27 January 2006; a debate on the future of Europe at King's College, London on 10 February; and an event on trans-national co-operation in Taunton on 15 March. In the next months ahead, Europe Direct centres, new EU information points, are due to open across the UK. These centres will be used as the focal point for regional activities. Further information on these events and Europe Direct is available from the European Commission's representation in the UK.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what proportion of the sum allocated by the EU Commission to fund its Plan-D events and activities in the UK during 2006 has been (a) spent and (b) allocated to specific future events; [74305]

(2) what measures her Department has taken to ensure that the sum allocated by the European Commission to fund Plan-D events in the UK during 2006 is available on a fair basis to each part of the whole political spectrum of views. [74302]

Mr. Hoon: No specific allocation of financial resources was made to each member state under the Commission's Plan-D for Democracy, Dialogue and Debate. Most Plan-D activities fall under the Commission's "Relations with citizen and the media" programme in the UK. For 2006 a budget of €1.7 million has been made available for the Commission UK representation's operational activities under this budget heading (the €1.8 million figure that I stated to the European Scrutiny Committee was the amount requested by the representation). So far €1,011,700 has been allocated, of which €354,900 has been spent. The Commission representation are in the process of allocating the rest of the budget with a view to spending all of it by the end of the year.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when her Department will present the synthesis of the initial results of the national debate in the UK on the future of the EU required under the Commission's Plan-D document; [74306]

(2) why her Department did not meet the Commission deadline of April 2006 for the submission of a synthesis of the initial results of the UK national debate on the future of the EU, as set out in the Commission's Plan-D document. [74307]

Mr. Hoon: I should like to clarify that the Commission's Plan-D does not impose any obligations on member states. Following the "Interim Report on the National Debates During the Reflection Period on the Future of Europe" of 14 December 2005 by the UK and Austrian EU presidencies, the Austrian presidency and General Secretariat of the Council requested further written feedback from member states by April in response to a questionnaire. We provided a response to the presidency and General Secretariat of the Council in April.

A copy of the questionnaire and the UK response and the report of the presidency and the General Secretariat of the Council on member states' information and communication activities during the reflection period will be placed in the Library on 15 June. A copy of the "Interim Report on the National Debates During the Reflection Period on the Future of Europe" was placed in the Library on 16 January 2006.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list the visits to the UK made by (a) the President of the European Commission and (b) other Commissioners since the publication of the Commission's Plan-D document in October 2005. [74309]

Mr. Hoon: European Commissioners regularly visit member states as part of their work. The Government do not keep a record of Commissioner visits to the UK, but figures from the Commission's Representation in the UK show that there have been 60 Commissioner visits to the UK since October 2005.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what progress her Department has made in working with the European Commission for the appointment of European goodwill ambassadors on the UN model as proposed in the Commission's Plan-D document; [74310]

(2) if she will list the individuals who have been considered by her Department for appointment as European goodwill ambassadors. [74311]

Mr. Hoon: The European Goodwill Ambassadors initiative as proposed in the European Commission's Plan D for Democracy, Dialogue and Debate, is still at an early stage. Therefore to date, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has not considered any individuals for appointment as goodwill ambassadors.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in her private office in each of the last five years. [69074]

Mr. Hoon: Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each payband. For information relating to the last financial year I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on Thursday 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158-61WS.

Information on special advisers for this financial year is currently being collected and will be published in the normal way when it is ready.

We are unable to provide details of travelling expenses and subsistence allowances paid to special advisers because the figures are not held centrally. To obtain this information would incur disproportionate cost.

Foreign and Commonwealth Office records do not show any payments being made to special advisers in respect of removal expenses.

Public Transport (Incentives)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what incentives are available to encourage members of her staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75118]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office offers staff an advance of salary or rail warrants to help them obtain season tickets for home to office travel on public transport. The majority of our staff in London use public transport.

In addition, we have a number of policies which contribute to staff using more sustainable methods of transport as outlined in the reply I gave to the hon. Member on 24 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1867-68W.

Slovenia

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has received requesting an apology from the Government for the repatriation in 1945 of Slovene Home Guard soldiers to Yugoslavia; and if she will make a statement. [74748]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has received a number of representations on the repatriation of the Slovene Home Guard, including letters from individuals and an early day motion in the House. We have received no communications on the subject from the Slovene Government. The Second World War and its aftermath brought tragedy in its wake for many people. It is right that we remember the suffering of the Slovene nation during this time.

Spain

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 4 May 2006, Official Report, column 1808W, on Spain, if she will make a statement on the outcome of the discussions between officials and the Spanish Ministry of Justice; and when (a) she and (b) diplomatic and consular staff in Spain next plan to meet the Spanish authorities to discuss child custody cases in Spain involving British parents. [74453]

Dr. Howells: Officials from the Department for Constitutional Affairs and Foreign and Commonwealth Office discussed steps to improve co-operation in resolving child residence and access disputes in Spain involving British parents with the Spanish Ministry of Justice. Two new members of staff have recently been appointed at the Spanish Central Authority handling cases brought under the 1980 Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction. Although my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary currently has no plans to meet the Spanish authorities to discuss this matter, officials will pursue these issues as necessary and appropriate.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the safety of the waters off Sri Lanka; and what pressure she is exerting (a) bilaterally and (b) through multilateral organisations towards ensuring that the waters are made safe. [73405]

Dr. Howells: The Department for Transport, advise that the Transport and Security Contingencies Team have not issued any specific advice on piracy or terrorism in Sri Lankan waters. The International Ship and Port Security rating remains at code 1, which is normal.

In the Foreign and Commonwealth Office travel advice for Sri Lanka we advise British mariners to avoid the coastline and adjacent territorial sea of the Trincomalee, Mullaitivu, Jaffna, Kilinochchi and Mannar administrative districts in the north and east. These are declared as restricted zones by the Sri Lankan authorities and there have been attacks on shipping in these areas in the past.

It is the Government of Sri Lanka's responsibility to ensure the safety of it's territorial waters. The UK view is that the most effective way to resolve the tensions over these areas is through the existing Sri Lankan peace process, which we fully support.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action she is taking to encourage resumption of peace negotiations in Sri Lanka, between the Government and the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam. [73406]

Dr. Howells: We actively support the Norwegian facilitated peace process. We continue to urge the Sri Lankan Government and the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam to return to the face-to-face talks. We make this clear in our regular contact with the Sri Lankan Government, Members of Parliament, including representatives of Tamil political groups, and civil society. We also actively contribute to the EU's work in its role as one of the Tokyo co-Chairs to the Sri Lankan peace process.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of whether the ceasefire agreement signed in 2002 between the Sri Lankan Government and the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam is still in force; what action she is taking towards ensuring this agreement is upheld; and what her policy is on seeking a new agreement. [73407]

Dr. Howells: Under the terms of the ceasefire agreement the Sri Lankan Monitoring Mission was established to monitor the ceasefire and investigate and record violations by either side. With the recent escalation in violence, we assess that the ceasefire is under intense pressure, but we welcome the stated commitment of both sides to maintain the ceasefire agreement. We encourage the Government and the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam to return to face-to face talks so they can discuss concerns about the ceasefire and work towards a lasting peace agreement.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave to the right hon. Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague) on 5 June 2006 (UIN 73720).

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of people (a) killed and (b) displaced in Sri Lanka in the last three weeks in attacks by the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam; and if she will make a statement. [73408]

Dr. Howells: The Sri Lankan Monitoring Mission (SLMM) recorded 125 deaths in political violence between 1 and 23 May. They categorise the status of victims to be 71 civilians, 36 armed forces members, eight police force members and 10 Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) operatives. However, it is not possible to assess which of these may have been killed by the LTTE without prejudging the decisions of the SLMM. Our assessment is that most of the armed forces casualties were inflicted by the LTTE, but other armed groups are also responsible for deaths. There are also reports that Government security forces may be involved in some of the killings.

As at 19 May the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees reported that 8,764 families have fled the violence in Trincomalee district in recent weeks. This is the only district for which there is firm evidence of substantial movements of people.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave to the right hon. Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague) on 5 June 2006 (UIN 73720).

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on UK-Sri Lankan relations. [73409]

Dr. Howells: The long-standing relations between the UK and Sri Lanka are good and also wide-ranging. They are maintained through regular contacts at all levels. The Sri Lankan Foreign Minister visited London in March 2006 and met my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development, my right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary and my right hon. Friend the then Minister for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality. Topics discussed included the peace process, tsunami reconstruction, immigration issues and countering Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam fundraising. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport visited Sri Lanka in December 2005 and met the Sri Lankan Prime Minister. My hon. Friend the then Minister for Trade, Investment and Foreign Affairs visited Sri Lanka in January 2006 and met representatives of the Government and Tamil political parties.

We have made clear our continuing support for a peaceful negotiated settlement to the ethnic conflict that meets the legitimate aspirations of all Sri Lankans. The Government provide funding for projects through the Global Conflict Prevention Pool to support this aim.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the freedom of the media in Sri Lanka. [73492]

Dr. Howells: There is no censorship of the Sri Lankan press which, generally reports freely. The public have a wide choice of print and electronic media sources from which to choose. However, we are deeply concerned about the recent attack on a newspaper office in Jaffna that killed two staff. This is the latest incidence of threats and violence directed at journalists in Sri Lanka. We have raised the issue of press freedom with the Sri Lankan Government as well as our concern at the use of violence and intimidation more widely.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of reports of extra-judicial killings by Government security forces in Sri Lanka; [73493]

(2) whether her Department has made representations to the Government of Sri Lanka about alleged human rights abuses by Government forces in Sri Lanka. [73495]

Dr. Howells: We take these reports extremely seriously and have raised with members of the Sri Lankan Government our concerns about human rights. We have made clear that there should be a full and transparent inquiry by the Government into suspected extra-judicial killings in which the safety of witnesses must be guaranteed.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the current situation of the peace process in Sri Lanka. [73494]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave to the right hon. Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague) today (UIN 73720).

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the political situation in Sri Lanka; what resources her Department has allocated to peace monitoring there; and if she will make a statement. [73647]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him today (UIN 73407) and to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to the right hon. Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague) today (UIN 73720).

In addition to supporting the work of the Monitoring Mission, the Government provide funding for projects through the Global Conflict Prevention Pool, and receives regular reports from the our high commission in Colombo.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the peace process in Sri Lanka. [73720]

Margaret Beckett: We are deeply concerned at the recent escalation in violence in Sri Lanka. We condemn all forms of violence and intimidation. We urge the Liberation of Tamil Tigers Eilam (LTTE) and the Government of Sri Lanka to fulfil the commitments they made in Geneva in February. The Government pledged that no armed group or person other than Government security forces would carry arms or conduct armed operations. The LTTE pledged to take all necessary measures to ensure that there would be no acts of violence against the security forces and police. Both sides made a commitment to ensure that there will be no intimidation, acts of violence, abductions or killings.

The LTTE is a proscribed organisation in Britain and is likely also to be listed by the EU as a terrorist organisation. We urge the LTTE to renounce violence and pursue a political solution.

We call on the Government of Sri Lanka to do all in their power to ensure the safety and wellbeing of their population. And to ensure that any suspected human rights abuses are fully investigated in an open and transparent way.

We continue to believe that dialogue is the only way to achieve a negotiated settlement to the conflict in Sri Lanka. Violence cannot solve internal differences nor bring sustainable peace. All sides need to exercise restraint and act in a constructive and patient way. We fully support the Norwegian facilitated peace talks and will continue to work for a settlement that takes full account of the legitimate demands of all communities within a democratic and stable Sri Lanka.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the involvement of Sri Lankan security forces in extra-judicial execution of Tamil civilians; and if she will make a statement. [74428]

Dr. Howells: We are deeply concerned at reports that members of Government security forces may have been involved in the deaths of civilians and the intimidation of the civilian population. The Sri Lankan Monitoring Mission has the task of investigating these reports. We strongly endorse their work.

We take such reports extremely seriously and have raised with members of the Sri Lankan Government our concerns about human rights. We have made clear that there should be a full and transparent enquiry by the Government into suspected extra-judicial killings in which the safety of witnesses must be guaranteed. It is important for the Government and the military to adhere fully to international humanitarian law, and accepted rules of conduct and engagement. They must demonstrate that no-one is above the law and that members of the armed forces do not enjoy impunity. We are also concerned at the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam's failure to halt the violence despite their public commitments at the peace talks in Geneva in February to do so. Both sides must follow through on the implementation of their commitments. Violence against the civilian population can never be justified.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring she is undertaking of the conflict in Sri Lanka. [74455]

Dr. Howells: Under the terms of the cease-fire agreement, the Sri Lankan Monitoring Mission was established to monitor the cease-fire and investigate and record violations by either side. We fully support the work of the Monitoring Mission. Our high commission in Colombo monitors the conflict closely and we receive regular reports from them. We also fund projects in Sri Lanka, through the Global Conflict Prevention Pool, which monitor the levels of violence and seek to mediate on local sources of tension. We are deeply concerned at the recent escalation in violence in Sri Lanka and call on the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam and the Government to return to the negotiating table and live up to the commitments they made at talks in Geneva in February this year.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Sri Lankan Government on the recent escalation of violence in Sri Lanka; and what the outcomes of such discussions have been. [74775]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not as yet had discussions with the Sri Lankan Government. When I met the Foreign Minister Samaraweera of Sri Lanka in London in March, I made clear our strong desire to see the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam and the Government live up to commitments they made at talks in Geneva in February. Sadly, this has not happened. As I said during a debate on Sri Lanka in the House on 24 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1606-10, it is vital that both sides return to the negotiating table and work towards a settlement that satisfies the concerns and legitimate aspirations of all Sri Lankans. We shall continue to convey this message, bilaterally and with EU partners.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has received from UK groups asking her to put pressure on the Sri Lankan Government to resume peace talks with the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam. [74776]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has received no such representations. I took part in a debate in Sri Lanka in the House on 24 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1606-10, during which I called on the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam to move away from the path of violence, and on the Government of Sri Lanka to rein in paramilitary attacks in Government-controlled areas. We consider it important that both sides live up to the commitments they made at talks in Geneva in February this year.

Sudan

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will discuss with the Government of Saudi Arabia the shipment of small arms and light weapons from that country to Government and other combatants in Sudan; and if she will make a statement. [73434]

Mr. Hoon: We are not aware of any arms shipments from Saudi Arabia to Sudan that would constitute a breach of UN sanctions, and therefore have no plans to raise this specifically with the Saudi Arabian Government. However, we discuss a broad range of issues with Saudi Arabia, including the arms trade. Officials from our embassy in Riyadh recently discussed with Saudi counterparts international efforts to set standards for the trade in conventional arms, including progressing the initiative for an Arms Trade Treaty and the Transfer Controls Initiative for Small Arms and Light Weapons.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of reports that rebel forces who signed the recent peace deal in Darfur have broken the ceasefire. [74659]

Mr. McCartney: There have been some indications of an overall reduction in attacks by rebel groups and government forces since the signature of the Darfur Peace Agreement, although attacks by militias have continued. It remains to be seen what will happen in the longer term. The African Union's mission to Darfur is responsible for reporting any breaches of the ceasefire to the Ceasefire Commission. We continue to call on all parties to rein in their fighters and bring an end to the conflict.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the timetable is for the transfer of forces from the African Union to the UN in Darfur. [74660]

Mr. McCartney: The process for the transition involves a series of steps: a UN planning mission to visit Darfur; a Security Council decision on a UN force; mobilisation and deployment. We welcome the Government of Sudan's acceptance of a planning mission and are pressing for them to accept transition to a UN force. The mandate of the current African Union (AU) force in Darfur expires on 30 September 2006, and we are pushing for the UN to begin deploying then. Meanwhile we continue to offer the AU support to enhance the effectiveness of its mission.

Uganda

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what international aid is being used to fund the cost of the treason trial of the opposition leader Dr. Kizza Besigye in Uganda; and if she will make a statement. [73075]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd) on 24 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1787-88W.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the independence of the judiciary in Uganda; and if she will make a statement. [74771]

Mr. McCartney: In recent months the Ugandan judiciary has demonstrated a high level of independence in a number of important rulings.

Most recently, on 7 March 2006 High Court Judge Katutsi dismissed the rape charges against opposition leader, Dr. Kizza Besigye, saying that the prosecution had failed to prove its case.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the fairness of the February 2006 presidential election in Uganda, with particular regard to the recent ruling by the Supreme Court; and if she will make a statement. [74773]

Mr. McCartney: Independent election observers monitoring the February 2006 elections in Uganda raised concerns that a level playing field was not established before the elections took place. However, there was consensus that despite some shortcomings on election day there was a high degree of transparency and voters were overall free to vote as they pleased. This is in line with the EU election observers interim statement. They have yet to issue their final report.

On 6 April the Ugandan Supreme Court's judgment highlighted many of the concerns raised by election monitors. But in a majority verdict they also concluded these problems did not substantially affect the result. The detailed opinions underlying their judgment have not been released.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date the Movement Act was repealed by the Ugandan Government; and if she will make a statement. [74786]

Mr. McCartney: Under the 1995 Ugandan Constitution, the Ugandan people have the right to choose between three political systems: the movement system; the multiparty system; and any other democratic and representative system. In July 2005, the Ugandan people voted in a referendum to move from the movement system to a multiparty system. The February 2006 elections were held under a multiparty dispensation.

The Movement Act, governing the movement system, has not been repealed. However, we understand that the movement organs have been disbanded and funding from state has stopped.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the potential impact of the security situation in Uganda on the 2007 Commonwealth meeting; and if she will make a statement. [74788]

Mr. McCartney: As set out in our travel advice, Uganda shares with neighbouring countries a threat from terrorism and we advise against travel to north and north eastern Uganda because of a rebel insurgency and tribal clashes. Some border areas with the Democratic Republic of Congo are unstable but most visits to Uganda are trouble free and Kampala is a relatively safe city. The travel advice for Uganda can be found on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website at: http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket%2FXcelerate%2FShowPage&c=Page&cid=1007029390590&a=KCountryAdvice&aid=1013618386550.

The Commonwealth Secretariat are responsible for making assessments of the security situation with regard to Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Uganda in 2007. They visited Uganda most recently in April 2006.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the likelihood that Dr. Besigye will receive a fair trial in Uganda; and if she will make a statement. [74823]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him today (UIN 74771). On 16 May my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development raised Dr. Besigye's on-going court case with President Museveni. The President gave an assurance that due process would be followed.

Costa Rica

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on UK-Costa Rican relations. [73562]

Mr. Hoon: Relations between the UK and Costa Rica were established over 150 years ago and remain strong. Our ambassador in San José attended the inauguration of President Oscar Arias in May 2006. The Government looks forward to working with the President and his new Government.

Venezuela

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings have been arranged by her Department between representatives of the Venezuelan Government and the Mayor of London on the President of Venezuela's offer to supply subsidised oil to London, mediated by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. [73601]

Mr. Hoon: We have arranged no such meetings. We would encourage the Venezuelan Government to use the considerable resources available to them from hydrocarbons production responsibly, for the long-term benefit of all Venezuelans and their country's economic development.

Visas

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what records are kept in UK posts in India of the (a) ethnicity and (b) caste of those applying for (i) visas and (ii) entry clearance. [73903]

Dr. Howells: Our visa sections in India do not collect or hold information on the caste or ethnicity of visa applicants. All entry clearance applications are considered on their individual merits, regardless of religion, ethnicity or caste.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the target time is for the issuing of (a) a family visit visa and (b) a settlement visa following a successful appeal in the UK. [74112]

Dr. Howells: Once our visa sections receive determinations from the Home Office indicating that the appeal has been allowed, they aim to contact the appellant and bring the application for entry clearance to a conclusion as soon as practicably possible. Entry clearance will be issued unless there has been a significant and material change of circumstances, or material deception has come to light of which the immigration judge would be unaware.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many student visas have been issued to people from (a) Nigeria, (b) Pakistan, (c) India, (d) Turkey and (e) Ghana in each of the last five years. [74125]

Dr. Howells: The number of student visas issued in Nigeria, Pakistan, India, Turkey and Ghana over the last five years are as follows:

	2000[1]	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05
Nigeria	1,516	2,921	3,905	4,154	8,045
Pakistan	2,421	3,744	2,781	10,361	10,859
India	4,790	8,280	12,174	14,641	15,283
Turkey	7,208	5,598	5,468	3,746	4,234
Ghana	1,788	2,315	3,103	2,804	1,749

[1] Prior to 2001-02, entry clearance statistics were published by calendar year.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many complaints have been received relating to UK embassy visa sections in each of the last five years; and how many of them were investigated. [73626]

Dr. Howells: All visa sections are required to keep records of all complaints and the resulting action taken. Data for the number of complaints and action taken are not held centrally by UKvisas. In order to obtain this information, officials would need to contact every post worldwide and this would currently incur disproportionate cost. UKvisas is, however, currently developing a system for doing this in the future.

Weapons Sales (Inspectors)

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many personnel the Government employs to inspect the sale of weapons in the UK. [74174]

Dr. Howells: The practice and policy of the licensing of strategic exports from the UK, including conventional arms, weapons of mass destruction related materials and other dual-use items, is co-ordinated between four Government Departments: the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Department of Trade and Industry, the Ministry of Defence and the Department for International Development. Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs is also responsible in the enforcement of relevant export control legislation. The Export Control Organisation of the Department of Trade and Industry acts as licensing body for all strategic exports from the UK and currently has a dedicated staff complement of 110. Other interested departments each have personnel tasked with assessing and monitoring the UK's strategic exports, as well as advising on related policy issues.

Western Sahara

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice she offered British MEPs on how to vote on the recent EU-Morocco fishing deal in the waters of the western Sahara; and what action the British Government proposes to take to protect the rights of the Saharian people. [74330]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary did not advise UK Members of the European Parliament (MEPs) how to vote on the EU/Morocco Fisheries Partnership Agreement.

Officials from the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs provided UK MEPs with briefing on the Agreement and on the UK's position.

The United Nations defines Western Sahara as a non-self-governing territory. As the de facto administering power, Morocco is obliged under international law to ensure that economic activities under its administration do not adversely affect the interests of the people of the territory. The Fisheries Agreement, under Article 10, envisages the establishment of a Joint Committee to monitor the implementation of the terms of the Agreement, including the impact it has on the local population. The UK will follow its work and conclusions closely.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will press for a resolution of Western Sahara's disputed independence at the United Nations. [74754]

Dr. Howells: The UK fully supports the efforts of the UN Secretary-General, and his Personal Envoy to Western Sahara, to find a just, lasting and mutually acceptable solution to the Western Sahara dispute. The UK supported UN Security Council Resolution 1675, adopted on 28 April, which extends the mandate of the UN Mission for a Referendum in Western Sahara until 31 October 2006.

We will continue, at both ministerial and official level, to urge all parties to the dispute to engage constructively with the UN.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the NHS hospitals in Lancashire with accident and emergency departments; and whether in each case they are type (a) one, (b) two and (c) three. [70317]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of accident and emergency services provided by national health service trusts is reported at trust level on the number of services they provide, according to definitions set by the Department. It is not possible to assign these services to individual hospitals. The available information is therefore shown in the following table and is for the end of March 2006.

Agency Workers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the NHS salary budget was spent on agency workers in 2005-06; and if she will make a statement. [73261]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department collects expenditure information on non-national health service staff. Non-NHS staff expenditure includes all agency staff and any other staff not directly employed.

Data for 2005-06 are not yet available.

Agenda for Change

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation there has been with ambulance technicians and paramedics in the national level discussions on Agenda for Change policy for those professions. [72771]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The provisions of Agenda for Change for ambulance staff were agreed by the NHS Staff Council following detailed discussions with nationally recognised unions and professionals representing ambulance staff.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations she has received from hon. Members expressing opposition to the proposed reconfiguration of NHS ambulance services. [68443]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A 14-week consultation on the proposed configuration of national health service ambulance trusts in England was led by strategic health authorities (SHAs) and ended on 22 March 2006. The responses submitted by SHAs together with letters sent directly to the Department indicate that there have been about 40 written responses from hon. Members expressing varying degrees of concern about the reconfiguration proposals. These were considered carefully before making the decisions announced on 16 May 2006, Official Report, columns 849-66.

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on Government policy on the outsourcing of non-emergency ambulance services. [70098]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts (PCTs) are responsible for ensuring that there is provision of ambulance services, which could include patient transport services, to such extent as they consider necessary to meet all reasonable requirements. It is, therefore, for the local national health service to decide who provides patient transport services for eligible patients in their area.

A range of different providers may and do provide patient transport services, for example the local ambulance service, private or voluntary sector providers, or a combination of these organisations. It is for PCTs to ensure that that they are getting the best service for the best price. The ambulance review "Taking Healthcare to the Patient: Transforming NHS Ambulance Services" set out our intention to develop a system of accreditation of independent ambulance providers, which should help PCTs further in making this assessment.

Audiologists

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library the full-time equivalent figures for the number of qualified audiologists at each hospital trust at 30 September 2004. [74331]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The table showing the number of full-time equivalent (fte) health care scientists working in audiology in September 2004 by primary care trust and trust has been placed in the Library. The total number has increased by 4 per cent. to 1,421 fte in September 2005.

Barts/Broomfield Hospitals PFI

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 23 March 2006, Official Report, column 577W, on Barts/Broomfield Hospitals PFI, to the hon. Member for Cheadle (Mark Hunter), when departmental officials will write to NHS trusts letting them know how the private finance initiative reappraisal process will work; and if she will place a copy of this letter in the Library. [66058]

Andy Burnham: Trusts have had the broad nature of the reappraisal exercise, including a summary of the key indicators being used by the Department, outlined to them in a number of meetings with officials. The exercise is already under way, and over the coming months the lead official responsible for the exercise will be visiting all trusts with private finance initiative projects.

These arrangements were confirmed in the letter from Sir Ian Carruthers to all national health service organisations on the 10 May 2006. A copy of this letter has been placed in the Library.

Bowel Cancer

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will answer questions (a) 65745, (b) 65744, (c) 65381 and (d) 63643, on the bowel cancer screening programme, tabled by the hon. Member for Hertsmere. [70896]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Replies were given on 10 and 12 May.

Cancer Treatment (Beta Glucan)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has evaluated on the efficacy of beta glucan in treating cancer. [74415]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There are no authorised medicinal products available in the United Kingdom containing beta glucan so its efficacy in treating cancer has not been established.

Capital Projects

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth Primary Care Trust on capital projects in the Tamworth constituency in each of the last five years. [71247]

Care Homes

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of people in care homes paid top-up fees in each region of England in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [74078]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is not collected centrally in the form requested. However, in the UK-wide survey of care homes conducted by the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) for their report "Care Homes for Older People in the UK", published in May 2005, the OFT found that the average care home in the United Kingdom had 32 places of which seven were paid for by a combination of the local authority and a third party top-up.

We increased total resources available for social services by an average of 6 per cent. a year in real terms over the three years 2003-04 to 2005-06. These increases follow a 20 per cent. increase in the level of funding for social services between 1996-97 and 2002-03. This enables local councils to purchase the services to meet their residents' needs.

Chiropractic Management

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to enable NHS patients to choose chiropractic management of their musculoskeletal disorders. [73326]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The national health service currently provides a range of services for people with musculoskeletal conditions including, where appropriate, access to chiropractic services.

Improvements in the care offered to people with musculoskeletal conditions will be supported by the musculoskeletal framework (MSF), which will be published later this year. The MSF will promote the development of services outside hospital, based on informed self-care and better access to a range of health care professionals. The MSF will also build on the principles of current Government policy, ensuring that musculoskeletal services are organised, as far as possible, around the needs and choices of individual patients.

Community Nursing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the age profile is of the current workforce of community nurses; and how many community nurses who are in post will reach retirement age in the next 10 years; [72264]

(2) how many community nursing posts there are in the NHS in England; how many are vacant; and how many have been vacant for (a) three months or less, (b) three to six months and (c) six months to a year; [72261]

(3) how many qualified community nurses were employed in management roles in January (a) 2000, (b) 2003 and (c) 2006; [72262]

(4) how many NHS trusts are employing health care assistants in community nursing roles. [72263]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of community nursing staff and their age profile as at September 2005 has been placed in the Library as well as information on the number of community nurses by level and each specified area of work as at September 2000, 2003 and 2005.

Vacancy information for the community nurses group is not collected centrally. However, information on the number of vacancies and three-month vacancy rate for constituent groups of community nurses has also been placed in the Library.

Information on posts which have been vacant for three months or less or specifically six months to a year is not collected centrally.

The national health service workforce census for 2006 will not be conducted until September 2006.

Information on the number of NHS trusts employing health care assistants in community nursing roles is not collected centrally.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Minister of State will reply to the hon. Member for West Worcestershire's letter of 25 April. [73892]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This letter was replied to on 25 May 2006.

Critical Care Hospital (St. Helier)

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if, in considering the Epsom and St. Helier NHS Hospital Trust's response to her insistence that the new critical care hospital be at St. Helier, she will look again at the concerns, particularly from the elderly residents of Mole Valley, at the transport difficulties and delays to travel to St. Heliers; [74464]

(2) when she will reply to the Epsom and St. Helier NHS Hospital Trust's reply to her direction that St. Helier be the preferred site for the new hospital build; [74465]

(3) if she will take the representations received from elderly residents of Mole Valley on travel to St. Heliers into account when considering the response from St. Helier NHS Hospital Trust to her direction that the proposed new critical care hospital be situated in St. Helier. [74542]

Caroline Flint: The Department has received the response from the local national health service on St. Helier and is currently considering the situation.

Dentistry

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) orthodontic consultants and (b) fully trained specialist registrars in orthodontics there were in (a) England and (b) Beverley and Holderness in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [66524]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not available by constituency. Information for England, North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire strategic health authority, and Hull and East Yorkshire hospitals national health service trust is shown in the following table:

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been allocated to dental access centres in England since 2000-01; and what the projected funding is to 2009-10. [70341]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Dental access centres (DACs) are managed by primary care trusts (PCTs). There are not separate expenditure lines for DACs within PCT accounts and there has been no single funding stream. DACs have instead been funded through a variety of mechanisms as part of the non-discretionary general dental services and PCT-led personal dental service pilots. A separate breakdown of DAC expenditure and allocations would be available only at disproportionate cost.

For this and future years, PCTs will receive allocations, totalling around £1.7 billion for 2006-07, which include funding for the primary care dentistry they commission, including DACs. There is no funding stream or allocation specifically for DACs as it is now up to PCTs how they provide for the dental needs of their population.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much will be allocated to the North West strategic health authority for dentistry in (a) 2006-07, (b) 2007-08 and (c) 2008-09. [70342]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The main element of national health service dental services is the primary dental care services provided by dentists working within the general dental service, or personal dental service. From 1 April 2006 all primary dental care services are managed locally, and the Department has allocated the sums shown in the table to primary care trusts (PCTs) in the area of the proposed North West strategic health authority (SHA) to support primary dental care in 2006-07. As well as the net primary dental service resource allocations awarded to PCTs, the table indicates the gross budget and associated patient charge income that might be expected to be available to each PCT.

Net primary dental service allocations for 2007-08 and 2008-09 will be announced later.

PCTs decide locally what proportion of their general NHS resource allocation should be awarded to hospital and community dental services, or whether any additional funding should be directed to primary dental care services.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in Suffolk have (a) been offered, (b) not yet accepted and (c) declined the new NHS contract. [69816]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract is not available centrally. We do however have some provisional information that covers contracts. A contract may be for more that one dentist so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level.

The following table shows the number of new dental contracts signed and rejected in the Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire Strategic Health Authority area.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of the level of access to NHS dentistry in Wellingborough. [71056]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is estimated that 61 per cent. of children and 47 per cent. of adults in the Northamptonshire Heartlands primary care trust area are registered with a national health service dentist. At 31 March 2006, 79,010 patients had been seen by a dentist in the last 15 months.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether there are plans to issue further licences to companies to manufacture and supply dental anaesthetic; [71101]

(2) how much dental anaesthetic was imported in each of the last five years for which figures are available; [71107]

(3) what solutions have been considered to the dental anaesthetic shortage to ensure that service to patients is not disrupted; [71109]

(4) what has caused the shortage of the dental anaesthetic supplied by (a) Dentsply and (b) Deproco. [71111]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Any company wishing to market dental local anaesthetics in the United Kingdom must first obtain marketing authorisations from the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA). These are granted only if the products meet the required standards of quality, safety and efficacy, and the MHRA cannot predict whether a marketing authorisation will be granted until assessment of all relevant data is complete. Information on current applications is confidential. The MHRA have been kept aware of the recent supply difficulties.

Information on the amount of dental anaesthetic imported is not held centrally.

Dentsply experienced problems at its manufacturing site in the United States of America, and has had to identify an alternative production facility. There is no reported shortage of dental local anaesthetic from Deproco, which has increased its production to cover the predicted shortfall left by the temporary absence of Dentsply. Dentsply is doing everything possible to return to the market as soon as possible.

The Department's chief dental officer wrote to all dentists in England to inform them of the current supply situation, advising them not to stockpile local anaesthetic. A statement was published on 20 April which is available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/13/39/80/04133980.pdf

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many routine dental operations have been cancelled due to the current shortage of dental anaesthetic. [71108]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not received reports of any dental operations cancelled because of a shortage of anaesthetic.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to require primary care trusts to find out which dentists in their area are taking on NHS patients, report the information to her Department on a regular basis, and make the information readily available to the public, including a local search facility under the dentists' link of the www.nhs.uk website. [71410]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The nhs.uk website is set up to allow users to search for the dentists providing national health service services which are located nearest to the patient's home post code. Wider local searches are also available to find all dentists providing NHS services within a particular primary care trust (PCT) area.

It is for PCTs to decide how most effectively to provide information to the local public about which dentists are currently accepting new patients and to agree local arrangements with NHS Direct and nhs.uk.

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will restructure the new NHS dentist contracts to increase the number of dentists accepting NHS patients. [71686]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The new national health service's dental contract has been designed to support new ways of working that will support continued improvements in access to services. Primary care trusts (PCTs) are responsible for commissioning and developing services in their area to reflect the needs of the local population. The Department has established an implementation group comprising professional, patient and NHS representatives to review the impact of the reforms and check that they are achieving their intended benefits.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists per 1,000 of population there are in Bolton, South-East constituency, (b) the North West and (c) England. [72609]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The numbers of dentists with a general dental services contract or personal dental services agreement per 1,000 of population as at 31 December 2005 for England, Greater Manchester Strategic Health Authority (SHA) and Bolton Primary Care Trust (PCT) are shown in the table. Population data at constituency level are not available.

	Number
England	0.418
Greater Manchester SHA	0.413
Bolton PCT	0.404

Notes:
1. Official 2005 population data are not yet available. The figures in the table have therefore been estimated using Office for National Statistics 2004 mid-year population estimates based on the 2001 census as these are the latest available.
2. Dentists with CDS or PDS contracts provide varying amounts of NHS treatment. Information concerning the amount of time dedicated to NHS work by individual dentists are not centrally available.
3. Dentists consist of principals, assistants and trainees. Prison contracts have been excluded.
4. The postcode of the dental practice was used to allocate dentists to specific geographic areas. PCT and SHA areas have been defined using the Office for National Statistics All Fields Postcode Directory.

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in each Birmingham constituency (a) have and (b) have not taken up the new NHS dental contract. [72360]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract is not available centrally. We do, however, have some provisional information that covers contracts. A contract may be for more than one dentist, so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level.

Diabetes

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people in (a) England, (b) each English region, (c) the Tees Valley and (d) Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland aged (i) 0 to 15 years, (ii) 16 to 24 years, (iii) 25 to 39 years and (iv) 40 years and above are diagnosed with diabetes; [71084]

(2) what the percentage change was in the diagnosis of diabetes cases among people aged (a) 0 to 15 years, (b) 16 to 24 years, (c) 25 to 39 years and (d) 40 years and above in (i) England, (ii) each English region, (iii) the Tees Valley and (iv) Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland in each year since 1997. [71085]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not collected in the format requested. The Health Survey for England provides estimates of doctor-diagnosed diabetes for adults in England. Data are not available for children. However, estimates are available for the prevalence of doctor-diagnosed diabetes among men and women aged 16 and over in England in each of the years 1994, 1998, and 2003 for the following age groups: 16 to 24, 25 to 34, 35 to 44, 45 to 54, 55 to 64, 65 to 74 and 75+. These data are shown in Table one.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of (a) adults and (b) children have Type 2 diabetes; and what the figures were in each year since 1997. [71383]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Health Survey for England provides estimates of doctor-diagnosed diabetes. We are unable to provide figures of the percentage of children who have diabetes, as this information is not collected for children in the survey. However, we can provide the prevalence of adults with type 2 diabetes in England, in 2003, by sex. This data is shown in the following table. John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations she has received on the merits of the use of insulin inhalers. [72050]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We have received a number of items of correspondence on inhaled insulin from the manufacturer of inhaled insulin, from Members of Parliament on behalf of their constituents, and from people with diabetes, their relatives and carers. The correspondence relates to the recent interim decision by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence not to recommend inhaled insulin for the treatment of type 1 and type 2 diabetes, except in the context of clinical trials.

Drugs and Therapeutics Bulletin

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the cost savings to the NHS resulting from value for money recommendations contained in the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin. [74474]

Andy Burnham: I have made no such assesment.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the cost savings from ending her Department's funding of the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin. [74475]

Andy Burnham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 23 May 2006, Official Report, column 1743W.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria the Department used in making the decision to withdraw central funds from the Drugs and Therapeutics Bulletin. [73230]

Andy Burnham: This decision was informed by our policy to devolve as much responsibility as possible to the national health service and to look very critically at central spending. It is our policy that central spending should be kept to an absolute minimum in order to maximise the resources available for the NHS to manage at local level. The decision also took account of the availability of other sources of medicines information.

Eating Disorders

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many and what percentage of people were estimated to have an eating disorder in each of the regions in each of the last three years; [69206]

(2) how many deaths in each of the regions have had eating disorders recorded as a contributory factor in each of the last five years. [69207]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number and percentage of people estimated to have an eating disorder in each of the regions in England in each of the last three years is shown in Tables 1, 2 and 3. The data refer only to patients who were admitted to hospital and who had a primary diagnosis of eating disorder, but no data are available for patients with eating disorders who were not admitted to hospital.

Corroborative data are not available which attribute the cause of death wholly or partly to an eating disorder, and where there has also been admittance to hospital with a primary diagnosis of eating disorder. The cause of death in hospital may be unrelated to the primary diagnosis, which provides the main reason for a patient's admission only.

European Nutrition for Health Alliance International Longevity Centre UK

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations her Department has received from the (a) European Nutrition for Health Alliance and (b) International Longevity Centre UK. [64142]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not, to date, received any representations from either the European Nutrition for Health Alliance or the International Longevity Centre UK.

Fraser Day Hospital

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects Milton Keynes primary care trust's consultation on the closure of the Fraser day hospital to end; and who the consultees are. [75141]

Andy Burnham: Public consultation commenced on 8 May and is due to run for 90 days. Those being consulted include staff, patients, the general public, voluntary organisations, Members of Parliament, local authorities, and local overview and scrutiny committees.

Health Services (Cornwall)

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of accident and emergency patients in Cornwall had a trolley wait of over four hours in the last period for which figures are available. [72793]

Caroline Flint: Information on the percentage of patients not placed in a bed in a ward within four hours of a decision to admit, commonly referred to as a trolley wait, is reported by national health service trusts and published quarterly. Royal Cornwall Hospitals NHS Trust reported that 3.4 per cent. of patients were in this position for the period January to March 2006. This information is for admissions from type one (major) accident and emergency departments only.

Further information is available on the Department's website at: www.performance.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity.

Hospices

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to increase the proportion of the costs of hospices contributed by the NHS. [74700]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts (PCTs) are responsible within the national health service for commissioning and funding services for their resident population, including palliative care. The Government have met their commitment in the NHS Cancer Plan to provide an extra £50 million per annum for specialist palliative care. This represents a 40 per cent. increase in NHS funding on 2000 levels. PCTs, having assessed their local priorities, can invest more. This investment must be in line with local strategic plans and an assessment of need.

The NHS is currently receiving the largest sustained increase in funding in its history. PCTs will be able to use these extra resources to deliver on both national and local priorities including, as they determine, palliative care.

Hospital Building

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the major hospital building projects that (a) are under way and (b) have received building permission. [74189]

Andy Burnham: The following information lists the major hospital building projects that are under construction:

University Hospitals Coventry and Warwickshire;
East Lancashire Hospitals;
Avon and Wiltshire Mental Health Partnership;
Lewisham Hospital;
Barking, Havering and Redbridge Hospitals;
Brighton and Sussex University;
Oxford Radcliffe Hospitals;
Newcastle upon Tyne Hospitals;
Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals;
Leeds Teaching Hospitals;
Central Manchester and Manchester Children's Hospitals;
Sherwood Forest Hospitals;
Portsmouth Hospitals; and Barts and The London Hospitals.

All schemes are required to have secured outline and full planning permission as a condition of approval to proceed to construction.

Hospital Provision (Liverpool)

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she last reviewed strategic hospital provision in Liverpool; and if she will make a statement. [74554]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is the responsibility of the Cheshire and Merseyside strategic health authority to build capacity and create a strategic framework for the improvement of the health service in Cheshire and Merseyside, including the provision of hospital services.

Islington Primary Care Trust

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total spending by Islington primary care trust was in each of the last five years; what those figures represent per capita; what the capita figures were for the rest of London in each year; and what the estimated figures are for 2006-07. [73904]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The table shows total expenditure and expenditure per head by Islington primary care trust (PCT) and organisations in London.

	Islington PCT		London strategic health authorities (SHA) area
	Expenditure (£000)	Expenditure per head (£)	Expenditure per head (£)
2002-03	260,897	1,444.14	1,186.77
2003-04	261,761	1,448.92	1,315.78
2004-05	313,248	1,721.45	1,441.33

Notes:
1. Islington PCT did not come into existence until 1 April 2002.
2. Expenditure by strategic health authority area is taken as the total expenditure of the strategic health authority, and primary care trusts within the strategic health authority area.
3. Expenditure on general dental services and pharmaceutical services accounted for by the Dental Practice Board and Prescription Pricing Authority, respectively, are excluded. This expenditure cannot be included within the figures for the individual health bodies as they are not included in commissioner accounts.

Language Assessments

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what language assessments are undertaken by non-UK trained (a) medical and (b) nursing staff before they are permitted to work in the NHS. [70155]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Medical and nursing overseas applicants must be registered by the General Medical Council (GMC) and the Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC) respectively before being permitted to work in the national health service. Both the GMC and the NMC require applicants from outside the European Economic Area to demonstrate competence in the English language by achieving a specific mark in the International English Language Testing System (IELTS). NHS employees have a responsibility to satisfy themselves that doctors and nurses they employ are able to communicate effectively and may decide to test accordingly.

Local Improvement Schemes

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list local improvement finance trust schemes undertaken in (a) Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency and (b) Shropshire in each year since the initiative was introduced. [74337]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There are no local improvement finance trusts (LIFT) schemes in the Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency or in Shropshire. It is for local primary care trusts to decide to seek approval from the Department to establish LIFT schemes in their areas, and they do this in the light of the health and social care needs of their population. The local primary care trusts have decided not to seek approval to establish LIFT schemes in their areas.

Lowermoor Water Pollution

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will arrange for funding for a systematic long-term study of the health effects that (a) have resulted and (b) will result from the Lowermoor water pollution incident. [74280]

Caroline Flint: We will consider the need for further work on health effects of the Lowermoor water pollution incident after we have received the final report of the Lowermoor sub-group of the committee on toxicity of chemicals in food, consumer products and the environment. The draft report has been out for consultation.

Lyme Disease

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the Department is providing for research into Lyme disease in 2006-07; and how much was spent in each of the last three years. [74622]

Caroline Flint: The Department is funding research by the Health Protection Agency (HPA) in two areas relating to Lyme disease: diagnosis and detection, and a survey of ticks.

The HPA's Lyme disease specialist reference unit laboratory, which undertakes routine diagnostic work, is conducting research in diagnosis and detection. The costs of the research work are financed from the core funding of the HPA and are not separately identifiable.

A survey of ticks is being undertaken by HPA's centre for emergency preparedness and response. Funding for this is through HPA's grant in aid and the estimated costs for this work are as follows:

	£ Amount
2006-07[1]	38,777
2005-06	37,286
2004-05	35,851

[1] Full year projection

Figures are not available for 2003-04.

Macfarlane Trust

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether she has arranged to meet the Chairman of the Macfarlane Trust to discuss the Trust's report requesting increased funding for people with haemophilia who were infected with HIV by their NHS treatment; [73258]

(2) what assessment she has made of the adequacy of the average payment to those registered with the Macfarlane Trust; [73259]

(3) what response her Department has made to the recommendation in the business case of the Macfarlane Trust that a capital sum should be paid to the surviving registrants of the Trust. [73260]

Caroline Flint: The Department is considering a submission from the Macfarlane Trust seeking increased funding. This consideration will be concluded shortly. It is the Department's intention to continue funding the Trust on a year to year basis. I have written to the chairman of the Macfarlane Trust agreeing to arrange a meeting.

Medicine Disposal

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to prevent the inappropriate (a) use and (b) disposal of drugs following the death of a person in receipt of prescribed medicines. [74609]

Andy Burnham: A number of steps have been taken. As part of the new contractual framework that went live from April 2005, all community pharmacies are expected to accept unwanted medicines and should have suitable and safe arrangements for the collection and safe disposal of medicines. The profile of safe use, storage and disposal of medicines has been raised through NHS Direct's website and the NHS Direct section of the Thompson local directory, which is issued to all households. We are also in discussion with NHS Direct to develop a leaflet, which professionals can give to members of the public when they are prescribed controlled drugs to ensure that they understand the importance of taking these medicines, and also to encourage them to return unused and unwanted medicines to pharmacies for safe disposal. We take every appropriate opportunity to communicate messages of safe use and disposal of medicines in our communication strategy.

The Fourth Report of the Shipman Inquiry made a number of recommendations to ensure the appropriate disposal of controlled drugs following the death of the person in receipt of these prescribed medicines. The Department is currently piloting patient drug record cards for schedule two injectable controlled drugs in the community.

Mental Health

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the findings were of the race equality impact assessment of the 2004 draft Mental Health Bill; and when she expects to publish the assessment. [71253]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As the draft Mental Health Bill published in 2004 no longer represents current Government policy on mental health legislation we have not and do not intend to finalise the report of the race equality impact assessment (REIA) that was undertaken last year. However, we have listened to what people said during the consultation on the 2004 draft Bill and we will carry forward their comments when developing the REIA for the amending Bill.

We will be publishing a summary of the responses collected from the former REIA process, to assist in the development of issues for the current REIA. The summary will be available on the Department website shortly.

Information about the Mental Health Bill REIA is available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/Consultations/LiveConsultations/LiveConsultationsArticle/fs/en?CONTENT_ID=4134722&chk=UugHb7.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration has been given to the insertion of a non-discrimination clause in the Bill to amend the Mental Health Act 1983. [71255]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There is no need to include a non-discrimination clause in the Bill to amend the Mental Health Act because the legislation must work in conjunction with other non-discrimination legislation, including the Race Relations Act, which prohibits any discrimination on racial grounds including race, colour, nationality or ethnic or national origins, and the Disability Discrimination Act.

However, while there is no need to duplicate this principle in primary legislation, we recognise the need to ensure that this important principle is understood and adhered to by those who use the Mental Health Act. We will therefore include guidance on how to avoid discrimination in the Mental Health Code of Practice.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to conduct a race equality impact assessment of (a) amendments to the Mental Health Act 1983 to be made by the planned Mental Health Bill and (b) the Mental Health Act 1983, as amended, in its entirety. [71256]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are currently conducting a race equality impact assessment (REIA) of the amendments to the Mental Health Act 1983. As part of this, we will be holding a series of workshop events across the country which started at the end of May and will run throughout the beginning of June this year. In addition we have published a questionnaire on our website and we are engaging with relevant stakeholders to ensure that as many people as possible are involved in the process.

The Race Relations Amendment Act requires us to assess and consult on the impact of proposed polices. That is what we are doing. We will not be carrying out a race equality impact assessment on the entire Mental Health Act 1983. However, in line with our commitment to monitoring existing policies for adverse impact, we will be noting any issues that are raised about the existing Act when we consult for the REIA on the amending Bill.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which parts of the original proposed draft Mental Health Bill she plans to introduce by regulation; and on what timescale. [69435]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There are a number of policies which were in the 2004 draft Mental Health Bill which we are not intending to take forward in the proposed Bill to amend the Mental Health Act 1983. Our intention with the proposed amending Bill is to focus on the main priorities in terms of modernising mental health legislation. Some of the policies which will not be in the amending Bill may be taken forward through other means.

For example, we are using our programme on risk management to promote the importance of care planning and we intend to use the Code of Practice to provide guidance on many issues, such as the importance of information sharing between agencies involved in a patient's care. We may also use other legislative vehicles to introduce some of the changes previously planned. For example, we are currently considering the possibility of using other legislation to provide a second tier appellate structure allowing for appeals to be heard within the tribunal system but this will not be specific to mental health, and to improve the monitoring functions of the Mental Health Act Commission. We will also be exploring the scope for clarifying the safeguards for children, if necessary through the amendment of existing regulations and guidance.

In terms of the changes we are planning to make to the 1983 Act, these may involve some new powers to make secondary legislation. In particular, we are intending to improve patient safeguards by increasing the speed and frequency of the Mental Health Review Tribunal's consideration of cases for all civil patients treated under the Act, by taking an order making power.

Multi-professional Education and Training Budget

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the multi-professional education and training budget was in each year for which figures are available; and what budget is planned for future years. [73844]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The amount budgeted for the multi-professional education and training budget in each year for which figures are available is shown in the table. Budgets for 2006-07 onwards have not yet been determined.

National Service Framework for Long-term Conditions

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to assess the implementation of the national service framework for long-term conditions. [75204]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Progress on implementation of the national service framework (NSF) for long-term conditions will be measured in a number of ways, including:

research studies commissioned as part of a national research initiative to underpin implementation of the NSF, to provide baseline data needed to measure the subsequent impact of the NSF; work to develop a national minimum dataset for long-term neurological conditions; implementation of clinical indicators developed as part of the Better Metrics programme; and work with the Healthcare Commission and Commission for Social Care Inspection to identify ways of monitoring and inspecting progress.

Neo-natal Nursing

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies there are for neo-natal nursing staff in each (a) regional health authority and (b) NHS trust; and if she will make a statement. [73304]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of vacancies for neo-natal nursing staff is not collected centrally.

NHS Deficits

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of (a) nurses and (b) midwives who may lose their jobs as a consequence of NHS deficits. [69974]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Decisions on such posts are made locally and the Department does not collect information of this kind centrally.

NHS Direct

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when Ministers ceased to monitor the number of disabled nurses employed by NHS Direct; [74519]

(2) how many former paramedics are employed by NHS Direct; how many of them are disabled; and how many of the latter are employed at call centres planned for closure. [74525]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not monitor the number of disabled staff employed by NHS Direct.

Information on how many former paramedics are employed by NHS Direct and how many of them are disabled is not centrally held. It may be available from the Chairman of NHS Direct special health authority.

NHS Expenditure

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the total NHS budget was spent on (a) mental health services, (b) prescription drugs and (c) anti-depressants in each of the last five years. [69339]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not available in the requested format. Information on expenditure by the national health service on mental health services in each of the last five years for which data are available is shown in Table 1. The table also shows the proportion of mental health expenditure as part of the hospital and community mental health services budget. The data exclude social care spend on people with mental health problems, and expenditure concerning people treated in primary care for whom a specific diagnosis has not been reached. The figures therefore underestimate the total mental health expenditure.

Table 1

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the NHS has spent per head of population in (a) Staffordshire and (b) Tamworth constituency in each year since 1997. [68371]

The table shows the total expenditure per head by organisations within the current Shropshire and Staffordshire strategic health authority (SHA) area.

This expenditure cannot be included within the figures for the individual health bodies as they are not included in commissioner accounts.

The figure for 2004-05 represents 1.3 per cent. of the income from private patients and trusts are expected to take action to recover all unpaid bills.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average rent paid by NHS institutions is for buildings provided under the private finance initiative as a percentage of the total cost of such buildings; and if she will make a statement. [72736]

Andy Burnham: There is no rent paid by the national health service for buildings provided under the private finance initiative. Instead, the NHS pays an operating payment each year, for the use of the serviced asset, during the life of the contract. Payments due are related to the availability of the hospital and the attainment by the private sector of agreed quality standards.

NHS Management

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS trust (a) chief executives, (b) chairmen and (c) senior managers are qualified (i) doctors, (ii) nurses and (iii) other healthcare professionals; and what plans she has to increase these figures. [70158]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information in respect of chief executives and senior managers is not collected centrally. The NHS Appointments Commission is responsible for appointing the chairmen of NHS organisations, a number of whom are retired clinicians. I have asked the Appointments Commission to write to the right hon. Gentleman direct with the information he seeks.

NHS Pension Scheme

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many members there are of the NHS pension scheme; and how many of those are pensioners. [71572]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Details of the membership of the NHS pension scheme at 31 December 2005 are shown in the following table.

	Number
Active members[1]	1,329,792
Deferred members[2]	354,342
Pensioners[3]	543,080
Total	2,218,214

[1] Active members means members who are currently contributing to the NHS pension scheme.
[2] Deferred members means members who no longer contribute to the NHS pension scheme but have retained benefits in the scheme.
[3] Pensioners means members, or dependants, who are currently in receipt of NHS pension benefits.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the causes are of delays experienced by the NHS Pension Scheme Penserver development. [70120]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The NHS Pension Scheme Penserver development is currently running to time on a timetable agreed in July 2005. The timetable was revised following a review which aimed to align the Penserver development with the anticipated needs of the NHS Pension Scheme review.

NHS Priorities

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the sets of priorities in operation in the NHS in England; how many of these sets of priorities include mental health; and what assessment she has made of the inter-relationship between the various sets of priorities. [71733]

Ms Rosie Winterton: National health service priorities for 2005 to 2008 are set out in "National Standards, Local Action: Health and Social Care Standards and Planning Framework 2005-06-2007-08", and are available from the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk. These detail healthcare standards, existing commitments and new national targets. The standards themselves will be taken into account by primary care trusts and other national health service organisations providing NHS care directly, in all settings, and aim to safeguard and raise quality and safety across the board.

The operating framework, published by the Department in January, sets out the NHS's specific business and financial arrangements for 2006-07. It, identifies six priorities for local delivery plans which will require particular attention in 2006-07, to ensure delivery of national targets by 2008 and beyond:

"health inequalities, focusing on life expectancy at birth by focusing initially on smoking cessation; achieving a maximum waiting time of two months (62 days) from urgent referral to treatment and one month (31 days) from diagnosis to treatment for all cancers; achieving an 18-week maximum wait from general practitioner referral to hospital treatment by 2008; achieving year-on-year reductions in methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) levels as set out in the agreed local delivery plans for 2006-07;

ensuring that all hospital appointments can be booked for patients' convenience through choose and book and that every patient is offered a choice of four or more providers; and improving access to genitor-urinary medicine (GUM) clinics so that by 2008 all people referred to GUM clinics can have an appointment within 48 hours".

The six priorities do not include mental health. We have also made it very clear to primary care trusts and their partner organisations that they are expected to deliver the existing mental health commitments by their target dates, and to maintain that level of performance beyond the target date. This will be monitored by the Healthcare Commission's annual health check. Thanks to the strong emphasis we put on improving mental health services since publishing the NHS Plan in 2000, very significant progress has been made to date.

NHS Salaries

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many employees in the NHS earn over £100,000 per annum, broken down by profession; and what the breakdown was in 2001. [69385]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We do not hold salary information for all individual members of staff in the national health service. The only source of information that we can draw on is the biennial NHS Earnings Survey.

The NHS Earnings Survey looks at a sample of all directly employed NHS staff, both medical and non-medical. This comprises all hospital and community health service staff, but does not include general practitioners and practice staff. The latest data available are for August 2004.

Details on the percentage of staff numbers within the earnings survey who earn in excess of £100,000 per annum by basic staff group within the 2002 and 2004 earnings survey are shown in the table.

Percentage of staff earning in excess of £100,000 per annum by basic staff group in the 2004 and 2002 NHS Staff Earnings Survey—England

Headcount (numbers)

		All staff	Medical and dental	General senior managers	Nursing and midwifery qualified	Scientific and professional qualified
2004	Percentage of sample earning over £100,000 per annum	0.9	12.1	0.1	0	0.0
	Sample size (from earnings survey)	461,775	35,502	16,038	150,236	9,615
2002	Percentage of sample earning over £100,000 per annum	0.4	4.6	0.4	0.0	0.0
	Sample size (from earnings survey)	440,026	35,409	17,108	130,301	8,309

Notes:
1. The Earnings Survey is based on a sample of approximately 50 per cent. NHS trusts in August. Figures are from SPS payroll data from all trusts in the survey for the month of August.
2. Earnings figures are based on monthly payments in August multiplied by 12 to give annual equivalent amounts.
3. The sample used in the survey is not necessarily geographically or structurally representative of all trusts in the English NHS.
4. Figures are derived from the sum of an individual's NHS earnings as found within the earnings survey. 5. Percentages are rounded to one decimal place.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average salary was of a nurse in the NHS in (a) 1997 and (b) in the latest year for which information is available. [66876]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the table. The earliest year for which comparable data are available is 1999. This represented an increase during the period of 22 per cent.

Qualified nurses and midwives group	Salary £
1999	18,600
2004	22,700

NHS Spinal Cord Injury Centres

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received regarding the capacity and funding of NHS spinal cord injury centres. [75205]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Ministers and officials regularly receive representations about funding and service provision relating to a range of conditions, including spinal cord injury. These include a number of questions answered on 14 December 2005, Official Report, columns 2172-73W.

NHS Trusts

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the former chief executives of NHS trusts who have subsequently undertaken work for the NHS as freelance consultants; and in each case where they were employed. [71403]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not hold information on former chief executives of national health service trusts who have subsequently undertaken work for the NHS as freelance consultants.

Northamptonshire Heartlands Primary Care Trust

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 8 May 2006, to Question reference 10626, on funding, what basis was used for the number of people in Northamptonshire Heartlands Primary Care Trust for the years (a) 2003-04, (b) 2004-05, (c) 2005-06, (d) 2006-07 and (e) 2007-08 when calculating the allocation per head of population. [73894]

Andy Burnham: General Practitioner practice lists at April 2004 scaled to Office for National Statistics 2003 based local authority population projections from 2003 to 2007 were used to calculate the allocations per head of population for the years 2003-04 to 2007-08 provided in the reply on 8 May 2006.

The publication "Resource Allocation: Weighted Capitation Formula" is available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/PolicyAndGuidance/OrganisationPolicy/FinanceAndPlanning/Allocations/fs/en, which explains how primary care trust populations are calculated for resource allocation.

NovoRapid

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence has made of the post-marketing data available for the insulin analogue NovoRapid, with particular reference to its suitability for continued use in young children. [72629]

Andy Burnham: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) has made no assessment of the post-marketing data on insulin analogue NovoRapid. The Medicines and Healthcare Regulatory products Authority has the responsibility for the assessment of all post-marketing data.

Nursing

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department spent on (a) advertising and (b) other marketing activities in relation to careers in NHS nursing in each year since 2001-02; what the forecast expenditure is for 2006-07; and if she will make a statement. [75151]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is not possible to identify separately our publicity and advertising figures for national health service nursing because the Department has not run a separate nursing recruitment campaign since 1999. Since 2000, the NHS Careers campaign has promoted several career options at once, including medical careers and allied health professionals, as well as nursing.

The table shows the Department's expenditure on publicity and advertising in relation to NHS Careers in each year since 2001-02.

Financial years	Publicity	£ million Advertising expenditure
2001-02	3.85	5.00
2002-03	2.57	4.23
2003-04	1.82	4.90
2004-05	3.38	5.84
2005-06	3.31	0.24

We are still considering what marketing or advertising activity may be required for this year.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions her Department has had with strategic health authorities regarding local nursing levels and recruitment requirements for nursing staff in the next 12 months; and if she will make a statement. [75152]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Nursing levels and recruitment requirements are matters for local determination.

Projected levels of demand for and supply of nurses at a strategic health authority (SHA) level form part of their local delivery plan (LDP).

The content of and performance against the LDP are issues discussed between SHA and the Department.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of those enrolled on pre-registration nursing courses completed their course successfully in each year since 2001-02; how many of those had found a nursing position within six months of successful completion of their course; and if she will make a statement. [75158]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

The Higher Education Statistics Agency (www.hesa.ac.uk) has partial data for students completing training in 2003-04.

The Nursing and Midwifery Council records the number of students who completed training in England and registered to practice. It does not record whether those nurses took up employment in the national health service.

Opiate-based Medicines

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many opiate-based medicinal products are manufactured in the UK. [74191]

Andy Burnham: There are 16 different types of opiate-based medicinal products manufactured in the United Kingdom. The 16 different drug substances are licensed under approximately 264 individual marketing authorisations for various product strengths and formulations and to various marketing authorisation holders.

Orthodontic Services

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking (a) to ensure adequate orthodontic services and (b) to increase the number of orthodontists. [70306]

Ms Rosie Winterton: On 1 April 2006, primary care trusts were given the responsibility for commissioning and developing primary care dental services, including orthodontic services, in their area to reflect the needs of the local population.

At the same time, a new framework for orthodontic treatment was introduced. This is designed to ensure that assessment of need for orthodontic treatment is carried out more fairly and consistently in order to make the best use of available resources. The national health service invests around £150 million annually in primary care orthodontic services and it is important to ensure that these resources are used as effectively as possible to meet the needs of children and other orthodontic patients.

PFI Repayments

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost of private finance initiative repayments was for each health trust in each of the last five years was; and what that is as a percentage of the trust's annual income excluding land sales in each year. [66777]

Andy Burnham: Details of unitary payments for each private finance initiative scheme which has become operational and what percentage these payments are against trust's annual turnover over the last five years have been placed in the Library.

Detailed information on land sales is not collected centrally.

Prescription Drug Costs

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the cost of prescription drugs that were returned unused and unopened in each of the last five years, broken down by primary care trust. [74529]

Andy Burnham: The annual cost of prescription drugs that are returned unused and unopened is not held centrally by the Department.

It has been previously estimated that unused medicines returned to pharmacies are probably worth £100 million per year.

The statistical bulletin "General Pharmaceutical Services in England and Wales 1995-96 to 2004-05", which is available on the Information Centre for health and social care's website at www.ic.nhs.uk/pubs/genphmsvcengwaldecade05, provides details of the weight of unwanted medicines collected and disposed of through community pharmacies, listed by primary care trust. Pharmacies do not separate out unused and unopened medicines from those that have been partially used.

Prostate Acid Phosphatase Test

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has evaluated on the accuracy of the prostate acid phosphatase test. [74414]

Andy Burnham: There has been no central or local national health service research activity concerned with the prostate acid phosphatase test. This test was largely superseded by the test for prostate specific antigen (PSA) some years ago.

Reconstituted Milk

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the health implications for infants drinking reconstituted milk made from milk powder and fluoridated water; and if she will make a statement. [64186]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Research evidence shows, that apart from the benefits to oral health, the only negative effect of adding fluoride to drinking water to a level of one part per million is on the incidence of dental fluorosis. In 2003, the independent expert advisory committee on toxicity of chemicals in food, consumer products and the environment (COT), issued a report "Fluorine in the 1997 Total Diet Study", which noted that fluoride intakes of formula-fed infants may exceed the for dental fluorosis. However, COT concluded that infants are at lesser risk of dental fluorosis than older children because the critical time for development of aesthetically significant dental fluorosis is during formation of the permanent teeth at age three to four. COT went on to recommend that more research is needed to determine the impact of the cosmetic effect of dental fluorosis on the affected individual and on any possible long-term health outcomes in people affected by dental fluorosis.

"no observed adverse effect level"

The Department is committed to a research programme to strengthen the evidence base on the fluoridation of water and we will be considering how research on dental fluorosis can be incorporated into this programme.

Royal Surrey Hospital

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, following the further recommendation of the Epsom and St. Helier NHS Hospital Trust on the St. Helier site, if she will request that the trust revises its decision (a) following a consultation with the residents of Mole Valley and Esher and Walton constituencies and (b) taking into account the proposed removal of accident and emergency services at the Royal Surrey Hospital at Guildford. [74463]

Caroline Flint: The Department has received the response from the local national health service on St. Helier and is currently considering the situation. We are aware that Surrey and Sussex have commenced discussions with stakeholders on the "Fit for the Future" review. It would be inappropriate to comment further on this.

Shrewsbury and Telford Hospitals Trust

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what levels of (a) debt and (b) deficit the Shrewsbury and Telford hospitals trust inherited from its predecessors at its inception; and whether these amounts were paid by her Department. [71602]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Shropshire and Staffordshire strategic health authority reports that at the time that Shrewsbury and Telford hospital national health service trust was established in October 2003, the historical deficit of the Royal Shrewsbury hospital NHS trust and the Princess Royal hospital NHS trust was in the region of £4.1 million.

When an NHS trust is newly established it may inherit the net assets and liabilities of any predecessor organisations; consequently it is required to manage the financial challenges that may arise from this.

Shropshire Ambulance Service

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Shropshire Ambulance Service will be merged into a West Midlands Ambulance Service within 24 months; and if she will make a statement. [74413]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Shropshire Ambulance Service has been part of the current West Midlands Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust since April 2001. Three of the four ambulance trusts in the West Midlands region, West Midlands, Coventry and Warwickshire, and Hereford and Worcester, will form a single trust on 1 July 2006. Staffordshire Ambulance Service NHS Trust will remain separate, working in partnership with the new West Midlands Ambulance Service NHS Trust, but will merge with it at a later date.

Skin Cancer

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to monitor the extent to which National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidance on the use of photodynamic therapy for skin cancer patients is being followed. [72169]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In February 2006 as part of its programme of work on interventional procedures, the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) issued guidance on the use of photodynamic therapy in the treatment of non-melanoma skin tumours.

The need for healthcare organisations to protect patients by following NICE interventional procedures guidance is a core standard as set out in "National Standards, Local Actions". The Healthcare Commission has responsibility for determining whether core standards have been met.

Tees, Esk and Wear Valleys NHS Trust

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost of recruiting staff for the Tees, Esk and Wear Valleys NHS Trust has been; and what total pension liabilities resulted from setting up the trust. [71257]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The County Durham and Tees Valley Strategic Health Authority reports that the trust has not recruited any staff as a specific result of the creation of the new organisation. The Tees, Esk and Wear Valleys National Health Service Trust has continued to recruit clinical staff to meet the needs of local people, but nothing more has been spent on this recruitment process than its two predecessor trusts would have spent recruiting to the same clinical posts.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many job reductions were made in the setting up of the Tees, Esk and Wear Valleys NHS Trust in the local health economy; and what the cost of redundancy payments has been. [71258]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The County Durham and Tees Valley Strategic Health Authority reports that currently only one chief executive has been made redundant. As a single trust board and executive team structure is implemented there will be further managerial redundancies. The final cost of these redundancies will be available in the final accounts for the trust.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the total cost was of setting up the Tees, Esk and Wear Valleys NHS Trust; what proportion of this total was accounted for by cost overruns; and if she will list the cost overruns involved; [71259]

(2) how much was spent providing new (a) signs and (b) stationery for Tees, Esk and Wear Valleys NHS Trust; [71261]

(3) what the total costs were of re-branding in setting up the Tees, Esk and Wear Valleys NHS Trust. [71262]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally but can be obtained from the Tees, Esk and Wear Valleys National Health Service Trust.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations were undertaken with (a) hon. Members, (b) the public and (c) local councillors about the naming of the Tees, Esk and Wear Valleys NHS Trust. [71263]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The County Durham and Tees Valleys Strategic Health Authority confirms that approximately 50 representatives of service users and carer groups across County Durham, the Tees Valleys and North East Yorkshire attended a consultation meeting at which the name of the new trust was discussed. The most popular option was to use the river theme.

All staff in the trusts were also invited to vote on the options, with the majority in favour of Tees Valleys and North East Yorkshire National Health Service Trust.

Local authority representatives, including County Durham council and Darlington borough council were members of the project board and were fully involved in the discussions about the name.

Trafford Surgical Centre

Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures of performance she collects for the Trafford Surgical Centre in Greater Manchester. [70435]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Activity data are collected from independent sector treatment centre providers to assess contract utilisation. Data are also collected on the 26 key performance indicators shown in the following table. These monitor clinical quality, patient experience and productivity of services. Data collection takes place on a monthly basis.

Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were completed at the Trafford Surgical Centre in Greater Manchester in 2005, broken down by type of operation. [70436]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Greater Manchester Surgical Centre opened in July 2005 and had provided 4,704 procedures at the end of March 2006. A breakdown by specialty is shown in the table.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidences of tuberculosis were identified in each primary care trust in North Cumbria in each of the last five years. [68466]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Primary care trust	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005[1]	Total
Allerdale	2		3	7	3	15

Note:

The NOIDS data provided are derived from tuberculosis cases reported within North Cumbria local authorities from 2001 to 2004. PCT boundaries are not exactly coterminous with local authority boundaries but collectively the Carlisle and District, Eden Valley and West Cumbria PCTs (Allerdale and Copeland) comprise North Cumbria.

Ultra-orphan Drug Treatments

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her policy is on the funding of ultra-orphan drug treatments; and if she will make a statement. [74188]

Andy Burnham: Ultra-orphan drug treatment for a specific set of diseases, Lysosomal Storage Disorders, has been nationally commissioned by the National Specialist Commissioning Advisory Group (NSCAG) since April 2005, for an initial two-year period until March 2007. The 2006-07 budget for this service is £58 million. NSCAG is part of the Department and currently commissions services for 33 very rare conditions on a national basis.

Funding arrangements for other ultra-orphan drugs are a matter for individual primary care trusts.

Waiting Times

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to question 70933, on waiting times, how many in-patient breaches of target would be necessary for the Government to conclude that their operating standard of six months for in-patient admissions was not being achieved. [72497]

Andy Burnham: No explicit level has been set.

The national health service currently admits around 470,000 patients per month. At the end of March 2006, 199 people had been waiting for longer than six months, that is one patient waiting at that point for every 2,350 patients admitted during the month and the Government therefore consider that the operating standard is being met.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to question 70990, on waiting times, which NHS organisations risks of breaches of the six-month waiting time for inpatient admissions are an issue; how many are being closely supported by her Department in consequence; and what support each is receiving. [72525]

Andy Burnham: There have been very few breaches of the six-month in-patient waiting times standard since it came into effect on 31 December 2005.

Our assessment is that the overall risk of breaches remains low. Administrative errors have been the cause of breaches for the majority of organisations which have reported them and we expect such errors to be swiftly rectified by the local national health service.

As a consequence, the Department continues to discuss performance with all strategic health authorities (SHAs) on a regular basis and expects SHAs to support the local NHS to deliver the six-month inpatient standard. The Department is not providing direct support to any NHS trust at present.

Walsall Primary Care Trust

Mr. Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by Walsall Primary Care Trust on capital projects in the Aldridge-Brownhills constituency in each of the last five years. [68934]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available centrally in the format requested.

Capital allocations to Walsall Teaching Primary Care Trust are shown in Table 1.

Table 1

	Operational total (£000)
2002-03	568
2003-04	647
2004-05	723

In addition, Birmingham and The Black Country Strategic Health Authority (SHA) has received strategic capital allocations, which are shown in Table 2.

Water Fluoridation

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance has been issued to strategic health authorities and primary care trusts on consultation arrangements for the proposed water fluoridation. [71328]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 124W.

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the independence of the National Fluoride Information Centre; and how the centre is funded; [71336]

(2) what research has been carried out by the National Fluoride Information Centre on the amount of fluoride people in the North West are consuming; [71337]

(3) what research has been undertaken by the National Fluoride Information Centre on all aspects of fluoride use since it was set up; [71338]

(4) what the cost to the NHS was of setting up the National Fluoride Information Centre. [71339]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Fluoride Information Centre (NFIC) is an academically independent research unit based at Manchester University. It provides objective information on all aspects of fluorides and fluoridation derived from scientific literature and reviewed by independent scientific experts. The Department has committed funding of £125,000 per annum for the three years from 2004-05 to 2006-07.

The NFIC is currently carrying out research into the temporal effects of water fluoridation on dental fluorosis, the effect water fluoridation has on the dental health of adults, the use of new tools to diagnose dental caries which may enable randomised control trials to be undertaken on the effects of water fluoridation and the monitoring of oral health in Europe to compare dental caries levels with those in England.

Young Offenders (Mental Health)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are receiving treatment for mental health conditions in young offenders institutions; and how many are receiving psychological therapies. [67642]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally. All offenders aged 18 to 21 receive screening on reception into custody to assess their health needs, and this includes mental health. All young offenders institutions have mental health in-reach teams. Comprehensive mental health needs assessments are made to identify the needs of individuals, and subsequent provision may include psychological therapies.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Abortions

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many women in Northern Ireland chose to abort their foetus due to being informed that the baby, if born, might suffer from (a) cerebral palsy, (b) Down's syndrome and (c) any other mental/physical condition in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [74221]

Paul Goggins: Abortion can be undertaken in Northern Ireland only where it is necessary to save the life of the mother or where the continuance of the pregnancy is likely to have serious and long-term effects on her mental or physical health.

The following table provides figures for the number of medical abortions recorded in Northern Ireland hospitals for each year from 2002 to 2004 (the latest year available).

	Number
2002	76
2003	73
2004	59

Air Miles

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many air miles have been accrued by senior civil servants on official business in (a) each Department in Northern Ireland and (b) his Department in each of the last three years; and how they were used. [70493]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested on the number of air miles accrued by senior civil servants on official business during the last three years, and how these were used, is not held and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Civil servants accruing air miles when travelling on Government business are not permitted to use them for private purposes.

Alcohol in Pregnancy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the prevalence of (a) foetal alcohol syndrome and (b) other complications resulting from alcohol consumption during pregnancy in the Province. [74650]

Paul Goggins: The data cannot be provided in the manner requested. It is not possible to make an assessment of the prevalence of Foetal Alcohol Syndrome (FAS) or other alcohol-related pregnancy complications in Northern Ireland as there is no database or registry of people in Northern Ireland with FAS or other possible related complications.

Allergy Services

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what allergy services are provided in Northern Ireland. [74374]

Paul Goggins: There are many different types of allergic conditions affecting both adults and children. These may be simple or complex, acute or chronic. The range of services available to diagnose and treat these conditions therefore is equally varied. The main elements are summarised in the table.

	Allergy Service
EHSSB
Royal Group of Hospitals	Two consultant immunologists provide two out-patient allergy clinics at the Royal—one in the Royal Belfast hospital for Sick Children and one in the Royal Victoria hospital.
Belfast City Hospital	Allergy testing is used within the dermatology, ENT and respiratory departments.
Ulster Hospital	Provides the first dedicated asthma and allergy service in Northern Ireland. It is consultant-led with two specialist nurses and a dietician. The dermatology department also provides an allergy service.
Regional Immunology Laboratory Service	Based at the Royal, this provides a comprehensive diagnostic service.
SHSSB
Daisy Hill Hospital	A skin patching (diagnostic) clinic is held weekly as part of the dermatology out-patient clinic.
NHSSB
Antrim Area Hospital	Offers allergy testing in dermatology and ENT for adults. Within paediatrics, children attend as day cases for allergy testing, mainly for egg and peanut allergies.
WHSSB
Sperrin Lakeland HSS Trust	A visiting dermatologist holds an allergy clinic once a week.
Altnagelvin Hospitals HSS Trust	There is no dedicated allergy service, but patients are seen as part of the dermatology and dietician service. More complex problems are referred to the Royal.
GP/Pharmacy	The majority of services for allergic conditions are delivered by GP's and pharmacy community pharmacists.

Alternative Offers of Treatment

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients within each health trust in the Province have (a) received, (b) accepted and (c) declined alternative offers of treatment since the introduction of this scheme. [74626]

Paul Goggins: As part of the drive to reduce hospital waiting times, an alternative offer scheme has been introduced to guarantee patients an offer of treatment within agreed timeframes. The Northern Ireland Patient Offer Centre was established to facilitate this scheme.

The number of patients who have been offered transfers under the alternative offer scheme are set out in the following table.

Trust	(a) Offers received	(b) Offers accepted	(c) Offers declined
Altnagelvin Group HSS Trust	24	23	1
Green Park Healthcare HSS Trust	43	30	13
Royal Group of Hospitals HSS Trust	32	21	11

ARCH Centre

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether there are plans to introduce an Assault, Rape, Counselling, Health (ARCH) Centre in North Ireland. [73359]

Paul Goggins: A sexual violence strategy is currently being developed for Northern Ireland. In developing the strategy the option of establishing a Sexual Assault Referral Centre (SARC) for Northern Ireland is being explored.

Asbestosis

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been diagnosed with asbestosis in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years; and how many have died of the disease in the same period in each health board. [74722]

Paul Goggins: The number of people diagnosed with asbestosis in Northern Ireland is not available.

Information is available on the number of those asbestosis sufferers admitted as inpatients to hospitals in Northern Ireland.

The following table details the number of admissions[1] to hospital with a primary or secondary diagnosis of asbestosis, for each year between 1995 and 2004 (the latest calendar year for which data are available). It should be noted that any individual could have been admitted to hospital more than once over the course of a year or over a number of years and would therefore be counted more than once in the table.

Assembly Elections

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Northern Ireland Assembly elections scheduled to be held in May 2008 will be based on constituencies as defined in the forthcoming Boundary Commission report. [72715]

Mr. Hanson: The Northern Ireland Act 2006 provides for the postponement of the May 2007 elections to May 2008 if an Executive is formed before 25 November 2006.

The Boundary Commission announced their Revised Recommendations on 18 May 2006. They must consider all representations on the Revised Recommendations received within one month of their publication. Further to this, they will submit their Final Recommendations to the Secretary of State who must then lay these (with or without modifications) before Parliament for approval.

The Commission must submit their Final Report to the Secretary of State by June 2007.

I await the final report.

Attacks on NHS Premises/Staff

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many attacks on (a) staff, (b) patients and (c) visitors have occurred on NHS premises in each health trust in the Province in each of the last five years; and how many people have been charged as a result. [74578]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not held centrally by the Department before 2004 and will take some time to collate from the Health and Personal Social Services. I will write to the hon. Member with the information as soon as it is available and place a copy in the Library.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the costs to the NHS in the Province over the last five years resulting from attacks on staff. [74580]

Paul Goggins: It is not possible to estimate the costs to the Health and Personal Social Services in Northern Ireland as a result of attacks on staff as this information is not held by employers.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many NHS staff have required counselling in the last 12 months following work-related attacks. [74581]

Paul Goggins: Counselling is available to all staff in the Health and Personal Social Services either through the Occupational Health Service or via a confidential helpline. However, by its very nature it is a confidential service and therefore it is not possible to state how many staff have required counselling in the last 12 months as a result of work-related attacks.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidelines are in place for NHS staff accompanying and dealing with patients or relatives who are under the influence of drugs or alcohol. [74582]

Paul Goggins: There is no central guidance. There is however, a duty of care on Health and Personal Social Services employers to ensure staff are safe at all times while in their place of employment and trusts may have individual policies and procedures on how to deal with patients and relatives who present for treatment while under the influence of alcohol and drugs.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many racist attacks on hospital staff occurred in the Province in each of the last five years. [74583]

Paul Goggins: Racist attacks on hospital staff are not currently recorded as a specific statistic. They are however subsumed within the Department's monitoring of violent attacks on health and personal social services staff figures as both verbal and physical abuse. The Department is actively addressing the issue of racist attacks and has commissioned research which is being carried out by the Institute for Conflict Research.

Avian Influenza

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made with contingency plans in Northern Ireland involving a cull of birds in the event of a pandemic of avian influenza; and what assessment he has made of the speed with which a vaccine could be produced in large enough quantities once a particular strain of avian influenza has been identified. [74535]

David Cairns: The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) has a contingency plan in place to ensure that any outbreak of Avian Influenza is dealt with quickly and effectively. If there is an outbreak in domestic poultry, infected birds and dangerous contacts will be culled. As part of the ongoing testing of the plan, culling has been tested on two separate occasions with a further exercise planned over the summer. Vaccination offers potential benefits in disease control but preventive vaccination of poultry is not the most effective defence. At UK-level, a plan is in place for a possible vaccination programme for zoo birds for conservation purposes, based on veterinary risk assessment, and 2.3 million doses of vaccine have been obtained for this purpose. DARD's policy on the wider use of vaccination will be kept under review in the light of scientific developments in vaccines.

Ballyhalbent-Portavogie Road

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to improve the coastal road between Ballyhalbent and Portavogie; and if he will make a statement. [74728]

David Cairns: The chief executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 31 May 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding what plans he has to improve the coastal road between Ballyhalbert and Portavogie; and if he will make a statement.

As this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service, I have been asked to reply.

As you will be aware, the coastal road between Ballyhalbert and Portavogie which forms part of the A2 runs along the east coast of the Ards Peninsula to Portaferry for a distance of approximately 35Km. The road is inspected regularly in accordance with Roads Service's policy governing the inspection and repair of roads and is considered to be in a generally good condition.

You may also be aware that 6 years ago the portion to which you refer was resurfaced and had new drainage installed. Accordingly, I can advise you that there are no proposals at present to carry out any improvement works on this portion of road.

Bed Occupancy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the percentage bed occupancy rate was in each hospital in the Province in each quarter of the last 12 months. [74630]

Paul Goggins: Percentage bed occupancy rates for all hospitals in Northern Ireland for all quarters in 2005 are shown in the following table.

Belfast City Hospital

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the car park at the Belfast City Hospital Site is expected to be finished, with particular reference to provision at the new cancer centre. [74685]

Paul Goggins: The new multi storey car park at Belfast City Hospital is currently on programme for phased completion as follows:

	Date	Spaces
Phase I	31 August 2006	330
Phase II	31 October 2006	330
Phase III	22 December 2006	480

This will accommodate the additional requirement arising from the opening of the cancer centre and the transfer of services from Belvoir Park Hospital, as well as making provision to support future development on the BCH site eg the proposed surgical unit.

The area that was used as the contractor's compound during the construction of the cancer centre has been reinstated as a dedicated car park for radiotherapy patients visiting the building as an interim solution until the new facility is available.

Bereavement Support

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what training is available to staff in hospitals when dealing with a bereavement; and if he will make a statement. [74214]

Paul Goggins: All trusts make provision for training on bereavement care for staff to deal with families and friends following bereavement.

The Department of Health Social Services and Public Safety established a Regional Bereavement Network in March 2006. The introduction of this network will ensure that bereavement services for people across Northern Ireland are further improved. It will also improve training for staff in bereavement care and ensure that good policies and practices are in place.

Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the occasions when an amendment has been moved by (a) a Labour backbencher, (b) an Opposition backbencher and (c) an Opposition front bench spokesman to a Bill sponsored by his Department which has been accepted by his Department during the 2005-06 Session; and if he will make a statement. [72487]

Mr. Hain: My Department has sponsored the following four Bills during the current session: the Terrorism (Northern Ireland) Bill (enacted on 16 February 2006); the Northern Ireland (Offences) Bill (withdrawn on 11 January 2006); the Northern Ireland Bill (enacted on 8 May 2006) and the Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill (currently before the House of Lords).

Information on amendments moved and accepted during the Committee and Report Stages on these Bills is published in the Official Report.

Biodiversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) which Minister in his Department is responsible for monitoring his Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if he will make a statement; [73940]

(2) what steps his Department plans to take to monitor the extent to which public bodies which report to him comply, from October, with their duty to conserve biodiversity in exercising their functions, under section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006. [74398]

David Cairns: The duties contained within the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 (or the extended duties contained within Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006) relating to the conservation of biological diversity, do not apply to Northern Ireland.

Northern Ireland is, however, currently considering introducing a statutory duty upon Government Departments and public bodies in the proposed review of the Wildlife (Northern Ireland) Order 1985. This is intended to be similar to the statutory duty in Great Britain. In the meantime, progress against delivery of the 76 recommendations contained in the Northern Ireland Biodiversity Strategy (adopted in 2002) continues to be monitored closely by the Northern Ireland Biodiversity Group, which independently provides me, as Minister responsible for the environment, with three yearly reports on progress.

Board Area Populations

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total population is of each education and library board area in Northern Ireland. [74318]

Mr. Hanson: The following table gives the official estimate of the population, at 30 June 2004, by education and library board in Northern Ireland.

Education and library board	Population
Belfast	269,000
North Eastern	402,300
South Eastern	395,100
Southern	355,100
Western	288,900
Northern Ireland	1,710,300

Note:
Data may not add up due to rounding.

Bought-in Procedures

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many procedures each health board in the Province has bought from (a) within and (b) outside the Province over the last 12 months; and what the costs were. [74631]

Paul Goggins: 707 complaints were made during 2005-06.

Breast Cancer

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many health board trusts in Northern Ireland have introduced computer systems for rapid diagnosis of breast cancer. [74218]

Paul Goggins: No health service trust in Northern Ireland has introduced computer systems for rapid diagnosis of breast cancer. The National Breast Cancer System is used to capture and report the results of mammograms carried out throughout the screening programme. It is identical to the system used in the rest of the UK and has been operational in Northern Ireland for some years. All mammograms are read by fully trained radiologists.

Budget Allocation

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the allocation of the extra £26 million allocated to Northern Ireland in the 2006 Budget. [67066]

Mr. Hanson: The £26 million resource allocated to Northern Ireland over the next two years from the Chancellor's 2006 Budget will be invested into the Children and Young People's Funding Package, with most going directly to schools across Northern Ireland. The package is intended to reduce underachievement and improve the life chances of children and young people by enhancing their educational development and fostering their health, well being and social inclusion.

Bullying at Work

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of how many (a) men and (b) women have been bullied at work in Northern Ireland in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [74315]

Maria Eagle: Bullying is not a jurisdiction recognised in law by which a claim can be made to an industrial tribunal or the Fair Employment Tribunal. Therefore government has no means of recording numbers of men or women who have been bullied in the workplace. However, the Labour Relations Agency in 2004-05 received some 43,000 specific employment enquiries of which some 9,000 related specifically to bullying. Around 60 per cent. of those individuals who contacted the Labour Relations Agency enquiry point were female. The breakdowns of statistics in terms of employer or employee were 39 per cent. employer and 61 per cent. employee.

Buses

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent (a) per head of population and (b) per passenger on bus services (i) including and (ii) excluding funding for concessionary travel in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [73850]

David Cairns: The Department for Regional Development made the following payments to bus companies in Northern Ireland over the specified 10 year period (figures include capital grant).

Cancer Screening

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will assess the merits of introducing bowel cancer screening in the Province. [74574]

Paul Goggins: The UK National Screening Committee (NSC) has considered the case for bowel screening and recommended that a population programme should be introduced. As a consequence, England and Scotland have announced their intention to introduce a bowel cancer screening programme.

I would wish to see such a programme introduced in Northern Ireland. However, this will have a significant effect on current services for those showing possible symptoms of bowel cancer. Before a similar programme could be implemented in Northern Ireland there is a need to consider the current capacity and pressure on the symptomatic bowel service and to identify other issues which need to be addressed, including additional capacity required, training and accreditation of colonoscoptists and units.

A workshop has therefore been arranged for 20 June 2006 to explore the issues and identify the steps and actions required in the symptomatic service in order to prepare for a bowel screening programme.

Carers (Health Checks)

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will introduce health checks for carers within 12 months of their taking on that role. [73504]

Paul Goggins: Carers already have a legal entitlement to an assessment of their care needs which is aimed at supporting them in their caring role and helping them to maintain their own health and well being.

Carers with specific health problems may contact their general practitioners, who will make a clinical assessment of need, which may include a comprehensive health check.

Cathedral Quarter

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been allocated for the promotion of the arts in the Cathedral Quarter of Belfast in each year since 1997. [71052]

Maria Eagle: Funding allocated for the promotion of the arts in the Cathedral Quarter of Belfast since 1997 is shown on the following table:

Child Sexual Abuse

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will carry out a review of provision of therapy services for victims of child sexual abuse in Northern Ireland; and if he will allocate additional resources to ensure that all victims are provided with services and support. [73223]

Paul Goggins: A sexual violence strategy is currently being developed for Northern Ireland. In developing the strategy the need for an assessment of existing medical, counselling and social support services is being explored.

Child Support Agency

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to his letter of 19 October 2005 (COR/443/2005) on the Child Support Agency, when the chief executive of the Child Support Agency will be in a position to reply to the hon. Member for North Down. [52377]

Mr. Hanson: The chief executive of the Child Support Agency replied to the hon. Lady on 21 October 2005.

Childhood Leukaemia

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what response his Department plans to make to the findings of the Health Protection Agency in relation to the effects on childhood leukaemia rates of living near electricity lines and pylons. [74979]

Paul Goggins: The Stakeholder Advisory Group on extremely low frequency (ELF) electromagnetic fields (SAGE) was set up in response to the Health Protection Agency (HPA) advice and is sponsored by the Department of Health with funding contributions from the charity 'Children with Leukaemia' and National Grid plc. SAGE has brought together stakeholders

> "to identify and explore the implications for a precautionary approach to ELF EMF and make practical recommendations for precautionary measures."

Stakeholders include representatives from UK Government Departments, industry, independent academics, regulators, public concern groups and associated professional groups. Government will be pleased to receive the SAGE report and will give it full consideration when it is completed in due course.

Childhood Obesity

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he plans to encourage the wider use of calorie-free sweeteners as part of his strategy to reduce childhood obesity in the Province. [74471]

Paul Goggins: The report of the Fit Futures taskforce on tackling obesity in children and young people was published in March of this year. The report included over 70 recommendations designed to deliver the public service agreement target to stop the increase in levels of obesity in children by 2010.

The wider use of calorie-free sweeteners was not advocated by the Fit Futures taskforce and does not form part of plans to reduce childhood obesity. Foods containing sweeteners are acidic and can contribute to dental erosion when sipped over long periods of time. They may also serve to encourage or maintain a preference for sweet foods. Children, especially young children, could be at risk of taking in more than the acceptable daily intake of sweeteners.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the percentage of children in Northern Ireland who are (a) overweight and (b) obese. [74378]

Paul Goggins: Information relating to percentages of children who are (a) overweight and (b) obese is not currently available for all children in Northern Ireland. However such information is available for all Primary 1 pupils from the Northern Ireland Child Health Systems. Table 1 below shows the percentage of Primary 1 pupils in Northern Ireland, 2003-04, who were overweight or obese.

Table 1: Northern Ireland: 2003-04

Female	19.8	6.9

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what targets he has set to reduce childhood obesity in Northern Ireland. [74379]

Paul Goggins: Priorities and Budget 2006-08 contains a public service agreement target to stop the increase in levels of obesity in children by 2010. The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, the Department of Education and the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure share responsibility for the achievement of this target.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent progress has been made towards reducing childhood obesity in Northern Ireland. [74380]

Paul Goggins: The report of the Fit Futures taskforce on tackling obesity in children and young people was published in March of this year. The report included over 70 recommendations designed to deliver the public service agreement target to stop the increase in levels of obesity in children by 2010. A response from the Ministerial Group on Public Health to the report, including a comprehensive, cross-departmental implementation plan is currently being developed.

Action to address key recommendations has, however, already commenced. The Department of Education, in conjunction with the -Education and Library Boards, began the implementation of New Nutritional Standards for School Meals in September 2005. Over 800 schools are now participating in this initiative and the remainder will be included by the end of 2006. Under the Extended Schools element of the Children and Young People funding package, £10 million is available each year in the period 2006-08 for allocation to schools in disadvantaged areas. The focus of Extended Schools will include healthy lifestyles and tackling childhood obesity.

As part of the Sport in Our Community Programme, the Sports Council for Northern Ireland is making a major investment to encourage more children to develop the basic physical movement skills required to facilitate sustained involvement in sport and a healthy and active lifestyle. In addition, the Health Promotion Agency has launched "Every Step is a Forward Step", to promote the health benefits of physical activity and to encourage members of the public to undertake regular, moderate physical activity.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the volume of soft drinks which was consumed per day on average by (a) adults and (b) children in Northern Ireland in the last 12 months. [74381]

Paul Goggins: Figures provided the Northern Ireland Food and Drinks Association (NIFDA) indicate that the average person in Northern Ireland drinks 122 litres of carbonated soft drinks per year, 13 litres more than people in the Republic of Ireland and 17 litres more than people in the UK as a whole.

No specific data is available regarding the volume of soft drinks consumed by children. However, information from the 2005 Child Wellbeing Survey indicates that 38.4 per cent. of children aged 8 to 11 years consume soft drinks at least once per day.

Nationally, the most recent information available on consumption of soft drinks by children dates back to the 1997 National Diet and Nutrition Survey (NDNS) of young people aged 4 to 18 years. This survey, carried out in England, Wales and Scotland, showed that average consumption of soft drinks by the 4 to 18-year age group in Britain in 1997 was 441g/day. Just over half of this (264g/day) comprised standard (i.e. other than low calorie) varieties.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has had with the Food Standards Agency regarding the implications of calorific content of soft drinks on childhood obesity. [74382]

Paul Goggins: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has not had any recent discussions with the Food Standards Agency specifically relating to the impact of the calorific content of soft drinks on childhood obesity.

The Food Standards Agency Northern Ireland (FSA NI) was recently involved in the production of a report into childhood obesity presented to the Ministerial Group on Public Health, titled "Fit Futures—focus on food activity and young people!"

The Fit Futures taskforce considered in detail the issue of food provision within schools, including the provision of food and drink through vending machines, and has recommended that food and nutrient-based standards should be introduced for all food in schools.

A cross-departmental working group has been set up in order to progress this issue. The FSA has developed a healthy drinks vending toolkit and other relevant resource materials to support the initiative.

The FSA nationally has commenced discussions with stakeholders on a strategy to address the calorie levels in certain food to help consumers achieve energy balance; the levels of sugar in some foods, including soft drinks, is being explored as part of this strategy.

Chiropracters

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans there are in Northern Ireland for statutory regulation of chiropractors from (a) the rest of the UK and (b) EU countries. [74234]

Paul Goggins: There are no plans for further regulation as chiropractors in Northern Ireland like their colleagues in the rest of the United Kingdom are statutorily regulated under the Chiropractors Act 1994.

Chiropractors practising in the EU who wish to work in the UK must satisfy the following rules before admission to the General Chiropractic Council (GCC) register.

1. Chiropractors who practise in EU countries that have statutory regulation can apply to the GCC register under EU General Directive 89/48/EEC.

2. Where a EU country does not have statutory regulation of chiropractors the applicant may still be eligible for registration under the GCC (Registration of Chiropractors with Foreign Qualifications) Rules 2002. This allows applicants who hold a recognised qualification to apply for registration and would include passing a test of competence.

In both cases the chiropractor must have been practising in the EU for a minimum of three years before they can be considered for registration to the General Chiropractic Council.

Cholesterol

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent in the Province on (a) drug treatment and (b) dietary advice for those at risk of elevated cholesterol levels in each of the last five years. [74575]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not readily available.

Primary care expenditure on prescribed cholesterol-lowering drugs over the last five years is shown in the table.

	Cost of drugs (£ million)
2001	17.31
2002	20.96
2003	26.35
2004	32.85
2005	30.04

One of the classes of cholesterol-lowering drugs, known as the statins, can also be bought over the counter at community pharmacists, under pharmacist supervision, and this spend is not available. Most health professionals, such as GPs and nurses, would offer advice on a range of measures to improve health including advice on reducing cholesterol levels but the cost cannot be separately identified. Similarly, there is also hospital expenditure on cholesterol-lowering drugs, but the amounts in question are not identified.

Community Health Care

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to increase the range of activities delivered by health care professionals in the community. [74389]

Paul Goggins: Too many people in Northern Ireland are admitted to hospital unnecessarily or have their discharge delayed because the community services are not available to support them at home. A key element of our programme of reform for the Health and Personal Social Services (HPSS) is the expansion of community-based health and social care so that people can have access to quality services close to their own homes.

These will include a range of diagnostic, treatment, rehabilitation and social care support services specifically designed to support people to live independent lives and reduce unnecessary reliance on acute hospital services.

Complementary Therapists

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complementary therapists are practising in Northern Ireland who are affiliated to a general practitioner practice; and what legislation is in place to ensure those offering this type of alternative medicine are qualified to do so. [74227]

Paul Goggins: There are no complementary therapists practising in Northern Ireland who are affiliated to a general practitioner practice.

Osteopaths are statutorily regulated under the Osteopaths Act 1993 and chiropractors are statutorily regulated under the Chiropractors Act 1994. There is no statutory regulation of any other form of complementary or alternative therapy. Legislation which regulates doctors, nurses, midwives, health visitors, the professions registered by the Professions Allied to Medicine Act 1960 and pharmacists covers their practice of complementary or alternative therapies, or provision of advice by them to the public about such products.

Council Staff Sickness

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average sickness rates were for staff employed at each district council in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [74210]

David Cairns: The information on sickness rates within district councils is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the Local Government Auditor, under the provisions in Article 26 of the Local Government (Northern Ireland) Order 2005, is in the process of collecting information about absenteeism for 2005-06. This information will be published and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Criminal Justice

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he plans to introduce legislation in Northern Ireland containing provisions on sentences analogous with those in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 in England and Wales for those convicted of serious sexual or violent offences. [73541]

Mr. Hanson: The indeterminate and extended sentences legislated for in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 are under consideration in the current review of the Sentencing Framework in Northern Ireland. Protection of the public will be central to my thinking in the development of a new Framework.

I will make an announcement in due course.

Criminality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria he uses to define criminality. [53135]

Mr. Woodward: Criminality involves an illegal act prohibited by common law or by statute which may result in prosecution and punishment by the state if the accused is convicted.

Curran Report

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action has been taken to implement the recommendations of the Curran Report commissioned by the Department of Education in Northern Ireland. [74376]

Maria Eagle: The recommendations of the Final Report Part 1 (Parity, Performance and Progression) of the Teachers' Pay and Conditions of Service Inquiry have been largely implemented. The Final Report Part 2 (Improving Conditions, Raising Standards and Negotiating Arrangements) made a number of wide-ranging recommendations, which, if implemented, would place a significant demand upon the education budget.

Successive Ministers have asked the Teachers' Negotiating Committee, which comprises both employers and teacher unions, to consider how the recommendations in the report can be progressed through alternative and innovative ways of working. To this end the Committee has established a working group to identify potential strategies that will free up teachers' time and help reduce teacher workload in line with the recommendations.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate has been made of the costs required to implement in full the recommendations of the Curran Report. [74377]

Maria Eagle: Of the 25 recommendations of the Final Report Part 2 (Improving Conditions, Raising Standards and Negotiating Arrangements) of the Teachers' Pay and Conditions of Service Inquiry ("Curran 2"), the Department of Education estimates that five would have significant financial implications, and would cost some £84 million a year to implement at 2004-05 prices.

A number of the report's other recommendations will have cost implications but these are not expected to be significant.

Curricula

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average annual cost was of educating a child in the (a) enriched curriculum and (b) traditional curriculum in 2005-06. [74690]

Maria Eagle: The enriched curriculum is primarily a pedagogical approach to teaching and learning for children in years one and two of statutory education. It is designed to be sensitive to the way young children learn naturally and to provide greater flexibility in how children learn at an early age. It is not possible to make a direct comparison in the cost of delivery of the enriched curriculum and traditional curriculum, as there are other contributory factors, such as school size and type and involvement in other initiatives that influence costs in any individual school.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his policy is on the use of synthetic phonics in the enriched curriculum in Northern Ireland's schools. [74691]

Maria Eagle: Synthetic phonics is one of a range of measures available to teachers in schools in Northern Ireland for the teaching of reading. The Department of Education has no plans to specify that schools should only use this measure.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment was made in preparing the final report of the Early Years Enriched Curriculum Project of the contribution of the enriched and traditional curriculums to improving the educational standards achieved by children in the Shankill Road area. [74814]

Maria Eagle: The Enriched Curriculum pilot arose from concerns expressed by teachers in the Shankill area, where the traditional curriculum was not meeting the needs of their pupils. The external evaluation by Queens University was undertaken on a longitudinal basis. It compares the achievements of Enriched Curriculum pupils and traditional curriculum pupils in different classes within the same school. The findings are that children in the Enriched Curriculum in Shankill schools benefit from the approach. Their educational achievements are at least of the same standard as those taking the traditional curriculum by the end of Year 4, and in addition they demonstrate increased self-esteem, confidence, oral skills and enjoyment of learning.

Departmental Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list (a) Acts and (b) parts of Acts which received Royal Assent between 1976 and 2006 for which his Department has policy responsibility and which remain in force. [70097]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is not held centrally. It could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Press Office

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in his Department's press office. [74353]

Paul Goggins: Information on ethnicity is provided by staff in the Northern Ireland Office on a voluntary basis. The purpose for which this personal data is collected is to enable the Department to monitor the effectiveness of its policies on equality of opportunity. Such monitoring is neither undertaken nor appropriate at the level of directorates, branches or offices. The following table shows the ethnic composition of the NIO both in Belfast and London as at 24 May 2006.

	Number
Black or Asian	14
Others	1,839
Ethnicity not declared	229
Total	2,082

Departmental Staff

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) women and (b) men are employed in the Department; what the average pay was for (i) women and (ii) men in the Department in (A) 1997 and (B) 2006; what women's average pay is as a percentage of men's average pay; and how many (1) women and (2) men the Department employed in each of the last five years, broken down by grade. [67778]

Paul Goggins: The information is as follows.

(a) There are 1,245 women employed in the Department at present.

(b) There are 820 men employed in the Department at present.

With regard to pay, SCS staff and those at Grade A and below are covered by two separate pay systems. The figures have, therefore, been broken down on this basis:

(i) (A) The average pay for women, both at SCS and Grade A and below, in the Department in 1997 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

(i) (B) The average pay for women at SCS level in the Department in 2006 is £64,506.

The average pay for women at Grade A and below in the Department in 2006 is £19,842.

(ii) (A) The average pay for men, both at SCS and Grade A and below, in the Department in 1997 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

(ii) (B) The average pay for men at SCS level in the Department in 2006 is £76,509.

The average pay for men at Grade A and below in the Department in 2006 is £23,074.

For those staff at SCS level, women's average pay in 2006 is 84.3 per cent. of men's.

For those staff at Grade A and below, women's average pay in 2006 is 83.7 per cent. of men's.

(1) and (2) The figures for the numbers of women and men employed in the Northern Ireland Office in each of the last five years, broken down by grade, are as follows:

	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Northern Ireland civil servants attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event in London in 2005; and what the total cost was of their attendance. [73084]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will write to the hon. Member with details of the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event. Copies of her letter will be placed in the Library.

Domestic Violence

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incidents of domestic violence were reported (a) against women and (b) against men in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [74238]

Mr. Hanson: Statistics on domestic violence incidents are available from the Police Service of Northern Ireland and from the Domestic Violence Helpline run by Women's Aid Federation. The number of incidents reported and calls received are given in the following table. Within the police statistics for incidents reported there is no official breakdown available for male and female but it is known that women are the victims in the majority of reported cases. The Domestic Violence Helpline service was only extended to cover male victims from February 2005 and it is estimated that in 2005-06 about 200 calls to the Helpline (1 per cent.) were from male victims.

Domestic violence incidents reported to PSNI and calls received by domestic violence helpline

Year (April/March)	Incidents reported to PSNI	No breakdown by gender is available	Calls to the domestic violence helpline	Percentage female victims
2003-04	16,926	n/a	17,120	100
2004-05	20,959	n/a	19,472	99
2005-06	23,039	n/a	20,257	99

Note:
These figures do not represent the prevalence of the problem as domestic violence is seriously under-reported There is also likely to be some degree of overlap in the figures from the two sources as victims may report abuse to the police and also seek help and advice through the Helpline.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) men and (b) women have died in Northern Ireland in the past three years as a direct result of domestic violence. [74240]

Mr. Hanson: Deaths as a result of domestic violence in the past three years are given in the following table.

	Deaths

2003-04	2	2
2004-05	1	6

Source:
Police Service of Northern Ireland

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what facilities exist for men who present themselves as victims of domestic violence; and how many refuge centres exist in the Province. [74241]

Mr. Hanson: A strategy for addressing domestic violence in Northern Ireland, "Tackling Violence at Home", was launched in October 2005. The strategy is aimed at providing protection and support to all victims of domestic violence, irrespective of gender or sexual orientation. All victims can seek information and advice through the free-phone Domestic Violence Helpline and male victims are sign-posted to organisations that provide services for men, such as the Men's Advisory Project, Men-to-Men or the Rainbow Project. Any victim of a domestic assault can seek protection from the police who will investigate, arrest the alleged abuser if power exists and prosecute where there is evidence of a crime. Alternatively a victim can engage a solicitor and apply to a court for a civil order (a non-molestation order and/or an occupation order) to prevent further abuse or exclude the abuser from the family home. There are 12 Women's Aid Refuges for women and children fleeing domestic violence. There are no refuges in operation specifically for male victims of domestic violence given the small numbers involved but men may seek assistance from the Housing Executive who will offer the full range of homelessness services including supported or unsupported temporary accommodation.

Domiciliary Care Workers

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what rate per mile is paid for travel carried out by domiciliary care workers in each of the Northern Ireland health and social services trusts. [73544]

Paul Goggins: The actual rate of travel for HPSS employees is a matter for the employer to decide and up to date information on the rates in payment is not held centrally. It will take some time to collate this information and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as it is available and place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the terms are of the increased offer of mileage rate to domiciliary care workers in each health and social services trust in Northern Ireland. [74275]

Paul Goggins: Discussions are currently underway with the relevant trade union but at this stage no offer has been made by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the business rate of mileage paid to domiciliary care workers will be when Agenda for Change is fully implemented by the health and social services trusts in Northern Ireland. [74276]

Paul Goggins: The responsibility for the payment of mileage to domiciliary care workers rests with HPSS employers. The level of mileage allowance applicable is determined by the circumstances of the individual and the organisation. Three categories are available:

	Engine capacity
	Up to 1000cc	1001 to 1500cc	Over 1500cc
Regular user allowance
Lump sum (£)	508	626	750
Up to 9,000 miles	27p	33.5p	40p

	Engine capacity
	Up to 1000cc	1001 to 1500cc	Over 1500cc
Thereafter	16.2p	18.3p	20.5p
Standard rate
Up to 3,500 miles	34p	43p	53p
Thereafter	16.2p	18.3p	20.5p

Public transport mileage rate

Public Transport mileage is payable at 23p per mile where the employer deems that standard or regular user rates do not apply.

Education and Library Boards

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what budget was allocated to each of the Education and Library Boards in Northern Ireland for (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07. [72713]

Maria Eagle: The following tables show the funding (recurrent and capital) allocated to each of the Education and Library Boards by the three funding Departments, Department of Education (DE), Department of Culture Arts and Leisure (DCAL) and Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) in the last two financial years, ie 2005-06 and 2006-07. It should be noted that the 2005-06 figures relate to initial and final end-year allocations while the 2006-07 figures cover only the initial allocations provided at the start of the financial year. Further funding held by my Departments including end year flexibility allocations carried forward from 2005-06 and earmarked for ELBs have still to be allocated.

2005-06 (initial allocation)

	Recurrent	Capital	£ million Total
BELB	195.0	13.9	208.9

WELB	228.8	16.2	245.0
Total	1,190.6	64.0	1,254.6

[1] In 2006-07, the amounts allocated by the Department of Education to BELB and SEELB were net of part-repayments of deficit by both Boards amounting to £3 million and £4.5 million respectively.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of how much has been spent over the last 10 years on job evaluations within education and library boards in the Province. [74651]

Maria Eagle: A total of £125 million has been allocated for the job evaluation exercise by the Department of Education and the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure since 1995-96 for school-based staff, former-manual staff, classroom assistants and library staff. This figure includes the estimated cost for annual uplift of salaries until 2007-08. However, it does not include the costs for the job evaluations of former non-manual headquarters and out-centre staff that the education and library boards have had to absorb within their annual running costs. That information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what funding was provided to the education and library boards in Northern Ireland in the last year for which figures are available; and whether this funding is ring fenced. [71342]

Maria Eagle: A total of £1,425.2 million (made up of £77.3 million capital and £1,347.9 million resource allocations) was provided to the education and library boards in Northern Ireland in 2005-06, the last year for which full year information is available. These allocations were made by the three funding departments:

Department of Education (DE);

Department of Culture Arts and Leisure (DCAL); and Department for Employment and Learning (DEL).

The funding provided by each Department is ring fenced for use only on the functions that the boards provide for or on behalf of that Department. In all cases, capital funding cannot be transferred to resource budgets. In the case of the Department of Education, funding provided via Local Management of Schools for school budgets is also ring fenced for individual schools and funding for youth is ring fenced for youth service activities.

The allocations from each Department also include separate, smaller earmarked allocations to boards for specific activities and initiatives.

Fallen Stock

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fallen livestock have been recorded in the Strangford constituency over the past three years. [74729]

David Cairns: The information is not available in the format suggested. Data is available in relation to collections recorded for the National Fallen Stock Scheme in Northern Ireland from 22 November 2004, when the scheme was introduced, to 25 May 2006 (see table 1 following). Figures are not available for other legal means of disposal including independent collection through approved hunt kennels. The National Fallen Stock Scheme does not collect fallen bovines over 24 months old, for which the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development provides a free collection service for the purposes of BSE testing (refer to table 2).

Table 1: National fallen stock scheme collections in Northern Ireland recorded from 22 November 2004 to 25 May 2006

Female Employment

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of women employed in Northern Ireland doing low-paid work on a part-time basis; and if he will make a statement. [74715]

Maria Eagle: It is not possible to provide estimates of the number of women employed in Northern Ireland doing low-paid work on a part-time basis using minimum wage definitions. This is because the sample size of the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE) used for this purpose is too small to provide reliable estimates. For information, ASHE estimates that the lowest paid 10 per cent. of part-time female employees (approximately 12,000) earned less than £4.85 per hour[1], excluding overtime, in April 2005.

[1] This estimate is for part-time female employees of all ages on adult rates of pay, and with no loss of earnings during the survey reference period. The estimate does not reflect compliance with the national minimum wage levels which vary by age group.

Former Police Officers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what grounds the contracts of employment in the Northern Ireland Police Fund of (a) Mr. Desmond Clayton and (b) Mr. Thomas Hale were terminated; what the total cost was of the severance package for each; and what budget the severance packages were paid from. [75085]

Paul Goggins: The employment and termination of employment for staff members of the Northern Ireland Police Fund is a matter for the Board of Directors of the Police Fund.

Gaelic Athletic Association

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much public money has been made available to support the Gaelic Athletic Association in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [53149]

Mr. Hanson: These figures have been placed in the Library of the House.

Glenshane Pass

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many vehicles per day on average used the Glenshane Pass in either direction between Dungiven and Maghera in the latest period for which figures are available. [74213]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Malcolm McKibbin, dated 30 May 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding how many vehicles per day on average used the Glenshane Pass in either direction between Dungiven and Maghera in the latest period for which figures are available.

As this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service, I have been asked to reply.

By way of background I should explain that Roads Service collects traffic volume data by means of 270 automatic census points strategically located throughout the Northern Ireland road network. The information is recorded for one week in each quarter during the year and an annual average calculated. The results are published in Roads Service's annual Traffic and Travel Information Report, which presents the traffic volumes in a variety of formats for each site.

Roads Service have a counter on the A6 Castledawson to Dungiven road, west of Maghera at Ranaghan. The latest data on the average daily number of vehicles using the Glenshane Pass in either direction between Dungiven and Maghera is shown in the table below.

Location	Average daily flow
Between Dungiven and Maghera	5,430
Between Maghera and Dungiven	5,500

General Practitioners

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many GP retainer places are provided in the Province; and what plans there are to increase the number of places. [74577]

Paul Goggins: There are currently 45 GP retainer places in the Province. All those that have applied to enter the scheme have been accommodated. There are no plans to increase the number of places.

Health Trusts

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much each health trust in the Province spent on adminstration in each of the last five years; and what percentage of overall budget this represented in each case. [74634]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is provided in the following tables.

Paul Goggins: The information is as follows.

(a) Mandatory surveillance for Clostridium difficile only commenced in Northern Ireland on 1 January 2005. Hospital laboratory reports are filtered and data on over 65-year-olds are then analysed on a quarterly basis.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many healthcare-acquired infections there were within each health trust in the Province in each month of the last three years. [74666]

Paul Goggins: It is not feasible to have active surveillance of all healthcare associated infections (HCAIs). Currently there are three mandatory HCAI surveillance programmes in Northern Ireland on Clostridium difficile, Staphylococcus aureus (and MRSA) bacteraemias, and orthopaedic surgical site infections. When collated, these act as markers for the level of HCAI found in hospitals.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of MRSA have been reported within each health trust in the Province in each month of the last three years. [74668]

Paul Goggins: The information is not available in the requested form.

Statistics on MRSA bacteraemias are recorded quarterly by trust and are provided in the following table. The results collated are of infections which have been identified by testing within a hospital. However, no distinction can be made between where the infection was actually acquired, i.e. in hospital or in the community. Trusts with different clinical mixes and specialties will have differing proportions of patients at high risk of infection.

Hepatitis A

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information is available in the Province to ensure people who do not have access to the internet are able to access hard copy material warning them about contracting hepatitis A due to poor water quality. [74228]

Paul Goggins: The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) and the Department of the Environment do not have written material available for the public about contracting hepatitis A through water in Northern Ireland. The United Kingdom water industry, including Northern Ireland, has drinking water processes and procedures in place, which ensure that health risks from contamination are extremely low.

The booklet, "Health Advice for Travellers", published jointly by the Department of Health and DHSSPS, is available from post offices. Under the heading hepatitis A, advice on infection risk in relation to water and food and on hand washing is provided for travellers going to countries where sanitation is basic. Country-by-country risks and recommendations for travellers on hepatitis A are also contained in the jointly published book, "Health Information for Overseas Travel", which is aimed at health professionals and available from the Stationery Office.

Holy Cross College, Strabane

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to ensure that there is no further delay in the construction of Holy Cross college in Strabane. [72924]

Maria Eagle: Having fully considered the representations made to exempt Holy Cross college from the policy changes in respect of cleaning services in PPP projects, I have concluded that this project must be in line with all other PPP school projects and apply the policy on cleaning services.

A letter has now issued to the trustees and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools advising them of this decision. My officials will shortly be in contact with the project manager to convene a meeting of relevant stakeholders to agree an action plan that will ensure any delays and costs are kept to a minimum.

Hospital Security

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to increase resources allocated for hospital security at (a) Ulster hospital and (b) other Northern Ireland hospitals. [74725]

Paul Goggins: The resources made available to the health and personal social services (HPSS) do not specify an amount for hospital security. However, it is within the remit of each trust to allocate appropriate resources for security, as it considers necessary in fulfilling its duty of care to patients, staff and visitors.

The Department is fully committed to improving health and safety protection for all HPSS staff and there are a number of measures already in place to demonstrate this commitment e.g. personal alarms for lone workers, panic buttons and restricted access in A and E, CCTV, joint protocols between the Department and the Police Service of Northern Ireland on reporting incidents, publicity campaign that violent attacks on staff are crimes. Also, a controls assurance standard for security management for the HPSS is being developed and will further ensure that there is a secure environment that protects all service users, staff and visitors.

Hospital Staff Shortages

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) operations and (b) other hospital procedures have been cancelled at short notice over the last five years because of staff holidays. [74576]

Paul Goggins: The information requested on cancelled operations and procedures is not collected centrally. Hospitals currently use a mixture of computerised and manual theatre systems from which consistent and reliable data cannot be extracted.

A computerised regional theatre management system is currently being procured. Once it is operational in all trusts, it will be possible to obtain consistent information on cancelled operations from all trusts.

Hospital Waiting Times

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time to be seen by a consultant was for people in North Belfast for (a) cardiac problems, (b) cancer and (c) other conditions in the last period for which figures are available. [74720]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not available.

Hotels

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many hotel (a) rooms and (b) beds there were in each district council area in Northern Ireland (i) in the last 12 months and (ii) 10 years ago. [74388]

Maria Eagle: On 30 April 1996 there were 3,696 hotel rooms and 8,132 bedspaces available in Northern Ireland and 6,105 hotel rooms and 13,827 bedspaces on 30 April 2006. Breakdown by local authority Area is in the following table:

Human Rights Commission

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 15 May 2006, Official Report, column 699W, on the Human Rights Commission, what nationality criteria are applied when appointing the Chief Commissioner of the Human Rights Commission. [73072]

Mr. Hanson: No nationality criteria are applied to the appointment of the Chief Commissioner of the Human Rights Commission.

Incorrect Labelling

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many companies in Northern Ireland have been fined in the last five years in Northern Ireland for incorrect information contained on their products. [74230]

Maria Eagle: In the five-year period between 1 April 2001 and 31 March 2006 four companies were prosecuted under the Weights and Measures (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 and fined for displaying the wrong weight on their products. In addition, in the period 1 April 2002 to 31 March 2005 for which we have statistics, there were six prosecutions under food labelling legislation.

Independent Monitoring Commission

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his Department's contribution is to the expenses of the Independent Monitoring Commission; what the cost of the Commission has been in each year since its formation; and how much of the cost is accounted for by (a) administrative costs including staff, (b) members' allowances and emoluments and (c) members' expenses. [44893]

Mr. Woodward: The Independent Monitoring Commission is jointly funded by the Northern Ireland Office and the Department of Justice, each contributing 50 per cent. of the overall expenses of the Commission.

The costs of the Commission to the Northern Ireland Office are set out in the following table:

	January 2004-March 2005	£ April 2005-March 2006

Influenza Pandemic

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what containment measures have been drawn up in Northern Ireland should an influenza pandemic break out in the Province. [74232]

Paul Goggins: The Government are taking the issue of pandemic flu very seriously.

The World Health Organisation (WHO) believes the United Kingdom to be one of the best prepared countries in the world for dealing with a pandemic influenza.

The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) has been working on pandemic influenza plans for two years. These dovetail with the UK National Plan and are based on the framework recommended by the World Health Organization (WHO) for national pandemic plans.

Health and Social Services Boards and Trusts within Northern Ireland have also developed contingency plans based on the DHSSPS plan.

Antivirals will provide the first form of defence against a pandemic flu. In line with the rest of the UK we have ordered sufficient doses of antivirals to treat the predicted number of people who will become ill. The full supply is on target to be received here by September 2006.

Vaccination will offer the best form of protection against pandemic flu but a vaccine cannot be manufactured until the exact flu strain is known. It will take around 4-6 months for Northern Ireland Office stocks to become available. Once the vaccine is available, Government plan to vaccinate the whole population.

As a further precautionary measure, Government have ordered 3.5 million doses (and Northern Ireland will get its share) of the H5N1 vaccine as part of the work to prepare for and reduce the impact of a possible flu pandemic. The vaccine will be used to carry out further research and may also be used to vaccinate front line health care workers before a specific pandemic vaccine is developed.

Integral to Government's preparedness on pandemic flu is surveillance. For the past four years Northern Ireland has had an enhanced surveillance scheme for human influenza operated by the Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre (CDSDC NI) through a network of GP spotter practices. This enhanced surveillance will provide early warning of new viruses circulating here in NI and CDSC and will also link to the Health Protection Agency (UK) to provide timely information for the production of UK surveillance data in the event of a pandemic.

DHSSPS recently carried out a large-scale tabletop exercise to test its contingency plan. The report of the lessons learned will be available shortly.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many professionals are employed in the Department for Health, Social Services and Public Safety dealing with the potential threat of a full pandemic. [74316]

Paul Goggins: There are currently the equivalent of 1.5 members of medical staff and 0.5 principal officer dedicated solely to pandemic flu preparedness. Within the Department other members of staff also provide advice and support on this matter from time to time as required. These include medical, nursing, pharmacy, social services and senior administrative staff.

The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety is working in partnership with the wider health and personal social services, and other Government Departments and agencies to plan for the consequences of a flu pandemic.

Informants

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many arrests were made due to information provided by informants in Northern Ireland in each of the last 20 years. [67073]

Paul Goggins: It is Government policy never to comment on specific national security and intelligence matters.

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on information technology (IT) sourced from outside his Department in each of the last five years; who is responsible for such projects in his Department; and what IT (a) expertise and (b) qualifications they possess. [71771]

Paul Goggins: The following table covers the NIO core department, agencies, the legal offices (Director of Public Prosecutions and Crown Solicitors Office). It does not cover the Northern Ireland Departments, the police or other independent bodies.

The person responsible for ICT expenditure and related projects is the assistant director, information systems, who sets policy and advises the Permanent Secretary on these matters.

Any person project-managing a medium to large project within information systems would be trained to the industry standard project management level, for example, Prince 2.

All technical members of ISD have a minimum of HND/HNC in computing or a minimum of five years technical experience.

Insulin Products

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the availability of synthetic and animal-derived insulin products in the Province over the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [74662]

Paul Goggins: During the past three years the availability of insulin has been affected by a number of issues. Some manufacturers have rationalised the range of insulin products they produce. Six synthetic insulin products have been discontinued but three new synthetic products have been introduced. As a result some patients have had to agree new insulin regimes with their prescriber.

However, the full range of animal-derived and synthetic insulin products continues to be available in Northern Ireland from pharmaceutical wholesalers.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prescription items were issued of (a) animal and (b) synthetic insulin in the Province in each of the last five years. [74663]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of prescription items dispensed for (a) animal and (b) synthetic insulin in each of the last five years is shown in the following table.

	Animal insulin	Synthetic insulin
2001	2,655	91,921
2002	2,448	100,726
2003	2,379	117,401
2004	2,204	138,156
2005	2,217	151,530

Notes.
1. Insulins are those defined in the British National Formulary (BNF) sections, 6.1.1.0, 6.1.1.1 and 6.1.1.2. 2. The count of items does not relate to individual people, as a person will be prescribed multiple items in the course of a year.

Intelligence Gathering

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether (a) the Police Service of Northern Ireland and (b) MI5 has primacy in intelligence gathering for paramilitary and subversive activity by the (i) UVF, (ii) UDA, (iii) LVF, (iv) Provisional IRA, (v) Continuity IRA and (vi) Real IRA. [72926]

Paul Goggins: Lead responsibility for intelligence work to counter the threat from terrorism in Northern Ireland posed by all the groups listed, currently lies with the PSNI. In line with the Government's Written Statement to Parliament of 24 February 2005, lead responsibility for that work will transfer to the Security Service during 2007 and provide consistency with the rest of the United Kingdom.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he discusses paramilitary activity with the same sources as the Independent Monitoring Commission. [73080]

Paul Goggins: I discuss paramilitary activity with my security advisers. The IMC is an independent international organisation and I therefore cannot comment on the sources it speaks to.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Independent Monitoring Commission accesses security sources that are unavailable to him. [73081]

Paul Goggins: The Independent Monitoring Commission is an independent international organisation and all meetings it has are confidential. I am therefore not aware of the bodies that the IMC consults as part of its work.

Invest Northern Ireland

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new jobs were secured in each of the district council areas of the Province by Invest Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [74385]

Maria Eagle: Table 1 shows the number of jobs promoted within each district council area as a result of inward investment projects during the 10 years from 1996-97 to 2005-06. Information supplied for 2005-06 is provisional and may be subject to change.

Irish Language

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will seek to legislate to provide legal protection for the Irish language; and if he will make a statement. [72925]

Maria Eagle: The Belfast/Good Friday Agreement and the UK Government's signature of the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages underpin Government support for minority languages in Northern Ireland, including Irish. It is considered that the Belfast/Good Friday Agreement and the Charter provide a suitable framework for the development of linguistic diversity.

The Government have no plans at present to introduce a Northern Ireland Language Bill. This could instead be a matter for a returned NI Assembly to consider.

Knife Amnesty

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what further efforts are planned to publicise the knife amnesty recently announced by the Northern Ireland Office. [74341]

Mr. Hanson: The campaign to tackle knife crime in Northern Ireland including the introduction of a three week amnesty was launched on Wednesday 24 May. This received significant attention from all the main media outlets in Northern Ireland. A list of the amenity sites where bins for collection of knives are situated was provided to the media and the police have established a helpline to provide information to anyone who wishes to surrender a knife.

In addition, relevant information has been provided to both District Policing Partnerships and Community Safety Partnerships to allow them to provide information to local media and the public at district council levels. I know that a number of them have already taken that opportunity.

I am confident that over the next three weeks everyone in Northern Ireland will have been given an opportunity to surrender any knife which they do not have a legitimate reason to hold and sufficient information as to how they can do this. I would urge everyone falling into this category to do so.

Lakewood School

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the consultees in relation to the proposed move of Lakewood School in Bangor to Childhaven near Millisle in County Down; and what the nature was of the consultation. [74339]

Paul Goggins: Children who are currently accommodated in the Lakewood Centre will shortly move to Craigmore children's home (formerly named Childhaven) in Millisle and North Road children's home in Belfast. The Lakewood School will not transfer to Millisle, and interim arrangements will be put in place before September to meet the education needs of these children.

The accommodation of these children in Craigmore and North Road is a temporary measure whilst the Ulster Community and Hospitals Trust commissions two new intensive support units, and all appropriate safeguards will be put in place. As Craigmore is currently registered as a children's home, and there will be no change in function, public consultation has not been carried out. However, staff from the Lakewood Centre met with local residents on 18 May 2006 and a further meeting is due to take place on 1 June to address any concerns they may have.

Loyalist Violence Arrests

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many arrests were made in relation to loyalist violence between 10 and 17 September. [36538]

Mr. Woodward: The Police Service of Northern Ireland arrested 82 people in relation to the public disorder which blighted loyalist areas between 10 and 17 September 2005.

Lung Cancer

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he plans to take to improve the survival (a) terms and (b) rates of lung cancer patients in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [74675]

Paul Goggins: The Government and the DHSSPS are committed to improving the survival terms and rates for all cancers including lung cancer. This commitment is underpinned in the Department's Public Service Agreement which aims to increase the five-year survival rate for lung cancer by five per cent. of the 1993-95 figure by 2010.

The Department in partnership with the Northern Ireland Cancer Network is taking forward work on a number of fronts which have the potential to both increase survival terms and improve survival rates for lung cancer patients. These include:

the provision of better information for lung cancer patients;

the development of GP referrals guidelines and improved primary care pathways for those suspected of having lung cancer; and;

further improvements in oncology protocols for the treatment of lung cancers.

Mental Health

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many psychiatrists per head of population are needed in Northern Ireland to provide adequate service across all mental health areas; what is being done to encourage psychiatrists (a) to come to Northern Ireland and (b) to train in this field of medicine. [74222]

Paul Goggins: We will be looking to the reports from the Bamford Review of Mental Health and Learning Disability to inform us on future workforce needs across all professions for mental health services. We will also take account of the changes in team working practices outlined in the New Ways of Working report.

In recent years there has been no difficulty in attracting applicants to the specialty of psychiatry.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) young children and (b) young adults are unsuitably accommodated in adult psychiatric units in each health board area. [74223]

Paul Goggins: The number of children and young people aged under 18 who are accommodated in adult psychiatric units in each health board is detailed in the table.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the current intake of student nurses at Queen's University Belfast have indicated their intention to specialise in psychiatric nursing; and what assessment he has made of the extent to which this meets the number of nurses required in this field of nursing. [74224]

Paul Goggins: There are currently 120 pre-registration student nurses specialising in mental health nursing at Queen's University Belfast, from a total of 1,320. There are a further 113 students specialising in mental health nursing at the University of Ulster or through the Open University. A recent review of the Mental Health and Learning Disability work force indicates the need for further investment in the training of a range of staff in this work force. A recruitment drive for mental health nursing was taken forward by Queen's University and the Department in 2004. This has resulted in substantially increased applications for training in mental health nursing.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made in providing (a) sufficient facilities and (b) adequate professional and nursing expertise for children and young adults with psychiatric needs in each board area. [74225]

Paul Goggins: It is the responsibility of the four Health and Social Services boards to assess the needs of their populations and prioritise their resources, both facilities and work force, to best meet those needs. Community Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services are provided by each of the boards, while access to specialist services, including in-patient care, is commissioned on a regional or multi-district basis.

An interim Regional Adolescent In-patient Unit at Knockbracken is now open for admissions. A new 18-bed mental health adolescent in-patient unit is to be built by 2008-09, with the intention that it will be subsequently linked to a new replacement 15-bed child psychiatric unit at the Forster Green hospital site.

The Children and Young People's Funding Package, which was announced in March, will strengthen Child and Adolescent Mental Health Service provision by providing funding to establish two to three Child and Adolescent Crisis Response Teams across Northern Ireland. The four boards are currently developing a proposal on the establishment and locations of these teams to best respond to need.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent research he has commissioned into levels of social stigma attached to people who present forms of mental illness; and if he will make a statement. [74231]

Paul Goggins: An inter-departmental group has been identifying and tackling the factors, including stigma, which can contribute to the social exclusion of people with mental health problems and a report will be issued for consultation in the summer.

Missed Hospital Appointments

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many missed hospital appointments there were in each health trust in the Province over the last 12 months. [74629]

Paul Goggins: The total number of missed hospital appointments in the financial year 2004-05 for each health trust is provided in the following table. These figures represent the number of out-patient appointments where a patient did not attend and failed to give advance warning to the hospital.

MRI Scans

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans there are for introducing MRI scans of young people in Northern Ireland where there is a familial history of arrhythmogenic right ventricular dysplastia; and if he will make a statement. [74233]

Paul Goggins: Relatives of those diagnosed with arrhythmogenic right ventricular cardiomyopathy (ARVC) are advised to undertake testing for this condition. There is no single diagnostic test for the condition and investigation involves a series of tests, one of which includes magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) of the heart.

Provision for those patients who require cardiac MRI scanning is currently provided at the Belfast City hospital. Some patients are also referred to other centres in the UK (London or Oxford).

Murals

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure is taking to assist communities in promoting cultural and historic artistic murals to replace those of a militaristic and paramilitary type. [74420]

Maria Eagle: The Arts Council of Northern Ireland is taking forward a project entitled "Re-imaging Communities" which will focus on the replacement of paramilitary murals and other offensive items with new and more positive imagery. The priority areas are housing estates, peace lines and interface areas and derelict public spaces throughout Northern Ireland. The Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure has secured £2 million for this project over the period 2006-08. The Arts Council is seeking additional funding from other sources.

The Arts Council is also delivering a project entitled "If Walls Could Talk". The aim of this project is to transform the peace line along Cupar Way into a world-class exhibition space for public art and to stimulate the development of arts in the Shankill area. This project is due to commence in 2006-07 and £170,000 per annum is available over two years.

The Ulster Scots Agency encourages communities to engage in promoting cultural and historic artistic murals to replace those of a militaristic and paramilitary type and the Agency will consider applications for financial assistance where there is an Ulster Scots theme.

Music Therapy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate how many (a) schools and (b) children have been involved in the Arioso music therapy project in Northern Ireland. [74386]

Paul Goggins: The Arioso music therapy project covers 17 schools for severe learning disability across Northern Ireland, and provides a service to around 260 children each week.

National Development Plan

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what input the Northern Ireland Office will have into the National Development Plan in preparation in the Republic of Ireland, with particular reference to border regions; and if he will make a statement. [71930]

Mr. Hanson: The National Development Plan is a matter for the Government of the Republic of Ireland. The two Governments are committed to working closely together to identify ways they can maximise the mutual benefits of co-operation across a broad range of issues. These reflect substantial contacts through the North-South bodies and in areas of mutual co-operation, such as economic development, health, higher education, infrastructure and spatial development. The actions planned by both Governments to maximise the benefits of such co-operation will be reflected in their respective strategic plans to promote economic and social development.

Northern Ireland Civil Service

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 29 April 2006, Official Report, columns 700-01W, on the Northern Ireland Civil Service, which Northern Ireland departments have vacancies at (a) AO, (b) EOII, (c) EOI, (d) SO and (e) DP grades, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [73500]

Mr. Hanson: Details of vacancies, in Northern Ireland departments, at (a) AO, (b) EOII, (c) EOI (d) SO and (e) DP grades, broken down by parliamentary constituency have been placed in the Library. These figures relate to vacancies for which Departments have current financial provision and are within the departmental headcount.

The tables also show identified surpluses for each grade.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost was to the public purse of Civil Service away-days for his Office in each of the last three years, broken down by Government Department. [65507]

Paul Goggins: The Department did not capture information at this level through financial coding for financial years 2003-04 and 2004-05, so to provide this would incur a disproportionate cost. A total of £57,243.92 was spent on development days in the Northern Ireland Office in financial year 2005-06. This equates to approximately £150 per head for the total number of staff involved. Development days are used for training and team building.

Northern Ireland Fire Rescue Order

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the Northern Ireland Fire Authority on the impact on costs of the provisions of the Northern Ireland Fire Rescue Order 2006. [75008]

Paul Goggins: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 877W. As explained in my answer, the requirements of the Fire and Rescue Services (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 will not have any significant bearing on the associated costs of the Fire and Rescue Service.

The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service has been fully consulted about the provisions contained in the Fire and Rescue Services Order.

The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, which is the sponsor Department for the Service, has ongoing discussions with senior officers in the Service about resourcing issues.

Nuclear Power

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the development of nuclear power in Northern Ireland. [74340]

Maria Eagle: The Strategic Energy Framework does not anticipate nuclear new build in Northern Ireland. Energy policy in Northern Ireland is currently focussed on building the all-island market which will offer further options in terms of security and diversity of supply, and on expanding the role of renewables.

The Secretary of State's recently-launched £60 million Environment and Renewable Energy Fund will make Northern Ireland an exemplar region in the use of renewable energy.

We are also driving forward on energy efficiency, having set a target of reducing electricity consumption by 1 per cent. per year from 2007. The Environment and Renewable Energy Fund also provides an additional £11 million for energy efficiency in Northern Ireland.

Work to mainstream renewables is also being taken forward in collaboration with the Republic of Ireland through the 2020 Vision launched by both Governments last July.

Paediatric Cardiology

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time was for an initial paediatric cardiology assessment in the Province in the last period for which figures are available. [74627]

Paul Goggins: Waiting list information is collected by time band. It is therefore not possible to calculate the arithmetic mean (average) length of time waiting. It is however possible to identify the median or mid-point waiting time band. Current median (average) waiting times for children waiting an initial paediatric cardiology outpatient assessment, in each applicable Health and Social Services Trust, are shown in the following table:

HSS trust	Median waiting times for an outpatient paediatric cardiology assessment (months)
Royal Group of Hospitals	7
United Hospitals	6-9
Craigavon Area Hospital Group	3-5
Altnagelvin Group	3-5
Causeway	Within 2
Ulster Community and Hospitals	>30

Paramilitaries

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether activity by (a) loyalist and (b) republican paramilitaries is considered to be a threat to national security; and if he will make a statement. [66977]

Paul Goggins: It is the activities, not the affiliation, of particular groups that determines whether they represent a threat to national security.

Perinatal Mental Health Teams

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made towards establishing specialist perinatal mental health teams to serve each health board area in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [72667]

Paul Goggins: In Northern Ireland care for those suffering from perinatal mental health problems including psychiatric illness takes place at all levels within the health care system (psychiatric services, maternity and child welfare services and primary health care).

However, the ongoing Bamford Review of Mental Health and Learning Disability has recommended that "A regional specialist mental health services should be established for women with mental health problems occurring in the perinatal period". This is being considered in light of the wider findings of the review, which deals with a number of highly complex issues. I hope to publish my response to this and other recommendations of the review by the end of this year.

Personal Protection Weapons

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland are in possession of on-loan personal protection weapons. [68982]

Paul Goggins: The Chief Constable has informed me that at 1 April 2006, 867 persons were in possession of on loan personal protection weapons. The General Officer Commanding informs me that, as at the 12 May 2006, there were 217 Army Department PPWs issued to army personnel; and the Northern Ireland Prison Service has 688 PPWs on loan to Prisons personnel.

Planning

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many management board referrals of planning applications have been made by each district council in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years; [74322]

(2) how many management board referrals of planning applications by each district council in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years (a) have proved successful, (b) have proved unsuccessful and (c) are pending. [74323]

David Cairns: Details of the number of planning applications referred to the Planning Service Management Board in each of the last three years are in the following tables:

Planning Applications (Health Factors)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will consider the merits of the introduction of a medical expert to advise on planning applications linked to health issues. [74678]

David Cairns: The merits of the introduction of a medical expert to advise on planning applications linked to health issues, has been carefully considered on two previous occasions, where it was concluded on each occasion that such an expert should not be used. On this basis I have no plans to reconsider the issue.

Plastic Surgeons

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many whole-time equivalent plastic surgeons are employed by the NHS in Northern Ireland. [74368]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is presented in the following table.

Plastic surgeons employed within the NI HPSS by grade as at 31 March 2006

Grade	Headcount	Whole-time equivalent
Consultant	8	8.00
Specialist Registrar	9	9.00

Police

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police drivers in Northern Ireland have been (a) disciplined and (b) relieved of driving duties in each of the last three years. [73079]

Paul Goggins: The Police Service of Northern Ireland do not hold a central record of police drivers disciplined or relieved of driving duty. To obtain such details would require a manual trawl of officers' files across all district command units and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Policing Board

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the (a) (i) status and (ii) powers and (b) payments to members of the Policing Board in Northern Ireland will be from 25 November 2006. [70463]

Paul Goggins: While section 1 of the Northern Ireland Act 2000 (suspension of devolved Government in Northern Ireland) is in force part II of schedule 1 of the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 2000 applies to the membership of the Northern Ireland Policing Board. Under this part of the Act the current membership of the Policing Board came into effect on 1 April 2006 for a term of four years.

On restoration of the Assembly part III of schedule 1 of the Police (NI) Act 2000 requires the Policing Board to be reconstituted and in these circumstances new terms of appointment would be issued to all members of the newly reconstituted Board.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the police board in Northern Ireland spent on advertising for recruitment of police officers during 2005. [72716]

Paul Goggins: The policing board for Northern Ireland is responsible for the appointment of senior police officers, at the ranks chief constable and assistant chief constable. I am advised that during 2005 the policing board spent £7,249.75 to advertise an assistant chief constable post which was filled in 2006.

Primary to Post-Primary Transfer

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to receive a definitive proposed format for the pupil profile from the Council for Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment to guide the transfer of pupils from primary to post-primary schools in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [74695]

Maria Eagle: An independent evaluation of the current trial of the Pupil Profile will report back via the Council for Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment at the end of July 2006. The outcomes of this evaluation will inform the finalised format of the Key Stage 2 Pupil Profile, which it is intended will be introduced for Year 5 pupils from September 2007.

Prisoners' Compensation

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much in compensation has been paid to (a) serving and (b) remand prisoners in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [74343]

Paul Goggins: The Northern Ireland Prison Service does not hold separate records for remand and sentenced prisoners for the purpose of compensation claims. The tables indicate total compensation paid to prisoners in each of the last five years.

Prisons

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the decision by the Director of Custodian Services at the Juvenile Justice Centre at Bangor not to recognise representation of Prison Officers Association staff during the review of work practices. [73506]

Mr. Hanson: The Prison Officers Association have lodged an application before the Industrial Court and the matter is currently under consideration. It would therefore not be appropriate to comment further.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those Private Members' Bills in respect of which his Department has adopted a policy of neutrality in each Session since 2001-02; and if he will make a statement. [72486]

Mr. Hain: There have been no such Bills relating to Northern Ireland.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of males over the age of 75 in Northern Ireland are estimated to have prostate cancer. [74417]

Paul Goggins: The following table details information on the prevalence[1] of prostate cancer (ICD-10 C61) in Northern Ireland since 1993.

	Aged 75 and over
Prevalence of prostate cancer[1]	899
Male population[2]	38,880
Percentage of population living with prostate cancer	2.31

[1] Prevalence has been estimated by counting the number of patients diagnosed between 1 January 1993 and 31 December 2003 with prostate cancer, who were still alive on 31 December 2003. This may represent an undercount of the actual number of people living with prostate cancer as those diagnosed prior to 1993 and still alive at the end of 2003 are not included.

This information has been provided by the Northern Ireland Cancer Registry and is the most up to date currently available.

Psychology Degrees

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many students have graduated in psychology from universities in the Province in each of the last five years. [74647]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is as follows:

Qualifications obtained in the psychology subject area at NI higher education institutions 2000-01 to 2004-05

Academic year	Qualifications obtained
2000-01	371
2001-02	329
2002-03	394
2003-04	380
2004-05	416

Source:
HESA

Psychology is commonly studied alongside other disciplines. Accordingly a procedure of apportionment is used from 2002-03 onwards to allocate students to specific subject areas, by dividing each headcount in a way that reflects the pattern of split programmes. The figures therefore refer to a full-person equivalent value. Prior to 2002-03, enrolments split equally between two or more subject areas were assigned to the combined subject group and are not included in this table.

Public Bodies

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the religious affiliation is of each member of each public body in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [74256]

Mr. Hanson: Individuals appointed to the boards of non-departmental public bodies in Northern Ireland are not required to declare their religious affiliation, however, they are asked to provide, on a voluntary basis, details of their community background. This information is sought for monitoring purposes only and forms no part of the selection process. Disclosure of this information by reference to each public body in Northern Ireland would contravene the data protection principles set out in the Data Protection Act 1998.

An overview of the community background of both applicants and appointees to bodies sponsored by Northern Ireland's 11 Government Departments can be found in the Public Appointments Annual Report, and similar details in respect of NIO sponsored bodies is included in the NIO Departmental Report. Copies of the latest versions of both these reports are available from the Library of the House and can be found on the Internet at www.ofmdfmni.gov.uk/public-appointments and www.nio.gov.uk/nio_departmental_report_2006.pdf respectively.

Public Sector Wages

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1636W, on average annual industrial wages, what the change was in average wage levels in the public sector between 1995 and 2005. [74410]

Maria Eagle: Average gross weekly earnings in Northern Ireland for full-time employees in the public sector are available from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE) and are provided in the table[1].

[1] Please note, ASHE statistics prior to 1997 are currently not available.

	Median gross weekly earnings (£)[1]	Annual percentage change

[1] Please note that the above information relates to full-time employees on adult rates whose pay for the survey pay-period was not affected by absence.
[2] Estimates for 2004 and 2005 are based on an improved methodology as recommended in the Office for National Statistics review of Distribution of Earnings Statistics. Accordingly, estimates for 2004 are not available on an equivalent basis to earlier years.

Public Toilets (Vandalism)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost of repairing vandalism to public toilets under the ownership of Government Departments in Northern Ireland was during 2005. [70913]

David Cairns: The cost of repairing vandalism to public toilets under the ownership of Government Departments in Northern Ireland in 2005 was approximately £12,000.

Pupil Absences

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average number of (a) unauthorised and (b) total days was that a pupil was off school in each education board in the Province over each of the last five years. [74652]

Maria Eagle: Statistics on unauthorised absence are not available. Overall absence rates for primary and post primary schools are provided in the following tables.

Pupil Injuries (Compensation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 24 April 2006, Official Report, column 887W, on pupil injuries (compensation), to how many incidents in each of the last five years the figures for compensation relate; which Northern Ireland schools recorded injuries that resulted in compensation payments; and how much was paid out in compensation in each school. [70497]

Maria Eagle: The figures provided have now been updated to reflect the final 2005-06 position and relate to 183 incidents. The table, which has now been placed in the Library, shows, for each year, the number of incidents by funding authority; the overall amounts; and the schools involved. It would not be appropriate to provide details of compensation at individual school level simply because, given the very small numbers, this would allow amounts to be linked to individual pupils.i

Railway Security

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for how long the railway line between Lisburn and Portadown was closed as a result of the security alert on 24 May; and how many passengers were re-directed onto buses. [74476]

David Cairns: I can advise that the line between Lisburn and Portadown was closed three times on 24 May during the following hours:

06.00-08.24

11.25-21.10

22.45-23.37

As a result of the line closures approximately 1,600 passengers were carried on buses to continue their local journeys between Portadown, Lurgan, Moira and Lisburn. In addition approximately 2,250 passengers were carried in buses between Newry and Belfast as a result of disruptions to 16 cross-border Enterprise services.

Real IRA/ Continuity IRA

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the threat posed by the (a) Real IRA and (b) Continuity IRA to the security of the people of Northern Ireland. [71320]

Paul Goggins: The 10th IMC Report states that:

"RIRA continues efforts to recruit and train members. It has a continuing aspiration to arm and equip itself. We believe that although RIRA's level of activity is not very high it is still engaged in efforts to maintain its position as a paramilitary organisation".

"CIRA remains committed to terrorism. Looking back over about a year, it has been the most active of the dissident groups. We conclude that it remains an active threat and that it will undertake serious acts of violence if it is able to do so".

I fully concur with the IMC report. In addition it is clear that effective action is being taken by the PSNI with support from military colleagues to eradicate dissident activity. This excellent work has resulted in three stymied attacks in the past month.

Road Service

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how much road service funding has been allocated to each district council area in Northern Ireland in each of the last five financial years; [74756]

(2) how much road service funding has been allocated to (a) bridge strengthening programmes and (b) road maintenance and resurfacing in each district council area in Northern Ireland in each of the last five financial years. [74757]

David Cairns: The chief executive of roads service, Dr. Malcolm McKibbin has been asked to write to the hon. Lady in response to these questions.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 2 June 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland two Parliamentary Questions regarding how much Road Service funding has been allocated to each district council area in Northern Ireland in each of the last five financial years; and, how much Road Service funding has been allocated to (a) bridge strengthening programmes and (b) road maintenance and resurfacing in each district council area in Northern Ireland in each of the last five financial years.

I have been asked to reply as these issues fall within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

The following table at Annex 1 shows the total expenditure incurred by Roads Service on capital (major and minor) road improvement schemes and on maintenance activities during the period 2000/01-2004/05. Expenditure details by district council area for 2005/06 are not yet available.

In providing this information, I should like to emphasise that Roads Service does not simply apportion its total budget for capital and maintenance expenditure equally across district council areas. In particular, major road improvements are prioritised on a country-wide basis, not on a district council basis, taking account of a broad range of criteria such as strategic planning policy, traffic flows, number of accidents, potential travel save times, environmental impact and value for money. While the actual spend on a major works scheme may be within one council area, the benefits of such schemes are not confined to the district council area or constituency in which they are located.

The resources available for minor capital schemes are allocated to the four Roads Service Divisions and, in turn, apportioned across district council areas on a needs-based priority approach using indicators such as population, weighted road lengths and the number of accidents. This ensures, so far as possible, an equitable distribution of funds across the country. Similarly the resources available for each maintenance activity (e.g. resurfacing, patching, gully emptying, grass cutting etc) are apportioned to district council areas using appropriate indicators of need.

You also asked for a separate breakdown of funding in relation to bridge strengthening programmes and roads maintenance and resurfacing. The attached table at Annex 2 details the information per district council area in the years 2000/01-2004/05. Again, expenditure details by district council area for 2005/06 are not yet available.

Road Traffic Accidents

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the Answer of 11 May 2006, Official Report, column 507W, on road traffic accidents, to what he attributes the increase in road traffic accidents involving police vehicles in the last three years; and what steps have been taken to reduce the number of accidents. [73078]

Paul Goggins: As detailed in the answer to the hon. Gentleman of 11 May 2006, both major and minor traffic collisions have reduced during the period 2003-2005. Only 'slight contact' collisions have increased, and these have only recently been recorded under this category.

PSNI Transport Services are in the process of fitting over 1,500 vehicle Black Box collision data recorders to PSNI operational vehicles. The black box recorder holds data relating to vehicle speed, emergency operational and vehicle electrical systems in use and ensures accurate information is collected when a vehicle collision occurs. When this system was introduced in the London Metropolitan Police, accidents were reduced by over 20 per cent.

It should also be noted that all drivers of police vehicles are trained to national driving standards in response driving and advanced driving.

Roads

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much salt was (a) acquired for use to treat salted road networks and (b) left unused by the Department for Regional Development in Northern Ireland during the winter of 2005-06. [74212]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Malcolm McKibbin, dated 30 May 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding how much salt was (a) acquired for use to treat salted road networks and (b) left unused by the Department for Regional Development in Northern Ireland during the winter of 2005-06.

As this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service, I have been asked to reply.

The total salt purchased during the period 1 May 2005-30 April 2006 was 59,270 tonnes. This was in addition to approximately 23,000 tonnes already in storage from the previous year. The total salt left unused at the end of April 2006 was approximately 25,400 tonnes.

Rural Development Council

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Rural Development Council will be designated as a non-departmental public body under the review of public administration. [73424]

David Cairns: The decision not to designate the RDC as an NDPB was taken by the Secretary of State in his announcement on 21 March 2006 about a reduction in public bodies. His statement read that the delivery of rural development functions will transfer to local government while the remaining policy functions of the Rural Development Council will transfer to central Government.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether Rural Development Council staff will be able to transfer to (a) local government and (b) central Government agencies with a rural development function. [73425]

David Cairns: The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development officials are currently working through what is a complex issue with the RDC and other stakeholders to determine how the council's staff will be affected by the RPA decisions. It is premature therefore to determine what that outcome may be.

School Children

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many school children there are in each education and library board area in Northern Ireland. [74317]

Maria Eagle: The requested information is as follows.

Education and library board area	Number of school children in 2005-06
Belfast	59,657
Western	60,308
North Eastern	73,743
South Eastern	65,120
Southern	73,732

Note:
Figures exclude children in voluntary and private pre-school centres, and independent and hospital schools.

School Meals

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in ensuring that all school meals in Northern Ireland offer a healthy balanced diet. [74278]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Education, in conjunction with the education and library boards, began the implementation of New Nutritional Standards for School Meals in September 2005. Over 800 schools have now implemented the standards and the remainder will be included by the end of 2006.

The standards aim to help pupils make healthy choices by providing a range of healthy meals, conveying the meaning and importance of a healthy diet and contributing to a reduction in levels of child obesity.

It is proposed that the standards programme be extended to include other sources of food in schools, such as tuck shops and vending machines. The Department is currently consulting on the issue of providing only healthy choices in these areas.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people resident in Northern Ireland are on the register of sex offenders; and in how many of those cases the police do not know the offender's current residential address. [67658]

Mr. Hanson [pursuant to the reply, 11 May 2006, Official Report, c. 508W]: The information I provided the hon. Gentleman contained an error. The answer should have stated that in 14 of the cases the police do not have a current residential address. The correct answer in full is as follows. I apologise to the hon. Gentleman for this error.

On 28 April 2006, 644 people in Northern Ireland were subject to the notification requirements of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 and in 14 of these cases the police do not have a current residential address. This represents a compliance rate of over 97 per cent.

In line with the Police Service of Northern Ireland's zero tolerance policy on breaches of the notification requirements of the Sexual Offences Act, all offenders who do not comply are pursued and reported to the Public Prosecution Service with a view to prosecution.

Sheep-worrying (Dogs)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dogs have been put down for sheep-worrying under court orders in Northern Ireland in the last five years, broken down by constituency. [74726]

David Cairns: Information on the number of dogs put down for sheep-worrying under court orders in Northern Ireland in the last five years is not available by constituency but is provided in the following table by council area.

Sick Leave

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the longest time is that an employee has been on sick leave in each of the health trusts in Northern Ireland in the last five years. [74371]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many sick leave days were taken in Northern Ireland by (a) doctors, (b) nurses, (c) other health professionals and (d) other employees in each health trust in Northern Ireland in the last five years. [74372]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of sick leave days, in the format requested, is not held centrally. However details supplied directly by Health and Social Services Trusts have been collated and a copy has been placed in the Library.

Sinn Fein/IRA Stormont Spy Ring

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost was of ensuring the safety of people whose details were stolen as part of the Sinn Fein/IRA Stormont spy ring; how many people were advised that their details were included in the Sinn Fein/IRA Stormont spy ring; how many (a) police officers, (b) prison officers, (c) Royal Irish Regiment/Ulster Defence Regiment soldiers, (d) politicians, (e) members of the Loyal Orders and (f) civilians had their details stolen as part of the Sinn Fein/IRA Stormont spy ring; and whether any people whose details were stolen as part of the Sinn Fein/IRA Stormont spy ring were not contacted by the authorities. [65339]

Paul Goggins: A full investigation into the total cost of ensuring the safety of all the individuals concerned would be complex and wide-ranging. Such an investigation could not be conducted without incurring disproportionate cost.

2,195 individuals were informed of their details having been compromised. This included 77 PSNI/ Garda officers, 1,583 prison officers, 13 army personnel and 37 politicians. PSNI advise that details are not available on individuals' membership of Loyal Orders, given its confidential nature, nor are accurate figures on numbers of civilians readily available given difficulties of classification.

The decision was taken at a senior level in the PSNI as to which individuals should be notified, in the context of the contents of the material obtained, and taking security and human rights considerations into account.

Smithsonian Folklife Festival

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Northern Ireland Tourist Board and Tourism Ireland plan to emphasise the historical and cultural link between Northern Ireland and the United States of America at the Smithsonian Folklife Festival in Washington DC during July 2007. [74419]

Maria Eagle: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board and Tourism Ireland are already working with the Smithsonian Institution and the Smithsonian Associates to maximise the tourism opportunities which the 2007 Folklife Festival will present. The overall programme will include reference to Northern Ireland's scenery including the Causeway Coast and Glens and the opportunities for golfing and activity holidays. Given the historical and cultural links which exist between Northern Ireland and the United States a bespoke series of events entitled "Northern Ireland—A Storied Land waiting to be Discovered" will highlight aspects of NI including cuisine, sights, Belfast's Maritime Heritage, Scots-Irish, C S Lewis and St. Patrick. The programme has already started with a series of lectures and other events planned for June 2006.

Special Needs

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how he proposes to meet the needs of young adults with special needs after they pass from the responsibility of the Department of Education to the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety; and if he will make a statement. [74242]

Paul Goggins: Day care services are provided through the Health and Social Services boards and trusts are for those individuals who will be unable to access services provided elsewhere. In 2003-04, 100 additional places were created and in March 2006, funding was provided for a further 100 places. The "Transitions Report", March 2006, set out service improvements for young people with special needs. Proposals made in the Bamford Review of Mental Health and Learning Disability are likely to set out a strategic direction for the development of services over time and as resources allow.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children with special needs in mainstream primary schools in the South Eastern Education and Library Board are suffering from a lack of one-to-one classroom assistance; and if he will make a statement. [74243]

Maria Eagle: Special education provision is matched to a child's individual needs.

The South Eastern Education and Library Board has confirmed that should a child require one-to-one classroom assistance on the basis of professional advice provided by medical professionals/educational psychologists, it is given. Not all children, however, require one-to-one assistance.

Speech Therapy

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action has been taken to establish the regional taskforce to improve the provision of speech language therapy in Northern Ireland; which Department is leading the establishment of this taskforce; which Department will lead the taskforce's operation once established; and who the main stakeholders in the taskforce will be. [73307]

Paul Goggins: The establishment of the regional taskforce, nominating members, setting objectives and a date for completing the work will be the responsibility of the Special Education Needs Inter-Departmental Group (SEN IDG), which comprises officials from the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and the Department of Education. The SEN IDG will act as the steering group to direct the work of the taskforce and will be meeting in the near future to discuss and make decisions on these issues.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children are waiting to be assessed by a speech and language therapist in each health and social services board area in Northern Ireland. [73312]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of children waiting to be assessed by a speech and language therapist is not collected centrally.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time was for assessment for speech and language therapy for children in (a) special needs and (b) schools in each health and social services board area in Northern Ireland in the last period for which figures are available. [73340]

Paul Goggins: Children with speech and language therapy requirements, as part of their Statements of Special Educational Needs, are referred to the health and social services trusts for therapeutic provision. Education and library boards do not separately keep waiting lists for this provision.

Information on the average waiting times for speech and language therapy for children is not collected centrally.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children are waiting post-assessment to commence speech and language therapy in each health and social services board area in Northern Ireland; and what the average waiting time was for commencement of such therapy in the last period for which figures are available. [73341]

Paul Goggins: Information on the numbers of children waiting post-assessment to commence speech and language therapy, and average waiting times for commencement of such therapy is not collected centrally.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) adults and (b) children are awaiting initial speech therapy assessment in each health board area in the Province. [74649]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of (a) adults and (b) children awaiting initial speech therapy assessment in each Health Board area is not collected centrally. However, information is collected centrally on completed waiting times for a first outpatient appointment of an episode of care with a community speech and language therapist. The following table contains information for the quarter ending 30 December 2005 (the latest date for which such information is available) and shows that, of the 2,686 persons who attended their first outpatient appointment, 497 (19 per cent.) had waited for between three and six months, and a further 96 (4 per cent.) had waited for six months or more.

Suicide

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent provision has been made in East Belfast, Strangford and North Down (a) to support families of suicide victims and (b) to offer help to those contemplating suicide and self-harm. [74220]

Paul Goggins: The Ulster Community and Hospitals Health and Social Services Trust provides a range of mental health intervention and strategies to support the families of suicide victims, including counselling for bereavement in conjunction with specialized agencies such as CRUSE.

Since February 2004, the trust has been operating a Crisis Response and Home Treatment Team, which is available 365 days per year to provide an appropriate response to individuals who have attempted self-harm or are suicidal.

In addition to this service, members of this team assess any patient who presents to the A&E department of the Ulster hospital, Dundonald, suffering from mental health problems. Furthermore, the trust has recently trained three staff in Applied Suicide Intervention Skills Training, and arrangements are presently being made for suicide awareness sessions in local sports and community clubs.

Taxis

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been convicted of (a) driving a taxi and (b) operating a taxi service illegally in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [72546]

David Cairns: The information requested, which is set out in the following table, is available only for the period since 1 April 2003, when a dedicated taxi enforcement team was set up by the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency.

Detection period	Recorded convictions: Driver	Recorded convictions: Operator
1 April 2003-31 March 2004	220	2

Teacher Absences

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average number of days was on which teachers were absent from work in each education and library board area in the Province in each of the last five years, broken down by (a) education sector and (b) reason for absence. [74664]

Maria Eagle: I have arranged for a copy of the information to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on substitute teachers in each Education and Library Board area in the Province in each of the last three years, broken down by education sector. [74665]

Maria Eagle: The information is supplied in the following table.

Teacher Training

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what retraining opportunities will be provided for teachers ahead of the introduction of the new curriculum. [74375]

Maria Eagle: An extensive programme of in-service training and support will be provided through the Curriculum Advisory and Support Services of the education and library boards, complemented by guidance and resource material provided by the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment. The programme will be sequenced to match the phasing-in of the revised curriculum, to ensure manageability for teachers and schools.

Teenage Pregnancies

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many teenage pregnancies have been registered in each health board area in the last three years; and how many of these young mothers were aged between 13 and 14 years. [74226]

Paul Goggins: It is not possible to provide information on the number of pregnant teenagers in Northern Ireland, as the number of pregnancies is not recorded.

The number of births to teenage mothers registered in Northern Ireland and how many of these mothers were aged 13 and 14-years-old in the last three years are shown in the table.

Translink

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration is given when changes to bus routes are being undertaken by Translink to the effects on disabled passengers who may have to cross busy thoroughfares to board buses. [73204]

David Cairns: Translink has advised that, in line with passenger demand, minor route changes regularly occur. Recently more substantial alterations have been made to some Goldline service routes, specifically those operating between Coleraine, Larne, Ballymena and Belfast. Also, Coleraine itself has recently seen a major reorganisation of services in the Coleraine/Portrush/Portstewart areas. Following the introduction of the new Metro network in February 2005, Translink is now developing Metro Phase 2, which will extend Metro-type services to areas outside Greater Belfast.

In considering requests in relation to bus operational issues, particularly with regard to bus stops, Translink examines the individual locations in conjunction with other relevant authorities, ie Roads Service and the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI).

Roads Service, in conjunction with the PSNI, provides advice on road safety matters pertaining to the location of bus stops as and when requested. Where a demand to cross a particular road has been highlighted, Roads Service may carry out an assessment to ascertain whether the location may qualify for a pedestrian crossing. The assessment procedure takes into account the demand to cross the road, together with the difficulty crossing the road. Vulnerable road users are given extra weighting in the assessment. Pedestrian refuges may be provided at sites that do not qualify for a pedestrian crossing facility.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average rates of truancy were in (a) controlled and (b) maintained schools in each education and library board area in Northern Ireland in each year since 2000. [74279]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Education does not collect the requested information. However, information about referrals of pupils to the Education Welfare Service is collected from each of the education and library boards on an annual basis. Referrals can be for a variety of reasons, including truancy.

The following table shows the percentage of pupils referred to the Education Welfare Service in controlled and maintained schools in Northern Ireland for school years 2000-01 to 2004-05:

Urologists

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many whole-time equivalent urologists are employed in each health trust in the Province; and what plans there are to increase the number. [74625]

Paul Goggins: The number of whole-time equivalent urologists is as follows:

	Whole-time equivalents
Altnagelvin Hospitals HSS Trust	2.00
Belfast City Hospital HSS Trust	5.00
Causeway HSS Trust	2.00
Craigavon Area Hospital Group HSS Trust	1.82

In recognition of the historic under-provision of consultant urologists locally, in comparison with other parts of the UK, there has been investment in additional specialist training, there is currently capacity for seven specialist registrars.

Vaccinations

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information is available in (a) leaflet and (b) website format to people travelling abroad from Northern Ireland which highlights the appropriate vaccinations, if required; what other general information on health insurance and contact numbers of British embassies he provides for travellers; and if he will make a statement. [74229]

Paul Goggins: Advice to UK citizens travelling abroad is contained in the booklet T7, "Health Advice for Travellers", which is available in all post offices. The information contained in the booklet is also available online, and can be accessed directly on the Department of Health website or by linking to it from the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety website. The online version also contains links to other Government Departments' websites, in particular the Foreign and Commonwealth Office where information on British embassies can be obtained.

Vehicle Registration

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to simplify the process for motorists moving to Northern Ireland from other parts of the UK wishing (a) to register their vehicles in Northern Ireland and (b) to continue with their United Kingdom road fund licence until it expires; and if he will make a statement. [73856]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

Work is under way to integrate the separate vehicle computer systems operated by Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) and the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Northern Ireland (DVLNI). This will simplify the registration and licensing process when vehicles move between Northern Ireland and other parts of the United Kingdom. The vehicle keeper will only need to notify a change of address. This could be in place as soon as October 2007.

Velcade Treatment

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients in each health board area in Northern Ireland are receiving velcade treatment for cancer. [74373]

Paul Goggins: There are currently 11 patients receiving velcade treatment at the cancer centre at Belfast city hospital and at the cancer units at Altnagelvin, Antrim, Craigavon and Ulster hospitals on the 25 May 2006.

It is not possible to provide information at health board level as the small numbers involved pose a potential risk of disclosure of individual's details.

Victim Support

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much public money has been spent on (a) consultants and (b) advertising by Victim Support Northern Ireland in each year since its formation; what the (i) administrative and (ii) salary costs were of the organisation in the last year for which figures are available; how many people are employed by the organisation, broken down by grade; and how much money has been allocated by his Department to the organisation in each year since its formation. [71405]

Mr. Hanson: Victim Support Northern Ireland (VSNI) is an independent voluntary organisation core-funded by the Northern Ireland Office to provide information, support and practical help to victims of crime and witnesses.

The following table provides a breakdown of expenditure made by VSNI for consultants and advertising. In line with VSNI retention policy, information is not available from the formation of the organisation:

Financial year	Consultants	£ Advertising
1999-2000	34,509	16,803
2000-01	20,398	18,743
2001-02	11,633	14,095
2002-03	1,093	55,270
2003-04	3,917	60,311
2004-05	5,279	29,799
2005-06	27,606	21,544

In 2005-06 VSNI's administrative costs were £622,963 and the salary costs were £1,263,936.

The following is a list of the staffing posts within VSNI broken down by grade:

Post	Number of staff
Branch Managers	8
Branch Co-ordinators	8
Advice Workers	9
Administrative Officers (P/T)	3
Administrative Officers (F/T)	18
Court Witness Co-ordinators (P/T)	2
Court Witness Co-ordinators (F/T)	4
CEO	1
Senior Management Team	4
C/Injuries Technical Manager	1
Court Witness Project Manager	1
Training Officer	1
HR Officer	1
Finance Officer (P/T)	1
IT Support (P/T)	1
Domestic Assistant (P/T)	1
Staff	64

The following table details the NIO funding provided to VSNI since 1999-2000. Funding substantially increased from 2001-02 with the development of two new services—assistance for those claiming criminal injuries compensation and support for victims and witnesses attending court. In line with NIO retention policy information is not available from the formation of the organisation:

Financial year	Funding (£000)
1999-2000	767
2000-01	787
2001-02	1,405

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much financial support his Department gives to Victim Support Northern Ireland; and what mechanisms are in place to monitor how that funding is spent. [74120]

Mr. Hanson: Victim Support Northern Ireland (VSNI) is an independent voluntary organisation core-funded by the Northern Ireland Office (NIO) to provide information, support and practical help to victims of crime and witnesses.

In 2005-06 the NIO provided funding of £1,907,000 to VSNI for the provision of its Community Service, Criminal Injuries Compensation Service and Court Witness Service.

The NIO has an agreed Conditions of Grant with VSNI which specifies the services to be delivered by VSNI, the arrangements for monitoring service delivery and performance, the roles and responsibilities for the stewardship of public funds and general conditions. In accordance with the Conditions of Grant, the Department closely monitors both business and financial performance on a quarterly basis and also holds quarterly bilateral meetings with VSNI.

Violent Offenders

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he plans to extend the role of the Multi-Agency Procedures for the Assessment and Management of Sex Offenders to include violent offenders in Northern Ireland. [73542]

Mr. Hanson: I believe it is important that we continually review and develop how we manage offenders in the community. This is why I intend introducing legislation later this year which will strengthen the current sex offender management arrangements in Northern Ireland by placing these on a statutory footing and extending the arrangements to include the management of non-sexual violent offenders. My officials are currently engaged in detailed consultation with colleagues who operate the offender management procedures, both here and in England and Wales, about the implications of such a change.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure that the Violent Offender and Sex Offender Register is available to the Probation Board and Prison Service on the same basis as it is to the police in Northern Ireland. [73543]

Mr. Hanson: The Violent Offender and Sex Offender Register (ViSOR), is a secure, confidential, fully auditable national database which allows the police, probation and prison services to monitor and manage sexual and violent offenders and others who may cause serious harm to the public. The three criminal justice agencies have agreed that access to ViSOR for prisons and probation should be provided through Causeway and are currently engaged in the development of the platform and protocols necessary for access to be granted.

Waiting Times

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the (a) average and (b) longest waiting time is for (i) inpatient admission and (ii) initial outpatient assessment in the plastic surgery speciality in Northern Ireland. [74369]

Paul Goggins: Official waiting list information is collected by time band. It is therefore not possible to calculate the average (arithmetic mean) and longest waiting time. It is however possible to identify the median or mid-point waiting and longest waiting time band.

The latest available waiting list statistics show the position at 31 March 2006. Plastic surgery numbers relating to the (a) median and (b) longest waiting time bands for (i) inpatient admission and (ii) initial outpatient assessment are shown in the following table.

Waiting time numbers for plastic surgery specialty at 31 March 2006

	(a) Median wait	(b) Longest wait
	Months
(i) Inpatient admission	3-5	9-11
(ii) Initial outpatient assessment	21-23	24+

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time was at each accident and emergency department in Northern Ireland in each of the last 12 months. [74387]

Paul Goggins: Information on the time that patients wait to be seen in accident and emergency departments is not collected centrally. Not all hospitals have electronic systems to record accident and emergency department activity. For those hospitals that have only manual recording systems in place, data extraction is a lengthy and time-consuming process.

Water Supplies

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes are planned to the funding of water supplies in Northern Ireland. [73174]

David Cairns: From 1 April 2007 Northern Ireland's water and sewerage services will be provided by a Government-owned company, Northern Ireland Water Limited (NIWL). Self-financing arrangements will be introduced which will result in the full costs incurred in providing water and sewerage services being recovered from charges to customers. The comprehensive water and sewerage charging regime to be introduced will involve the general introduction of unmeasured domestic water and sewerage charges with measured charges (i.e. metering) being introduced for all new properties and new connections. Meters will also be offered to pensioner households. In the non-domestic sector, water charges will be extended and sewerage charges introduced for all non-domestic customers.

All these new charges will be phased in over three years so NIWL will not be fully self-financing until 2009-10. There will also be a low-income protection scheme in the form of an affordability tariff which will involve capping charges for eligible customers at an affordable level. The affordability tariff will ensure that eligible low-income households spend no more than 3 per cent. of their income on water and sewerage charges. As many as 200,000 households (30 per cent. of all households) in Northern Ireland who presently qualify for rate rebate, housing benefit or the new Northern Ireland rate relief scheme should benefit from this scheme. The affordability tariff will also extend to all 16 to 17-year-old householders and to children leaving care up to the age of 21. For those on low incomes, the affordability tariff will mean that no-one will pay more than £180 regardless of the value of the property in which they live. On 1 June 2006 the Government published draft legislation, entitled The Water and Sewerage Services (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Northern Ireland) Order 2006, which will introduce important changes to the way water and sewerage services are delivered in Northern Ireland. Among other things the Draft Order sets out a framework for the levying of charges for water and sewerage services.

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost to public funds was of water lost through leaks in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [74983]

David Cairns: The chief executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katherine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Mrs. Katharine Bryan, dated 5 June 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about the cost to public funds of water lost through leaks in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years (74983). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

The estimated costs are set out in the table below. They are based on the additional operating costs, principally for power and chemicals, associated with supplying water above the economic level of leakage. The economic level of leakage is the point at which it would cost more to make further reductions than to produce water from an alternative source.

	£ million
	Cost of water lost through leaks
2001-02	3.8
2002-03	2.9
2003-04	1.9
2004-05	1.2
2005-06	0.42

The grant supports the assemblies in the performance of their designated functions to scrutinise the work of the regional development agencies; fulfil their regional planning responsibilities; and for the development of their strategic regional role.

The increase in funding from 2003-04 was granted in recognition of the statutory responsibilities that were placed on them as regional planning bodies by the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004.

For details of 2006-07 central Government grant to the eight regional assemblies outside London, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 121W.

The Government does not hold details of the administration costs of regional assemblies.

Housing

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make it a priority to increase the supply of quality affordable housing. [74895]

Ruth Kelly: Yes. We have committed to provide 75,000 additional social rented homes between 2004-05 and 2007-08, and social housing will be a Government priority in the current comprehensive spending review.

This is in the context of our ambition, as announced in the Government's response to the Barker review last December, to increase the overall supply of housing in England—market as well as affordable homes—to 200,000 per year over the next decade.

Mixed Communities Initiative

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the Mixed Communities Initiative pilot schemes. [74903]

Meg Munn: The Department for Communities and Local Government is committed to tackling poverty and social exclusion in the most deprived areas of the country. Successful mixed communities bring together the economic, social and physical aspects of renewal and development to create sustainable change in communities.

The Department for Communities and Local Government is working with a number of demonstration projects around the country to test the mixed communities approach. The projects are all at early stages of development and we are working with them to evaluate progress and learn lessons. Where appropriate the approach will be rolled out more widely across other deprived areas.

Standards Board for England

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will estimate the cost of legal advice sought by the Standards Board for England in pursuit of its duties and responsibilities in each year since 2001; and if she will make a statement. [73731]

Mr. Woolas: I have asked the chief executive of the Standards Board to write to you on this matter. I shall arrange for a copy of his reply to be placed in the Library of the House.

TREASURY

Departmental Pension Liability

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the pension liability of his Department over the next 30 years. [75275]

Mr. Timms: A technical note by HM Treasury was placed in the Library of the House on 2 March 2006 following an oral statement in Parliament by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury, Official Report, columns 388-90. Pension liabilities are not estimated for individual Departments, they are estimated for individual pension schemes, as shown in the breakdown of liabilities per pension scheme given in table 1 of the technical note.

Income Growth

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the rate of growth of incomes for (a) the top 1 per cent. of income earners, (b) the top 10 per cent. of income earners, (c) the bottom 10 per cent. of income earners and (d) the bottom 20 per cent. of income earners (i) for each year from 1978-79 and (ii) for the period as a whole; and if he will make a statement. [41443]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Information on the top 1 per cent. of income earners is not available.

To give a more detailed and informed view of the income distribution, DWP provides measures by both deciles and quintiles. The available information is in the tables.

Median income and the rate of income growth for the bottom 10 per cent., the top 10 per cent., the bottom 20 per cent. and the top 20 per cent. of the Before Housing Costs (BHC) income distribution are presented in the following tables in 2004-05 prices from 1979 to 2004-05:

Notes to all tables:
1. The groupings Bottom 10 per cent., Top 10 per cent., Bottom 20 per cent. and Top 20 per cent. of the Before Housing Costs and After Housing Costs income distributions are consistent with DWP's National Statistics' series, Households Below Average Income (HBAI). It is presented in this manner to be consistent with HBAI. The Bottom 10 per cent. relates to individuals in households with the lowest 10 per cent. of equivalised household income.
2. Real income growth is represented by the percentage change in decile or quintile income medians that have been adjusted for inflation. Year on year growth estimates are volatile.
3. Comparisons for the bottom decile should be treated with particular caution. Decile medians for the bottom 10 per cent. are more volatile as they are affected to a greater extent by fluctuations in households reporting very low incomes.
4. The Family Expenditure Survey (FES) data covers selected years from 1979 until 1995-97 where information is available. The Family Resources Survey (FRS) data is for all financial years 1994-95 until 2004-05.
5. Comparisons of estimates between the two sources should be treated carefully: FES figures are for the United Kingdom, FRS figures are for Great Britain;
The reference period for FRS figures is single financial years. FES figures are single calendar years in 1979, 1981 and 1987, two combined calendar years from 1988-89 to1992-93 and two financial years combined from 1993-95 to 1995-97;
The FRS was established by the then Department of Social Security in order to meet the Department's analytical demands; A review, available on the internet, into the differences in income values between the two surveys concluded that the differences in monetary value estimates across surveys were too large to justify publishing direct comparisons. Furthermore, large fluctuations in the difference between surveys for overlapping years mean that a spliced time series may be no more accurate than the unadjusted series. 6. Page 5 of the Child Poverty Progress Report showed growth by quintiles AHC and much higher growth for Q1 than Q5. This is borne out in this PQ. However, BHC progress was only slightly better for the bottom quintile than the top quintile.

Innovative Financing for Development

John Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his written statement of 2 March 2006, Official Report, column 29WS, on Innovative Financing for Development, how the money committed by the UK for HIV/AIDS over the next three years is planned to be spent. [75147]

Ed Balls: The UK Government will increase funding for AIDS related work in the developing world and spend at least £1.5 billion from 2005-06 to 2007-08.

These resources will: (i) fund action that prioritises women, young people and vulnerable groups, and focuses on human rights; (ii) ensure that the UK spends at least £150 million on programmes to meet the needs of orphans and other children, particularly those in Africa, made vulnerable by HIV and AIDS; (iii) double UK funding for the Global Fund over the next three years; (iv) provide £36 million to UNAIDS over the next four years to support its global leadership; and (v) provide £80 million to the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) over the next four years to support its HIV prevention, sexual and reproductive health work with women.

The "Taking Action Strategy" (which can be found at the following address: www.dfid.gov.uk/Pubs/files/hivaidstakingaction.pdf) outlines the UK's approach to tackling HIV and AIDS in the developing world over this three-year period.

John Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the written statement of 2 March 2006, Official Report, column 29WS, on Innovative Financing for Development, what financial contribution the UK will make to the Drug Purchase Facility; and when such financial support will begin. [75166]

Ed Balls: The UK recognises the importance of long-term predictable finance on a significant scale to meet the challenge of the purchase of drugs for tackling HIV/AIDS and other diseases. As agreed at the Paris conference in March, the UK supports the International Drug Purchase Facility (IDPF) and is working with international partners on the details of the initiative.

As the detailed technical structure of the IDPF is still under discussion, it is not yet possible for the UK to determine the size or timing of a contribution. However, the UK is fully committed to working closely with international partners in the coming months to develop a strong initiative that works effectively and complementarily with existing organisations and institutions in the global health field.

Sterling Stamp Duty

John Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 21 March 2006, Official Report, columns 353-54W, on sterling stamp duty, if he will publish the Government's study into the technical implications of the proposal for a sterling stamp duty. [75165]

Ed Balls: In the context of achieving the millennium development goals, the Government have considered several ideas and proposals for raising development finance and has concluded that a sterling stamp duty could not be practically enforceable given the multiple avenues for avoidance, and the consequently heavy regulatory and implementation costs such a tax would require. There is no intention of going further than this. The UK Government remain fully committed to the millennium development goals, and have set a timetable to reach the target of 0.7 per cent. overseas development assistance-GNI by 2013.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs why the letter of 2 May 2006 from the hon. Member for Walsall, North, regarding a constituent's suggestion for a generator, was not transferred to the Department of Trade and Industry. [73889]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The letter in question has been transferred to and accepted by the Department of Trade and Industry.

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Minister for Animal Welfare expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 12 April. [74446]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The Department has no record of having received this letter. If the hon. Member will write to me again, I will ensure his letter is answered promptly.

Environmental Liability Directive

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs why the consultation on the implementation of the Environmental Liability Directive has been delayed. [74282]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The Government's intention is to hold two public consultations on the transposition of the Environmental Liability Directive, the first on policy options and the second on draft legislation. They are currently considering the basis for the first of these consultations.

Oil Storage

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether he plans to assess the costs and benefits of introducing mandatory fitness for purpose annual inspections of oil storage tanks. [74801]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency is responsible for maintaining and enforcing The Control of Pollution (Oil Storage) (England) Regulations 2001. The Agency takes a risk-based approach to enforcement, and does not consider that a further targeted programme of oil storage tank inspections would be a cost-effective way of dealing with oil pollution. The existing regulations apply minimum prescriptive standards to all premises storing oil in above ground fixed or mobile tanks or facilities.

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Environment Agency next plans to carry out a review of the effectiveness of the Control of Pollution (Oil Storage) (England) Regulations 2001; when this review is expected to report; and which stakeholders will be consulted in the review. [74802]

Ian Pearson: The final stage of the Control of Pollution (Oil Storage) (England) Regulations 2001 came into force on 1 September 2005. A full year of incident data is needed before any meaningful evaluation can be undertaken. However, the latest available data show four consecutive annual reductions in the number of oil pollution incidents since the regulations were introduced.

Patio Heaters

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent estimate he has made of the annual carbon dioxide emissions from patio heaters. [74825]

Ian Pearson: Only very limited information is currently available about the number of outdoor patio heaters in use in the UK.

The Government's Market Transformation Programme (MTP) estimates that the number of liquid petroleum gas (LPG) patio heaters is around 630,000 in the domestic sector and between 3,000 and 12,500 in the hospitality sector (pubs, restaurants and hotels). This does not include electric outdoor heating appliances, however, which appear to be gaining market share. The MTP estimates are not derived from surveys or detailed research, and should not be interpreted as accurate data on energy consumption and carbon emissions.

The Liquid Petroleum Gas Association has provided sales figures for LPG supplied in cylinders sized for outdoor heating appliances each year. From the Association's 2005 figures the MTP estimates that annual carbon dioxide emissions from patio heaters in the UK are around 22.2k tonnes.

Perfluorooctane Sulphonate

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what advice and guidance (a) the Government's Advisory Committee on Hazardous Substances and (b) the Environment Agency has issued on the use of perfluorooctane sulphonate; [70608]

(2) what guidance the Drinking Water Inspectorate have issued on the use of perfluorooctane sulphonate; [70631]

(3) what guidance his Department has issued on the use of perfluorooctane sulphonate. [70662]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 25 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1916-917W.

Transport Emissions

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will establish a study to evaluate the changes in carbon dioxide emissions from cars as a result of the closure of post offices, bank branches and independent retail shops in the South West region in the last five years. [75039]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 5 June 2006]: Defra has no plans to establish such a study. Emissions from these journey types are part of the estimate for road transport as a whole in the UK Greenhouse Gas Inventory, and in the UK projections of emissions.

In considering the external impacts of any closures, it is important to consider a range of environmental, social and economic issues and changes in the transport infrastructure as a whole, not just changes in car use. The report on the validity of food miles as an indicator of sustainable development, published by Defra in July 2005, gives some useful data and an indication of some of the issues that need to be taken into account http://www.defra.gov.uk/news/latest/2005/food-0715.htm

Automatic Number Plate Recognition Cameras

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many automatic number plate recognition cameras are positioned for the purpose of capturing images on the parts of the road network managed by the Highways Agency. [74732]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency (HA) has responsibility for approximately 1,140 Automatic Number Plate Recognition (ANPR) cameras on its network. The Highways Agency uses them for traffic information and monitoring

Cameras used for enforcement purposes are the responsibility of the relevant enforcement agencies and so detailed information would have to be sort from them directly. The HA currently has eight permanent sites where SPECS safety cameras are deployed and these use [redacted]chnology. These are also operated on a n[redacted]ork sites but no central record is kept d[redacted]orary nature.

Traf[redacted] has ANPR cameras (blue cameras) [redacted]k road network for providing current t[redacted] information to their customers.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the accuracy of the automatic number plate recognition translation software used by his Department. [74734]

Dr. Ladyman: Three of DfT's Agencies operate automatic number plate recognition (ANPR) systems: Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, Vehicle and Operator Services Agency, and Highways Agency.

DVLA's ANPR cameras are type approved by the Home Office for the detection and prosecution of Vehicle Excise Duty (VED) offences. The type approval process involved rigorous testing of both the hardware and software. The ANPR systems also undergo an annual programme of testing and calibration in accordance with Home Office approved procedures to ensure continual accuracy.

VOSA's ANPR cameras are used to identify non compliant commercial vehicles and operators for stopping or checking, and if necessary to initiate enforcement action. VOSA's ANPR system complies with the ACPO national minimum standards for approval and performance acceptance. During testing the system gave 98 per cent. recognition and identification, which is in line with ACPO guidelines.

Highways Agency's ANPR cameras are used solely for live traffic information such as journey time information and incident warnings, and for monitoring scheme performance and success, such as changes in traffic patterns and delays. The National Traffic Control Centre (NTCC) only requires a match rate between adjacent cameras of about 10 per cent. to provide accurate traffic information, and the system meets this requirement.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on the (a) purchase, (b) installation and (c) maintenance of automatic number plate recognition camera systems on roads managed by the Highways Agency in each of the last five years. [74735]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency (HA) has responsibility for approximately 1,140 Automatic Number Plate Recognition (ANPR) cameras on its network. These cameras are purchased, installed and maintained through different methods.

National Traffic Control Centre (NTCC) has around 1,033 of the ANPR cameras on the HA network provided by the operating company TiS. TiS is contracted to deliver a number of services to the NTCC and receives a monthly payment for service delivery. TiS are responsible for purchasing, installing and maintaining the equipment to support service delivery and the cost of providing that infrastructure is a matter for the operating company.

The remaining 108 ANPR cameras are deployed on the motorway network in the West Midlands. 50 cameras were installed on the Active Traffic Management (ATM) section of the M42 during 2005-06 at a cost of £350,000. The other 58 cameras were purchased and installed in 2002-03 at a cost of £271,000 and upgraded in during 2004-05 and 2005-06 at a cost of £340,000 primarily for the purchase and installation of ancillary equipment such as fibre optic cables but not new cameras.

Maintenance of cameras and other technology equipment is carried out under a specialised traffic technology maintenance contract for all such facilities in the West Midlands. The annual cost for maintaining the 108 ANPR cameras as part of the overall maintenance contract is estimated as £62,500.

British Transport Police

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce proposals for reforms to the British Transport Police; what the expected cost is of the reforms; and if he will make a statement. [74079]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 5 June 2006]: A review of the British Transport Police is currently being undertaken. Once a conclusion is reached a statement will be made to both Houses.

High Speed Rail Link (North-east)

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had regarding the possibility of a high speed rail link from London to the North East. [75260]

Derek Twigg: Looking at the feasibility and affordability of a north-south high-speed link is a manifesto commitment. The Government have committed to take this forward as part of Sir Rod Eddington's study and in the development of a long term strategy for the railways.

The Department has had a wide range of discussions with interested parties on this topic and will continue to do so as it progresses this work towards the publication of the rail strategy next summer.

Lime Street Station, Liverpool

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for the internal redevelopment of Lime Street Railway Station, Liverpool. [74600]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The redevelopment of Lime Street station is a high priority in the Liverpool City Region Development Plan (LCDP). Network Rail, Liverpool Vision, Liverpool city council, the train operators and Merseytravel have developed proposals.

Network Rail have advised me that they are liaising regularly with Merseytravel and have now agreed to jointly develop a list of planned works. Wider ranging improvements to the Station would require third party funding.

MOT Tests

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many minutes an average MOT test took in (a) 2005, (b) 2001, (c) 1998 and (d) the last period for which figures are available. [74549]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department for Transport calculated that an average MOT test for a car took (a) 52.2 minutes in 2005-06; (b) 48.6 minutes in 2001-02; and, (c) 44 minutes in 1997-98.

We have recently undertaken a test timing exercise to determine the time it takes to conduct an average MOT test now. The results of the exercise are currently being analysed and will be made public shortly.

Railways

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department is taking to encourage the continued manufacture of rail vehicles in the UK. [73606]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 25 May 2006]: It is the policy of the Government to encourage open competition for the supply of rail vehicles and decisions on where to manufacture such vehicles are ultimately taken by train manufacturers on the basis of cost and competitiveness. The Department for Transport has discussed the situation with train manufacturers and will seek to provide them with better information on future procurement timescales and to facilitate a more even spread of train orders, thus enabling longer term decisions to be made on the maintenance of UK manufacturing capability. It is worth noting that 70 per cent. of the trains procured between 1996 and 2005 were manufactured or assembled in the UK.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers have used Saltash Railway Station in each of the last five years. [71883]

Derek Twigg: Analysis based on ticket sales indicates that the number of journeys made to and from Saltash Railway Station each year since 2002 was as follows:

Year[1]	Total operating journeys
2002	34,663
2003	28,668
2004	29,479
2005	37,446
2006	34,695

[1] Rail reporting year—April to March

Road Maintenance

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of roads maintained by the Highways Agency are covered by automatic number plate recognition cameras. [74733]

Dr. Ladyman: The National Traffic Control Centre (NTCC), which operates the majority of automatic number plate recognition cameras for the Highways Agency, currently covers about 90 per cent. of the trunk road network. Over the next couple of years this is expected to increase to around 99 per cent.

DEFENCE

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for changes in the number of scientists working on hydrodynamic testing at Aldermaston. [73816]

Des Browne: In the absence of the ability to undertake nuclear testing given that the UK has signed and ratified the Comprehensive Test Ban treaty, it is necessary to invest in hydrodynamic testing to provide assurance that the existing Trident warhead stockpile is reliable and safe. It is planned to increase the number of scientists working on hydrodynamics testing at AWE from 70 to 95 over the next three years.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Atomic Weapons Establishment has conducted studies into the use of (a) hydrodynamic test facilities at Aldermaston for developing new nuclear warheads, (b) hydrodynamic testing to build a nuclear weapon without having to use underground testing of such a weapon and (c) hydrodynamic test facilities at Aldermaston for developing a new warhead. [73818]

Des Browne: Hydrodynamics testing is essential in underwriting the safety and reliability of the existing stockpile without recourse to nuclear testing. There is no programme at Aldermaston to develop a new nuclear warhead.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total capital cost of the new Hydrodynamics Research Facility being considered by the Atomic Weapons Establishment is expected to be. [73820]

Des Browne: A number of options are under consideration. Mature costings are not available.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Identity Crimes

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Solicitor-General what plans he has to improve co-operation between the Crown Prosecution Service and the police in order to bring more prosecutions for identity theft and identity fraud. [74865]

The Solicitor-General: There already is significant cooperation between the police and the Crown Prosecution Service on ID theft and fraud issues.

The CPS is part of the ID fraud Steering Committee. The CPS was active in the setting up of the single point of contact scheme for identity crime issues within Government agencies and police forces in England and Wales. The scheme facilitates the gathering of evidence in order to bring the strongest cases before the courts.

In addition the CPS also has experienced prosecutors to give advice to the police on most charging and related evidential issues 24 hours a day via CPS Direct and local charging centres.

It is a matter for the police whether or not, or how, they will investigate an allegation that is referred to them. The CPS has no power to direct them regarding this. Following investigation, the police will decide whether to seek advice on charge, alternative disposals or to take no further action.

If the police seek advice on charging the CPS will review the case in accordance with the Code for Crown Prosecutors and decide whether the case ought to be prosecuted and the most appropriate charge.

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the Solicitor-General how much was spent on information technology (IT) sourced from outside his Department in each of the last five years; who is responsible for such projects in his Department; and what IT (a) expertise and (b) qualifications they possess. [71777]

The Solicitor-General: I am answering this question on behalf of the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS), the Serious Fraud Office (SFO), the Treasury Solicitors Department (TSol), the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office (RCPO), HMCPS Inspectorate and my own Department. Figures for the latter two Departments are included in those for the CPS and the SFO respectively. In some cases it has not been possible to differentiate between payments to external companies and internal project costs; and figures for 2005-06 are, in some instances, provisional as final year accounts are being settled. The figures are shown in the following table.

	CPS	SFO	TSol	RCPO
2001-02	16.3	2.381	0.794	—
2002-03	14.7	2.793	2.373	—
2003-04	29	2.934	2.323	—
2004-05	43	3.175	2.416	—
2005-06	50.6	4.180	2.204	2.03

The Director of the CPS's Business Information Systems Directorate is the Department's Chief Information Office (CIO). The CIO has worked in the private sector in IT for about 15 years prior to joining the CPS and her experience is supplemented by an MBA.

The Director of the CPS's Business Development Directorate is the Senior Responsible Officer for the COMPASS programme. The Information, Communications and Technology (ICT) Committee provides assurance to the CPS Board that ICT strategies and policies support delivery of the business strategy and PSA targets; provide value for money; and make the maximum contribution to joined-up IT across the CPS.

The CPS Programme and Project Management Centre of Excellence has responsibility for portfolio oversight of all CPS business change programmes and projects and provides expert guidance on programme and project management.

Within TSol the person responsible for IS projects in the IS Division is the Director Information Systems; she holds a Master of Science degree from City University in Business Systems Analysis and Design with many years experience both within and outside central Government.

All SFO projects are led by a Senior Responsible Office, usually at Assistant Director level, and are reviewed regularly under OCG Gateway procedures at critical stages of their lifestyle. The persons within the SFO whose responsibility it is to monitor such projects have extensive IT experience—over 15 years—with the public and private sectors as well as a wide variety of IT related degrees and professional qualifications.

RCPO has recently created a new post, Head of Information Services, and this was filled on 3 May 2006 initially for a six month period, by an IT Professional with 18 years experience in the IT industry and with technical, project management and service delivery expertise. He also has considerable experience in working with UK central Government. As well as receiving a considerable amount of technical and professional training from a previous employee, IBM, he has a Diploma in Business Studies.

Leased Land

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) leases and (ii) leased in (A) 1979, (B) 1983, (C) 1987, (D) 1992 and (E) 1997 in (1) the Southend West constituency, (2) Essex, (3) Hertfordshire and (4) the Metropolitan Police area of London. [72131]

The Solicitor-General: I am answering this question on behalf of the Crown Prosecution Service, the Serious Fraud Office, HMCPS Inspectorate, the Treasury Solicitors Department and my own office. The Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office did not come into existence until April 2005 and is therefore not covered by the question.

The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) holds no relevant records prior to 1996. Prior to that date property records were held by Property Holdings, and prior to 1990 such records were held by the Property Services Agency. The CPS holds no land in any of the geographical regions referred to. Nor did it hold any land in those geographical regions in 1997. At present, the CPS holds leases for the following premises by location:

(1) Southend West constituency—none

(2) Essex—County House, Chelmsford CM2 ORG

(3) Hertfordshire—Queen's House, St Albans AL1 3HZ

(4) Metropolitan Police area of London—Prospect West, Croydon CRO 2RD; King's House, Harrow HA1 1YH; Marlowe House, Sidcup DA15 7ES; The Cooperage, Southwark SE1 2NE; Solar House, Stratford E15 4LJ; Tolworth Tower, Surbiton KT6 7DS; Artillery Row, Victoria SW1P 1RZ

In 1997, the property leases held by the CPS were:

(1) Southend West constituency—none

(2) Essex—County House, Chelmsford CM2 ORG

(3) Hertfordshire—Queen's House, St Albans AL1 3HZ

(4) Metropolitan Police area of London—Prospect West, Croydon CRO 2RD; King's House, Harrow HA1 1YH; The Cooperage, Southwark SE1 2NE; Solar House, Stratford E15 4LJ; Tolworth Tower, Surbiton KT6 7DS; Artillery Row, Victoria SW1P 1RZ; Portland House, Victoria SW1E 5BH; River Park House, Wood Green N22 4HQ

The Treasury Solicitor's Department currently leases offices at One Kemble Street, London, WC2B 4TS which is in (4) the Metropolitan Police area. It previously had a freehold and long leasehold interest in its offices at Queen Anne's Chambers, 28 Broadway, London SW1H 9JS, which is in (4) the Metropolitan Police area which it occupied in all the relevant years. It has not held any leases in (1) the electoral constituency of Southend West, (2) Essex, or (3) Hertfordshire.

The Serious Fraud Office (SFO) is based in Elm House, which falls within the Metropolitan Police District. The lease for Elm House started in June 1988 and expires in 2012.

SFO have not held other leases for the years given.

SFO has not held leases for property in Southend West, Essex or Hertfordshire.

HMCPS Inspectorate is based at 26/28 Old Queen Street in the London Metropolitan area. The building is held on a 25 year lease until 2011.

My own office is in leased accommodation at Buckingham Gate, the lease expiring in April 2007.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Solicitor-General what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for (a) civil servants and (b) special advisors in his Department staying overnight in (i) mainland Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) other countries in each of the last three years. [69010]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers' Departments had no special advisers in the period in question.

The total cost of overnight accommodation for civil servants in the years 2003-04 to 2005-06 is provided broken down, where possible, into the requested locations. In some instances the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost because details on location are not always held centrally (Crown Prosecution Service) or overnight accommodation costs cannot be separated from subsistence payments (SFO for 2003-04 and Treasury Solicitor's Department).

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Departmental Annual Reports

David Simpson: To ask the Leader of the House how many staff in his Department did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represented of the total number of staff in each case. [75091]

Mr. Straw: The Privy Council Office provides administrative support to the Office of the Leader of the House of Commons. No staff in the Office of the Leader have failed to achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report over the last three years.

The performance management policy of the Department is set up to help units deliver their objectives and the means of rating overall performance is designed to clearly identify performance which is unsatisfactory or unacceptable.

Public Transport

David Simpson: To ask the Leader of the House what incentives are available to encourage members of his staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75090]

Mr. Straw: The Privy Council Office provides administrative support to the Office of the Leader of the House of Commons. They offer interest-free loans for season tickets for public transport and also bicycle loans to staff.

The majority of staff uses public transport for travelling to and from work.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefits

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department has spent in (a) cash and (b) real terms on each type of benefit paid to asylum seekers in (i) the Peterborough city council area and (ii) the Eastern region in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [48670]

Mr. Plaskitt: Due to the very small numbers of claimants involved it is not possible to accurately calculate the expenditure information requested.

From 3 April 2000 all new asylum seekers are excluded from social security benefits. Those asylum seekers who do require assistance are supported by the national asylum support service administered by the Home Office.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average amount claimed by an individual in (a) incapacity benefit, (b) housing benefit and (c) income support (i) weekly and (ii) annually was in the last period for which figures are available. [73448]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available in the format requested.

Annual average payments are not available; information from which to make such an estimate is not collected centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

The information on average weekly payments is in the following table.

Average weekly amounts of incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance, housing benefit and income support in Great Britain

	November 2005 (£)
Income support	83.05
Incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance	82.25
Housing benefit	64.20

Notes:
1. Average weekly amounts are rounded to the nearest penny.
2. A smaller number of former MIG cases did not convert to pension credit on 6 October 2003. These cases have been excluded from the IS figures and are mainly cases where the claimant is aged under 60 and the partner over 60.
3. Incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance figures exclude credits-only cases.
4. Housing benefit figures exclude any extended payment cases.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on public advertising for reporting benefit fraud in each year since 1997. [73254]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed on 8 June 2001 from parts of the former Department of Social Security, the former Department for Education and Employment, and the Employment Service. Information prior to 2001 is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department runs public information campaigns designed to positively reinforce honest behaviour, to create a climate of intolerance to benefit fraud and to undermine its social acceptability. The advertising expenditure for these campaigns is in the following table.

	Advertising spend (£000)
2001-02	8,039
2002-03	35
2003-04	8,383

	Advertising spend (£000)
2004-05	6,017
2005-06	7,042

Notes:
1. Figures are for the advertising spend on the 'targeting fraud' (2001 to 2002) and 'targeting benefit fraud' (2003 to 2006) campaigns.
3. All figures are exclusive of VAT.
4. The figures in these tables refer to media spend only, excluding production and other costs.
5. All figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) disability living allowance, (b) attendance allowance, (c) carers' allowance and (d) incapacity benefit claim forms his Department processes on average each day; and if he will make a statement. [72529]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available in the format requested. Information on the average number of claims cleared for each benefit in 2005-06 is in the table.

Average number of claims cleared each working day, 2005-06: Great Britain

Disability living allowance	1,728
Attendance allowance	1,652
Carer's allowance	998
Incapacity benefit	2,709

Note:
There were 250.5 working days in 2005-06.

DWP management information.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he plans to bring forward incapacity benefit legislation; and if he will make a statement. [72038]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Government are committed to introducing legislation in this session for the reform of incapacity benefits; establishing a benefits regime supporting a return to employment, while offering long-term support to those unable to work.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) lower and (b) upper capital limits are for each income-related benefit. [75289]

Mr. Plaskitt: For income support and income-based jobseeker's allowance the upper capital limit is £16,000; this applies to both single claimants and couples. Capital up to £6,000 is disregarded in full. A tariff income is applied to capital between £6,000.01 and £16,000, at the rate of £1.00 for each £250 or part thereof.

The same rules apply to council tax benefit and housing benefit, with two exceptions. If a claimant or their partner is aged 60 or over and they are in residential care, capital up to £10,000 is disregarded in full; tariff income applies from £10,000.01 and £16,000. The upper capital limit does not apply to anyone in receipt of the guarantee-credit element of the pension credit.

For pension credit there is no set limit to the amount of capital a person may have. Capital of £6,000 or less is disregarded in full; for those in care homes the full disregard applies to capital up to £10,000. For capital over these limits, a tariff income is applied at the rate of £1.00 for each £500 or part thereof.

Carers

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the number of carers who would be entitled to claim carers' allowance but are discouraged from doing so because they are caring for someone in receipt of the extra amount for severe disability paid with the pension credit. [71190]

Mrs. McGuire: The requested information is not available because the data sources do not provide information about the reasons why carers do not claim carer's allowance.

Child Poverty

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many children have been living in poverty in each parliamentary constituency in the North East in each year since 1997. [59921]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Specific information regarding low income for the North East and other regions of Great Britain is available in the latest publication of the "Households Below Average Income 1994-95 to 2004-05".

The data source does not allow us to provide robust estimates below regional level, therefore estimates for numbers of children living in poverty in parliamentary constituencies in each year since 1997 are not available.

The following table shows the number of children living in households with income below the threshold 60 per cent. of relative median in the North East since 1996-97. The threshold of 60 per cent. of median household income is the most commonly used in reporting trends in low income.

Number of children living in households with less than 60 per cent. of relative median household income, for the North East region, years 1994-95 to 2004-05 in Great Britain

Child Support

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list occasions on which a decision has been made under section 29 of the Child Support Act 1991 to opt not to collect maintenance; why the decision was taken in each case; and whether the decision was made in respect of all maintenance collection options allowed under the Act in each case. [72445]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 23 May 2006]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the matter for the chief executive. He will write to the right hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the child support agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply for the chief executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if he will list occasions on which a decision has been made under section 29 of the Child Support Act 1991 to opt not to collect maintenance; why the decision was taken in each case; and whether the decision was made in respect of all maintenance collection options allowed under the Act in each case.

Section 29 of the Child Support Act 1991 empowers the Secretary of State to collect child support maintenance. However, the wording of Section 29 enables the Secretary of State to decide, in a very limited range of circumstances, not to collect maintenance. Each case will be treated individually after careful investigation on its own merits and examples include:

Death of a non-resident parent;

Where a parent with care felt that to continue to collect would put her or her children at risk; and

Where an interim maintenance assessment cannot be converted to a full maintenance assessment the Agency will not pursue the punitive element of the debt.

As each case is individually considered it would require disproportionate effort to detail every decision.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects the review of the Child Support Agency to report. [73482]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 25 May 2006]: Sir David Henshaw is currently undertaking his work on the redesign of child support policy and delivery and has been asked to report to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions before the summer recess.

Correspondence

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to reply to the letter of 27 April from the hon. Member for Vale of York on information requested under the Freedom of Information Act regarding how much (a) companies, (b) contracting bodies and (c) local authorities received in each of the last five years from the European Social Fund. [69922]

Mrs. McGuire: I replied to the hon. Member on 25 May 2006, fifteen working days after the request was received and within the twenty day deadline.

Debt Collectors

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether (a) his Department and (b) its (i) executive agencies and (ii) non-departmental bodies use the services of private debt collectors. [71079]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department has contracts with four private sector companies to provide debt collection services.

Additionally, since the inception of the Child Support Agency in April 1993 it has used the services of Bailiffs to enforce the collection of child support debt.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what is his Department's policy for reviewing instructional leaflets it has issued. [51980]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department's policy is that its leaflets should be reviewed every six months to ensure accuracy of content.

Departmental Staff

[72527]

Mrs. McGuire: Disability living allowance and attendance allowance are processed at the same sites; no further breakdown of staff handling each type of allowance is available. Average salaries are not available; salary bandwidths have been given.

Pension Credit

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many recipients of pension credit claimed the extra amount for carers in the last financial year for which figures are available; and how many pensioner households received double the extra amount because both partners were eligible to claim. [71189]

Pension Credit Helpline

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many telephone calls were made to the pension credit helpline in (a) March and (b) April; how many of these calls (i) were handled, (ii) received an engaged tone and (iii) were abandoned; and if he will make a statement. [73561]

James Purnell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 2036W.

Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to review the uprating arrangements for UK pensioners who have moved overseas in the context of the publication of the White Paper on Pensions. [73918]

James Purnell: We uprate the State Pension in countries with which the UK has a reciprocal agreement or a legal obligation to do so. We have no plans to change the current arrangements.

Portland PR

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what meetings officials in his Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with his Department and agencies for which he has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case. [70048]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department does not maintain a central list of such meetings. Civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the civil service code and guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government.

DWP holds no contract (either currently or historically) with Portland PR.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people held a Post Office card account on 1 April 2006 (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006. [70883]

Mr. Pleskitt: Information is not available in the format requested.

There were 1,041,324 Post Office card accounts in use mid April 2004, 4,255,512 at mid April 2005 and 4,253,566 at mid April 2006.

In addition to accounts used by my Department these figures include Post Office card accounts used by the Northern Ireland Social Security Agency, the Veterans Agency (Ministry of Defence) and Her Majesty's Revenue & Customs.

Savings Credit

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were (a) eligible for and (b) receiving Savings Credit in (i) 2004-05 and (ii) 2005-06; how many he expects (A) to be eligible for and (B) to receive the credit in 2006-07; and if he will make a statement. [70329]

James Purnell [holding answer 16 May 2006]: The information requested is not available in the format requested. Information that is available is in Table 1 and contains estimates of eligibility in 2004-05 and projected estimates of eligibility in 2005-06 and 2006-07.

Table 1

	Number eligible (million)
2004-05	2.7-3.1
2005-06	2.9-3.3

Table 1

	Number eligible (million)
2006-07	3.0-3.4

Notes:
1. Estimates of the numbers eligible are given as ranges in order to account for possible biases inherent in estimates from data that is less than perfect. They also take account of the effects of sampling variation.
2. The figures given relate to those who may be eligible for the Savings Credit, with or without the Guarantee element.
3. Estimates cover all those aged 60 and over in the private household population of Great Britain.
4. For the purposes of this analysis, the unit of analysis is the benefit unit. This is either a single person aged at least 60 years old or, if a couple, both will be termed pensioners if one is aged at least 60 years old. This is consistent with both the definition used in "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-up" publications, and with the fact any individual aged 60 or over is entitled to pension credit.
5. The data source for eligibility estimates is the Family Resources Survey. Estimates of eligibility for 2005-06 and 2006-07 are based on Family Resources Survey data for 2003-04 and 2004-05, with incomes and benefits projected forward into the future in order to estimate the eligibility for each pensioner household on the survey. They are calibrated to the 2004-05 National Statistics estimates of non-eligibility to pension credit, which adjust 2004-05 Family Resources Survey data to take account of possible biases in reporting.
6. All figures have been rounded to the nearest hundred thousand.
7. Projections of eligibility may be adjusted following publication of future editions of the National Statistics take-up estimates.

Table 2: Number of pensioners receiving the Savings Credit in 2004-05

	Number receiving (million)
2004-05	1.8

Notes:
1. Figures relate to those in receipt of the Savings Credit, with or without the Guarantee Credit.
2. The numbers receiving in 2004-05 are derived from the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study, and relate to the average number of recipients over the financial year. They are consistent with the figures used to calculate National Statistics estimates of take-up, and so exclude cases in non-private households, and take account of any backdated awards that were paid in respect of 2004-05. Estimates presented here will therefore differ from other published sources.
3. The latest estimates of the take-up of Pension Credit can be found in the DWP report entitled "Pension Credit Estimates of Take-Up in 2004/2005". Copies of the publication are available in the Library.
4. Projected take-up figures are indicative only and not comparable to the published Take-Up figures for 2004/2005, which include backdated awards of Savings Credit. Forecasts of future recipients are based on extrapolation of administrative data from the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study.
5. All figures have been rounded to the nearest hundred thousand.

Current forecasts suggest that around 1.8 million pensioners may be in receipt of the Savings Credit in 2005-06 and around 1.9 million in 2006-07. However, these projections are indicative only and do not include adjustments for backdated awards so are not directly comparable with the take-up estimates for 2004-05.

Union Agreements

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans his Department has to renew its no redundancies agreement with the public and commercial services union beyond 30 June 2006. [72491]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 22 May 2006]: A 'Seeking to avoid compulsory redundancy' agreement was reached between the Department and all three of its unions, including the public and commercial services union in November 2004.

This agreement, which incorporates best practice across Government Departments, states that the Department 'will take all practical and reasonable steps to avoid or, if that is not possible, minimise compulsory redundancies', staff will only be declared redundant after full and meaningful consultation with trade unions has taken place, with a view to reaching agreement about ways to avoid, or minimise redundancy.

The agreement has no time limit and is still in place. It can be terminated by either DWP management or the unions by giving six months notice to the other party. To date no notice of termination has been given by either side.

The Department will continue to work with its trade unions to avoid compulsory redundancy wherever possible.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Casinos

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what reserve powers she has under the Gambling Act 2005 to remove the licences of casinos in the event of problem gambling increasing in the surrounding area. [74866]

Mr. Caborn: The Gambling Commission will have the power to revoke operating licences under sections 119 and 120 of the Gambling Act; and licensing authorities will have the power to revoke premises licences under section 202 of the Act. In either case, the decision whether to take any action will be predicated on the manner in which the casino is being operated, rather than the effects of the operation on the local community. An increase in problem gambling in a particular area could be evidence that a casino?or indeed other gambling establishment in the area?is not operating as it should, and that investigation or action may be needed.

In addition, if problem gambling did appear to be an issue in a particular area, or around casinos generally, conditions could be imposed to address the issue:

on individual licences by the Commission and licensing authorities, and on licences of a particular class or type by the Commission or the Secretary of State.

Digital Television

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on access to the digital signal in North Yorkshire. [75055]

Mr. Woodward: We do not have a figure for digital terrestrial coverage in North Yorkshire. Currently, digital terrestrial television is available to 98.5 per cent. of households in the Vale of York and the vast majority of households can receive digital TV services via digital satellite, terrestrial or cable.

North Yorkshire straddles two broadcasting regions: Yorkshire and Tyne Tees. 67 per cent. of households in the Yorkshire TV region and 77 per cent. of households in Tyne Tees have already chosen to take up digital TV.

After switchover, which takes place in the Yorkshire TV region in 2011 and Tyne Tees in 2012, UK digital terrestrial television coverage will match the current analogue coverage of 98.5 per cent.

And, already 70 per cent. of households in Border have taken up digital TV.

Film Industry

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on Government support for the UK film industry. [74999]

Mr. Woodward: In 2005-06, DCMS provided grant-in-aid funding of £24.11 million to the UK Film Council, its key strategic adviser on film policy. By the end of January, the Council had also received £28.1 million of lottery funding this financial year. In addition, the 2006 Finance Bill introduces a new tax relief for culturally British films, offering films costing up to £20 million a payable tax credit worth 20 per cent. of total qualifying expenditure. They will also be able to claim an enhanced deduction equal to 100 per cent. of qualifying expenditure. Other films will be entitled to a payable tax credit worth 16 per cent. of qualifying expenditure and an enhanced deduction worth 80 per cent. of UK qualifying film production expenditure.

Football Foundation

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people are employed by the Football Foundation; and what the budget of the foundation is. [75284]

Mr. Caborn: As at 31 May 2006, the Football Foundation has a staff of 42 employees and an annual budget of £45 million.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many grants were agreed by the Football Foundation to ethnic minority football clubs in the 2005-06 financial year. [75287]

Mr. Caborn: A key objective of all Football Foundation grants is the promotion of the game to under represented groups in football, in particular ethnic minority communities.

In the 2005-06 financial year 455 projects worth £46.97 million were supported. Of this, over £1.57 million was directly invested in projects with a primary aim of ethnic minority inclusion.

In addition the foundation also administered funds raised by the Stand Up Speak Up, anti-racism campaign, which resulted in 104 grants, totalling £885,000, being made towards projects designed to counter racism.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she has held any meetings with the chief executive of the Football Foundation since his appointment. [75288]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not held any meetings with the chief executive of the Football Foundation. However, I met with him on 18 April 2006, for an initial introductory meeting.

Licensing Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the operation of the Licensing Act 2003 (Premises licences and club premises certificates) Regulations 2005; and what recent representations she has received about the operation of these regulations. [73290]

Mr. Woodward: We are broadly satisfied with the operation of the Licensing Act 2003 (the 2003 Act) and the Regulations made under it. The Department estimates that some 190,000 premises have been successfully licensed under the 2003 Act.

However, as with any large-scale reform, there is a need to ensure that the actual operation of the 2003 Act reflects the purposes for which it was introduced, and to examine and address any anomalies as far as is possible. That is why the Government established an Independent Licensing Fees Review Panel in May last year to consider whether fees had been set at the right level. Their final Report is due for publication in the autumn.

We are also currently monitoring and evaluating the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 nationally through, for example, the Scrutiny Council initiative, in which officials from my Department are working with council officers and through them with local police and other responsible authorities, residents' groups, businesses and other stakeholders, to gather information about how the new regime is working on the ground.

In addition, our two-stage review of the Guidance issued under section 182 of the Licensing Act 2003 commenced on 1 December 2005. We expect to lay a revised version of the Guidance before Parliament by the end of 2006.

In the course of these monitoring and review processes, a number of representations have been received concerning matters covered by the 2003 Act and the regulations made under it, including the Licensing Act 2003 (Premises licences and club premises certificates) Regulations 2005.

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment has been made of the effect of the Licensing Act 2003 on the costs to sporting bodies. [73332]

Mr. Woodward: I believe that the Licensing Act 2003 will benefit sports in the long term by removing the need for clubs to obtain a number of different permissions for different activities.

However, I recognise that some concerns have been expressed about how sports clubs will adapt to the new licensing regime. An independent Licensing Fees Review Panel was established by the Government in May 2005 to consider whether fees had been set at the right level for community groups, including sports clubs, businesses and local authorities. The Panel—which is chaired by Sir Les Elton—published its interim findings on 5 December 2005. This identified a number of areas for more detailed work. The full interim report can be accessed on my Department's website at:

<http://www.culture.gov.uk/alcohol_and_entertainment/monitoring_and_evaluation/ifreview.htm>

The Panel is continuing to receive information from a number of stakeholder interests in order to gather the evidence that will inform their final Report, which is due to be published in the autumn.

As implementation continues, my Department is working closely with Central Council of Physical Recreation (CCPR) and other sports bodies. The Department has asked the CCPR to provide any information about how sports clubs are adapting to the new licensing regime and in particular, to feed in any evidence about the impact of the fees into the Independent Fees Review Panel.

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) temporary event notices and (b) premises licences have been requested to enable (i) international and (ii) other indoor sporting events to take place since November 2005. [73333]

Mr. Woodward: This information is not held centrally.

Lotteries

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what legislation governs the provision of online lotteries operating in Northern Ireland; what representations he has received on online lotteries; and if he will make a statement. [74452]

Mr. Hanson: I have been asked to reply.

The law governing the promotion of lotteries in Northern Ireland (other than the national lottery) is contained in the Betting, Gaming, Lotteries and Amusements (Northern Ireland) Order 1985 and associated subordinate legislation. I have received no representations on on-line lotteries.

Obesity

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to combat obesity through sport. [74138]

Mr. Caborn: We are committed to reducing obesity, as set out in our public service agreement target to halt, by 2010, the year-on-year increase in obesity among children under 11 in the broader context of a broader strategy to tackle obesity in the population as a whole.

Given the complexity of this public health challenge, my Department shares the target with the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Skills, to make sure that action is co-ordinated across our relevant sectors.

In terms of sport, we are making good progress on the National School Sport Strategy. We are on course for 75 per cent. of five to 16-year-olds getting at least two hours of high quality physical education and school sport by the end of this year. There was an 11 per cent. rise in the number of children in school sport partnerships doing two hours of quality physical education and school sport between 2003-04 and 2004-05.

However, we recognise that more needs to be done. That is why, for school sport, our plan is to make—from September 2006—overweight and obese children one of the target groups all school sport partnerships focus action on. We will also test out in a number of school sport partnerships what are most effective ways of supporting this target group of young people.

Olympic Games

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her latest estimate is of the costs of hosting the 2012 Olympics and Paralympics in London. [75183]

Tessa Jowell: The Candidature File set out the key costs of staging the Games. Since then, it has become clear that in certain areas, such as security, there are cost pressures.

Wherever we can, we are seeking to mitigate those pressures by cost reductions and maximising value. That work is continuing.

Tourism

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many full-time equivalent civil service staff have been working in her Department on the tourism portfolio in each year since 1995, broken down by grade. [74115]

Mr. Woodward: There are currently 30 civil service staff working on the tourism portfolio broken down as follows:

	Number
SCS	1
A(U)	1
A	7
B	11
C	8
D	2

The information for the previous 10 years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the grant-in-aid from her Department to the tourism industry was in each year since 1995, broken down by sector. [74116]

Mr. Woodward: My Department continues to invest substantially in the promotion and support of tourism, reflecting the sector's economic and cultural importance.

Up to 2002-03, the marketing and promotion of Britain overseas was the responsibility of the British

Tourist Authority. The support of tourism in England was the responsibility of the English Tourist Board up to 1998-99, and the English Tourism Council up to 2002-03. Grant-in-aid to these bodies was as follows:

	British Tourist Authority	English Tourist Board	£ million English Tourism Council
1995-96	34.5	10.0	—
1996-97	35.0	10.0	—
1997-98	35.0	9.9	—
1998-99	35.0	9.7	—
1999-2000	36.0	—	11.8
2000-01	37.0	—	11.0
2001-02	35.5	—	9.6
2002-03	35.5	—	11.6

Further grant-in-aid was allocated to the Authority and the Council, as follows, to assist the tourism sector in recovering from the effects of the foot and mouth outbreak, and the bomb attacks of 11 September.

	British Tourist Authority	£ million English Tourism Council
2001-02	14.2	3.8
2002-03	19.0	1.0

VisitBritain has, since 2003-04, been responsible for both the marketing of Britain overseas, and of England to the British (advised in the latter role by the England Marketing Advisory Board). Grant-in-aid to VisitBritain was, and is agreed, as follows:

	£ million
2003-04	47.9
2004-05	48.4
2005-06	49.05
2006-07	50.05
2007-08	50.05

Grant-in-aid to VisitBritain has been increased by £1 million for each of the years 2006-07 and 2007-08 to fund the further development and implementation of the EnglandNet e-marketing project.

Further grant-in-aid has been paid by my Department to the regional development agencies since 2003-04 in respect of their strategic regional tourism support functions, and to the Greater London Authority to develop London's gateway role to the rest of Britain, as follows:

	Regional development agencies	£ million Greater London Authority
2001-02	—	1.9
2002-03	—	1.9
2003-04	3.6	1.9
2004-05	3.6	1.9
2005-06	3.6	1.9

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Capita Group

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much business his Department has placed with (a) Capita Group plc and (b) its subsidiaries in each of the last five years; what the total value is of outstanding contracts placed with Capita Group plc and its subsidiaries by his Department; for which current tenders issued by his Department (i) Capita Group plc and (ii) its subsidiaries have been invited to bid; and whether (A) Capita Group plc and (B) its subsidiaries have seconded staff (1) temporarily and (2) on a longer-term basis to (X) his Department and (Y) any of its agencies. [61065]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Details of expenditure under contracts placed with Capita Group plc and its subsidiaries are only readily available for the period beginning 1 April 2003. These are:

	2003-04	2004-05	£ 2005-06

Capita Symonds	—	—	4,848
BMI Health Services	15,270	5,520	1,282

In addition UKTI has committed the following expenditure over the same period.

	2003-04	2004-05	£ 2005-06
BMI Health Services	1,260	—	—
Capita Business Services Ltd.	1,743	611	1,744
RSA	—	—	50

The vast majority of expenditure with Capita Group subsidiaries relates to contracts for handling coal health claims. The remaining value of contracts for these services is approximately £57 million.

The DTI does not disclose the identities of suppliers invited to bid for procurement exercises as this would prejudice the integrity of the bidding process.

The DTI has no current secondment arrangements with Capita or any of its subsidiaries.

Letter from Graham Horne, dated 6 June 2006:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply to you directly on behalf of The Insolvency Service in respect of your question (2005/3943) asking about our commercial involvement with Capita Group plc and its subsidiaries.

We have an arrangement for medical referrals with BMI Health Services Ltd, who we understand were acquired by Capita Group in 2005 and became part of Capita Health Solutions Ltd. We spent £10,800 in 2003-4, £9,650 in 2004/5 and £464 in 2005/6 with BMI/Capita Health Solutions.

We have also made payments to Capita Learning and Development for training services, amounting to £2,300 in 2004/5 and £3,800 in 2005/6.

We have no current contracts for which Capita Group companies have been invited to bid, nor have we placed any seconded or contracted staff from Capita into The Insolvency Service.

Letter from Ron Marchant, dated 6 June 2006:

I am responding to this parliamentary question, tabled on 22 March 2006. The Patent Office does not have any outstanding contracts placed with Capita and not placed any business with them in the last five years.

Letter from Jeff Llewellyn, dated 6 June 2006:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML) to your question regarding how much business has been placed with (a) Capita Group plc and (b) its subsidiaries in each of the last five years.

In response to your question (Y), neither the Capita Group, nor any of its subsidiaries have seconded staff either temporarily or on a longer term basis to the National Weights & Measures Laboratory.

Letter from Claire Clancy, dated 6 June 2006:

I am responding to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on behalf of Companies House, which is an Executive Agency of the DTI.

Companies House have no staff seconded from Capita Group plc or any of its subsidiary companies. We do, however, use one of the subsidiary companies, Capita Health Solutions, on a regular basis for pre-employment enquiries and staff referrals on health issues.

Departmental Initiatives

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the departmental initiatives for each year since 2000 which required bids for funding from (a) voluntary organisations and (b) local authorities together with the total resource allocated to each initiative in each year; how many successful bids there were in each year; what proportion this figure represents of the total bids received; and what assessment he has made of the costs of (i) preparing bids for each initiative and (ii) assessing those bids. [66012]

Jim Fitzpatrick: This information is not readily available and can be obtained only at disproportionate costs.

Disability Access

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether any building in his Department falls short of disability access regulations. [73026]

Jim Fitzpatrick: All of the Department's buildings are compliant with disability access.

Equal Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps are undertaken within his Department to ensure that women are obtaining equal pay to men doing work of equal value. [65845]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The DTI completed an equal pay review in 2003 for staff for whom they have delegated pay responsibility and put in place an action plan to address any concerns. This was published at http://www.dti.gov.uk/about_dti._documents.html.

A key action that has been taken is the introduction in 2003-05 of a revised pay system for these staff. This provides transparent pay progression to a target rate within a set period of time subject to performance.

Cabinet Office is responsible for the pay arrangements for the senior civil service (SCS) and undertook a separate equal pay review in 2002. It has been re-examined each year since as part of the Government's evidence to the Senior Salaries Review Body.

Free Air Miles

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many free air miles have been earned by senior civil servants in his Department in each of the last three years; and how they were used. [72906]

Jim Fitzpatrick: DTI does not keep records of air miles earned by senior civil servants. To provide this information would entail disproportionate cost. All DTI staff are instructed that any air miles earned from expenditure of public money should be used for official business or forgone.

Fuel Efficiency

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps have been taken to make his Department's headquarters building in Victoria Street more fuel efficient in the last two years. [67452]

Jim Fitzpatrick: DTI are working toward achieving the energy efficiency targets expressed in the framework for sustainable development, Part E-Energy. The targets set are to improve the energy efficiency of the buildings on the estate by 15 per cent. in terms of KWH usage and that used per square metre by 2010-11.

The main strategy is to gain efficiencies as a result of the reduction of the physical size of the estate and the number of buildings. As a result the DTI London HQ estate has been reduced by approximately 30 per cent. with significant associated reductions in the Department's overall energy usage.

The Department has also implemented a number of energy efficiency initiatives since the target was published. In 1 Victoria Street this included a number of energy efficiency projects to improve lighting and environmental controls as well as occupant awareness. The Department has also undertaken a study into the use of localised micro-generation of energy on the estate. Energy efficiency is taken into account in any estate project undertaken and has included the introduction of energy minimising technology within the recent IT systems refresh.

Oxford 2 Cambridge Arc Plans

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to link the Oxford 2 Cambridge Arc plans to (a) the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area and (b) the West Midlands regional economy. [72986]

Margaret Hodge: The Oxford 2 Cambridge Arc initiative is funded and overseen jointly by the South East England Development Agency, the East Midlands Development Agency, and the East of England Development Agency. The Arc's geography links Oxford to Cambridge to include the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area but does not include the West Midlands. Further development of the Arc is the responsibility of the regional development agencies.

The development of the MKSM growth area has taken full account of cross-regional linkages. The West Midlands can flourish irrespective of the MKSM growth area and indeed can benefit from infrastructure improvements.

Pensions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many and what percentage of staff in his Department are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension. [73028]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Members of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) can pay additional contributions to top up their pension either through the Civil Service Additional Voluntary Contributions Scheme (CSAVCS), a money purchase arrangement, or by buying added years of service in the PCSPS. As an alternative to membership of the PCSPS recruits from 1 October 2002 have been able to join a stakeholder arrangement, the partnership pension account.

The number and percentage of staff in the department who are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension as at 30 April are shown in the following table. The figures include staff in DTI Executive Agencies.

	Number	Percentage
CSAVCS	2,480	33.82
Added years	866	11.80
Partnership	280	3.81

Portland PR

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what meetings officials in his Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with his Department and agencies for which he has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case. [70047]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department does not maintain a central list of such meetings. Civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Civil Service Code and Guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government.

The Department has no contracts with Portland PR.

I have asked the Chief Executives of the Executive Agencies to respond directly to the hon. Member.

Letter from Dr. Jeff Llewellyn, dated 6 June 2006:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML) to your question regarding what meetings officials in his Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with his Department and agencies for which he has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case.

NWML has had no dealings with Portland PR to date.

Letter from Desmond Flynn, dated 6 June 2006:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply to your question (2005/4520) requesting what meetings officials in his Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with his Department and agencies for which he has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case.

The Insolvency Service Executive Agency of the Department of Trade and Industry does not use external PR agencies to carry out any PR activity. The Service has not had any contact and has not made any approaches to set up any contracts to work with Portland PR.

Letter from Claire Clancy, dated 6 June 2006:

I am responding to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on behalf of Companies House, which is an Executive Agency of the DTI.

Companies House has no contracts with Portland PR, and I am not aware of any meetings having taken place between Companies House staff and this company.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in his private office in each of the last five years. [69004]

Jim Fitzpatrick: In respect of (a) salary, since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each payband. For information relating to the last financial year I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158-61WS.

Information on special advisers for this financial year is currently being collected and will be published in the normal way when it is ready.

There is no breakdown available between (b) travelling expenses and (c) subsistence allowance but the combined figures are:

2001-02	4,000
2002-03	16,000
2003-04	23,000
2004-05	3,000
2005-06	24,000

Information is not available on the cost of removal expenses (d).

All official travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the ministerial code and the civil service management code.

Staff Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff surveys have been conducted in his Department in each of the last three years. [72904]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The DTI has carried out four staff surveys in the past three years (2003-04—2005-06).

World Cup

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans (a) he and (b) Ministers in his Department have to attend matches at the FIFA World Cup 2006 in Germany. [73632]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Neither my right hon. Friend or other Ministers have any plans to attend matches at the FIFA World Cup in Germany.

Alcohol (Young Adults)

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to help educators encourage responsible alcohol consumption in young adults. [74118]

Beverley Hughes: Educating pupils about the effects of alcohol and how to reduce alcohol related harm is an important priority for all schools. The Department therefore expects all schools to reflect this within their drug education programmes and this is set out in 'Drugs: Guidance for Schools 2004'.

Drug education which includes alcohol and tobacco is compulsory at key stages 1 to 4 as part of the National Curriculum in Science but is most commonly delivered through Personal, Social and Health Education (PSHE). Through the PSHE certificate for teachers we are training teachers to deliver better PSHE including alcohol education. DfES has also issued guidance to schools on drugs which emphasizes the importance of addressing alcohol as part of a comprehensive programme.

We also commissioned DrugScope to produce guidance for drugs and alcohol education in FE colleges, which can be found on their website.

Children's Commissioner for England

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) the start-up costs are and (b) first year's budget is for the Office of the Children's Commissioner for England. [75192]

Beverley Hughes: We are not able to quantify the start-up costs for the Office of the Children's Commissioner as much of the costs—such as the administrative support for the Children Act 2004, the recruitment costs for the Commissioner himself and initial support for his office—fall under the general administration of the Department for Education and Skills. The first year's (2005-06) budget for the Children's Commissioner was £3 million. The Children's Commissioner's Annual Report and accounts for 2005-06 must both be laid before Parliament, these will give more detail on the Commissioner's expenditure.

Contraceptive Pill

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance he has given to schools since 1997 regarding the potential liability of school governors in the event of (a) a fatality, (b) stroke and (c) other adverse reaction to a pupil aged under 16 years as a direct consequence of taking the emergency hormonal contraceptive pill (i) where the drug has been supplied on school premises with the sanction of the governors, (ii) where the drug has been supplied on school premises without the sanction of the governors and (iii) where the drug has been supplied off school premises but as a result of a referral by a school nurse on school premises without the sanction of the governors. [72133]

Beverley Hughes: No specific guidance has been issued to schools on this issue. The liability for the actions of health professionals working on school sites rests with the primary care trust (PCT), or NHS trust which employs them. School governors are responsible for ensuring that the school has consulted parents on the nature and scope of any health services available in the school; and ensuring that a protocol exists with the PCT/trust that makes clear which services will be delivered by PCT/trust staff working on the school site.

In terms of the individual scenarios described in the question:

(i) where the drug has been supplied on school premises with the sanction of the governors, the nurse will be personally accountable for their practice, but the employer (PCT/trust) may also be held vicariously responsible for the nurse's actions.

(ii) where the drug has been supplied on school premises without the sanction of the governors, the nurse will be personally accountable for their practice, but will still have vicarious liability protection with their employer (PCT/trust) if acting with their consent.

(iii) where the drug has been supplied off school premises but as a result of a referral by a school nurse on school premises, without the sanction of the governors, the nurse will be personally accountable for their practice, but will still have vicarious liability protection with their employer (PCT/trust) if acting with their consent.

Emergency hormonal contraception (EHC) is a 'prescription-only' medicine, prescribed by GPs, qualified nurse independent prescribers and nurses and pharmacists working under a patient group direction (PGD). A PGD is where a doctor has delegated authority and the supply will therefore always be under medical supervision. The safety profile of EHC for under-16s is considered to be similar to that for older women. Fatalities and strokes are not associated with use of EHC.

Correspondence

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when the Minister of State for Schools and 14 to 19 learners will reply to the letters dated 17 January 2006 and 22 March 2006 from the hon. Member for Old Bexley and Sidcup (Derek Conway). [67446]

Phil Hope: The hon. Member received responses to both letters in April.

Free School Meals

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils were enrolled at each maintained school in the city of Newcastle upon Tyne in January (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006; and how many and what percentage of pupils in each school were (i) eligible for and (ii) receiving free school meals. [75247]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Higher Education

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the rate of participation in higher education by 18-year-olds was in each region in England in (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06. [75291]

Bill Rammell: The current measure of higher education initial participation is the Higher Education Initial Participation Rate (HEIPR), which is used to measure progress against the Government's target of increasing participation towards 50 per cent. of those aged 18 to 30 by 2010. This covers English-domiciled 17 to 30-year-old first time entrants to HE courses, at UK HEIs and English FECs, who remain on their course for at least six months. The figure is expressed as a proportion of the 17 to 30-year-old population of England. The HEIPR cannot be disaggregated by smaller areas. The provisional 2004/05 figure for England is 42 per cent., and the 2005/06 figure will be available in March 2007.

The latest available figures on participation by region were published by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) in January in "Young Participation in England", which is available from their website at: http://www.hefce.ac.uk/pubs/hefce/2005/05_03/. HEFCE has calculated a Young Participation Rate (YPR (A)), which is the proportion of young people in a given area who go on to enter full-time higher education at age 18 or 19. This measure covers the period 1997-2000. This proportion is disaggregated by Government office region, and the figures for England are shown in the following table.

Young participation rate (YPR (A))

Independent Children's Homes

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many independent children's homes are registered. [69335]

Mr. Dhanda: I understand from the Chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection that as at 21 March 2006 there were 1,388 independent children's homes registered with the Commission. These include 1,257 homes run by private providers and 131 homes run by voluntary providers.

Independent Schools

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what estimate he has made of the cost to individual schools if the draft regulations for registration and monitoring of independent schools are implemented; [75444]

(2) what discussions he has had with Ofsted on the draft regulations for registration and monitoring of independent schools; [75445]

(3) what discussions he has had with (a) individual independent schools, (b) the Headmasters Conference and (c) other bodies representing the independent schooling sector on the draft regulations for registration and monitoring of independent schools. [75447]

Jim Knight: Regulations relating to the registration and monitoring of independent schools were made in 2003. No new regulations have been, or are being, drafted.

Munchausen's Syndrome by Proxy

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many cases of fabricated or induced illness in children were notified to the Department in (a) 2005, (b) 2004 and (c) 2003 in each local authority area; and if he will make a statement. [74988]

Beverley Hughes: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Non-Civil Service Staff

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many non-civil servant staff are working in (a) her Department and (b) each of its agencies; and what the pay levels are in each case. [68630]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Overseas Students

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many overseas students there were in each higher education institution in 2005-06; and what proportion of the student body this represented in each case. [75254]

Bill Rammell: The latest available information is shown in the table.

Performance Pay

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff in her Department are paid on a performance-related basis. [50516]

Mr. Dhanda: All staff in my Department are paid on a performance-related basis.

School Closures

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what criteria are used to determine primary school closures. [74698]

Jim Knight [holding answer 5 June 2006]: Changes to local school organisation, including school closures, are decided under local decision making arrangements. Individual proposals are determined by the local authority if they published the proposals and there are no objections. In all other cases the proposals are decided by the local School Organisation Committee (SOC) or the Schools Adjudicator, if the SOC cannot reach a unanimous decision.

SOCs and schools adjudicators must have regard to 'Decision Makers' Guidance' issued by the Secretary of State when deciding proposals. The guidance sets out a range of factors that must be considered for the different types of proposals but also stresses that all cases must be considered on their individual merits. For school closures the factors include: the impact on standards and diversity, the impact on the supply of school places, the cost effectiveness of the proposals, the impact on the community, the views of interested parties and the nature of the journey to any alternative provision.

The guidance also sets out a presumption against the closure of rural schools. The 'Decision Makers' Guidance' is available on the Department's School Organisation website at:

www.dfes.gov.uk/school.org

Social Exclusion (Schools)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what in-service training is provided for teachers to help them tackle social exclusion within schools; and if she will make a statement. [65936]

Jim Knight [holding answer 27 April 2006]: In order to achieve Qualified Teacher Status (QTS) trainee teachers need to demonstrate they have met the standards for QTS. These standards ensure that all new teachers have the subject knowledge, the teaching and learning expertise they need and are well prepared for the wider professional demands of being a teacher.

Further to this, it is for schools to the set their own improvement priorities, which may include social exclusion and inclusive teaching. They also decide what professional development is required in order to achieve their priorities, taking into account local circumstances and the needs of their teachers.

Support is available to schools through a variety of programmes. In particular the National Strategies' consultants focus on helping schools facing the greatest challenges. This year the National Strategies will be providing training for teachers in the use of catch-up lessons for pupils who have fallen behind, which will help to tackle the problem of children from disadvantaged backgrounds under-achieving. Excellence in Cities is a programme targeted in areas of highest deprivation giving schools access to additional resources through programmes such as Learning Mentors, Learning Support Units and expertise for CPD to meet the teaching and learning needs of teachers in dealing with the barriers faced by disadvantaged young people.

Subject Skills Shortages

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills further to his oral answer on 25 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1613-5, on subject skills shortages, what the teacher specialisms are; and if he will make a statement. [74990]

Jim Knight: A teacher's specialisms are subjects which they are equipped to teach, which may reflect their degree, the subjects taken at Initial Teacher Training, and subsequent re-training.

Sure Start Unit

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills for what reason his Department has not released the delivery unit report on the sure start unit completed in November 2005. [73465]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 6 June 2006]: The report of the Prime Minister's delivery unit's (PMDU) review of the Government's 10 Year Childcare Strategy, was, like all PMDU reports, an internal report made to Ministers and not intended for wider publication. Following a request to see the report under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000, the Department declined to release the document, in line with section 35 of that Act which provides that:

"information is exempt if it relates to the formulation of Government policy".

However, the PMDU review was used to inform our preparation of "choice for parents, the best start for children: making it happen, an action plan for the ten year strategy: sure start children's centres, extended schools and childcare", published on 4 April 2006 and available at:

www.everychildmatters.gov.uk.

Young Mothers

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of girls who gave birth under the age of 16 years in each year since 1990 went on to obtain educational qualifications. [75015]

Beverley Hughes: The information requested is not routinely collected. However, that engagement in education and training is a protective factor against poor outcomes for teenage mothers and their children. That is why increasing the proportion of teenage mothers in education, employment or training (EET) is one of the key aims of the Teenage Pregnancy Strategy. Evidence shows that there were higher rates of participation in EET among under-16s in the Sure Start Plus pilot areas, where young parents were provided with a holistic package of support from a dedicated Personal Adviser. Lessons from the Sure Start Pilots were included in the Children's Centre practice guidance issued in 2005.

CABINET OFFICE

Bonuses

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many non-pensionable bonuses were awarded to members of her staff in each of the last three years; and at what total cost. [73048]

Mr. McFadden: The table shows non-pensionable bonuses awarded to members of staff in Cabinet Office in each of the last three years. The table includes the number of bonuses issued and the total costs per year.

	Total number of bonuses	Total cost of bonuses (£)	Bonuses as percentage of annual pay bill
2003-04	1969	1,876,000	2.5
2004-05	1390	1,719,000	2.3
2005-06	1526	2,011,000	2.6

Debt Collectors

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether the Duchy uses the services of private debt collectors. [71060]

Hilary Armstrong: The Duchy of Lancaster very rarely uses the services of private debt collectors, the last occasion being in 2004.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many staff in her Department did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represented of the total number of staff in each case. [75111]

Mr. McFadden: Under the Department's performance management procedures, unacceptable performance may be addressed at any time of the year. Central records on the number of staff whose performance has been assessed as unsatisfactory are not available for periods before 1 June 2005. Since that date, fourteen staff have been handled under the Department's formal disciplinary procedures for poor performance. This represents less than 1 per cent. of the total number of staff.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many (a) pay grades and (b) pay bargaining units there are in the civil service; and how many grades and bargaining units there were in (a) 1997 and (b) 2001. [75230]

Mr. McFadden: Departments have delegated authority to determine their own pay and grading arrangements below the senior civil service that are tailored to meet their business needs. Under the delegated arrangements, comprehensive information on grading structures in individual departments is not collected centrally. Similarly, it is for each department to determine what bargaining arrangements are appropriate for their own organisation and in their executive agencies. Nevertheless, Cabinet Office records indicate that there are about 80 bargaining units currently operating across the civil service and there were about 100 in 2002. Cabinet Office has no records for 1997 and 2001.

Pay for senior civil servants is not delegated to departments and is not subject to collective bargaining. There were nine SCS pay bands in 1997 and four in 2001; this remains the current position.

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the (a) originally estimated, (b) most recently estimated and (c) outturn cost was in each of the five largest information technology contracts agreed by the Cabinet Office with outside suppliers over the last five years. [71784]

Mr. McFadden: Financial information on the five largest information technology (IT) contracts agreed by the department with outside suppliers over the last five years cannot be made available in the form requested without incurring disproportionate cost.

However the Department's largest five IT contractors by expenditure, and the total expenditure recorded against each of them over the past five financial years, are shown in the table.

Contractor name	Total recorded expenditure 's (£)
Computacenter	83,969,515
Hewlett-Packard	55,535,729
Atos	40,701,106
Cable and Wireless	26,554,274
Electronic Data Systems	23,952,188

It should be noted that the above figures contain some data from the 2005-06 financial year which is currently subject to audit. Audited figures will not be available until the resource accounts are published prior to summer recess.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Chevening

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions hospitality has been offered at Chevening to members of (a) foreign and (b) Commonwealth governments in each year since 2000. [74411]

Margaret Beckett: Official hospitality has been provided to members of foreign governments on the following occasions since 2000:

	Hospitality
30 November 2000	Dinner in honour of President Chirac
17/18 December 2001	Lunch and dinner for UK/Ukraine Conference
22/23 May 2002	Lunch and dinner for UK/Germany Economic Talks
1 February 2003	Dinner for French Foreign Minister
19 January 2004	Dinner for French and German Foreign Ministers

No official hospitality has been offered to members of Commonwealth governments.

In addition Chevening was used to host a number of meetings of senior officials as part of the G8 process in 2005.

EU Defence Policy

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many members of staff in EU institutions and agencies are working on EU defence policy; and at what cost in the most recent year for which figures are available. [73847]

Mr. Hoon: There are four EU institutions and agencies responsible for European Security and Defence Policy (ESDP):

The Directorate General External (DGE) VIII of the Council Secretariat. This is responsible for the defence aspects of external relations and has 19 staff, excluding secretarial/support staff;

DGE IX of the Council Secretariat. This covers civilian crisis management and co-ordination and has 32 staff, excluding secretarial/support staff;

The EU Military Staff. This is the source of military expertise and provides early warning, situation assessment and strategic planning for crisis management outside the EU. This has approximately 185 staff, but this should rise to 197 once all vacancies have been filled; and

The European Defence Agency: responsible for co-ordinating EU military capability development and defence research and technology. This has approximately 85-90 staff.

Figures for costs of these staff would be very difficult to determine, as some of the staff are seconded by member states, which pay for them. In general terms, however, the overall total budget for 2006 of the EU Council is €527,344,953 of which the costs of these staff represent a small proportion. Further details on the European Council budgets from 2003 can be found on the following website: http://eur-lex.europa.eu/budget/www/index-en.htm.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total budget was for EU defence policy in each of the last 10 years; and how much is budgeted for each of the next seven years. [73930]

Mr. Hoon: The budget for EU defence policy, also known as European Security and Defence Policy (ESDP), covers civilian activities and is drawn from the Common Foreign Security Policy (CFSP) budget. Military ESDP operations are not funded from this budget, but are instead paid for on an ad-hoc basis by contributions directly from EU member states. Budgeting for civilian ESDP missions began in 2002 with the EU follow-on mission (EUPM) to the United Nations International Police Task Force in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Budget allocations for this and subsequent missions were decided as follows:

	€ million
2002
Police Mission in Bosnia-Herzegovina (EUPM)	34
2003
EUPM	[1]9.2
Police Mission in Macedonia (EUPOL Proxima—later EUPAT)	15.006
2004
EUPOL Proxima (later EUPAT)	22.505
Rule of Law Mission in Georgia (EUJUST THEMIS)	2.05
2005
EUPM	17.41
EUPAT	1.5
Police Mission in Kinshasa, DRC (EUPOL Kinshasa)	4.5
Rule of Law Mission in Iraq (EUJUST LEX)	10
Security Sector Reform Mission in DRC (EUSEC RD Congo)	1.6
Aceh Monitoring Mission	9
Police Mission in Palestine (EUPOL COPPS)	6.1
Border Assistance Mission in Rafah (EUBAM Rafah)	7.6
2006 (allocated to date)
EUPM	12
EUPOL Kinshasa	3.5
Planning team for a mission in Kosovo	3.005
EUSEC RD Congo	4.75
Aceh Monitoring Mission	1.133

[1] For 2004

During recent negotiations on the Inter-Institutional Agreement, the overall CFSP budget for the period 2007-13 was agreed at €1,980 million, although it has not yet been decided how this figure will be divided up each year. There is no set figure for an ESDP budget within this, because funding is allocated at short notice in response to crises.

Further details on CFSP and ESDP spending can be found on the Council of the EU's website at: http://www.consilium.europa.eu.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list those Private Members' Bills in respect of which her Department adopted a policy of neutrality in each Session since 2001-02; and if she will make a statement. [72115]

Margaret Beckett: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has not adopted a policy of neutrality on any Private Members' Bills on which it has led since the 2001-02 Session.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what account he took of the increase of opium production in 2004-05 in his assessment of the likely success of the alternative livelihoods programmes in Helmand Province, Afghanistan. [74142]

Hilary Benn: During my visit to Helmand on 5 June 2006, I announced a new Helmand Agricultural and Rural Development Programme (HARDP), which will run from 2006 to 2009 with a budget of £30 million. The purpose of HARDP is to increase the economic opportunities of the rural poor in Helmand, including those that make a living from growing and harvesting poppy, through integrated support to improve their livelihood options.

In designing this programme, DFID used extensive UK-funded field studies on the effect of poppy production on households in Helmand. The evidence shows that a variety of forces drive poppy farmers' decisions, including both poverty and the lack of risk of law enforcement. Providing alternative livelihoods opportunities in itself will not reduce poppy cultivation in Helmand. This requires an integrated approach including assistance, law enforcement, better governance and better security. The UK is helping the Government of Afghanistan to deliver such an approach in Helmand. It will take several years to reduce cultivation substantially.

Arms Trade Treaty

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he plans to take to increase his Department's efforts, resources and capacity to deliver an Arms Trade Treaty. [74442]

Mr. Thomas: Ensuring better regulation of the arms trade is essential for conflict prevention and development. As a result, DFID has worked very closely with the FCO and MOD to promote our commitment to an Arms Trade Treaty (ATT). When the first committee of the UN General Assembly meets this year, the UK will aim to secure a UN resolution which will establish a formal UN-based ATT process. Significant progress has already been made, notably the endorsement of an ATT by the EU Council and Commonwealth Heads of Government and other influential countries such as Brazil.

DFID has contributed to a range of FCO-led initiatives, including the May 2005 meeting of experts at Lancaster House in London and a Geneva meeting of representatives to the Conference on Disarmament in March 2006. DFID and Whitehall partners have also developed a joint strategy to encourage other countries and regional bodies to actively promote the ATT. This focuses on building wider support for a first committee resolution, and includes awareness raising events. DFID will use ministerial visits and dialogue with partner countries, regional and international organisations to generate support for a resolution.

In parallel DFID is working closely with the FCO and MOD to strengthen controls over the transfer of small arms and light weapons within the existing UN Programme of Action (UN PoA). Small arms and light weapons (SALW) pose a particular challenge for development because they are widely available in developing countries and are the weapon of choice in the majority of conflicts worldwide. We are working internationally with a wide range of partners in advance of the UN PoA Review Conference in June to build support for global guidelines for national controls governing transfers of SALW.

Child Labour

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans he has to support further the International Labour Organisation declaration to end child labour; and if he will prepare a specific millennium development goal to achieve this objective. [73783]

Mr. Thomas: The UK is a leading supporter of the International Labour Organisation's (ILO) Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work. We have ratified all eight core conventions which it incorporates, included those on the elimination of child labour. DFID is a major funder of ILO's technical cooperation programmes including the 'International Programme for the Elimination of Child Labour'. We welcome the encouraging evidence in the ILO's latest global report which indicates a significant fall in the number of child labourers worldwide, particularly those in the worst forms of child labour.

We remain committed to the outcome statement of the United Nations World summit review of the Millennium Development Goals (MDG). It acknowledged the importance of decent work and particularly the elimination of the worst forms of child labour in achieving the MDGs. We do not believe this requires the creation of a new MDG.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with the TUC on ways to help eradicate child labour. [73784]

Mr. Thomas: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for International Development meets regularly with the Trade Union Congress (TUC) and representatives of trade unions. However they have not recently discussed the eradication of child labour.

DFID is a strong supporter of the elimination of child labour. Trade unions are important partners in this work. They are, for example, actively involved in the International Labour Organisation's programme for the elimination of child labour in Andhra Pradesh, India, which is funded by DFID. They are also active members of the DFID funded Ethical Trading Initiative. This is an organisation in which trade unions work with business and NGOs to ensure the working conditions in companies supplying the UK meet or exceed international labour standards, including eliminating child labour from the work force.

Cuban Medical Delegation

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment the Department's officials in Pakistan made of the contribution of the Cuban medical delegation after the October 2005 earthquake in deciding on the UK's contribution; and if he will make a statement. [73516]

Mr. Thomas: The Cuban Field hospital and medical staff filled a critical gap and was highly appreciated. DFID did not conduct a specific assessment of this contribution, but took it and contributions from all other donors into account when deciding on DFID's own contribution. In total, DFID committed more than £54 million to the relief effort, and has pledged a further £70 million to longer term reconstruction.

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with the Cuban Government on sharing information drawn from the experience of the Cuban medical delegation in disaster relief. [73517]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development has had no discussions with the Cuban Government on the experience of the Cuban medical delegation in disaster relief.

Cuban/Venezuelan Eyesight Care Programme

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the extension to Africa and the poorest people of North America of the Cuban/Venezuelan 'Operation Miracle' eyesight care programme. [73518]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has not been involved with the 'Operation Miracle' Eyesight care programme in Latin America and the Caribbean, and has therefore not assessed its extension to Africa. We do not have any programmes in North America and have therefore made no assessment of its extension to the poorest people of North America.

However, DFID supports a number of programmes which address preventable causes of serious eye disease and blindness. For example, DFID provided £5.6 million through the World Bank for the African Programme for Onchocerciasis Control (APOC) between 2001-02 and 2006-07. DFID also contributed £12.5 million to the World Health Organisation (WHO) in 2005 towards its Global Elimination of Blinding Trachoma Programme. We also support civil society organisations such as Vision 2020 through our contribution to the WHO, and acknowledge the role of NGOs in the provision of preventive, treatment and support services for people with visual impairment.

Human Trafficking

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support his Department is giving to non-governmental organisations abroad who work to prevent and support victims of human trafficking. [74996]

Mr. Thomas: The main channel for DFID funding for the prevention and support of victims of human trafficking is the International Labour Organisation (ILO). DFID support includes a commitment of over £8 million to the ILO's programme in the Greater Mekong Region, covering Vietnam, Laos, Thailand and China. The programme supports NGOs and other civil society groups to inform and educate communities about trafficking and to stimulate additional livelihood opportunities. DFID has also provided £1.6 million to a linked project managed by Save the Children. In Burma, DFID has provided £235,000 to support the work of World Vision to raise awareness among community members and community organisations about the risks of trafficking. In Nepal, DFID is providing £258,000 to a Just World Partners' programme to prevent trafficking of young people for prostitution.

Kenya

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the situation in Kenya in relation to international aid and continuing allegations of corruption. [66956]

Hilary Benn: DFID has made a thorough assessment of corruption in Kenya and its implications for our assistance. I had frank and direct discussion with President Kibaki about this when I visited Kenya in January. Since then, considerable action, including the removal of three senior Ministers, has taken place in response to public pressure following the release of the Githongo dossier and the release of the Goldenberg Report. This is an encouraging start but Kenyans are calling for more to demonstrate full political accountability. When I met President Kibaki again recently, I stressed the importance of continued progress in the investigations.

The UK does not provide direct budget support to Kenya precisely because of our concerns about corruption, and all DFID's projects have rigorous safeguards to ensure that our assistance is not being misdirected.

For example, all our projects work through special, earmarked and fully audited accounts, independent financial management agents or are provided directly to non-government organisations or other direct service delivery. All projects over £1 million are subject to annual reviews and audits, and expenditure is closely tracked. Accountable grants to non-governmental organisations are paid retrospectively only once invoices have been checked and the spending is accounted for. Occasional cases of fraud do still occur, but are investigated immediately and swift and decisive action taken.

Despite recent announcements that the Dutch Government has frozen any new commitments to Kenya, I do not foresee the corruption allegations making a significant impact on international assistance in the short term. Most of the development agencies, including DFID, believe that just because poor people live in a country where corruption is a major problem, it does not mean that they do not deserve our assistance. In Kenya our assistance is improving many lives. Our support will mean textbooks for each of the 18,500 primary schools in Kenya and 12,000 new classrooms. It will also deliver 11 million insecticide treated bednets, saving 167,000 children's lives. We have provided £23.7 million to drought affected regions of Kenya since December 2005.

Maldives

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 13 March 2006, Official Report, column 1927W to the hon. Member for Romford (Andrew Rosindell), on aid expenditure, for what reasons the amounts of aid paid to the Maldives vary from 2000-01 to 2004-05. [74555]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has no regular bilateral assistance programme to the Maldives because it is relatively wealthy and our limited finances are better used in poorer countries where needs are greater. However since 2001 support for small developmental programmes has been provided through the Small Grants Scheme (SGS) which, though financed by DFID until 2005, is managed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The SGS has focused almost exclusively on training awards. These targeted public officials in the health and education sectors and on governance, with a focus on:

- Improving quality of basic education
- Supporting child protection initiatives
- Gender sensitisation issues
- HIV/AIDS awareness
- Targeted assistance to initiatives supporting reform, good governance and democratisation

The allocation to Maldives has been some £200,000 per year. Disbursements however vary according to the pace of programme implementation, the duration of the contracts, and the type of training or study financed.

In 2005, following the Asian tsunami, DFID provided £1.7 million to the Maldives for emergency humanitarian assistance. These funds were channelled through the United Nations and the Red Cross.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what conditionality is applied to his Department's aid to the Maldives in respect of human rights. [74437]

Mr. Thomas: DFID does not provide regular bilateral assistance to the Maldives because of their relative wealth. Our limited resources are better used in poorer countries where needs are greater.

Immediately following the Asian tsunami in 2004 DFID provided some £1.7 million in emergency assistance, channelled largely through the United Nation Development Programme, the United Nations Environmental Programme, the World Health Organisation and the Red Cross. Given the urgent humanitarian nature of this support no conditions were imposed.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the EU donation to the Maldives for financing projects for (a) the reconstruction and development of the tourist industry and (b) environmental protection and disaster prevention in areas affected by the tsunami. [74844]

Mr. Thomas: DFID provided £1.7 million in emergency assistance to the Maldives immediately after the tsunami. Our support was channelled largely through the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Environmental Programme and the World Health Organisation and the Red Cross. However we do not maintain a regular programme to the islands and have not provided any subsequent assistance. The Maldives are relatively wealthy and our limited resources are better used in poorer countries where needs are greater. DFID has not therefore undertaken an assessment of the effectiveness and impact of individual European Commission programmes.

However, DFID does monitor overall recovery in the Maldives, drawing on reports produced by the International Monetary Fund and other development agencies. It is encouraging to note that the fishing and tourist industries, the mainstay of the country's economy, have recovered very strongly following the tsunami. Economic growth is expected to be between 12 per cent. and 13 per cent. in 2006, restoring the pre-tsunami growth trend.

Government and donors are well aware of the difficult environmental challenges facing the Maldives, including the problem of differential settlement of the substructure of the islands following the tsunami. This issue adds to the complexity and expense of the reconstruction task, but is being taken into account when designing recovery programmes.

UN Peacebuilding Commission

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the UN Peacebuilding Commission. [74832]

Mr. Thomas: As the UN Peacebuilding Commission is due to have its first meeting at the end of June, we have not yet been able to assess its effectiveness. However, as a member of the Organisational Committee of the Peacebuilding Commission, the UK will be monitoring its effectiveness closely.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Attacks on NHS Premises/Staff

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many attacks on (a) NHS staff, (b) patients and (c) visitors have occurred (i) at GP practices and (ii) in the Province in each of the last five years. [74579]

Paul Goggins: The information is not available in the requested format from GP practices, who are independent contractors to the health and personal social services and are not required to provide this information to Health and Social Services Boards. To provide the information from GP practices would require a survey of all GP practices in Northern Ireland and would be at a disproportionate cost.

The information in respect of NHS staff, patients and visitors in the Province is not held centrally by the Department before 2004 and will take some time to collate from the health and personal social services. I will write to the hon. Member with the information as soon as it is available and place a copy in the Library.

Boundary Commission

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) when the revised recommendations of the Northern Ireland Boundary Commission will be published; [74347]

(2) when a final decision will be taken on the new boundaries for Northern Ireland Westminster parliamentary constituencies. [74346]

Mr. Hanson: The Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Northern Ireland announced their revised recommendations on 18 May 2006.

They must consider all representations on the revised recommendations received within one month of their publication. Further to this, they will submit their final recommendations to the Secretary of State who must then lay these (with or without modifications) before Parliament for approval.

The Commission must submit their final report to the Secretary of State by June 2007.

Firearms

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many licensed firearms there were in Northern Ireland in (a) 1995 and (b) 2005. [74211]

Paul Goggins: It has not been possible to provide information for the same date in each of the two years specified in the question but the Chief Constable informs me that there were 134,027 firearms held on certificate at 31 December 1995 and 144,554 firearms held on certificate at 12 May 2005. The 12 May figure represents a reduction of 6,934 since the Firearms (NI) Order came into force in January 2005.

Foreign Prisoners

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will break down the number of foreign national prisoners detained in Northern Ireland by country of origin. [75221]

Paul Goggins: The number of prisoners detained in Northern Ireland Prison Service custody on 1 June who had declared themselves to be foreign nationals (excluding Irish citizens), was 28, with the following breakdown:

	Number
Lithuania	5
China	4
Poland	4
Nigeria	2
Portugal	2
South Africa	2
Italy	2
Canada	1
France	1
Belgium	1
Algeria	1
Latvia	1
Egypt	1
East Timor	1

Former Prisons

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has for the former site of (a) HMP Maze and (b) HMP Crumlin Road, Belfast; and what planning permissions have been sought. [74718]

Mr. Hanson: The Masterplan for the Maze/Long Kesh site was published on 30 May 2006. This shows the vision for development on the site. No planning permissions have as yet been sought. A copy of the Masterplan has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The development of the Crumlin Road Gaol and Girdwood sites will be taken forward on an integrated basis through a master planning approach. This will be subject to full public consultation. Listed building consent and planning approval was granted in March 2004 for the demolition of non-listed buildings and other works at the Gaol. Planning permission for the installation of CCTV cameras at Girdwood was granted in February 2006. Planning applications were submitted in March 2006 for repair and restoration works to the Gaol.

Incorrect Criminal Records

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many residents of Northern Ireland are known to have been incorrectly attributed with criminal records. [74344]

Paul Goggins: It is not possible to provide the information requested as this information is not collected.

Joyriding

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many convictions for joyriding there have been in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; how many of these convictions were of repeat offenders; and how many resulted in custodial sentences in each case [74980]

(2) what average length of prison sentences was given to those convicted of joyriding in Northern Ireland in the last period for which figures are available. [74981]

Mr. Hanson: The Criminal Justice (No. 2)(Northern Ireland) Order 2004 provided for the creation of two new offences within section 172 of the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1981, to tackle 'joyriding'. These offences are aggravated vehicle-taking (section 172A) and aggravated vehicle-taking causing death or grievous bodily injury (section 172B). Aggravated vehicle-taking is defined as 'a vehicle being taken without consent, which is then driven dangerously or causes an accident which results in injury, damage to property or damage to the vehicle'.

Statistics relating to these new offences are not yet available; however, the number of convictions for 'taking a motor vehicle without owner consent' (section 172 of Road Traffic (NI) Order 1981) and the number subsequently sentenced to immediate custody are provided below. Due to limitations within current data systems it is not possible to readily determine the number who are repeat offenders.

Data are collated on a principal offence rule, thus only the most serious offence with which an offender is charged is included.

Table 1: Number of convictions for 'taking a motor vehicle without owner's consent' and the number sentenced to immediate custody 1999-2003

	Number of convictions	Number sentenced to immediate custody
1999	294	94
2000	328	58
2001	348	50
2002	300	43
2003	351	64

The average length of prison sentence in 2003 for 'taking a motor vehicle without owner consent' (section 172 of Road Traffic (NI) Order 1981) was three and a half months.

Learning Disabilities

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to improve services for those with a learning disability in the 19 plus age range. [74655]

Paul Goggins: The inter-departmental 'Transitions Report', was produced by the Department of Education, the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and the Department of Employment and Learning in March 2006, setting out over 20 actions and targets to improve the transition process. Key actions include proposals to provide appropriate age-related placements in adult day care centres and the enhancement of further education and training provision.

Ministerial Travel

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost was of departmental Ministers' travel to and from Northern Ireland on official business in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [74689]

Mr. Hain: All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the 'Ministerial Code' and 'Travel by Ministers', copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

The following table provides the total Ministers and Secretary of State air fare expenditure for the financial years 2003-04 to 2005-06.

	Airfares (£)
2003-04	623,770
2004-05	574,172
2005-06	562,401

Moy Park Group

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) financial and (b) other support has been provided to the Moy Park Group for each of its Northern Ireland plants by (i) the Department for Enterprise, Trade and Investment, (ii) the Department for Employment and Learning and (iii) Invest Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [73511]

Maria Eagle: Over the past five years financial support of £10,973,752 has been given to Moy Park Group through Invest NL. The plants benefiting from the assistance are located in Craigavon, Dungannon, Moira and Lisnaskea. Within the timescale for the response a separate analysis of grant that each plant has drawn down is not possible. Support has been offered through a variety of direct grant programmes: selective financial assistance, Compete research and development, networking, business improvement in addition to marketing assistance.

The Department for Employment and Learning supports employers who are expanding their workforce or creating new jobs by providing job brokering services and suitable training programmes where appropriate. The Department has a very close working relationship with the Moy Park Group, which has a high turnover of staff, and services the majority of its vacancies. One company within the Moy Park Group, Feme Foods, employed one employee under the new deal employment options for which the company received a total of £1,950.

National Stadium

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the estimated cost is of the new road layout for a national stadium site at the former HMP Maze site in Lisburn. [74719]

Mr. Hanson: The Masterplan published on 30 May recommends that if development goes ahead at the Maze/LongKesh site surrounding infrastructure should be upgraded. A detailed assessment of transport requirements including road infrastructure will be commissioned shortly. This work will show the cost of any improved road networks

Paediatric Cardiology

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children are awaiting an initial paediatric cardiology assessment in the Province. [74628]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not held centrally and will take some time to collate. I will write to the hon. Member with the relevant information as soon as it becomes available and place a copy in the Library.

Planning Appeals

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications from each district council in the Province submitted to the Planning Appeals Commission have been (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful in each of the last three years. [74324]

Mr. Hanson: The Planning Appeals Commission is a tribunal non-departmental public body, and I understand that the chief commissioner has written to the hon. Member in the following terms:

"I have been asked to provide you with information requested in the above Parliamentary Question and I have attached a table showing the number of planning appeals allowed or dismissed, by district council, during the period 1 April 2003 to 31 March 2006.

I would be happy to provide any further information you require arising out of this response or to meet with you to discuss the matter if that would be more suitable".

Plastic Bullets (Alternatives)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost has been of (a) testing, (b) acquiring and (c) training police personnel in Northern Ireland in the use of alternatives to plastic bullets in each of the last three years. [74421]

Paul Goggins: In response to Patten Recommendations 69 and 70 the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland set up a NIO-led UK Steering Group to lead the research programme into alternative policing approaches towards the management of conflict. The development of the Attenuating Energy Projectile (AEP), as an operational replacement for the L21A1 baton round from 21 June 2005, formed only part of the Group's ongoing activities.

I am advised that the cost breakdown in terms of testing, acquiring and training police personnel in the use of AEP cannot be provided without disproportionate cost. However, the total cost of replacing the L21A1 with the AEP for operational use was estimated to be £291,000. This figure is the only top-line cost available for the project and PSNI cannot readily extrapolate testing, acquiring and training figures for the following reasons: testing was conducted externally as well as internally; acquisition costs would involve various aspects of the procurement process; and training costs were incurred across many PSNI departments.

Police

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what (a) discussions and (b) written communications there have been with the European Commission in respect of Council Directive 2000/78/EC concerning provision for 50:50 recruitment to the Police Service of Northern Ireland; [32684]

(2) whom he has consulted in respect of the derogation from Council Directive 2000/78/EC to provide for 50:50 recruitment to the Police Service of Northern Ireland. [32685]

Paul Goggins: EU Council Directive 2000/78/EC establishes a general framework for combating discrimination in employment and occupation, on the grounds of disability, age, sexual orientation, religion or belief. Article 15.1 of this directive provides a specific derogation that allows for the policy of 50:50 recruitment to the Police Service of Northern Ireland, as legislated for in the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 2000.

I am advised that the European Commission is duty-bound to review and provide a report on the directive routinely every five years. This procedure involves input from member state Governments on the implementation of the directive in their own country.

The first five-yearly report on the directive for the United Kingdom was completed in December 2005. As part of the United Kingdom's submission to the European Commission's report, the Northern Ireland Office provided specific input in relation to the working of article 15.1. This process involved discussion and written communication with the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister, United Kingdom Permanent Representative to the European Union and the Office of the Northern Ireland Executive in Brussels.

I am advised that this report is not a means of pursuing any revisions to the current legislation, therefore no consultation was required.

The 50:50 recruitment provisions are reviewed every three years, and can only be renewed by a majority vote in both Houses. This is next due in March 2007. The Government remain committed to the use of these temporary provisions as means of achieving 30 per cent. Catholic composition among Regular PSNI Officers by 2010-11. The provisions shall only be renewed, however, following extensive review and consultation with interested parties. It is our intention to commence the review and consultation process shortly.

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many recruits are in training for the Police Service of Northern Ireland; and how many undertook training in each of the last five years. [15280]

Paul Goggins: I am advised that the total number of student officers in training as at 31 May 2006 is 291.

I am also advised that the number of recruits who undertook training in each of the last five years is as follows:

	Number appointed
2002	475
2003	448
2004	598
2005	449
2006 (Up to and including 7 May 2006)	188

Portland PR

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what meetings officials in his Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with his Department and agencies for which he has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case. [70054]

Mr. Hain: The Department does not maintain a central list of such meetings. Civil servants meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Civil Service Code and Guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government.

We contacted the various branches and Agencies of the NIO who all confirm that they have had no meetings with representatives of the Public Relations company Portland PR. Portland PR also have no contracts with the Department or its agencies.

Proceeds of Crime Act

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was recovered in Northern Ireland under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 in each year since 2003. [48273]

Paul Goggins: The amount of assets recovered in Northern Ireland under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 in each year since 2003 by the Police Service of Northern Ireland, Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs and the Assets Recovery Agency is detailed in the following tables.

Public Bodies

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the former party affiliation is of the serving chair of each public body in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [74255]

Mr. Hanson: Those appointed to public bodies in Northern Ireland, including chairpersons, are not required to declare if they are affiliated to a political party. However, they are asked to declare if they have undertaken any significant political activity in the five years prior to the date of their application.

A list of chairpersons currently serving on public bodies in Northern Ireland, who, at the time of their application, declared that they had undertaken political activity in the preceding five years, is set out in Table 1.

Appointments are made solely on merit, political activity is recorded for monitoring purposes only and plays no part in the selection process.

An overview of the political activity of both applicants and appointees to bodies sponsored by Northern Ireland's eleven government departments can be found in the Public Appointments Annual Report, and similar details in respect of NIO sponsored bodies is included in the NIO Departmental Report. Copies of the latest versions of both these reports are available from the Library of the House and can be found on the internet at: www.ofmdfmni.gov.uk/public-appointments and www.nio.gov.uk/niodepartmentalreport2006.pdf, respectively.

Saville Inquiry

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what rules governed the ability of legal representatives appointed to the Saville Inquiry to take on other legally-aided work following their appointment. [74207]

Mr. Hanson: No restrictions were placed on the legal representatives acting for Interested Parties to the Bloody Sunday Inquiry to take on other separately funded work. The time devoted to the Inquiry varied among individuals and legal representatives were free to accept other instructions that their workload allowed.

Sentencing

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 728W, on sentencing (averages), what the average sentence passed for those convicted of offences under (a) section 170 of the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 and (b) section 5(3) of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 in Northern Ireland was over the last five years. [74770]

Paul Goggins: Table 1 provides the average sentence lengths for those convicted and given immediate custody under section 170 of the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 and section 5(3) of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to review current guidelines for sentencing handed down to young adults who carry out rapes in the Province. [74244]

Mr. Hanson: The Government do not issue guidelines on sentencing for any offence in Northern Ireland. Sentencing is entirely a matter for the independent Courts based on case law and precedent. The role of the Government is to provide the legislative framework within which the Courts operate.

To that end the Government are planning a public consultation which will review the criminal law in relation to sexual offences. This consultation will, among other things, propose several new sexual offences and a new definition of the offence of rape. It will also include proposals on the definition of consent and the capacity to consent.

Sex Crimes

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were convicted of (a) rape and (b) sexual assault in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years; and how many rapes and sexual assaults were reported to the police in this period. [73309]

Mr. Hanson: I am aware of and share concerns about the very low number of rapes reported to the police that result in prosecutions. I shall be including this issue as part of the forthcoming consultation on sexual offences legislation which I expect to initiate shortly.

Table 1 provides the number of convictions for rape, attempted rape, indecent assault and all other sexual offences and covers the calendar years 1994 to 2003. Data for 2004 will be available by August 2006. Data are collated on the principal offence rule, thus only the most serious offence for which an offender is charged is included.

Table 2 provides the number of rape, attempted rape, indecent assault and other sexual offences recorded by the police for the period 1994 to 2005-06. These figures are published in "A Commentary on Northern Ireland Crime Statistics 2004" (available at www.nio.gov.uk) and the PSNI statistical report "Recorded Crime and Clearances 2005/06" (available on www.psni.police.uk).

It should be noted that statistics in Table 1 are offender-based while figures in Table 2 are offence-based.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many convicted rapists in Northern Ireland have committed the same offence after being released. [74674]

Mr. Hanson: Statistics from the adult (17 years and older) reconviction dataset indicate that none of the sexual offenders contained in the 2000 and 2001 custody discharge cohorts who were convicted of rape as their principal offence were subsequently reconvicted of the same offence. Reconviction data are not yet available in respect of those convicted after 2001.

It should be noted that the adult reconviction dataset only counts the first discharge from prison for an individual in that year and is based on the principal offence rule, thus only the most serious offence with which an offender is charged is included.

Stormont

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many civilian security staff are deployed at the Northern Ireland Assembly buildings when it is (a) sitting and (b) suspended. [74694]

Mr. Hanson: 71 and 46 respectively.

Tennis

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress the Sports Council for Northern Ireland has made in meeting the requests of young tennis players who wish to play under the auspicies of United Kingdom tennis authorities rather than the Irish equivalent. [74209]

Maria Eagle: The Sports Council for Northern Ireland (SCNI) has been in regular contact, over the past 12 months, with Tennis Ireland and the Lawn Tennis Association (LTA), the governing bodies of tennis on the island of Ireland and of Great Britain respectively, regarding the requests of young tennis players who wish to play under the auspices of Great Britain tennis authorities rather than the Irish equivalent.

As a result of these contacts, Tennis Ireland has agreed to meet with relevant players' representatives to discuss a range of concerns including the sport's current affiliation arrangements. The LTA has also confirmed that any British player who lives in Northern Ireland has the right to play for GB subject to satisfying the qualification rules of the International Tennis Federation relating to nationality, holding of a passport, residency and previous representation.

CCTV Coverage (Londonderry)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 6 February 2006, Official Report, column 899W, on CCTV coverage (Londonderry), when CCTV coverage at the Irish Street/Top of the Hill interface will be provided. [67134]

Mr. Hanson: The funding of CCTV cameras located at interface areas is an operational matter for PSNI.

UVF Prisoners

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Ulster Volunteer Force prisoners were released early as a result of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998; how many of those ex-prisoners have (a) subsequently reoffended and (b) had their licences revoked; and if he will make a statement. [73998]

Paul Goggins: 67 prisoners with perceived UVF affiliations were released 'early' as a result of the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998. Of these, three have subsequently reoffended and had their licences revoked as a result. A fourth UVF prisoner had his licence revoked because the Secretary of State believed that he had broken the conditions of his licence and had become a danger to the public as a consequence.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners who have declared themselves to be members of the Ulster Volunteer Force are held as (a) convicted and (b) remand prisoners in Northern Ireland. [73999]

Paul Goggins: There are no prisoners in Northern Ireland, either sentenced or remand, who have declared themselves to be members of the Ulster Volunteer Force. However, nine prisoners are currently held in separated conditions at Maghaberry prison, five of whom are sentenced and four on remand, who are perceived to have UVF affiliations.

Violent and Sexual Offenders

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he plans to introduce a pilot electronic monitoring scheme for curfews put in place in Northern Ireland for those considered to be high risk violent or sexual offenders. [74208]

Mr. Hanson: The use of electronic monitoring is under consideration in the current review of the sentencing framework in Northern Ireland. No decisions have yet been made.

I will make an announcement in due course.

Weapons

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many violent incidences involving the use of a knife occurred in Northern Ireland in each of the last two years, broken down by seriousness of injury. [74680]

Mr. Hanson: The following table provides information on knife crime statistics over the past 2 years. The incidents are sorted by the recorded crime categories used by the police. While it is known that a knife was used in all incidents recorded below, it is not possible to indicate how the knife was used.

Clearly the categories of murder and attempted murder refer to the most serious incidents. While the overall incidence of use of a knife in crime rose last year, the numbers of murders and attempted murders reduced.

I am hopeful that the knife crime campaign launched this week will impact on these figures and that we will see a reduction in knife related crimes this year.

Crime type	2004-05	2005-06
Class 1. Offences against the Person	394	430
Murder	10	8
Attempted murder	32	27
Assaults	214	320
Class 2. Sexual offences	4	13
Class 3. Burglary	26	19

Total crime	1,000	1,130

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has for amnesties for handing in (a) bladed and (b) blunt weapons in Northern Ireland. [74679]

Mr. Hanson: The campaign to tackle knife crime in Northern Ireland, including the introduction of a three week amnesty was launched on Wednesday 24 May. This received significant attention from all the main media outlets in Northern Ireland. A list of the amenity sites where bins for collection of knives are situated was provided to the media and the police have established a helpline to provide information to anyone who wishes to surrender a knife. While the amnesty will run for a period of three weeks initially, this can be extended if it is successful, and it can be re-introduced.

I would urge anyone who does not have a legitimate reason for having a knife, to take this opportunity to surrender it.

I have no plans to hold an amnesty for blunt weapons but am open to consideration.

WALES

A5

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the likely effects on road traffic between England and Ireland of the proposed closure of the A5 between Ty Nant and Dinmael; and what discussions he has had with Welsh Assembly Ministers on this matter. [74504]

Mr. Hain: I have made no such assessment. Andrew Davies, the Welsh Assembly Government Minister for Enterprise, Innovation and Networks has explained that measures are being urgently considered to minimize the impact of the closure, including the possibility of re-opening the old A5 to restricted traffic.

Bonuses

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many non-pensionable bonuses were awarded to members of his staff in each of the last three years; and at what total cost. [73054]

Mr. Hain: This information is not held centrally and obtaining it could be achieved only at disproportionate cost.

Eid-Ul-Adha

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff from his Department attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event in London in 2005; and what the total cost was to his Department of their attendance. [73050]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will write to the hon. Member with details of the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event. Copies of her letter will be placed in the Library.

Pensions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many and what percentage of staff in his Department are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension. [73053]

Mr. Hain: Members of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) can pay additional contributions to top up their pension either through the Civil Service Additional Voluntary Contributions Scheme (CSAVCS), a money purchase arrangement, or by buying added years of service in the PCSPS. As an alternative to membership of the PCSPS recruits from 1 October 2002 have been able to join a stakeholder arrangement, the partnership pension account.

The number and percentage of staff in the department who are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension as at 31 May are shown in the following table.

	Number	Percentage
CSAVCS	1	1.7
Added years	10	16.7
Partnership	4	6.7

Promotion Boards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what promotion boards have been held in his Department in each of the last five years. [72895]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office does not hold promotion boards.

Staff are recruited to the Wales Office in line with the policy set out at paragraph 5.6 of the departmental annual report 2006 Cm 6835 (also available on our website at www.walesoffice.gov.uk).

Sickness Absence

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff in his Department have had (a) five or more, (b) four, (c) three and (d) two periods of sick leave of less than five days in each of the last three years. [73049]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office does not collect this information in this way, and obtaining this information could only be achieved at disproportionate cost.

Staff Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff surveys have been conducted in his Department in each of the last three years. [72897]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office is a small Department and its staff are entitled to take part in staff surveys conducted by the DCA.

Further to the DCA staff survey, the Wales Office conducted its own staff survey for the first time earlier this year.

Vehicle Sharing

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what incentives his Department offers to encourage staff to share vehicles when travelling to work. [73052]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office has no incentive schemes to encourage staff to share vehicles to travel to work.

Around three-quarters of staff do not use their own vehicles to travel to work, travelling instead by alternative methods, including public transport and bicycle.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Bankruptcies

Mr. Spring: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many people have been declared bankrupt in Suffolk in each year since 1997. [69814]

Ms Harman: A bankruptcy order is made on the petition of the debtor or one of his creditors when the court is satisfied that there is no prospect of the debt being paid. The following table shows the number of bankruptcy orders made at either Bury St. Edmunds or Ipswich county courts since 1998, the earliest year for which statistics are available. Bury St. Edmunds and Ipswich are the only two county courts in Suffolk which deal with insolvency matters.

Bankruptcy petitions should be presented in the court that deals with the area where the debtor has lived or traded for the longest period in the previous six months. However, the insolvency jurisdictions of particular county courts are not directly comparable with standard geographies such as counties or parliamentary constituencies. For these reasons, figures shown in the table will not be an exact measure of bankruptcies in Suffolk.

Number of bankruptcy orders made at Bury St. Edmunds or Ipswich county courts, 1998-2005

Coroner Reform Programme

Mr. Walter: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what progress has been made regarding the time scale for the coroner reform programme; and when she expects the Family Charter to be available. [74284]

Ms Harman: A draft Bill on reform of the coroner system will be published very shortly. A draft of the Charter for Bereaved People (as it is now known) will be published alongside the draft Bill, and will be similarly subject to scrutiny and consultation. A Bill will be introduced when parliamentary time allows.

Equal Pay

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many (a) women and (b) men are employed in the Department; what the average pay was for (i) women and (ii) men in the Department in (1) 1997 and (2) 2006; what women's average pay is as a percentage of men's average pay; and how many (A) women and (B) men the Department employed in each of the last five years, broken down by grade. [67790]

Bridget Prentice: In March 2006 there were (a) 9,121 women and (b) 4,908 men employed in the DCA, excluding the magistrates courts service (MCS). Following the implementation of the 2005 pay award the average full-time equivalent salary for (i) women was £19,142 and for (ii) men was £21,276. Furthermore in March 2006 there were (a) 8,974 women and (b) 3,621 men employed by the MCS in England and Wales. The MCS became part of the DCA in April 2005 and are employed on a wide variety of terms and conditions. The average full-time equivalent salary for (i) women was £20,202 and for (ii) men was £23,689 in the MCS.

On this basis, in March 2006, the average female full-time equivalent salary represents 89 per cent. of the average male salary for staff on DCA terms and conditions and 85 per cent. of the average male salary for staff in the magistrates courts service. These figures are for all grades below SCS. Comparative figures from 1997 could only be provided at a disproportionate cost.

The details for (1) Women and (2) men employed by the DCA (excluding the MCS) in each of the last five years broken down by grade is contained in the table shown at Appendix A. Only full-time equivalent details are available for 2001 and 2002.

The equivalent information from the magistrates courts service which became part of the DCA in April 2005 is not maintained in a format which enables this data to be easily extracted and the information requested can therefore only be provided at a disproportionate cost for years prior to 2005. The information for 2005 is contained in the table at Appendix B and is broken down according to £5000 pay bands as there is no comparable grading system.

HEALTH

Abortions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with representatives of the medical profession about the interpretation by them of section one of the Abortion Act 1967; and if she will make a statement. [73269]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 28 March 2006, Official Report, column 947W.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the Government's progress in reducing the number of abortions in England. [73270]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 21 March 2006, Official Report, column 250W.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will amend the abortion notification form to provide for the inclusion of the method of abortion known as partial birth abortion; and if she will make a statement. [73271]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 29 March 2006, Official Report, column 1056W.

Adverse Drug Reactions

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 15 May 2006, Official Report, columns 736-7W on adverse drug reactions, when she expects the redesign of the drug safety monitoring database to be completed. [72449]

Andy Burnham: Reports of suspected adverse drug reactions (ADRs) are collected by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) and the commission on human medicines through the spontaneous reporting scheme, the yellow card scheme.

The MHRA is currently implementing a major upgrade of the drug safety monitoring database and data reporting systems. The MHRA's redesigned drug safety monitoring database was deployed on 31 May 2006.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the number of people hospitalised each year due to adverse reactions to (i) prescribed and (ii) unprescribed drugs; and if she will make a statement. [73588]

Andy Burnham: The most recent estimate of the burden of adverse drug reactions (ADRs) in the United Kingdom (UK) comes from a study published in the British Medical Journal in July 2004. The study conducted in two large hospitals in Merseyside, suggested that ADRs account for one in 16 hospital admissions. This is a similar estimate to a number of studies worldwide, including figures from the United States. The study did not differentiate between prescribed and unprescribed medicines; however, the majority of ADRs were associated with prescribed medicines.

This study highlights the importance of effective systems for monitoring and responding to issues relating to the safety of medicines, a process called pharmacovigilance. This study, which was funded by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA), underlines the MHRA's commitment to improving the evidence base for pharmacovigilance in the UK. As part of this commitment to improving pharmacovigilance, the MHRA is working to strengthen and widen access to the yellow card scheme for reporting suspected ADRs. Access has recently been widened to allow patients to report under a pilot reporting scheme.

Assisted Dying for the Terminally Ill Bill

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent representations she has received about the Assisted Dying for the Terminally Ill Bill [Lords]; and if she will make a statement; [70368]

(2) if she will make it her policy to remain neutral on the Assisted Dying for the Terminally Ill Bill [Lords]; and if she will make a statement; [70369]

(3) if she will list the (a) individuals, (b) Ministers and (c) organisations she has consulted whilst developing her current policy towards the Assisted Dying for the Terminally Ill Bill [Lords]; if she will place in the Library responses received by her Department; and if she will make a statement; [72036]

(4) what (a) representations she has received from and (b) discussions her Department has had with the organisation Care Not Killing; and if she will make a statement. [72048]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Assisted Dying for the Terminally Ill Bill involves issues of conscience and the Government's stance is to remain neutral and to listen to the debate. It is appropriate that Parliament should lead on debates of this nature and allow all shades of opinion to be heard. As with all legislation, the Government's position has been agreed with the legislative programme committee.

The Department has received around 1,380 letters, emails and postcards about the Bill from the public and organisations since the beginning of March 2006 expressing a range of views and opinions. The petition that the Care Not Killing alliance submitted to the Prime Minister has been passed to the Department and officials have been provided with a list of the alliance's member organisations.

Boron

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps she proposes to take to ensure that boron is included on the list of ingredients permitted for use under the provisions of the Food Supplements Directive; and if she will make a statement; [75164]

(2) when she next expects the Standing Committee on the Food Chain and Animal Health to discuss the inclusion of boron on the list of ingredients permitted for use under the provisions of the Food Supplements Directive; who will represent the United Kingdom at that meeting; and what her objectives are for the outcome of those discussions. [75191]

Caroline Flint: Representations have already been made to the European Commission and the German authorities regarding the addition of the mineral boron to the positive lists of the annexes to the Food Supplements Directive 2002/46/EC.

The European Commission has not set a date for the next meeting of the standing committee on the food chain and animal health to discuss the inclusion of boron on the list of ingredients permitted for use under the provisions of the food supplements directive. Officials of the Food Standards Agency will represent the United Kingdom at the meeting when announced. The objective for the meeting would be to support the addition of boron to the annexes of the food supplements directive to ensure the continued availability of this mineral in food supplements.

Cheltenham General Hospital

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of building and opening the St. Paul's Maternity Unit in Cheltenham General hospital; and if she will make a statement on its future. [74257]

Caroline Flint: The St. Paul's Wing was officially opened in 1997 at a cost of £6 million.

Coeliac Disease

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action her Department is taking to ensure that general practitioners are aware of coeliac disease and are able to diagnose it; [75175]

(2) what steps her Department is taking to increase awareness of coeliac disease. [75203]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Patients are able to access a health encyclopaedia on the NHS Direct online website (www.nhsdirect.nhs.uk) which contains detailed information on a range of health conditions, including coeliac disease. The Prodigy website (www.prodigy.nhs.uk), used by health professionals, also contains specific information on this disease.

Diagnosis of coeliac disease can be difficult for general practitioners as the symptoms are common to many other conditions. However, a blood test and gut biopsy can be used to confirm coeliac disease.

Continuing Care

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether individuals who are receiving NHS continuing care, and whose primary need is a health need under the current criteria, will continue to receive continuing care if they are not eligible under the new criteria. [75026]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 11 May 2006, Official Report, column 550W.

Dentistry

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions her Department has had with (a) dentists and (b) dental laboratories on the impact of the new dental contract on the number of custom-made dental appliances being ordered for NHS patients; and if she will make a statement. [72411]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has established an implementation review group, which includes representatives of dentists and dental laboratories, to monitor the impact of the dental reforms introduced on 1 April. The group will be able to review information on the number of courses of treatment that include the fitting of an appliance.

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the operation of illegal dentistry in England. [73301]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All dentists, dental hygienists and dental therapists have to be registered with the General Dental Council (GDC) to practise dentistry in the United Kingdom.

The Dentists Act 1984 (Amendment) Order 2005 empowered the GDC to permit additional classes of dental care professionals to undertake the practice of dentistry. At its meeting on 7 December 2005, the GDC agreed that appropriately qualified clinical dental technicians (CDTs) should be registered and allowed to see edentulous patients, without prior review by a dentist, for the purpose of supplying and maintaining complete dentures. The Department welcomes this initiative since it will improve patient choice by legitimising the aspirations of CDTs, or denturists as they are also known, to fit and supply full dentures.

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental laboratories there were in England (a) on 31 March 2006 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available. [73302]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information available centrally is for the United Kingdom. Between 31 March and 26 May 2006 the number of dental laboratories registered under the medical devices directive increased from 3,148 to 3,150. Proprietors of laboratories do not always tell the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulation Agency when they cease trading.

Departmental Bills (Amendments)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the occasions when an amendment has been moved by (a) a Labour backbencher, (b) an Opposition backbencher and (c) an Opposition front bench spokesman to a Bill sponsored by her Department that has been accepted by her Department during the current session; and if she will make a statement. [72114]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has sponsored the following Bills during the current session:

The NHS Redress Bill

The Health Bill

Information on amendments moved and accepted during the committee and report stages on these Bills is published in the Official Report.

Departmental Expenditure

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from the Department in each of the last 5 years. [71761]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from the Department are shown in the following table.

Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the effect of the discontinuation of the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin on the ability of doctors to access independent information about the clinical effectiveness of various treatments; and if she will make a statement. [74863]

Andy Burnham: Doctors and other prescribers have access to a wide variety of information resources to support their prescribing. These include the British National Formularies, advice and training from the National Prescribing Centre, guidance from the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence, the National Electronic Library for Health, the various on-line databases and reference resources, such as Medline, and various academic and professional journals.

Elderly Care

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was allocated to services for the elderly in the South West region in 2005-06. [72779]

Caroline Flint: Revenue allocations are made to primary care trusts (PCTs) on the basis of the relative needs of their populations. Allocations are made on a fair funding formula that directs funding to those in greatest need.

A principal cause in the variation in the level of demand for health services is the age structure of the population. The very young and the elderly, whose populations are not evenly distributed throughout the country, tend to make more use of health services than the rest of the population. The funding formula is age weighted to take account of the varying elements of the health need associated with the age structure of local populations.

Once allocations have been made, it is for PCTs to commission services based on their local populations.

Council funding for adult social services is derived from a number of sources: a share of overall formula grant allocated by the Department for Communication and Local Government, specific grants distributed by the Department, revenue from council tax, income from fees and charges and local decision making.

The greater part of Government funding for adult social care is allocated to councils without conditions. Local authorities have a significant degree of flexibility to manage and direct their resources in accordance with local priorities, and the needs of the communities to which they are accountable. It is not therefore possible to identify the proportion of allocated funding that is directly attributable to services for the elderly in the South West region.

Enzyme Disorders

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what services are available to those suffering from enzyme disorders. [74701]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Local health bodies are able to provide a wide range of health and social care services specifically tailored to the individual needs of those living with enzyme disorders. These services include:

prompt diagnosis;

providing information and support for sufferers, and their carers and families;

person-centred care and choice;

care planning and integrated service provision involving different agencies; and rehabilitation and support in the community.

Gloucestershire, Wiltshire and Avon Strategic Health Authority

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost has been of running the Gloucestershire, Wiltshire and Avon strategic health authority in each year of its existence. [74258]

Caroline Flint: Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire strategic health authority has received allocations for its running costs of £4.7 million in 2003-04, £5.1 million in 2004-05, £5.3 million in 2005-06 and £5.3 million in 2006-07.

General Practitioner Surgeries (Gloucestershire)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the funding of new GP surgeries in Gloucestershire, with particular reference to the surgery proposed in Churchdown. [74268]

Caroline Flint: The Government are committed to improving local health care facilities but the decision to modernise health care services has been devolved to the local level and improvements to such services will be based on local need.

Consequently, the modernisation of primary health care premises is determined locally by consultation between primary care trusts (PCTs) and general practitioner (GP) practices.

I understand that West Gloucestershire PCT acknowledges that the current GP premises are in urgent need of replacement. The PCT is completely behind the Churchdown scheme and has been working in partnership with the practice in developing plans for a number of years.

The GP practices need to continue to consult with the existing strategic health authority and PCT and then with the new bodies when the reorganisation takes place, in order that business continuity is maintained.

Health Service Budgets

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what requirement there is for (a) primary care trusts and (b) hospital trusts to balance their annual budget in the 2006-07 financial year; what exceptions she has allowed to this requirement; and if she will make a statement. [74263]

Andy Burnham: All national health service organisations should aim to achieve financial balance each and every year.

Strategic health authorities (SHAs) are responsible for delivering both overall financial balance for their local health communities, and ensuring that each and every body achieves financial balance. There is flexibility in how this objective is achieved. SHAs can agree a recovery plan for an organisation that phases the recovery of deficits over a number of years. However, for the NHS as a whole to balance, any overspending in one organisation must be matched by underspending elsewhere.

Health Services (Cornwall)

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of hospital patients in Cornwall have had their discharge delayed by more than two weeks in the last 12 months; [72781]

(2) how many hospital patients in Cornwall had their discharge delayed by (a) up to eight days, (b) between eight and 14 days, (c) between 15 and 27 days and (d) more than 28 days in each year since 2002. [72789]

Caroline Flint: The Department does not hold information centrally in the format requested.

Hepatitis C

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been offered ex-gratia payments where they were infected with hepatitis C by the national health service blood or blood products; and how many people have been refused payments under this scheme. [73545]

Caroline Flint: The Skipton Fund has made payments to 3,480 people who developed chronic hepatitis C infection due to national health service blood or blood products. It has refused 316 such claims. A further 492 payments were made to claimants who developed cirrhosis of the liver or primary liver cancer, while 104 claims for these complications have been deferred.

Home Help

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many home help hours have been delivered in each year since 1997. [74052]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information on the total number of home help hours delivered during the year is unavailable. The table shows the estimated number of contact hours during a sample week in September provided or commissioned by councils with social services responsibility in England for the years 1997 to 2005. Information on the number of privately arranged home help hours is not available centrally.

Estimated number of contact hours of home care provided in England, 1997 to 2005

Survey week in September (year)	Contact hours for the week
1997	2,607,500
1998	2,607,400
1999	2,684,200
2000	2,791,300
2001	2,881,700
2002	2,983,200
2003	3,174,800
2004	3,359,000
2005	3,567,500

Notes:
1. Estimates for missing data are included in the national total and the figures are rounded.
2. Households receiving home care purchased with a direct payment are excluded from these figures.

Injectable Heroin Prescribing

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what lessons were learned from the National Treatment Agency's clinical team study visit to Switzerland in 2004; and if she will make a statement on her policy on (a) safe injecting rooms and (b) models of injectable heroin prescribing. [63651]

Caroline Flint: Safe injecting rooms for the supervised injecting of legally prescribed opiates such as pharmaceutical diamorphine, are an accepted part of clinical practice; the need for its use in individual cases is based on clinical judgement. Such injecting facilities are available in this and a number of other countries that prescribe injectable opiates for the management of opiate dependence and we fully support this. The Government do not, however, support the development of injecting rooms for the use of illegal drugs.

The Department, with the Home Office and the National Treatment Agency for Substance Misuse (NTA) commissioned guidance from an independent expert working group chaired by Professor John Strang[1] on injectable opiate prescribing. This guidance[2] can be accessed through the NTA website, www.nta.nhs.uk We have also supported the funding of the pilots of injectable diamorphine prescribing that are currently underway in England which are looking at a new model of supervised diamorphine prescribing in the United Kingdom.

Overall the lessons learned have informed the pilot injectable clinics which have now started in South London and which will soon be piloted in Brighton and Darlington.

Making it Better, Making it Real Consultation

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of the Making it Better, Making it Real Consultation conducted in the Greater Manchester, Cheshire and High Peak Primary Care Trust areas. [74204]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally but can be obtained directly from Greater Manchester strategic health authority.

Maternity Services

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which (a) hospitals and (b) stand alone maternity units have fully-staffed crash teams. [45913]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect this information.

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mothers had home births in each year between 1997 and 2005, broken down by primary care trust; and what the ratio of midwives to birth was for home births in each case. [72767]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information on the number of home births in each year between 1997 and 2004, broken down by primary care trust, has been placed in the Library. The information requested on the ratio of midwives to birth for home births in each case is not collected centrally.

Medicines

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 3 March 2006, Official Report, column 1046W, on medicines, what steps she plans to take to ensure that the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency complies with target processing times. [74854]

Andy Burnham: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) is taking a number of steps to improve its performance with respect to the assessment of product licence applications and variations and its ability to meet the target processing times. These include:

- the recruitment of additional information processing and assessment staff, including pharmacists and physicians, to deal with the growing complexity of licence applications and approval procedures;
- extended working hours and bonus payments to staff for their information processing and assessment outputs;
- additional professional assessor training to enable each assessor to deal more efficiently with a wider range of scientific issues in each application; and
- improvements to the recently introduced data, document and workflow management system to improve its processing times.

The MHRA's progress in dealing with the backlog of licence variation applications is already published on its website at www.mhra.gov.uk Once this special project is complete the MHRA will ensure that the future process provides for sustainable throughput against target times for all types of licence applications.

Mental Health

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mental health patients have been admitted to (a) Whitcliffe mental health ward in Ludlow Hospital in Shrewsbury and (b) the mental health ward at Whitchurch in Shropshire in each month since January 2004. [72141]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients who live (a) within and (b) outside South Shropshire district council area have been admitted to Whitcliffe mental health ward in Ludlow in each month since January 2004. [72142]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discounts are available in relation to hotel accommodation used by (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in her Department. [69213]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department utilises a Government contract with Expotel for the provision of a hotel room booking service and to achieve best rates.

In using this service, the Department receives a rebate of 5.4 per cent. of the room rate.

The current contract expires on 31 May 2006 and will be replaced by an Office of Government commerce framework agreement from which the Department will obtain an increased rebate of 5.84 per cent. of the room rate.

Muscular Dystrophy

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what status Muscular Dystrophy has under the national service framework for long-term conditions; and whether she plans to change that status. [75127]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Although the national service framework for long-term conditions (NSF) does not address individual long-term conditions separately as there are so many elements of service provision that are common to different conditions, muscular dystrophy is one of the neurological conditions specifically mentioned in the NSF.

National Framework for Continuing Care (Hillingdon)

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with Hillingdon social services about the National Framework for Continuing Care; and what the content of those discussions was. [75025]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The national framework for national health service continuing healthcare and NHS-funded nursing care has been developed in consultation with a wide range of representatives from health and social care, voluntary organisations and patients and carers.

Hillingdon local authority social services attended an open discussion forum hosted by North West London Strategic Health Authority in December 2005. The purpose of this forum was to discuss an early draft of the proposed assessment tool which supports the national framework policy on eligibility for NHS continuing healthcare.

National Health Service Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the operation of section 35 of the National Health Service Act 1977; and what recent representations she has received about the operation of this (a) section and (b) Act. [72028]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Select Committee on Health concluded in March 2001, following its inquiry into access to national health service dentistry, that the general dental services (GDS) remuneration system was at the heart of the problems facing NHS dentistry and that there was an urgent need to bring dentistry into the mainstream of the NHS. 'NHS Dentistry: Options for Change', published in August 2002, set out proposals to give primary care trusts direct responsibility for commissioning primary dental care services to meet the needs of their local populations and to alter the system of GDS remuneration. The Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003 provided the legislative framework for implementing these proposals, replacing section 35 of the National Health Service Act 1977 with new responsibilities upon primary care trusts to commissioning dental services.

NHS Fertility Clinics

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice is provided on the use of gonadotropin products in NHS fertility clinics. [74706]

Andy Burnham: In England and Wales advice on the use of gonadotropins is provided in the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's clinical guideline "Fertility: assessment and treatment for people with fertility problems".

Provision of advice to national health service clinics in Northern Ireland and Scotland is a matter for the devolved administrations.

NHS Litigation Authority

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the NHS Litigation Authority will conclude assessing the risks to the NHS from claims arising from the recent equal pay settlement for women working in Cumbrian NHS hospitals; whether the NHS Litigation Authority will make any estimates of future NHS liabilities; and if she will make a statement. [63949]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 10 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1819-1820W.

NHS Logistics Authority

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library a copy of the paper assessing the impact on the efficiency of the NHS Logistics Authority of her proposal to outsource the Authority. [75190]

Andy Burnham: The Department is still conducting detailed commercial negotiations with the preferred bidder for the outsourcing. The information requested is therefore commercially sensitive.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will collect data centrally in respect of monies spent on private sector transportation by NHS trusts. [71392]

Andy Burnham: Information is already collected on patient transport services centrally. However, data on monies spent on private sector transportation are not separately identifiable.

We do not currently anticipate requesting the national health service to collect specific information on private sector transportation by NHS trust.

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS trusts (a) were (i) in surplus and (ii) in debt and (b) had balanced books by the end of financial year (A) 2004-05 and (B) 2005-06. [73352]

Andy Burnham: The 2004-05 audited financial position and the 2005-06 unaudited month six forecast position, as submitted to the Department by national health service organisations (strategic health authorities, primary care trusts and NHS trusts) is available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/FreedomOfInformation/ClassesOfInformation/fs/en

Obesity (Young People)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has commissioned into using calorie free sweeteners in soft drinks to reduce the incidence of obesity amongst children; and what assessment she has made of the merits of so doing. [71009]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not commissioned any specific research on the potential impact on childhood obesity of soft drinks containing artificial sweeteners. Research has been carried out in the United States of America, and published in the Journal of American Academy of Paediatrics, on the effects of decreasing consumption of sugar-sweetened drinks on body weight in adolescents.

The Food Standards Agency has commenced discussions with stakeholders on a strategy to address the calorie levels in certain foods to help consumers achieve energy balance; the levels of sugar in some foods, including soft drinks, is being explored as part of this strategy.

Oral Health

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the oral health of the population in (a) Bolton South East constituency, (b) the North West and (c) England. [72610]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information available centrally shows that average number of decayed, missing or filled teeth (DMFT) among five-year-olds in the area of Bolton Primary Care Trust (PCT) is 3.23, compared to 2.42 for Greater Manchester and 1.49 in England as a whole.

We have also taken note of the fact that Rowley Regis and Tipton PCT, which has similar social profile to Bolton, but receives fluoridated water, has a DMFT of 0.98. Changes we have made in the legislative framework governing fluoridation give communities with high levels of dental decay a real option of having their water fluoridated.

Oxygen Cylinder Provision (East Sussex)

Ms Barlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she is taking to reduce the amount of time spent by patients in hospital in East Sussex as a result of a delay in the provision of oxygen cylinders by Allied Respiratory. [73841]

Andy Burnham: There is a six-month transition period, ending on 31 July 2006, to support the transfer of the home oxygen service to the new suppliers. We are continuing to work intensively with the national health service locally and Allied Respiratory on managing that transfer, including the requirement on suppliers to support the discharge of patients from hospital through timely delivery of oxygen equipment to patients' homes.

Premature Births

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many premature births there were in each of the last five years. [74656]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The available information about length of gestation at delivery is published annually in table 21 of the statistical bulletin "NHS Maternity Statistics: England". Copies of the bulletins, the latest of which relates to 2004-05, are available in the Library.

Private Healthcare

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact on the NHS of pensioners in occupational pension schemes opting out of private healthcare provision as a result of it being taxed as a benefit in kind. [69285]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: National health service capacity requirements are assessed by each primary care trust as part of its local delivery planning responsibilities. The information requested is not available centrally.

Private Patient Transportation

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of the cost to the NHS of private patient transportation in each NHS trust in England and Wales; and if she will make a statement. [73785]

Andy Burnham: Each national health service organisation is free, and expected, to use its resources in the way that delivers the best available value for money which will include consideration of a range of different providers.

Section 64 Grants

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many voluntary organisations have received funding through section 64 General Scheme of Grants for 2006-07; when these payments were finally agreed; and how much money was allocated in total for section 64 funding in 2006-07. [72825]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 23 May 2006]: The number of voluntary and community organisations that have been awarded a section 64 General Scheme of Grants for 2006-07 is 426 with awards finally agreed 12 May 2006. The 2006-07 budget for section 64 is £17.2 million.

TGN 1412

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the interim report by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency on the drug TGN 1412; what steps she has taken to assess the longer term impacts of TGN 1412 on the health of trial participants; and what assessment she has made of the current health of these volunteers. [73862]

Andy Burnham: I am satisfied with both the interim and final investigation reports by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) on the TGN1412 clinical trial of 13 March 2006, which were published on 5 April and 25 May 2006 respectively. The scientific issues which arise from this trial are being addressed by the expert scientific group on phase one clinical trials, which my right hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Wavertree (Jane Kennedy) asked to be established in April. It will provide an interim report within three months. The MHRA is following up the major findings identified in the final investigation report.

All six volunteers who experienced the serious adverse reactions following the clinical trial on 13 March were transferred to Northwick Park Hospital from the Parexel unit. They continued to improve and were discharged from critical care in early April. Five of the volunteers were sent home within a month of the incident, while one patient remains in hospital and is making a steady recovery. All six are under close supervision by hospital specialists.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with representatives of Statens Serum Institute in the past year, with particular reference to the licensing arrangements for the Purified Protein Derivative used in skin testing for tuberculosis. [74050]

Andy Burnham: Departmental officials, together with the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency, have held meetings with Statens Serum Institute to consider the viability of an application for a marketing authorisation for purified protein derivative solutions for use in testing for tuberculosis.

Unpasteurised Milk

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the labelling of cheeses made from unpasteurised milk at retail level. [73761]

Caroline Flint: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) has issued generic guidance to food businesses and to enforcement agencies on the new European Union food hygiene regulations, which came into effect from 1 January 2006. This guidance cross-refers to the European Commission's guidance on the relevant legislation (Regulation (EC) No. 853/2004) and also provides a website link. So far as the labelling of cheese is concerned, the Commission's guidance explains that raw milk products should be labelled made with raw milk at the point of retail sale.

The FSA is currently considering what further guidance is required for local food authorities on a number of issues in relation to milk and dairy products, including the labelling aspect.

Waiting Times

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why direct referrals to audiology services have been excluded from the 18-week waiting time target as set out in "Tackling hospital waiting: the 18 week patient pathway". [74774]

Andy Burnham: As detailed in paragraph 2.5 of the publication "Tackling hospital waiting: the 18 week patient pathway. An implementation framework" the 18-week patient pathway is focused on changing traditional hospital consultant pathways. Audiology, and adult hearing services in particular, are mainly accessed directly by primary care. Therefore, they are predominantly outside the scope of the 18-week pathway.

However, a separate action plan is currently under consideration to improve access to adult hearing services outside the 18-week programme. The intention is to develop the action plan in partnership with stakeholders.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time is for an initial paediatric cardiology assessment. [74702]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The average waiting time, for a child aged 0 to 17 years, from receipt of a general practitioner's written referral request to attending a paediatric cardiology out-patients clinic is seven weeks.

Winchcombe Hospital, Gloucestershire

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what covenants exist on the grounds of Winchcombe hospital, Winchcombe, Gloucestershire; and if she will make a statement. [74164]

Caroline Flint: Cheltenham and Tewksbury primary care trust (PCT) has advised that no reference to any restrictive covenant appear in either the Octpber 1991 transfer to the East Gloucestershire National Health Service Trust or in the current November 2002 Land Certificate that vests the property in the Cheltenham and Tewkesbury PCT.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Antisocial Behaviour (York)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the City of York Council Scrutiny Board on its review of drug and alcohol related antisocial behaviour in the city. [74610]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office has received one representation from the Chief Executive of York city council on behalf of York city council's Scrutiny Board. The Home Office has noted the contents of the letter and passed it to the Department of Constitutional Affairs for consideration.

Bruche Police Training Centre

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his Answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 1027W, on Bruche Police Training Centre, on what dates discussions have taken place between officials from his Department and (a) the Centrex Estates and Facilities Management Team and (b) Warrington Borough Council. [73454]

Mr. McNulty: Routine and informal discussions are ongoing between Centrex and the Home Office with regard to the future of the police training facility at Bruche. The site disposal project board meets on a monthly basis and comprises Home Office officials and members of the Centrex estates and facilities management team. The last meeting was held on 9 May and the next is scheduled for 12 June.

A full planning appraisal in relation to the Bruche site was prepared for Centrex in September 2004 and consultants working for the Home Office have since re-contacted Warrington Borough Council in January 2006 in order to update that appraisal. The process of formally appointing advisers for the sale of the Bruche site is underway with appointment likely by early July. Once made, this appointment will enable a more active dialogue with the local authority.

Business in the Community Programme (Prisons)

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the business organisations twinned with each HM Prison establishment as part of the Business in the Community programme; what contributions are registered as having been made; what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the programme; and if he will make a statement. [73748]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The organisations twinned with each prison are as follows:

Belmarsh—Morgan Stanley
Brixton—Ernst and Young
Feltham—British Airways
Holloway—Accenture
Pentonville—The Guardian
Wandsworth—Marsh
Wormwood Scrubs—Centrica

No contributions have been recorded. Three evaluations of the pilot have taken place, the third and final report being published in February 2006. The benefits of the partnerships have varied between establishments. Benefits gained include insight into different working cultures, personal development discussions, mentoring, exchange of managerial or leadership skills and sharing of good practice, facilities and ideas.

Crime Statistics

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many types of crime have been committed by people on probation in each of the last five years, broken down by type of crime and police authority area. [74562]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information is not routinely collected in the form requested.

Data on crimes that are categorised as Serious Offences committed by offenders under the supervision of the Probation Service are available for the financial year 2004-05 in Table 5.6 of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2004".

This report is available at www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1705.pdf.

Deportations

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he was aware that 288 foreign nationals had been released since March 2005 without being considered for deportation when (a) he made his offer to resign to the Prime Minister on 25 April 2006 and (b) he was interviewed on Newsnight on 25 April 2006. [67679]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 3 May 2006]: This is a matter for my right hon. friend the former Home Secretary.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Flello: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding has been allocated to (a) Stoke-on-Trent, (b) Nottingham and (c) Birmingham in 2005-06 for drug services in the city; and what each figure represents per capita. [74111]

Mr. Coaker: Funding is allocated centrally to Drug Action Teams, who provide funding for local services that are appropriate to local needs. In 2005-06, funding streams which contributed to drug services at a local level included the Building Safer Communities Fund; the Drug Interventions Programme main grant; the Drug Strategy Partnership Support Grant; the Pooled Treatment Budget; and the Young People Substance Misuse Partnership Grant. Local partnerships also received funding for specific projects or programmes under the Drug Interventions Programme which were operating in the area, such as additional throughcare and aftercare provision, Restriction on Bail, the Rent Deposit Scheme, or the combined Criminal Justice Integrated Team-Prolific and Priority Offender scheme. Full details of funding for Stoke-on Trent, Nottingham and Birmingham in 2005-06 are provided in the attached document.

Population figures for Stoke-on Trent, Nottingham and Birmingham are 238,000, 275,000 and 992,000 respectively. The funding allocations for each area on a per capita basis would therefore be £11.74 for Stoke-on Trent, £23.32 for Nottingham and £18.41 for Birmingham.

Gloucestershire Constabulary (Headquarters)

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what he expects the role of the new headquarters of Gloucestershire Constabulary at Quedgeley to be if the proposed police mergers go ahead. [65518]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 25 April 2006]: No decision has been made as yet on the future organisation of the police force areas in the South West region. In any event, the location and role of force headquarters is a matter for the chief officer and police authority concerned.

Hendon Police Training Centre

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the future of the Metropolitan Police Training Centre at Hendon. [73932]

Mr. McNulty: The police training centre at Hendon is a wholly-owned asset of the Metropolitan Police Authority (MPA) and, as such, determination as to its future is the responsibility of the MPA.

National Firearms Register

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the National Firearms Register to be fully operational and available for the use of all police forces. [74526]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 5 June 2006]: Live testing of the National Firearms Licensing Management System will begin in two forces on 5 June 2006. If this is successful the system will then be rolled out to all forces by March 2007.

National Offender Management Service

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the introduction of the National Offender Management Service on jobs in the prison and probation services in Gloucestershire. [74498]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The introduction of the National Offender Management Service will result in changes to working practice for many staff in the prison and probation services, as it includes the implementation of the new offender management model, as well as the introduction of new shared information and offender risk assessment systems. However, it is too early to tell what effect the introduction may have on jobs in the prison and probation services in Gloucestershire. For example, the change from probation boards to probation trusts and the introduction of commissioning are likely to have only a gradual impact at working level and much will be dependent on the response of the range of possible providers under the new commissioning regime.

North Wales Police

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the future of the North Wales Police fraud squad. [74564]

Mr. McNulty: This is an operational matter for the Chief Constable of the North Wales Police. However, I understand that the force continues to operate a Financial Investigation Unit responsible for investigating fraud and other financial crime.

Operation Artbeat

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the work of Operation Artbeat. [73432]

Mr. McNulty: Under Operation Artbeat, the Metropolitan Police Service is aiming to recruit as special constables individuals with expertise in art, antiques or collectibles to help their fight to combat art crime in London. The operation is at an early stage and interest from employers and staff is currently being assessed.

Operation Reproof

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the value for money obtained for the working hours expended by Devon and Cornwall constabulary in connection with Operation Reproof; and if he will make a statement. [74791]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The hon. Member's question is about an operational police matter that is the responsibility of the chief officer concerned. Ministers have agreed that parliamentary questions on issues that are solely the responsibility of police forces can be passed to the force concerned so that they can respond to the issues raised. I will pass the question to the chief officer of Devon and Cornwall police so that she can respond to the hon. Member directly and I will ensure that a copy of her response is placed in the Library.

Parliamentary Questions

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will provide substantive answers to questions 46163 and 46160 tabled by the hon. Member for Faversham and Mid Kent on 24 January 2006 for answer on 30 January 2006. [61805]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 28 March 2006]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 363W by my hon. Friend the Member for Wythenshawe and Sale, East (Paul Goggins).

I would like to take this opportunity to clarify the earlier answer and put the matter beyond any doubt. The hon. Member asked what penalties may be imposed on sports bodies for non-compliance with the Private Security Industry Act 2001. Companies that hire security firms whose personnel include unlicensed staff are not committing any offence, since the Act places the onus on the individual and the company that provides security services, not on the customer. Where in-house employees are required to be licensed, the employer and individual are both responsible for ensuring this occurs.

Police

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure PC Richard Keel of Shrewsbury receives the proper medical treatment for the injuries he sustained whilst on duty. [57342]

Mr. McNulty: I wrote to the hon. Member on 26 May 2006 about his concerns.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what effect he expects the proposed reorganisation of police forces in England and Wales to have on conviction rates. [68613]

Mr. McNulty: The police are just one, albeit very important, part of the criminal justice system. We fully expect the reform of the police service to enhance all aspects of policing, including crime prevention, detection and conviction rates. For example, reform should contribute towards improving the quality of major or specialist investigations undertaken by the police, which will help towards securing successful convictions.

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress with his proposals to merge the Northumbria, Durham and Cleveland police authorities. [66942]

Mr. McNulty: On 3 March, the then Home Secretary (Charles Clarke) announced his intention to make the necessary changes to allow Northumbria, Durham and Cleveland police areas to merge. The statutory consultation period ends on 2 July.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the merger of constabularies will affect Level 1 and Level 2 crime investigation. [67082]

Mr. McNulty: The development of strategic forces will ensure that they have the necessary capacity, capability and resilience to provide the required standard of level 2 policing whilst preserving and strengthening level 1 policing.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police stations he expects to be closed if constabularies are merged. [67095]

Mr. McNulty: The management of the police estate and allocation of resources are matters for each police authority and the chief constable, who are responsible for assessing local needs.

The Government are committed to every area in England and Wales benefiting from dedicated, visible, accessible and responsive neighbourhood policing teams by 2008. The new strategic forces will protect neighbourhood policing by reducing diversion of neighbourhood policing resource to deal with major incidents and serious crimes.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the public he estimates to be in favour of the merger of constabularies. [67100]

Mr. McNulty: No estimate has been made of the percentage of the public in favour of the amalgamation of police force areas. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has given notice of his intention to make the changes necessary to allow certain police force areas to merge and will consider any objections raised by the relevant police authorities and local authorities.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has commissioned on the (a) cost and (b) effectiveness of federations of police forces; and if he will make a statement. [47792]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The Home Office commissioned work to assess the cost of proposals for restructuring submitted by forces and authorities, including those for federation, where sufficient cost data was provided.

Further details on these assessments are available at:

http://police.homeoffice.gov.uk/police-reform/Force-restructuring

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the representations he has received (a) in support of and (b) against the proposed merger of Northumbria, Durham and Cleveland police forces. [72458]

Mr. McNulty: In accordance with the provisions of sections 32 and 33 of the Police Act 1996, on 3 March 2006 the former Home Secretary (Charles Clarke) gave notice to police authorities, police forces and local authorities in the North East areas that he proposed to make an order amalgamating the Cleveland, Durham and Northumbria police areas with effect from 1 April 2007. This initiated a four months consultation period concluding on 2 July 2006. To date we have received one letter from Blyth Valley borough council in support of merger and none objecting to merger.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations his Department received from Suffolk (a) for and (b) against the proposed merger of police forces in the East of England. [72535]

Mr. McNulty: The then Home Secretary (Charles Clarke) announced his intention to make the necessary changes to allow Suffolk Constabulary to merge with Cambridgeshire and Norfolk Constabularies on 11 April 2006. The statutory consultation period ends on 11 August 2006. To date, we have not received any representations from Suffolk Police Authority, the Chief Constable of Suffolk Constabulary or local authorities in the Suffolk Police Authority area.

Prison Service

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the policy of HM Prison Service on the transfer of (a) senior operational managers and (b) staff who are subject to investigation processes to other establishments and units; [74006]

(2) how many senior operational managers in HM Prison Service have been transferred to other establishments and units whilst under investigation in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [74007]

Mr. Sutcliffe: All senior operational managers are mobile staff and under the terms of their employment are liable to be transferred to any Civil Service post, in the UK or abroad.

It is not Prison Service policy to routinely transfer members of staff who are subject to investigation, though in some cases it is not appropriate for a member of staff to remain at their usual place of work while an investigation into serious misconduct takes place. In such cases, a decision is first made as to whether detached duty to another location is appropriate before considering the suspension of a member of staff.

If the member of staff under investigation is a mobile grade they can be transferred to any Civil Service post on a period of detached duty. If the member of staff under investigation is non-mobile they can be placed on detached duty to a post within reasonable daily travelling distance of their home.

As to the number of senior operational managers transferred in these circumstances, comprehensive information is not collated centrally in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff at HMP Brixton are under disciplinary investigation. [74008]

Mr. Sutcliffe: 11 staff at Brixton are under disciplinary investigation at present.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of non-operational grade staff employed at each HM Prison establishment in the London area receive the RHS allowance; and if he will make a statement. [74017]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is assumed the hon. Member is referring to Required Hours Addition (RHA). The information requested is shown in the following table:

Proportion of non-operational grade staff employed at each prison in the London area receiving the Required Hours Addition (RHA)

Prison	Number of non-operational managers E to G	Non-operational managers (E to G) in receipt of RHA
Belmarsh	7	1
Brixton	7	—
Feltham	5	3
Holloway	15	2
Latchmere House	1	1
Pentonville	5	1
Wandsworth	16	6
Wormwood Scrubs	7	2

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which the director of operations in HM Prison Service is required to approve managed moves at senior operational level. [74018]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Prison Service holds weekly succession planning committee meetings chaired by the Deputy Director General where the movements of senior operational managers are approved. The Director of Operations is a member of this committee.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the grade is of the Prison Service staff adviser to the Minister with responsibility for prisons. [74020]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The role of the Prison Service staff adviser to the Minister with responsibility for prisons does not have a specific grade associated with it. The post is filled by the most suitable candidate available at the time, and is not restricted to those with a certain grade.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the results of the most recent staff survey carried out in the Prison Service. [74024]

Mr. Sutcliffe: 71 per cent. of staff who responded to the 2005 Prison Service staff survey were satisfied with their job and 66 per cent. were proud to work for the Prison Service. Respondents were also positive about a range of aspects associated with working in prisons, line management, relationships with other staff and with prisoners, and training/development. They were least satisfied with the senior management teams, communication and facilities. The results have been discussed by the Prison Service Management Board and disseminated internally. Local plans are being drawn up to take follow-up action.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the chief executive of the Equal Opportunities Commission concerning the effectiveness of HM Prison Service in deterring and preventing sexual harassment within the workplace. [74034]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There has not been recent discussion between my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department and the Equal Opportunities Commission chief executive on this matter.

Prisoners (Gender Realignment)

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost of prisoners undergoing gender re-alignment procedures in each prison establishment for each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [74028]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information is not collected centrally on the number of prisoners in London prisons undergoing gender reassignment. No estimate has been made on the cost of these procedures in prisons nationally.

It is the aim of this Government that prisoners should have access to health care that is broadly comparable to that enjoyed by the rest of the community. Gender dysphoria is a recognised medical condition. Therefore, if medical treatment for it is recommended by a national health service gender dysphoria specialist for a person in prison custody, such treatment, up to and including gender reassignment surgery, should be allowed to proceed. We are currently preparing guidelines on the management, treatment and care of prisoners with gender dysphoria.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what national guidance is available concerning gender re-alignment treatment within HM prison service; and if he will make a statement; [74029]

(2) how many prisoners detained within London prison establishments are undergoing gender re-alignment procedures. [74027]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information is not collected centrally on the numbers of prisoners in London prisons undergoing gender reassignment.

It is the aim of this Government that prisoners should have access to health care that is broadly comparable to that enjoyed by the rest of the community. Gender dysphoria is a recognised medical condition. Therefore, if medical treatment for it is recommended by a national health service gender dysphoria specialist for a person in prison custody, such treatment, up to and including gender reassignment surgery, should be allowed to proceed.

We are currently preparing guidelines on the management, treatment and care of prisoners with gender dysphoria.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what national guidance is available concerning the use of strip search procedures for those prisoners undergoing gender re-alignment treatment within HM prison service establishments; and if he will make a statement. [74030]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The prison service national security framework document contains policy and guidelines concerning strip-searches, now termed full searches, of prisoners. This includes specific policy and guidelines for full searches of prisoners who are undergoing gender reassignment.

Prisoners' Compensation

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 1050W, on prisoners' compensation, how many people were compensated under each category; for which crime each had been convicted; how many were compensated under the Human Rights Act 1998; and if he will publish the data for the years prior to 2004 with an explanation of why it is unreliable. [73272]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following table details the number of prisoners compensated under each category recorded during the last two financial years. Before 2004-05 litigation statistics were not collated centrally and therefore reliable figures are not available. It would be inappropriate to publish inaccurate figures. To determine the crimes committed by each claimant or whether they were compensated under the Human Rights Act, would involve disproportionate costs.

Prisoners in England and Wales compensated by category during the financial years 2004-05 and 2005-06

Prisons

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the open prisons in England which have been in operation since 1997; what the (a) prisoner capacity and (b) prisoner numbers were for each in each year of operation; and if he will make a statement. [73473]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 25 May 2006]: Information on the prisoner capacity and prisoner numbers in each Open Prison and Open Young Offender Institution in England since 1997 is contained in the following tables from the Prison Service IT System.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons fingerprint prisoners on entry; and if he will make a statement. [74011]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Policy on the taking of fingerprints is set out in the National Security Framework. Every prisoner convicted of a criminal offence, except those committed for the non-payment of a fine, should be fingerprinted upon first reception. Persons held under the Immigration Act 1971 must have their fingerprints taken if required for confirming their identity.

Fingerprinting will be undertaken normally at core local prisons which are: Altcourse, Bedford, Belmarsh, Birmingham, Blakenhurst, Bristol, Brixton, Brockhill, Bronzefield, Bullingdon, Cardiff, Chelmsford, Doncaster, Dorchester, Durham, Eastwood Park, Elmley, Exeter, Forrest Bank, Gloucester, Holloway, Holme House, Hull, Leeds, Leicester, Lewes, Lincoln, Liverpool, Low Newton, Manchester, New Hall, Norwich, Nottingham, Pare, Pentonville, Peterborough, Preston, Shrewsbury, Styal, Swansea, Wandsworth, Winchester, Woodhill, Wormwood Scrubs.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the current state of industrial relations at HM Prison Wandsworth; and if he will make a statement. [74019]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Responsibility for the management of industrial relations is the concern of the director general of the Prison Service and the Wandsworth prisoner Governor. I have not made any assessment of the current state of industrial relations at Wandsworth. However, I am advised that there have been a number of industrial relations issues which have or are being addressed through the internal industrial relations disputes mechanism.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the grading of the role of deputy governor at HM Prison Buckley Hall. [74021]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The current grading of the post of Deputy Governor at Buckley Hall prison is operational manager payband E. A manager with a higher grade and payband currently occupies the post but when it next becomes vacant it is expected that the post will be filled at payband E.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the compatibility of the new work profile at HM Prison Wandsworth with that in the service level agreement defined under the performance testing exercise of 2004. [74035]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The governing governor commissioned the current reprofiling exercise at Wandsworth. The terms of reference for the project included maximising time out of cell and purposeful activity, the introduction of evening domestic visits and improved first night arrangements. All of which are in line with the prison's service level agreement.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the implementation of the new work profile at HM Prison Wandsworth; what assessment of staff opinion has been conducted; and what his response is to the consultation. [74036]

Mr. Sutcliffe: A joint Prison Officers' Association (POA)/management working group has produced the new profiles. The process involved wide ranging discussion with all grades of staff involved with the changes. Following acceptance of the profiles by the governor and the verbal endorsement of them by the local POA committee chair, a workplace ballot of POA members has taken place. This ballot has resulted in the profiles being rejected. The governor is taking the matter forward using the Joint Industrial Relations Procedural Agreement process.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many escapes there were from

Leyhill Open Prison in each quarter from 1990 to 1998; what original offences were committed by each person who escaped; and if he will make a statement. [75043]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Data on absconds is not available before 1997. Details of the original offences committed by absconders from Leyhill open prison is only available for 1998 in the period asked for. The details are provided in the following table.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to improve the (a) management of and (b) operational effectiveness of Leyhill Open Prison in relation to the number of prisoner absconds; and if he will make a statement. [73428]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Governor and his team have reduced absconds significantly to 66 in 2005-06 compared with 102 in 2004-05.

Leyhill has improved allocation checks of incoming prisoners, risk assessments are continuously carried out and any indication of an increase in risk of abscond is managed vigorously resulting in the return of prisoners to closed conditions if necessary. The local Police Liaison Officer is now a full time post to ensure that police intelligence is appropriately used.

Drug misuse is a significant contributing factor to the number of absconds and the supply of drugs into the prison has been reduced resulting in a 75 per cent. reduction in positive drug tests over the past 6 months. CCTV cameras have been installed and some fire doors alarmed. Intelligence is managed proactively and PIN phones identify prisoners with an increased risk of absconding.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the ratio of offenders to probation officers has been in each of the last five years, broken down by probation service area. [74739]

[1] The methodology for producing average caseload per officer figures was revised for 2002 data onwards. The court order figures in 2000 and 2001 include Community Rehabilitation Orders, Community Punishment and Rehabilitation Orders, Suspended Sentence Orders and Money Payment Supervision Orders. 2002 onwards additionally includes Community Punishment Orders and Drug Treatment and Testing Orders. The officer figures for 2000 and 2001 include whole-time equivalent of maingrade probation officers and senior practitioners, excluding temporary and trainee, on fieldwork duties. 2002 onwards additionally includes senior probation officers on fieldwork duties, and all probation services' officers. The effect of the revised method is to produce much lower average caseload figures, due to the expanded number of staffing grades included in the calculation.
[2] Court orders only are included in offender caseload, not those supervised on licence following release from prison.

Rape

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many successful prosecutions for rape there have been in (a) Dudley, (b) the West Midlands and (c) England in the last 12 months. [73973]

Mr. Coaker: Court statistics for 2005 will be available in Autumn 2006. Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of convictions for rape in 2004 in (a) Dudley is 0, in (b) West Midlands is 58, and in (c) England is 707.

Rehabilitation of Offenders

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have gained employment having completed a (a) custodial sentence and (b) community service sentence in the last five years. [74740]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information is as follows:

(a) Information on the numbers of prisoners leaving custody and entering employment, training or education is only available for the last four years, and is given in the table.

Outcomes for 2002-03, 2003-04 and 2004-05 include those who attended FRESHSTART appointments at Jobcentre Plus, whereby prisoners who do not have a job or training place to go to on release are linked into employment, training and benefits advice and support immediately after release. Employment, training and education (ETE) outcomes for prisoners released before April 2005 can be separated only at disproportionate cost.

(b) Information on the numbers of offenders under the supervision of the National Probation Service (NFS) entering employment was not centrally collected prior to April 2005. In 2005-06 8,978 offenders under the supervision of the NPS gained employment or vocational training lasting four weeks or more. Only aggregate figures are available.

UK Veto (EU)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether it is his Department's policy that the UK should retain a veto in EU police and judicial matters. [69831]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 11 May 2006]: On 10 May 2006, the European Commission published a Communication entitled "A Citizens' Agenda: Delivering Results for Europe". The Commission indicated that it would present an initiative on the basis of Article 42 of the Treaty on European Union to change decision making arrangements in police and judicial matters.

Under the current EU treaty framework, co-operation on police and judicial matters is agreed by unanimity. That could only change to qualified majority voting if all Member States, including the UK, agree.

At present there is no formal proposal. Police and judicial co-operation include sensitive areas of national responsibility and we would have to consider very carefully the potential risks and benefits and the overall impact of such a move.

Vandalism (Cemeteries)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of vandalism were recorded in cemeteries in (a) England, (b) the North East and (c) the Tees Valley in each year since 1997. [73664]

Mr. McNulty: From the information collected centrally on recorded crime it is not possible to identify incidents of vandalism in cemeteries.

YOI Feltham

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his policy on juvenile restraint training at HM YOI Feltham. [74032]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The prison service has developed new restraint techniques for use on juveniles that are currently being piloted at Feltham and Cookham Wood young offender institutions. All staff involved in the pilot have been trained in the new techniques. The techniques have been well received by staff and managers at both establishments and all involved are fully supportive of the pilot.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent adjudication procedures at HM YOI Feltham are carried out by staff who have not gained accreditation as prison governors; and if he will make a statement. [74033]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There are 19 managers at Feltham who have been trained and are qualified to conduct adjudications. Of these, three are non-operational managers.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Bovine TB

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research he has collated on illegal culling of badgers. [74327]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The Department has not collated any research on the illegal culling of badgers. However, as part of the Randomised Badger Culling Trial, any evidence of suspected unlawful activity against badgers was reported to the police. Further information is available on the Defra website:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/culling/p5prog.htm#suspect.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what price difference there is between the Dutch Lelystad tuberculin and the Weybridge VLAs tuberculin. [74329]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 5 June 2006]: It is not possible to make a meaningful comparison of the costs of materials supplied to Government by Government Agencies and those supplied by commercial operators.

In relation to tuberculin supplies, strict quality and licensing conditions must be adhered to and contracts must follow procurement guidelines, which ensure amongst other things, value for money.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many bovine tuberculosis tests on average are administered to a cow in the course of its lifetime; and what proportion of cows he estimates are never tested in their lifetime. [74435]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The frequency of bovine tuberculosis (bTB) herd testing is determined by EU legislation but this does not establish the frequency of tests on individual cattle. In Great Britain, cattle herds are tested every one, two, three or four years depending on how widespread bTB is in their respective regions; these frequencies are reviewed on an annual basis. The percentage of herds and parishes being tested annually has increased over the last few years; currently, about 25 per cent. of herds are tested annually and another 14 per cent. are tested every two years. In 2005, approximately 43,500 herd tests were carried out on 4.85 million cattle.

An analysis of bTB testing coverage in the GB cattle population has been carried out by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency and published in the Proceedings of the Society for Veterinary Epidemiology and Preventive Medicine 2006[1]. The findings from this preliminary work showed that 71 per cent. to 85 per cent. of the cattle included in the study appeared not to have been bTB tested during their lifetimes. However, it should be noted that the study included cattle which had lived through the Foot and Mouth Disease outbreak when bTB testing was severely disrupted.

Many of the animals not being tested do not present a disease control risk. For example, some animals in low risk herds are slaughtered prior to a herd test becoming due. However, we accept that a small percentage of animals missing a bTB test may present a disease risk. Defra is supporting further work in this area.

Recent policy changes should have a positive effect on the percentage of animals being tested during their lifetimes, such as the introduction of zero tolerance for overdue herd tests and pre-movement testing for animals moving out of high risk herds.

In addition to live skin testing of cattle, the bTB surveillance programme is supplemented by statutory inspection of cattle carcases at slaughterhouses by the Meat Hygiene Service.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he expects to publish the results of the tests using the Lelystad tuberculin on cattle. [74537]

Mr. Bradshaw: The use of Lelystad tuberculin is being closely monitored by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency. They are providing regular reports to my officials and I will announce any significant findings.

Teacher Training

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions his Department has had with the Training and Development Agency on ensuring that all teachers have the required skills to provide high quality field courses. [73811]

Jim Knight: I have been asked to reply.

Both the existing and proposed standards for teachers have been the subject of considerable discussion between the Department and the Training and Development Agency for Schools (TDA). Both sets of standards require teachers to demonstrate their skills with reference to out of school contexts.

The Department has co-funded a research project with the Countryside Agency and the Field Studies Council into the extent and nature of training in education outside the classroom (including field studies) in initial teacher training provision. We consulted TDA as part of our preparations for the project.

TRANSPORT

Civil Service Secondments

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the arrangements are for paying officials from the Department who are on secondment in the private sector. [73483]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The standard arrangements are for officials to be paid from a centrally held secondment budget, with the Department invoicing the external organisation for recovery of costs.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many officials from his Department and its predecessor have been seconded to the Confederation for Passenger Transport since 2001. [73484]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 5 June 2006]: There has been one secondment to the Confederation of Passenger Transport since the Department for Transport was formed in May 2002.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average length of secondment for civil service staff from his Department was in the last 5 years. [73486]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The average length of secondment in the last 5 years has been just over 26 months.

EasyJet

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what investigations his Department has made into the air worthiness of the EasyJet aircraft scheduled to fly from Belfast International to London at 9.25 pm on Saturday 27 May. [75510]

Gillian Merron: The Civil Aviation Authority is responsible for the day-to-day safety oversight of UK-registered aircraft.

The Authority has received no report of any problem with the airworthiness of the relevant aircraft under its Mandatory Occurrence Reporting scheme and has therefore not launched any investigation.

Road Traffic Regulations

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the operation of section (a) 54 and (b) 62 of the Road Traffic (Offenders) Act 1988; what recent representations he has received about the operation of this Act; if he will place in the Library copies of such representations; and if he has any plans to (i) amend and (ii) repeal this Act. [69145]

Mr. Coaker: I have been asked to reply.

I have received no recent representations about this Act, which there are no plans to repeal.

The Government do not however propose to introduce a Graduated Fixed Penalty and Deposit Scheme. This would amend Part III of the Act, in which the sections referred to are located and which deals with the fixed penalty system for motoring offences. The proposals are contained in the Road Safety Bill, currently before Parliament.

The new Scheme would allow for a graduated system of fixed penalties for traffic and roadworthiness offences, so that the level of penalty would vary according to the level of offence severity and number of offences committed. There would also be new arrangements for enforcement examiners of the Vehicle and Operator Services Agency to issue fixed penalty notices.

There would also be a provision for the taking of deposits, similar to arrangements in many other EU countries. This would require drivers without satisfactory proof of an address in the UK to make an immediate payment at the roadside at the time the offence is committed. The deposit would be returned if the driver was subsequently found innocent by the Courts.

DEFENCE

Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to sign the production contract for the Hawk Mk128. [74764]

Mr. Ingram: Development of the Hawk 128 aircraft is progressing under a design and development contract. Negotiations are continuing with BAES on a production contract.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what defensive measures military helicopters carry in operational areas. [70239]

Mr. Ingram: Military helicopters are equipped with a variety of defensive measures, appropriate to the level of threat presented by each operation. These may include missile approach warning systems in combination with directional or non-directional infra red counter measure jammers and/or mixtures of dispensable counter measures. It would not be appropriate to identify the specific measures employed currently in operational areas as this could prejudice the security of the UK's armed forces.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost has been since 2003 of (a) purchasing and (b) refurbishing Puma helicopters from South Africa. [75079]

Mr. Ingram: Since 2003 spending on the Puma helicopters from South Africa has been as follows:

(a) Purchase costs: £0

(b) Refurbishing costs: £14.67 million

Armed Forces (Foreign Citizens)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision is made for citizens of overseas countries serving in HM armed forces to renew in the UK their visas or leave to remain rather than being required to return to their country of origin to do so; and if he will make a statement. [72548]

Mr. Byrne: I have been asked to reply.

This question has been passed to me as the Minister responsible for Immigration. Foreign and Commonwealth citizens serving in Her Majesty's forces do not require leave to enter or leave to remain in the United Kingdom. Upon enlistment in Her Majesty's forces, foreign and Commonwealth nationals become exempt from immigration control by virtue of section 8(4) of the Immigration Act 1971. This exemption from immigration control applies throughout their service and only ceases upon their discharge from Her Majesty's forces.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the budget for the Atomic Weapons Establishment was in each of the last 20 years. [74425]

Des Browne: The following table represents annual expenditure at the Atomic Weapons Establishment during the period of contractorisation (that is, from 1 April 1993 onwards). Costs prior to 1993 were not collected on the same basis and the detail of these, which would be necessary in order to analyse the financial data and establish verifiable comparisons, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Body Armour

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who the manufacturer is of body armour used by UK forces in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan. [74969]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has contracts with the following companies for the supply of body armour components used by the UK forces in Iraq and Afghanistan: NP Aerospace Limited, Seyntex NV, Aegis Engineering Limited and CQC Limited.

Defence Sector Employment

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many defence sector jobs there were in Dunfermline and West Fife in each year since 1997. [73478]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 25 May 2006]: The information is not held in the format requested. Information on Civilian staff is only held for Scotland as a whole and is given in Table 1. Data on military staff are broken down by local authority area, hence data are held for Fife but not specifically for Dunfermline and West Fife. The data available are provided in Table 2. Data for those employed in Defence-related industries are provided by the employers themselves.

Table 1: Civilian staff in Scotland by year

	Number of staff
1997	10,130
1998	9,980
1999	9,690
2000	9,650
2001	9,650
2002	8,830
2003	7,300
2004	7,310
2005	6,970
2006	6,930

Notes:
Includes manually paid staff between 1999 and 2001. Data on manually paid staff before 1999 are not available, so estimates have been used. Civilian data are compiled from the various civilian personnel record systems in the MoD, principally those held by the Pay and Personnel Agency (PPA) and the Trading Funds. Differences in the way the personnel in different areas are managed and graded means that not all the data are fully consistent.

Table 2: Military staff posted in Fife by year

1998	1,610
1999	1,800

2002	1,380
2004	2,470
2005	2,030
2006	2,140

Notes:
Figures are for UK Regular Forces, both Trained and Untrained, located in the UK. They therefore exclude Gurkhas, Full Time Reserve Service personnel, the Home Service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment and mobilised reservists. Naval Service personnel on sea service are included against the local authority containing the home port of their ship. Naval Service personnel serving in flights at sea are included against the local authority containing the base airfield of their flight. The detailed figures have been compiled from unit statistics related to unit postcodes. For some units postcode information is either unavailable or inappropriate. Location statistics are not available for FTRS, the Home Service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment and Mobilised Reservists. These figures are taken from TSP 10: UK Regular Forces Distribution across the UK which shows the distribution of Service Personnel by Government Office Region/country, county and local authority area. The publication was suspended in October 2002 when a number of concerns were identified in both the source data and the programs used to produce the publication. It was reinstated in July 2004. Due to a different methodology figures before 2002 should not be compared to those after 2004.

Departmental Procurement

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress his Department has made on the assessment of the core load required to sustain the (a) high-end design, (b) systems engineering and (c) combat systems integration skills for surface ship design and build. [71487]

Mr. Ingram: Good progress is being made on assessing the core workload required to sustain the key maritime industrial capabilities defined in the defence industrial strategy. This work is complex and is taking time to get right. Industry has been and will continue to be involved as this work develops.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress his Department has made with negotiations to achieve a programme level partnering agreement with a single industrial entity for the full lifecycle of the submarine flotilla. [71488]

Mr. Ingram: Following publication of the Defence Industrial Strategy White Paper, officials have been engaged in detailed discussions with industry on the scope of a possible Programme Level Partnering Agreement. Good progress has been made on clarifying MOD and industry positions. At this stage, no decisions have been made.

Galileo Project

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the capacity of the technology used for the Galileo project to be adapted for military use. [74093]

Mr. Ingram: The MOD remains committed to the American global positioning system (GPS) to meet all of its military precision navigation and timing needs and as the NATO standard. Therefore we have no defence requirement against which to assess any potential national military utility of Galileo. While Galileo's open service, like that of GPS, can be accessed by all and therefore could be used by military forces, Galileo remains a civil system under civil control as was confirmed in the December 2004 EU Transport Council Conclusions.

Iraq/Afghanistan

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) pursuant to the Answer of 19 December 2005, Official Report, column 2342W, on Iraq/Afghanistan, if he will keep the families of the dead soldiers informed of proceedings; [53078]

(2) when arrests will take place; which Iraqi police divisions will carry out the arrests; and whether British troops will be involved; [53079]

(3) what recent discussions he has had with the central criminal court of Iraq on the incident at Al Majarr Al Kabir on 24 June 2003; who the members are of the central criminal court of Iraq investigating the incident; and which UK personnel will co-ordinate arrests. [53080]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the Defence Secretary is keeping the families of the six Royal Military policemen killed at Al Majarr Al Kabir informed of the progress of the criminal case which rests with the Central Criminal Court of Iraq (CCCI). The conduct of this case remains under the jurisdiction of the Iraqi authorities. It would be inappropriate to provide further details while the judicial process is in progress. We will continue to provide whatever assistance the CCCI needs.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the threat to British troops in the Helmand province from Taliban forces operating in Quetta, Pakistan. [74853]

Mr. Ingram: I am withholding our detailed assessment of the threat from the Taliban forces as its disclosure could compromise the security of UK and coalition forces operating in Southern Afghanistan.

However, I can say that we do not judge the Taliban as a credible threat to the stability of Afghanistan while international security forces are providing support there. The Pakistan authorities have made extensive efforts to improve the rule of law in border areas and we will continue to work with them to combat the Taliban and other anti-government groups that oppose Afghanistan's peaceful reconstruction.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his oral answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1183, on Iraq, what assessment has been made of the effectiveness of composite fibreglass in protecting the occupants of Land Rovers used by the British military for patrol purposes in Iraq. [74274]

Des Browne [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The overall protection level afforded by the Land Rover Snatch vehicles was assessed in March 2005 as part of a number of ongoing assessments to ensure the suitability of a range of equipment used on current operations. The results of these assessments are being withheld on the basis that disclosure of such information could prejudice the safety of the armed forces.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether British forces in Iraq have encountered the use against them of the RPG29 shoulder-fired weapon. [75257]

Mr. Ingram: No.

Military Headquarter (Collocation)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress with his plans for collocation of military headquarters. [75077]

Mr. Ingram: All three services are currently merging or collocating their individual administrative and operational headquarters. This is part of the wider drive within MOD to streamline back-office functions so as to maximise investment in our front-line forces. The Royal Navy stood-up its new integrated headquarters on 1 April 2006. The programme was delivered on time and to budget. The Royal Air Force's collocation of the Strike and Personnel and Training Commands is progressing well: it is expected that the collocation of the main elements will stand-up at RAF High Wycombe on time, in October 2006. The Army's merger of Headquarters Land Command and Headquarters Adjutant General Command to create an integrated HQ at a single site by March 2009 is at an earlier stage of development.

Rifles Regiment (Durham)

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Durham outstation of the Rifles Regiment. [75280]

Mr. Ingram: The Battalion Headquarters for 5 Royal Regiment of Fusiliers (Bn HQ 5 RRF) will remain in Durham for the foreseeable future. There are no plans for the Light Infantry (LI) (RIFLES) presence in Durham to change.

Search and Rescue

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with representatives from the (a) sea fishing industry, (b) mountain rescue service and (c) recreational sea and coastal users organisations in respect of the proposal to operate UK search and rescue services under one private finance initiative contract. [75009]

Mr. Ingram: The mountain rescue service has been kept informed through the Operators Group of the UK Search and Rescue Strategic Committee whose membership includes the Mountain Rescue Council of England and Wales and the Mountain Rescue Committee of Scotland. Specific discussions have not taken place with the wider public. The Operators Group, including the sea fishing industry and recreational and coastal users organisations, are now able, however, to access information on the progress of the future service through the Maritime and Coastguard Agency website. The Ministry of Defence and the Department for Transport are committed to delivering a future helicopter search and rescue service around the UK which is at least as effective as the current one.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when decisions on (a) specific aircraft, (b) basing, (c) contract duration and (d) other residual matters will be taken in respect of the decision to operate UK search and rescue services through one private finance initiative contract. [75010]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence and the Maritime and Coastguard Agency have moved forward to the next stage of the future provision of helicopter search and rescue around the UK through a joint competition under the private finance initiative. The specific aircraft, future basing, contract duration and other residual matters will be fully assessed during this next stage. The final decisions on these issues will be taken in the light of the competition and confirmed through the main investment decision which will take place when matters are sufficiently mature.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how capability to maintain (a) real-life training experience for military personnel, (b) counter-terrorism measures and (c) transference of skills to combat search and rescue (SAR) for military crews will be maintained under the proposed single SAR private finance initiative contract for UK provision. [75011]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence and the Department for Transport have moved forward to the next stage of the future provision of helicopter search and rescue around the UK through a joint competition under the private finance initiative. Military aircrew continue to form part of the strategy for delivery of this future service. Real-life training experience will be provided for military aircrew both through the training they will undergo to fulfil this role and their operational experience. This in turn will continue to meet our policy of transferring skills to the deployable military forces. Counter-terrorism capabilities will also continue and will be provided by equally capable military units in the future.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with other emergency services in respect of proposals to run the search and rescue service under a single private finance initiative contract. [75012]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence and the Department for Transport are committed to delivering a future search and rescue service around the UK which is at least as effective as the current one. Other emergency service providers have been kept informed through the UK Search and Rescue Strategic Committee and its operators' group.

Shoeburyness Site

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the (a) detonations and (b) explosions that took place at the Shoeburyness site in the last five years were as a result of (i) equipment and (ii) munitions being tested; and what percentage were as a result of munitions being disposed of at the end of their life. [74128]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held in the format requested. Under the terms of the Long Term Partnering Agreement (LTPA) with MOD, QinetiQ are tasked with the disposal of 3,000 tonnes NEQ of life expired munitions each year. Of this, only three per cent. is disposed of by open detonation.

Theatre Missile Defence

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to decide on the need for theatre missile defences; and what expenditure on research and technology appraisal of such defences has been incurred. [75255]

Des Browne: NATO Heads of State and Government agreed at the Istanbul Summit in June 2004 to the principle of NATO Theatre Missile Defence (TMD) and the Alliance has since embarked on a programme to acquire a TMD capability to protect deployed forces by 2010. The United Kingdom supports this NATO programme.

UK national expenditure on research into ballistic missile defence is now focussed on longer range threats, and expenditure since 2004 has totalled some £8.1 million. For detailed information on expenditure prior to 2004, I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which my right hon. Friend, the then Secretary of State, gave to the hon. Member for Hereford (Mr. Keetch) on 19 January 2004, Official Report, column 918W.

Type 45 Destroyers

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the Answer of 3 May 2006 to Question reference 67921, on Type 45 destroyers, what factors will determine when the appropriate time will be for the giving of formal approval for ships seven and eight. [70759]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 17 May 2006]: A number of factors will determine when formal approval for ships seven and eight will be sought. These will include reaching agreement on the optimal commercial arrangements for the Type 45 programme and reaching agreement with industry on pricing that enables the Department to demonstrate the value for money and affordability of the ships.

UN Security Council Resolution 1325

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has taken to implement UN Security Council Resolution 1325 (2002). [74657]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 5 June 2006]: As part of our commitment to UNSCR 1325 the MOD, FCO, and DFID have published a UK national action plan to ensure implementation of the resolution, and encourage others to do likewise. I shall place a copy of the action plan in the Library of the House. The principal requirement on the MOD is to ensure that the provisions of SCR 1325 are reflected in the operational planning, doctrine and training programmes. UK forces already undergo training prior to operational deployments that takes account of gender issues. We will be auditing our training to assess how this compares with the requirements of UNSCR 1325.

TREASURY

Conception Rate

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many conceptions of (a) under 18s and (b) under 16s there were in each (i) primary care trust area and (ii) local authority area in the North East in each year since 2001; what the conception rate was in each case; and what percentage of conceptions in under 18s ended in abortion in each case. [75208]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 7 June 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many conceptions in (a) under 18s (b) under 16s there were in each (i) primary care trust area and (ii) local authority area in the North East in each year since 2001; what the conception rate was in each case; and what percentage of conceptions in under 18s ended in abortion in each case. (75208)

Teenage conception figures by Primary Care Trust (PCT) are not available because there is a risk of disclosure of information about individuals due to differences in boundaries between PCTs and local authorities.

Available figures are estimates of the number of pregnancies that resulted in a live birth, stillbirth or termination.

Conception numbers, rates and percentage leading to abortion for girls aged under 18 by local authorities in the North East from 2001 to 2004 (the most recent year for which figures are available) are given in the attached table. Figures for 2004 are provisional.

Conception statistics for girls aged under 16 for each year since 2001 are available only for unitary authorities, metropolitan counties and counties. Figures are not available for county districts as there is a risk of disclosure of information about individuals due to small number of cases each year.

Notes:
1. Following ONS guidance on disclosure of abortion statistics, figures for 2003 and 2004 on percentage of conceptions leading to abortions have been suppressed where the count is less than 10 cases. Occasionally it has been necessary to apply a secondary suppression to avoid the possibility of disclosure by differencing.
2. Rates are per 1000 female population aged 15-17.

Departmental Annual Reports

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff in his Department did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represented of the total number of staff in each case. [75089]

John Healey: The information is as follows:

Staff not achieving an acceptable performance mark

2005-06	0	0
2003-04	[1]—	[1]—

HM Treasury no longer has an unsatisfactory mark category for annual performance. Any member of staff whose performance is at an unsatisfactory level is dealt with under competency or probationary procedures at the time rather than waiting until the end of the appraisal year.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what threshold level of inheritance tax would be required so as to produce the same tax revenue as in 1998, adjusted for inflation. [55226]

Dawn Primarolo: The level of inheritance tax remains unchanged since 1998, indeed since 1988.

Manufacturing Job Losses

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many jobs have been lost in manufacturing in (a) the UK and (b) Scotland since the second quarter of 1997. [74808]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 7 June 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about job losses in manufacturing in the UK and Scotland since the second quarter of 1997 (74808)

While statistics of jobs lost or created are not available explicitly, statistics from surveys enable comparisons to be made of net changes in the number of jobs from year to year.

Comparative statistics for UK and Scotland for manufacturing are only available in terms of employee jobs, i.e. excluding the self-employed, and on a non seasonally adjusted basis. These are shown in the following table, using figures for June each year so that the comparison is not affected by seasonal influences.

Employee jobs and change in jobs in manufacturing in UK and Scotland between June 1997 and June 2005

	Thousands, not seasonally adjusted
June	United Kingdom	Scotland
1997	4,176	342
2005	3,131	234
Change since 1997	-1,045	-108

As these results are mainly based on sample surveys, they are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to answer questions (a) 24586, (b) 46531, (c) 62787, (d) 62788, (e) 63040, (f) 63044 and (g) 63323, on tax credits, tabled by the hon. Member for Yeovil. [74824]

Dawn Primarolo: I answered question 63044 on 5 June 2006 and question 24586 as long ago as 10 January 2006. The other questions to which the hon. Gentleman refers are among 84 of the 535 questions he has tabled to the Chancellor in the present session which it has not yet been possible to answer.

75 of these unanswered questions were received yesterday and today alone. Determining precisely what information the hon. Member is seeking, whether it differs from or simply duplicates information which has already been provided to him (often on more than one occasion) and ascertaining whether the data concerned are in the process of being assembled in answer to earlier similar questions is a time-consuming task which is seldom capable of being accomplished quickly.

Tax Credits

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the working tax credit child care element on child care costs; and if he will make a statement. [75178]

Dawn Primarolo: Child care costs are affected by a number of factors, such as the availability of child care provision, local wage levels, or land or rental prices where child care is offered. The child care element of the working tax credit has had a significant impact on the affordability of child care for low to moderate-income families, reducing the proportion of child care costs that they pay. Through the child care element of the working tax credit, working parents receive financial assistance with up to 80 per cent. of the costs of registered and approved child care, up to a maximum of £300 per week (£175 for one child). In April 2006 374,000 families were benefiting from the child care element, and they were receiving an average of £50 per week towards their child care costs.

The Government remain committed to its vision to ensure that all families are able to afford flexible, high quality child care services that are appropriate to their needs.

Vehicle Excise Duty Rates

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many people his Department estimated would decide against buying a band G car on the basis of the new vehicle excise duty rate in its costings for the Finance Bill; at what cost; and with what expected effect on carbon emissions; [75180]

(2) how many people his Department estimated would decide in favour of buying a band A car based on the vehicle excise duty exemption in its costings for the Finance Bill; at what cost; and with what expected effect on carbon emissions. [75181]

John Healey: The Chancellor considers all relevant economic, social and environmental factors in deciding taxation policy.

The reforms to vehicle excise duty to strengthen environmental incentives announced in the Budget are expected to cost the Exchequer £10 million over six years. Graduated vehicle excise duty is designed to give a clear signal to motorists to consider environmental impacts when making their vehicle purchasing choice and to the motor industry about the direction of policy on vehicle emissions.

WALES

English Hospitals

8. Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent meetings he has had regarding the treatment of Welsh patients in hospitals in England. [74945]

Nick Ainger: I have regular discussions with the Assembly Minister for Health and Social Services on a range of matters, including the provision of services for Welsh patients in hospitals in England.

Respect Agenda

10. Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on progress with the respect agenda in Wales. [74947]

Mr. Hain: Through the respect action plan, the Government are building on the progress we have already made against antisocial behaviour and are now setting out to tackle its root cause.

Police

11. Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent meetings he has had on police force restructuring in Wales. [74948]

Mr. Hain: I continue to discuss the proposals with key stakeholders. I remain convinced that a single police force is the most effective way of delivering a safe and secure Wales.

Regional Airports

12. Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of regional airports in Wales. [74949]

Nick Ainger: Air services have a vital role to play in the development of an integrated and sustainable transport system for Wales.

The Welsh Assembly Government are keen to exploit this potential to improve accessibility, open up new markets and encourage inward investment.

Pensions

13. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on the effect of pensions policy on the people of Wales. [74950]

Mr. Hain: Regular ones.

The Pensions White Paper shows that under our Government's policies, Welsh pensioners can be ensured of proper pension provision in an ageing society.

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the pension liability of his Department over the next 30 years. [75232]

Mr. Hain: Staff serving in the Wales Office are either on loan from the National Assembly for Wales or employed by the Department for Constitutional Affairs. Pension liabilities are managed by their employing bodies rather than by the Wales Office. Information on pension liabilities is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Dentistry

14. James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met the Health Minister of the Welsh Assembly to discuss NHS dentistry in Wales. [74951]

Nick Ainger: I regularly meet the Assembly Minister for Health and Social Services to discuss dental services in Wales.

Agriculture

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with Ministers of the Welsh Assembly Government on agriculture in Wales. [74946]

Nick Ainger: I have regular bilateral meetings with Carwyn Jones, Welsh Assembly Minister with responsibility for agriculture. The last of these was on 10 May, and our next planned meeting will be on 17 July.

Black/Asian Employees

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in his Department's press office. [74360]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office has a small number of staff. For privacy reasons the numbers are confidential, in line with guidance issued by the Cabinet Office, which states that Departments are not required to provide information on ethnicity, which is given voluntarily, where it is less than five.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff in his Department did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represented of the total number of staff in each case. [75087]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office has a small number of staff. For privacy reasons these numbers are confidential, in line with guidance issued by the Cabinet Office, which states that Departments are not required to provide this information where it is less than five.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by his Department in each year since 2001; in what capacities they were employed; how many were discovered as part of a criminal investigation; and what the nature of the charges brought against them were. [73967]

Mr. Hain: None.

Public Transport (Incentives)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what incentives are available to encourage members of his staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75086]

Mr. Hain: The majority of Wales Office staff (around 75 per cent.) already use public transport to travel to or from work. Staff are able to access interest-free loans for the purchase of rail season tickets or bicycles.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Cabinet Reshuffle

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission when each department of the House was notified by each Government Department of (a) the contact details of the private office of and (b) the responsibilities of each Minister following the recent Cabinet reshuffle. [73879]

Nick Harvey: The Department of the Official Report received some information by fax direct from No. 10 Downing street the day following the recent Cabinet reshuffle. Departments of the House monitored details on the No. 10 Downing street website, departmental websites and press reports during the period after the reshuffle to establish the facts on those aspects of the reshuffle which directly affected their business.

Clothes/Uniform Allowance

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission which officers of the House qualify for an (a) clothes and (b) uniform allowance; what the allowance is in each case; and if he will make a statement. [73851]

Nick Harvey: There is no specific clothing or uniform allowance for Clerks at the Table or Serjeants at Arms. The costs of their uniforms are met from the Administration Estimate. They are responsible for cleaning costs. The Secretary and the Assistant Secretary to the Speaker also have the costs of their official clothing met from the Administration Estimate. The Assistant Secretary to the Speaker also receives a uniform allowance of £654 per annum to cover cleaning and maintenance costs.

Energy Usage

Mr. Davey: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what proportion of energy usage on the House of Commons estate was provided by renewable energy in the last year for which figures are available. [75599]

Nick Harvey: At present, the purchase contract for the supply of electricity to the Parliamentary Estate stipulates that 10 per cent. of the electricity must come from a renewable source. Working from this figure, the proportion of total energy usage on the House of Commons estate provided by renewable energy was 4.9 per cent. During 2005-06.

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what the (a) originally estimated, (b) most recently estimated and (c) outturn cost was of each of the five largest information technology contracts agreed by the House with outside suppliers over the last five years. [71766]

Nick Harvey: The information is not readily available in the form requested. The House has entered into a variety of IT-related contracts in recent years, some of which have been for hardware and software and others for project development or delivery. In few cases have the estimated and outturn costs related solely to a particular contract. Many of the contracts are in relation to continuing work.

The following table lists the five largest external suppliers by value for ICT-related goods and services in 2005-06.

Supplier	Service	Expenditure (£000)
Morse Group[1]	Systems development and support services	1,783
Insight Management and Systems Consultants Ltd.[2]	Systems development and support services	1,224
Colt	Telephony	748
Eurica	Telephony	693
Microsoft	Software	453

[1] In support of the Parliamentary Information Management System (PIMS) and the Web Development Project.
[2] In support of the new House Administration Information System (HAIS).

Apart from the contract with Insight Management and Systems Consultants Ltd., all these contracts are shared between the two Houses. The figures provided represent the Commons share of the costs incurred. These figures relate only to costs incurred under the Administration Estimate, for which the Commission is ultimately responsible, and not for costs borne on the Members' Estimate, such as IT services for Members.

Official Report

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what the average daily cost is of providing a hard copy version of the Official Report. [74543]

Nick Harvey: Neither the daily costs nor the per copy costs of producing the Official Report are held in the form requested, as the printing and publishing contract structure allows for payments in relation to printing consolidated classes of papers supplied complete. Internal staff, and other costs, are not associated with them or apportioned to individual documents. The following figures have been derived from printing contract data. The total printing expenditure per sitting day on the daily part of the Official Report for financial year 2005-06 is estimated at approximately £11,300, which equates to about £9.10 per copy taken by the House.

Postage Costs

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1315W, what estimate the Commission has made of the level of wastage of prepaid envelopes. [74325]

Nick Harvey: Wasted prepaid envelopes are sent to the Postmaster who ensures the House is credited with a full postage refund for each envelope. In 2005-06 the House was refunded £1,553.84 for wasted prepaid envelopes. No estimate has been made of the value of unused prepaid envelopes which are not recovered.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what estimate he has made of the potential savings which would result from stamping hon. Members mail using a franking machine as opposed to using prepaid envelopes. [74391]

Nick Harvey: The small postage saving gained by using franked mail as opposed to prepaid envelopes would be negated by additional costs to provide upgraded franking equipment and staff to weigh and frank each item of mail.

Publications

Mr. Gray: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what assessment the Commission has made of the merits of using (a) recycled and (b) environmentally-friendly paper in House of Commons publications. [74145]

Nick Harvey: The archival requirement of the paper used for House of Commons publications precludes the use of recycled consumer waste material in its production. The specialist paper used in their production is made from imported pulp from managed forests where trees (often two) are planted for every one used. Some mill broke recycled element is included. The paper is chlorine and acid free. The paper merchant holds an ISO 14001 certificate of registration for its environmental management system.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

BBC

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what account she takes of wage inflation in the BBC when negotiating the level of the licence fee. [75508]

Mr. Woodward: The Government are currently conducting a funding review to determine the level of the licence fee to apply from April 2007. All relevant factors will be considered as part of the review.

Casinos

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many citizens of Milton Keynes were consulted on the bid for a large or small casino for Milton Keynes. [75400]

Mr. Caborn: The responsibility for consulting local residents on whether an area should bid for a large or small casino rests with the local authority concerned. Details of all local authority bids are available on the Casino Advisory Panel's website at www.culture.gov.uk/cap.

On 24 May, the Casino Advisory Panel announced the areas that have been short listed for the 17 new casinos permitted under the Gambling Act 2005. In making the announcement, the panel made it clear that it would accept, until 28 June, representations on the shortlists from interested parties. Members of the public can express their opinions to the panel on the broad locations of casinos, whether of opposition or support.

Internet Service Providers

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what guidance her Department has issued to internet service providers on their responsibilities for illegal traffic hosted on their networks. [72675]

Mr. Woodward: None. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him by the Minister for Industry and the Regions my right hon. Friend the Member for Barking (Margaret Hodge) on 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 226W.

Tourism

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many tourists to the United Kingdom there were in each quarter since 1976, broken down by (a) country of origin, (b) age group and (c) duration of stay. [75651]

Mr. Woodward: The detailed information requested is too large to be printed in the Official Report. I am therefore arranging for the tabulation to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The information, which comes from the International Passenger Survey and is published by the Office for National Statistics, refers to inbound tourist visits rather than tourists.

Figures for parts (b) and (c) of the question are provided from 1993 to 2005 only because earlier data are not available in electronic format and there would be disproportionate cost in obtaining this information.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Blind/Partially Sighted Schoolchildren

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many school children in (a) England, (b) the North East and (c) the Tees Valley are blind or partially sighted. [73655]

Mr. Dhanda: The available information is given in the following table.

Maintained primary, secondary and all special schools[1, 2]: number and percentage of pupils whose primary need is visual impairment[3, 4] as at January 2006[5]

	Pupils whose primary need is visual impairment

Schools' Census

Since 2004, the Department for Education and Skills has collected data on pupils by type of SEN as part of the annual school census. The above table shows pupils with SEN supported at School Action Plus or with a statement of SEN where visual impairment is recorded as their primary need.

There are a range of factors which may affect the data recorded, including:

Local interpretation of definitions

Classification of children with multiple needs

Differences in diagnoses between education and health professionals

Availability of special school provisions in authorities [deleted or clarified]

CAFCASS

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what reasons were given by the relevant trade unions for rejecting the pay offer made to staff at the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service during 2005-06; and if he will make a statement; [74682]

(2) how many vacancies there were in the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service in the most recent period for which figures are available, broken down by region; [74683]

(3) what plans he has to negotiate a new strategic pay deal with the trade unions in the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service. [74684]

Mr. Dhanda: These are matters for the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service (CAFCASS). Anthony Douglas, the chief executive, has written to my hon. Friend with this information and a copy of his reply has been placed in the Library.

Letter from Anthony Douglas, dated June 2006:

Parliamentary Questions Concerning CAFCASS

I am writing to you in response to the three parliamentary questions that you tabled recently.

PQ74682—what reasons were given by the relevant trade unions for rejecting the pay offer made to staff at the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service during 2005-06; and if he will make a statement

The pay award for 2005/06 was rejected because the initial offer was regarded as too low. Following a short and constructive negotiation, a revised offer was accepted.

PQ74683—how many vacancies there were in the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service in the most recent period for which figures are available, broken down by region

At the end of March 2006, CAFCASS staff vacancies were equivalent to 65.3 full time posts, broken down as follows:

Family Court Advisors—37.9;

Service Managers—7.5; and

Others—19.9

A regional breakdown is attached. The vacancies represent 3.5% of the workforce. CAFCASS vacancies levels are kept under regular review.

PQ74683—what plans he has to negotiate a new strategic pay deal with the trade unions in the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service

CAFCASS has agreed a set of principles with the CAFCASS trade unions, to underpin a strategic pay review, and discussions on the review have started. Completion is expected before the end of 2006, with at least partial implementation anticipated from April 2007, depending on the progress made and budgetary considerations at the time.

Yorkshire and Humberside	4	260.55	1.5
National Office	6	93.7	6.4
Total	65.3	1844.83	3.5

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will establish an independent body to oversee the work of Children and Family Court Advisory and Support service; and if he will make a statement. [74845]

Mr. Dhanda: There is already considerable independent oversight of CAFCASS' work. It is inspected by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Court Administration, and inspection reports are published. Complaints about CAFCASS in particular cases, which are not resolved by its complaints procedure, can be referred to the Parliamentary and Health Service Ombudsman. CAFCASS' annual reports and accounts are audited by the National Audit Office before they are published and laid before Parliament. In addition, CAFCASS has a non-executive board; the chair and 10 members are appointed by the Secretary of State for Education and Skills and 2 members are co-opted to provide particular expertise.

Chess

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if he will make a statement on the development and encouragement of chess in schools; [75555]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of under 16s who play chess as part of school activities. [75556]

Jim Knight: We are keen to explore innovative ways of raising levels of motivation and achievement among school pupils and have supported the English Chess Federation to develop a handbook for schools in setting up school chess clubs.

We do not collect data on the number of under 16s who play chess as part of school activities. However, we know that a number of schools incorporate chess clubs within their study support (out of school hours learning) provision. Schools and local authorities have access to Government funding for study support and the freedom to decide which activities to offer to best meet local need and demand. By 2010 the Government also wants all schools, as part of their extended schools provision, to provide a varied range of interesting activities, such as chess clubs, before and after school and during the school holidays.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he will reply to the hon. Member for West Worcestershire's letter of 4 April, on the home computer initiative. [73895]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 5 June 2006]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will respond to the hon. Member on this matter.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff in his Department have had (a) five or more, (b) four, (c) three and (d) two periods of sick leave of less than five days in each of the last three years. [72993]

Mr. Dhanda: The information for calendar years 2004 and 2005 is given in the following table:

Periods of sick leave of less than five days	Number of staff
2005
2	564
3	328
4	173
5 plus	199
Total	1,264
2004
2	614
3	351
4	197
5 plus	227
Total	1,389

Information for previous years is not held.

The Department is committed to effective attendance management. In support of the recommendations of "Managing Sickness Absence in the Public Sector" it has introduced a number of initiatives to reduce absence levels to seven days per person by 2010. These initiatives have been shared with Cabinet Office to whom my Department provides regular updates on progress. One such initiative is the publication of a comprehensive Attendance Management and Health Guide which brings together the guidance on these issues.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff in his Department attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event in London in 2005; and what the total cost to his Department was of their attendance. [72994]

Mr. Dhanda: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will write to the hon. Member with details of the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event. Copies of her letter will be placed in the Library.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of staff in his Department are making additional voluntary contributions to their pensions. [72997]

Mr. Dhanda: Members of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) can pay additional contributions to top up their pension either through the Civil Service Additional Voluntary Contributions Scheme (CSAVCS), a money purchase arrangement, or by buying added years of service in the PCSPS. As an alternative to membership of the PCSPS recruits from 1 October 2002 have been able to join a stakeholder arrangement, the partnership pension account.

The number and percentage of staff in the Department who are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension as at April 2006 are shown in the following table:

	Number	Percentage
CSAVCS	99	2.61
Added years	231	6.08
Partnership	19	0.50

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many non-pensionable bonuses were awarded to members of his staff in each of the last three years; and at what total cost. [72998]

Mr. Dhanda: The following table shows the percentage of staff in my Department receiving non-pensionable bonuses in each of the last three years, and the total cost.

	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
Percentage of bonuses	26	32	33
Cost (£)	922,000	1,462,000	1,835,000
Percentage of paybill	0.6	0.96	33

Education and Inspections Bill

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the impact of human rights legislation on the drafting of the Education and Inspections Bill. [73951]

Jim Knight: The former Secretary of State signed a certificate under section 19 of the Human Rights Act indicating that the provisions of the Bill are, in her opinion, compliant with the ECHR/HRA Schedule rights.

During consideration of the Bill on Report I indicated that I would respond in writing to the hon. Member for Brent, East regarding the human rights considerations related to confiscation of property. I will publish that letter in the Library.

Education Funding

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the funding was per pupil in (a) primary, (b) infant, (c) junior and (d) secondary schools in each (i) London borough and (ii) local education authority in 2005-06. [75454]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not yet available. The Department is due to collect the section 52 outturn data relating to the 2005-06 financial year from August 2006.

Education Maintenance Allowance

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many education maintenance allowances are being paid in each local education authority in England; what percentage of the relevant age cohort these figures represent; and what estimate he has made of the take-up rate in each area. [75213]

Mr. Dhanda: EMA 2005/06 take-up to April 2006 and is shown in the following table.

	Take-up current year (April 2006)		Take-up as proportion of age cohort		Take-up as proportion of eligible population

Notes:
1. Take-up figures are the number of learners who have received one or more EMA payments.
2. The eligibility estimates are produced using income distributions (derived from the Family Resources Survey) and expected numbers in full-time further education. When applied to individual localities, the figures may be subject to some variation but they provide a useful estimate. 3. City of London has been omitted because of small population size (see note 2, above). Take-up of EMA in the authority to date is 19 16-year-olds and 42 17-year-olds have received at least one payment.

Free Fruit Scheme

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent discussions he has had with the organisers of free fruit schemes for schools. [75451]

Jim Knight: The Government's School Fruit and Vegetable Scheme is administered by the Department of Health. The Secretary of State for Education and Skills has not met recently with organisers of free fruit schemes for schools.

Gershon Report

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many civil servants were employed in his Department before the Gershon Report; what net reductions were proposed in the Gershon Report; how many reductions have been made; and how many civil servants are expected to be employed in his Department in the Gershon target month of April 2008. [74291]

Mr. Dhanda: The agreed baseline figure that my Department is using to assess progress against its target to reduce civil service posts in response to the Gershon report is 4,660 and is at 1 October 2003. The baseline of October 2003 reflects the starting point for the Department's restructuring programme.

The Gershon report commits my Department to achieving a total of 1,460 staff reductions by 31 March 2008, which would reduce overall numbers to 3,200 (this has now reduced to 3,142 as a result of Machinery of Government changes which transferred 58 staff to DCA with effect from 1 April 2006).

As at 1 April 2006, my Department had reduced staffing numbers by 1,025 from its baseline figure, to 3,635, and expects to meet its target of 3,142 by 31 March 2008.

Lip Reading (Yorkshire)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what representations he has received on the reduction of funds enabling lip reading classes at York College; [75034]

(2) what discussions he has had on the provision of sign language and lip reading classes for those with deafness or partial deafness in the Vale of York; [75035]

(3) what alternative provision will be made for those affected by the termination of lip reading classes at York College. [75036]

Bill Rammell: We understand that there no plans to reduce the availability of sign language or lip reading provision in York. The Learning and Skills Council will continue to support sign language courses at York College as these are priority programmes and an integral part of the college's adult provision. Lip reading classes have been run by York city council for a number of years some under a sub-contracting arrangement with York College. York city council have reviewed this arrangement and decided that in future all lip reading courses will be delivered directly through York city council.

We have been clear that provision to support deaf and hard of hearing learners and more generally for all learners with learning difficulties and/or disabilities remains a priority and this continues to be the case in York.

Medical School

Mr. Devine: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many places were allocated in each English university for studying medicine in 2005; and how many of those places were taken by (a) students from overseas and (b) those educated in the private sector. [72267]

Bill Rammell: The available information is given in the following table. Information on the previous educational establishment of the intakes of medical schools is not held centrally. The planned and actual intakes of UK and overseas students are determined independently. An increase in overseas students does not affect the number of places available for UK students.

School Milk

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if he will make a statement on his policy concerning the provision of whole milk for drinking in schools; [74792]

(2) what assessment he has made of the relative nutritional benefits to school children of drinking skimmed milk, semi-skimmed milk and whole milk; and if he will make a statement. [74793]

Jim Knight: Local authorities are not obliged to provide milk, but where they do so they must provide it free of charge to pupils entitled to receive a free school lunch. Local authorities decide whether or not to provide whole milk. They are also free to make use of the EU School Milk Subsidy Scheme, which reduces the cost of whole milk and semi-skimmed milk purchased. The new nutritional standards in schools, announced on 19 May 2006, stipulate that only semi-skimmed and skimmed milk should be made available in schools.

The advice of the School Meals Review Panel and the School Food Trust was that only very young children require full-fat milk as part of their diet; and that once children are at school, semi-skimmed and skimmed versions of milk are entirely adequate. This approach reflects current nutrition advice, which is based on advice from the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy (now replaced by the Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition) who considered this issue in relation to cardiovascular disease. Current advice highlights the important role that milk and dairy products play in children's diets, particularly their contribution to children's calcium intake; and states that school-aged children should have the opportunity to choose lower fat versions of milk as these contain at least the same amount of calcium as whole milk, but less fat.

Munchausen's Syndrome by Proxy

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans his Department has to review the 2002 guidelines "Safeguarding Children in whom Illness is Fabricated or Induced"; what discussions he has had with other Government departments about this issue; and if he will make a statement. [75040]

Mr. Dhanda: We have no plans to review the Government's guidance "Safeguarding Children in Whom Illness is Fabricated or Induced (2002)". Consequently, we have not discussed review of the guidance with any other Departments. This guidance was produced jointly by the Department of Health, Home Office, Department for Education and Skills and the Welsh Assembly. It is intended to provide a national framework within which agencies and professionals at local level—individually and jointly—draw up and agree upon their own more detailed ways of working together in cases of fabricated or induced illness. It is addressed to those who work in the health and education services, the police, social services departments, the probation service, and others whose work brings them into contact with children and families.

New Schools

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which (a) primary and (b) secondary schools have been (i) built and (ii) opened in (A) Southend-on-Sea and (B) England in each year since 1997. [73422]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

NUT Conference

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations he has received following the recent National Union of Teachers conference. [75442]

Jim Knight: The NUT leadership has made no formal representations since their recent conference.

Pastoral Care

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) guidance and (b) training his Department and its agencies provide to teachers on dealing with the impact on school children of parental separation and divorce. [75486]

Jim Knight: There is scope in the Personal Social and Health Education framework for schools to explore issues such as parental separation and divorce. Since 2003, we have been providing training for teachers of PSHE through the PSHE certificate for teachers, from which over 5,000 teachers have so far benefited. In addition, the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority has produced a package of guidance for teachers of PSHE. This package includes units of work which can be used to address issues of divorce and separation.

The DfES-funded Social and Emotional Aspects of Learning (SEAL) curriculum resource for primary schools provides ideas for developing children's ability to deal with loss and separation, sometimes through explicit reference to the separation and divorce of parents, as well as other areas of loss. There is also brief guidance for staff on working with children on these subjects.

Personalised Learning

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what pilot studies involving personal digital assistants and other mobile technology are being conducted to help enhance personalised learning in the education system; and if he will make a statement. [74752]

Phil Hope: The Department is currently supporting an innovative project in Wolverhampton called Learning2Go, involving provision of hand held devices to 1,100 students and their teachers across a range of institutions. This exercise is seeking to understand the impact:

(a) on learner achievement when individual and personal access to a device enables learning to continue beyond the school day;

(b) on individual and family learning when enabling access to school related digital content beyond school hours;

(c) on teacher planning and preparation time in line with the aspiration for saving teacher time.

The Department provided funding to Wolverhampton local authority to enable them to fund the conversion of existing educational software for use on the devices. Becta (British Educational Communications Technology Agency) will be conducting a full and detailed evaluation of the project and we will share what we learn to inform future investment/approaches.

Physical Exercise

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to increase the awareness of children and parents about the importance of regular physical exercise and healthy eating outside the school environment. [71386]

Jim Knight: The Healthy Schools' Programme includes physical activity and healthy eating as compulsory elements that schools will need to address to achieve the National Healthy Schools' Standard. The programme encourages children and parents to adopt a healthy lifestyle within and beyond the school environment. We are aiming for all schools to be working towards 'Healthy School' status by 2009.

The national PE, School Sport and Club Links (PESSCL) strategy has set an ambitious target to increase the percentage of 5-16 year olds who spend at least two hours each week on high quality PE and school sport, within and beyond the curriculum, to 75 per cent. by 2006, and to raise this to 85 per cent. by 2008. The strategy is also encouraging children and young people to participate in sports clubs.

Food education within the National Curriculum aims to develop healthy eating habits both inside and outside the school environment. Pupils should learn about diet, nutrition, cooking, food hygiene and safety. In addition, the School Food Trust will play a key role in taking forward the Government's programme for improving school food. It will give independent support and advice to schools and parents to improve the standard of school meals and to ensure that the issue of school food remains high on the agenda. We have developed a parents' toolkit "Food in Schools: A short guide for parents and carers" which encourages parents to take an interest in the food their children are being served at school and supporting what happens at school in the home.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the Private Members' Bills in respect of which his Department adopted a policy of neutrality in each Session since 2001-02; and if he will make a statement. [72118]

Mr. Dhanda: The information requested is not collected by the Department.

Pupil Numbers

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many pupils are being taught at the temporary school at Oakgrove; how long the temporary school will remain in place; and what estimate he has made of the number of pupils who will be taught there in (a) September 2006, (b) July 2007 and (c) September 2007; [75494]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of pupils who will be taught in (a) Bradwell Village, (b) Caroline Haslett, (c) Green Park, (d) Olney Infants, (e) Lord Grey, (f) The Walnuts, (g) White Spire and (h) Sir Frank Markham schools in (i) September 2006, (ii) July 2007 and (iii) September 2007. [75495]

Jim Knight: Local authorities are responsible for school place planning and the Secretary of State does not make estimates of pupil numbers. As part of the annual surplus places survey, however, the Department collects local authority area level forecasts of the number of primary and secondary pupils. We do not collect forecasts at school level. The following table shows Milton Keynes estimated pupil numbers at September 2006 and 2007:

	2006	2007
Primary	20,064	20,605
Secondary	16,740	16,937
Total	38,810	39,549

Runaway Children

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in (a) Torbay and (b) England have been reported as having run away since 2001. [72021]

Mr. Dhanda: Statistics on the numbers of all children who are reported as having run away or missing are not collected centrally. The Children's Society estimates that each year in the UK 100,000 children run away or are forced to leave home to escape problems.

The Home Office has been working with the Association of Chief Police Officers and the National Missing Persons Helpline to establish joint working arrangements to improve the recording, sharing and exchange of information, to improve the way in which missing persons are dealt with, and to inform our understanding of the problem in order to develop strategies to address it. Part of this work includes establishment of a comprehensive national police database of missing and unidentified people reported either to the police or the helpline.

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what information and support is available for teachers and schools on preventing children and young people from running away from home or care; and how that support may be accessed. [72153]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answer 18 June 2006]: Schools' core business is teaching and learning, but teachers themselves recognise that to achieve the best results they must supplement their focus on teaching and learning with appropriate additional support, and work with other professional agencies to remove barriers to achievement. The Every Child Matters reforms will help them do this by enabling schools to link in with wider children's services, and access their expertise and experience. This is particularly useful in helping schools respond to the needs of more vulnerable young people, such as those who may run away. In addition, the Every Child Matters: Change for Children programme is improving integrated working at the local level along with enhanced information sharing between children's services leading to earlier identification of young people's needs.

More broadly, there exist opportunities within the current curriculum, under PSHE and Citizenship Frameworks, for schools to explore issues to do with recognising and managing risks (i.e. if you run away, what risks would you face); understanding emotions and strategies for dealing with stress; the importance of family and stable relationships; and knowing where to get help. We are not prescriptive with schools about what issues schools explore to achieve the learning objectives set out within the frameworks, and local need determines local provision.

In addition, DfES has run 6 development projects to test out how best to provide safe, flexible and responsive community-based services that can be easily incorporated into mainstream children's services. When we disseminate the lessons learnt so far from these, later this year, they will include information, materials and support models from work with schools in the pilot areas.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what arrangements are in place to ensure that sex offenders who are also pupils or students do not have access in schools or colleges to children under 16 years; and what powers he has in respect of such persons. [73813]

Mr. Dhanda: Cases involving sex offenders who are also pupils or students should be considered individually, in line with guidance in "Working Together to Safeguard Children". There should be a co-ordinated approach, involving youth justice, children's social care, education (including educational psychology) and health (including child and adolescent mental health). An assessment should be carried out in each case to assess the risks to other children and to decide what plan of action should be put in place to address the young person's behaviour and to ensure the safety of others. This might include arrangements for monitoring the child to ensure that he does not have unsupervised access to children under 16 while at school or college or provision of specialist services, including education, not in mainstream settings, which help address the young person's behaviour.

Small Change Big Difference

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department and its agencies have taken following the launch of the Government's "Small Change Big Difference" Campaign. [72007]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department has a health and attendance management strategy that draws on the recommendations of the "Choosing health" White Paper, "Health, Work and Well-Being" document and "Small Change Big Difference Campaign (SCBD)". In this context, we have recently delivered a number of initiatives to promote health and well being within the Department. These include:

Health Events on all of our sites to promote "5 a day" where literature on 5 a day was supplied by the Department of Health and this was distributed to staff along with free fruit. These events were well attended with around 50 per cent. of our staff participating;

Free pedometers have been made available to all staff along with literature supplied to us by the British Heart Foundation and Countryside Agency on the benefits of walking. Around half our staff have come forward to claim their pedometer and we plan to distribute more at future health events;

Yearly site health check events where staff are offered health literature, weight assessment, cholesterol tests, lung function and blood pressure tests. Our last events were held in October 2005;

The launch of our new smoking policy, shortly after National No Smoking Day (8/3/2006). This acted as a launch pad to announce that we will close all our smoking rooms, in line with the commitment that we have made to the Health Secretary to make DfES smoke free by the end of 2006. We have offered the services of our occupational health advisers to have initial discussions with staff about giving up smoking and we have distributed smoking cessation literature supplied to us by the Department of Health. We intend to provide focussed smoking cessation support to all staff who require it as we close down our smoking rooms on a phased site by site basis throughout 2006;

We have ensured that our catering contractor, Aramark, provides health options in the staff canteens including reducing salt levels in food, using semi skimmed milk, lowering fat content and vegetarian options;

Our two largest sites (London and Sheffield) have a gym available to all staff and all sites have exercise or well-being classes such as aerobics or yoga with the exception of Darlington (one of our smaller sites) where there was insufficient demand.

As the programme of work on SCBD develops, the Department of Health will be working across all of Government to ensure the programme joins up to promote maximum impact. DoH is leading the implementation for this initiative as part of its cross-Government commitment to deliver the public health White Paper "Choosing Health".

Student Finances

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills where potential students in 2006-07 can obtain a full account of what bursaries are available at each higher education institution. [75248]

Bill Rammell: Students can find out about the bursaries available in the 2006/07 academic year through the UCAS website at http://www.ucas.com/. The website allows students to compare bursaries across subjects and at different institutions.

We are working towards providing students with a facility for the next academic year that will enable them to find out about their entitlement to statutory support and bursaries in one place.

Teachers (Maths Graduates)

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of mathematics graduates required as teachers in each year between 2006-07 and 2010-11. [73923]

Jim Knight: There are 2,350 available initial teacher training places for conventional courses for mathematics in 2006/07 and the indicative number of places for 2007/08 is 2,350. In 2004/05 (the latest year for which final figures are available), an additional 560 people were recruited to train as mathematics teachers on employment based routes, and we expect to recruit similar numbers in the next few years.

Places for 2008/09 onwards have not yet been decided, but will take into account the latest available information on recruitment, teachers leaving and returning to the profession and vacancy rates. The Government aim that by 2014 95 per cent. of mathematics lessons will be delivered by a mathematics specialist.

University Placements (Medicine)

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many placements were available in 2005 in universities in England to study medicine; how many applications were made for such placements from (a) overseas students and (b) British students; and how many places were given to (i) overseas students and (ii) British students. [66611]

Bill Rammell: The available information is given in the following two tables. The planned and actual intakes of UK and overseas students are determined independently. An increase in overseas students does not affect the number of places available for UK students.

Applicants through UCAS to pre-clinical medicine courses at UK institutions, 2005 entry

Domicile	Applicants[1]	Accepted applicants
UK	15,637	7,106
EU	1,426	170
Other overseas	2,297	545
Total	19,360	7,821

[1] Figures only include students where the majority of their applications are to medicine courses.

Planned intake and actual intake to UK medical schools, 2005/6

	Planned intake[1]	Actual intake[2]
Total	7,588	7,898
Of which:
Home and EU[3]	—	7,352
Other overseas[4]	—	546

[1] Planned intake numbers for UK institutions, split by domicile, are not held centrally. In 2005/6, the planned intake at English institutions was 6,078 of which 5,621 were for home students and 457 for overseas students. Actual intake at English institutions in 2005/06 was 6,298 of which 5,872 were home students and 426 were overseas.

[2] Intake figures for 2005/6 are provisional until November 2006.

[3] Home and EU domiciles cannot be separated in the return as both pay the same fees.

[4] Includes students from the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands as they do not pay home fees.

Vetting and Barring

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 23 May 2006, Official Report, column 1716W, when the new Vetting and Barring Scheme will take effect; and what interim safeguards he will require in respect of children in children's establishments and schools and receiving children's services. [74206]

Mr. Dhanda: Subject to Parliament's approval of the necessary legislation, our intention is to introduce the new Vetting and Barring Scheme in 2008. Implementation will be staged—as was recommended in Sir Michael Bichard's report into the Soham murders—to ensure that the new requirements are established effectively. Until then the current barring schemes will continue to operate alongside the system of Criminal Records Bureau checks. Since the Secretary of State's review into list 99 in January, we have taken a number of steps to strengthen this scheme including the establishment of an independent expert panel to advise and assist the Secretary of State in carrying out his list 99 functions, and new regulations making Criminal Records Bureau checks mandatory for all newly appointed school employees. We will also be introducing new regulations shortly to ensure that any individuals working with children who are convicted or cautioned for sex offences against children will be automatically entered on list 99.

Weapon Detection Scanners (Schools)

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the merits of using weapon detection scanners in schools in areas where children are known to bring weapons into school. [73388]

Jim Knight: We have made no assessment or recommendation about scanners being used in or by schools. The Violent Crime Reduction Bill, if it receives Royal Assent, will enable schools to search, without consent, pupils they suspect are carrying a knife or other weapon. Staff authorised to conduct a search could use a detector but that is for individual schools to decide. Police called in to make a general search at a school could also use a detector.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Housing

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make a statement on progress towards the decent homes standard for social housing in (a) Greater Manchester, (b) Stockport Metropolitan Borough and (c) Tameside Metropolitan Borough. [72646]

Yvette Cooper: All 10 metropolitan authorities in the Greater Manchester area have programmes under way to make their social housing decent.

Progress has been made towards the decent homes target with many examples of associated benefits in regeneration, improved housing management performance and tenant empowerment.

Latest figures for the registered social landlord (RSL) sector in Greater Manchester show that c. 19 per cent. of stock was non-decent in 2005. This included recently transferred local authority stock subject to a major investment programme.

In Tameside 301 council homes were transferred to Ashton Pioneer homes in 1999 and this RSL has now completed its investment programme. There are no non-decent properties in the stock and a substantial reduction in empty properties has been reported.

In March 2000, 16,466 homes were transferred to New Charter Housing Group. Non-decency rates are estimated to have been c.70 per cent. at the time. A 10 year investment programme was begun worth approximately £25 million per annum. In 2005, approximately 23 per cent. of the stock was non-decent and New Charter estimates all the stock will have met the decent homes standard by April 2008.

In addition, Manchester city council has successfully transferred estates in Houghton Green and Carrbrook both of which have been in receipt of substantial new investment to take homes up to and beyond the decent homes standard. The transfer of Manchester's Hattersley estate is expected shortly.

Stockport MBC was granted Section 27 consent for their ALMO 'Stockport Homes' in October 2005 and is due for inspection by the Housing Inspectorate in June of this year. Should the council achieve a two star rating or better, it will be entitled to access tens of millions of pounds in extra resource to help make all its homes decent over the coming years.

In addition Manchester city council is currently consulting several hundred tenants in the Stockport area over future investment plans for their stock.

In April 2005, 731 RSL properties in Stockport (15 per cent. of the total) were non-decent.

London Housing Associations

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps she is taking to enable London housing associations access to development opportunities. [73318]

Yvette Cooper: We expect that housing associations, in London and elsewhere, will deliver affordable housing both in their own right and through partnership with developers linked to the provision of market housing. We will publish revised planning guidance on the provision of affordable housing through the planning system later this year. The Housing Corporation is also exploring how RSLs might take an increasing role in the provision of market housing for sale.

Sutton Town Football Club

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what advice the then Secretary of State received regarding the planning application for Sutton Town Football Club's new ground; and what account was taken of the opinion of local residents when her decision on the application was made. [72645]

Yvette Cooper: I believe the hon. Member is referring to a planning application for a new ground for Shrewsbury Town Football Club at Oteley Road, Sutton, Shrewsbury. The application was approved by Shrewsbury and Atcham borough council in September 2003. I understand the local planning authority did not refer the case at the time to the Secretary of State to consider whether to call it in for his own decision, as the authority considered the application was in accordance with the terms of the adopted local plan. It was for the borough council as local planning authority to take into account the views of local residents when determining the application.

Thames Gateway

Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list the funds which have been distributed to projects within the Medway local authority area through the Thames Gateway project. [74721]

Yvette Cooper: A total of £100,370,330 from the 2003-08 Thames Gateway budget, has been allocated for projects in the Medway local authority area. A list of these projects is tabled below. Combined, these projects are forecast to lever in over £1.5 billion of private sector investment into the Medway area.

This investment will support the delivery of over 2,500 homes and 900 jobs at Rochester and Strood Riversides; three universities and a college have combined to share a new campus, at Chatham Maritime, increasing full time education student places from 2000 in 2002 to 10,000 by 2010; a new innovation centre will help to retain and create up to 2,000 high quality jobs. Working with our partners in Medway Renaissance, we are also investing in town centre improvements at Chatham and Gillingham and a series of community and environmental improvements projects that will benefit the people of Medway.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Career Advice

Anne Moffat: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what measures the Government are taking to improve career advice for girls. [74140]

Meg Munn: The Youth Matters: Next Steps document, published on 8 March 2006, sets out proposals for improved information, advice and guidance for young people. It recognises the importance of access to individually-tailored information, advice and guidance that challenges rather than perpetuates traditional stereotypes.

Central to improved information, advice and guidance will be the development of quality standards. The challenging of traditional stereotypes will be included in these standards. The Equal Opportunities Commission is represented on the steering group that is supporting the development of the standards.

Ethnic Minority Staff

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what assessment she has made of the employment of staff from ethnic minorities in the public sector in Northamptonshire. [72931]

Meg Munn [holding answer 22 May 2006]: No assessment of the situation in Northamptonshire has been undertaken.

Under the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000 public authorities are required to comply with the Employment Duty. This means that they have to monitor, by racial group, the numbers of staff in post and the number of applicants for employment, training and promotion. Where an authority has 150 or more full-time staff they are also required to monitor a number of other indicators. Authorities are required to publish the results of this monitoring annually.

The Commission for Racial Equality (CRE) guidance states that authorities should use the information gathered to see if there are differences in the way racial groups are treated; to investigate the underlying reasons for the differences; and to deal with any unfairness, disadvantage or possible discrimination. The CRE are also responsible for enforcing the Duty.

Financial Planning

Anne Moffat: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps the Government are taking to encourage women to plan their financial lives and save for their retirement. [74139]

Meg Munn: On 25 May the Government published a White Paper "Security in retirement: towards a new pensions system" The proposals in this paper set out a new structure for the UK pensions system for the long term. It is designed to enable people to take responsibility for their retirement by saving more.

The Government will be taking forward a number of measures in the White Paper to encourage women plan for their retirement:

supported private saving by helping people to make better informed choices about their retirement, introducing a range of pension forecasts to give individuals an understanding of the income they are likely to receive in retirement.

Abolition of the minimum contribution conditions in basic State Pension and awarding new credits for parenting and caring to ensure such contributions are rewarded through the state pension in the same way as paid contributions.

Measures to make it easier to save will be supported by a higher, fairer state pension linked to earnings. This will give a foundation on which to build, and enable them to have confidence that their personal saving will be worthwhile.

Goods and Services (Sexual Discrimination)

John Bercow: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality when she plans to introduce regulations to implement the relevant provisions of the Equality Act 2006 to outlaw sexual discrimination in the provision of goods and services. [75546]

Meg Munn: We published a consultation paper in March setting out proposals for regulations that will prohibit discrimination on the grounds of sexual orientation in the provision of goods, facilities, services and public functions. The consultation period ended on 5 June and our intention is to lay the sexual orientation regulations before the House after the summer recess.

Pension Schemes (Carers)

Ms Abbott: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what discussions she is planning to have with colleagues in the Department for Work and Pensions about ensuring that women's caring role is recognised and supported in pension schemes. [75577]

Meg Munn: I have had regular meetings with colleagues in the Department for Work and Pensions throughout the development of the pension reforms. I am pleased that the White Paper "Security in Retirement: Towards a new Pension System" has proposals to modernise home responsibilities protection and introduce a new carer's credit to improve state pension outcomes for women and carers. These two measures, allied to the whole package of pension reforms, will deliver a full basic state pension to 270,000 more women by 2020, and extend state second pension to an estimated 1 million people—over 90 per cent. of whom are women.

In proposing personal accounts for private saving we will introduce a new, low cost savings vehicle with easy access for all. Those who are not in paid work will be able to save in a personal account on an opt in basis.

People Trafficking

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps she has taken to promote schemes designed to help victims of trafficking outside London. [74570]

Meg Munn: I work closely with Home Office colleagues to ensure that provision for victims is sensitive to women's needs.

The UK is sympathetic to the needs of victims of trafficking. The POPPY Scheme, run by Eaves Housing for Women, already provides a protective environment in which victims can receive care and support whilst deciding whether to assist the authorities. It is a national scheme and takes referrals from across the country.

The Home Office's new £2.4 million funding agreement with Eaves Housing allows for, among other things, the first ever specialist national outreach service in the UK for victims trafficked for sexual exploitation.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Arms Trade Treaty

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he plans to take to increase his Department's efforts, resources and capacity to deliver an Arms Trade Treaty. [74444]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to my previous responses to two parliamentary questions on 4 May 2006, Official Report, column 1747 and 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1453W.

British Military Hardware Sales

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what British military hardware has been sold to the United Arab Emirates in the last five years. [74485]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government publish detailed information on their export licensing decisions by destination, in their annual and quarterly reports on strategic export controls. Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs collects some data on exports of military list items which is published, by destination, in the annual reports.

The Government's annual reports are available from the Libraries of both Houses, and the quarterly reports, from the DTI export control organisation website:

http://www.dti.gov.uk/europeandtrade/strategic-export-control/

We expect to publish the 2005 annual report by June 2006.

Coal Supply

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what projections his Department has made of future levels of (a) British deep-mined and (b) imported coal supply. [74712]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department does not make separate projections of British deep-mined, surface-mined and imported coal supply. The most recent projections of primary energy demands to 2020, including solid fuels, were published in February 2006 and are available at:

www.dti.gov.uk/files/file26363.pdf

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the need for a long-term supply of indigenous deep-mined coal as part of the UK's future energy mix. [74713]

Malcolm Wicks: UK coal production and the place of coal as a generating feedstock are being considered in the Energy Review. The Energy Review will report in the summer.

Energy Distribution

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the adequacy of regional distribution of (a) electricity, (b) gas and (c) heat networks for the implementation of the Government's microgeneration strategy. [74805]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has undertaken some assessment of the impact that increased levels of electricity generating microgeneration will have on the distribution network. This research suggests that the network will not experience problems below penetration levels of 50 per cent. We have not undertaken any similar analysis of the gas and heat networks.

An important characteristic of mot microgeneration technologies is that they can provide a "stand-alone" source of heat and/or electricity with no requirement for connection to electricity, gas or heat networks.

Energy Review

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer to question 72558, which external assessments of the total life-cycle carbon costs of nuclear power will be taken account of in the review of energy policy. [74790]

Malcolm Wicks: The studies that will be considered include:

Japan Central Research Institute (1996)
Sweden, Vattenfall (1999 and 2000)
Finland, A Kivisto
Germany, Institute for Applied Ecology (1997)
Storm van Leeuven and Smith (SLS) (2001 to 2005)
Torness—a study for BE by AEA Technology (2005)
EC ExternE (2003)

Household Energy Supplies

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of houses in the UK which do not require external energy sources. [75601]

Malcolm Wicks: We do not have an estimate of the number of houses in the UK that do not require any external energy source (i.e. receive neither gas nor electricity from the national grids). However, a study we commissioned from the Energy Saving Trust suggests that at the end of 2004 there were around 82,000 microgeneration installations in the UK, which means that at least 82,000 dwellings and community buildings are not wholly reliant on external energy sources.

Nuclear Decommissioning

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority in respect of the adequacy of skills available to implement the nuclear decommissioning and waste management strategy approved in April by his Department and the devolved Administrations. [74803]

Malcolm Wicks: The NDA addresses the level and adequacy of skills available to deliver its mission in the context of the Life Time Plans which each of its sites has in place. (The Life Time Plans set out the total scope of activities e.g. project scope, schedule, and cost which need to be undertaken over each site's planned lifetime to bring the site to its proposed end state). The process is that each site produces a skills strategy which, as a minimum, covers the following areas: key skills required in the short, medium, and long term; identification of skills gaps and links to the migration of the existing work force; sensitivities relating to demographic change; recruitment and training strategies; links with training providers; succession planning; and supply chain strategies for long-term availability of skills. The sites' skills strategies are analysed and developed by the NDA to ensure the appropriate supporting infrastructure is in place, and that any key issues or skills gaps are identified.

Severn Barrage Project

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the merits of a Severn Barrage Project. [73855]

Malcolm Wicks: Between 1978 and 1994 the Government supported the most comprehensive programme of research and development on tidal energy in the world at an overall cost in excess of £20 million. Those studies considered tidal barrage energy schemes at a number of potential sites, the largest being in the Severn estuary. The results of the Severn Barrage study were reported in Energy Paper 57 (ISBN 0 11 412952 5).

The most recent study of the Severn scheme was carried out by the Severn Tidal Power Group in 2002 and available at www.dti.gov.uk/files/file15363.pdf?pubpdfdload=02%2F644

The Department is currently part way through an energy review that will consider all options and opportunities for ensuring we meet our medium and longer-term energy goals.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Official Residences (Council Tax)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which Government Department was responsible for making council tax payments to Westminster city council for his official residence in Admiralty House from 1997 to 2005. [56188]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The Ministry of Defence was responsible for making council tax payments to Westminster city council for my official residence in 1997-98. In 2002-03 responsibility for making those payments rested with the Cabinet Office. In the years since, responsibility has rested with the then Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions or the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Bushmen of the Kalahari

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the welfare of the Bushmen of the Kalahari since their rehousing by the Government of Botswana; what representations the Government have made to the Government of Botswana on this issue; and if she will make a statement. [75487]

Mr. Hoon: Since relocation, approximately 2,000 San (Bushmen) from the Central Kalahari Game Reserve have had enhanced access to water, medical facilities and education. There are differing views among the San communities as to whether these benefits outweigh those of their former lifestyle. Although there have been no representations at ministerial level, our high commission in Gaborone has encouraged both the San and their representatives and the Government of Botswana to address these issues, through a process of dialogue.

European Defence Agency

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are to change the number of members of staff working for the European Defence Agency. [73929]

Mr. Ingram: I have been asked to reply.

The European Defence Agency's 2006 budget was agreed in November 2005 on the basis of ninety-four staff. To date, no recruiting action has been taken on two of these posts. These will remain unfilled until the Agency's Steering Board decides that they are required. Any plans to change the number of staff working for the Agency in future years will be considered when the Steering Board approves the 2007 budget and the Agency's Council, acting by unanimity, approves the 3 year financial framework for the Agency later this year.

Guantanamo Bay

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will place in the Library a copy of the response to the letter which her predecessor wrote to Dr. Condoleezza Rice requesting the release of Mr. Bisher Al-Rawi from Guantanamo Bay on non-humanitarian grounds. [74806]

Dr. Howells: The US Government replied to my right hon. Friend the former Foreign Secretary's (Jack Straw) letter on 27 April. However, since the response is part of ongoing confidential Government to Government correspondence, the release of the reply would be likely to prejudice international relations and adversely affect the handling of this case. For these reasons I am unable to place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Iran

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations her Department has made to the Government of Iran regarding the treatment of Baha'is in that country. [75173]

Dr. Howells: We continue to have serious concerns about the situation of religious minorities in Iran. We have received numerous reports of discrimination against those wishing to practise minority faiths, including the Baha'i community. Ministers and officials have pressed the Iranian authorities on many occasions to address the intimidation and discrimination suffered by Iranian Baha'is. At our suggestion, the EU Presidency did so on 31 January and on 11 April. Most recently the EU raised the matter on 29 May. On 10 April, EU Foreign Ministers underlined their

"continued concerns about the human rights situation in Iran, in particular regarding the situation of Baha'is".

We have also taken action at the UN. We were pleased that all EU countries co-sponsored a UN General Assembly resolution on human rights in Iran in December last year. This expressed serious concern at, inter alia,

"the escalation and increased frequency of discrimination and other human rights violations against the Baha'i, including cases of arbitrary arrest and detention, the denial of freedom of religion or of publicly carrying out communal affairs, the disregard of property rights, the destruction of sites of religious importance, the suspension of social, educational and community-related activities and the denial of access to higher education, employment, pensions, adequate housing and other benefits".

We expect Iran to uphold freedom of religion and belief in accordance with its international obligations under Article 18 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the political situation in Sri Lanka. [74777]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to the right hon. Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague) on 5 June 2006, Official Report, columns 341-342W.

United States

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to her answer of 6 February 2006, Official Report, columns 784-85W to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hallam (Mr. Clegg) on the United States, whether UK responsibilities or obligations would be engaged by the passage through UK (a) territory and (b) overseas territories of a plane which was travelling directly to a third country in order to conduct a rendition, but on which no detainee was present. [75016]

Dr. Howells: The extent of any engagement of the UK's responsibilities and obligations would depend on the facts and circumstances of each case.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Election Turnout

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what assessment the Electoral Commission has made of the implications for voter participation of extended polling time in elections. [75184]

Peter Viggers: In its review of election timetables in 2003, the Electoral Commission recommended standardising the hours of polling for all elections at those used for parliamentary general elections and other national elections, to increase participation and reduce confusion between local and parliamentary elections.

The Government agreed with this recommendation and the standardised polling hours of 7 am to 10 pm applied generally at local government elections in England for the first time in May 2006. The Commission informs me that it is collecting data from returning officers on levels of voting during the additional polling hours, and intends to publish the results of its analysis in late summer 2006.

The Commission has also evaluated a number of electoral pilot schemes trialling extended polling hours at local elections since 2002. In these, between 5 and 10 per cent. of people voting in person at polling stations chose to take advantage of the extended polling hours.

PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Discussions

Mr. Ames: To ask the Prime Minister on what occasions since 1 January 2004 he has discussed the situation in Iraq with the US President; and if he will make a statement. [73319]

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Prime Minister what matters he expects to discuss at his forthcoming meeting in Washington DC with President George Bush. [74434]

The Prime Minister: I regularly have discussions on a wide range of issues with President Bush, including on Iraq.

I also refer the hon. Members to the press conference I held with President Bush on 25 May 2006. A transcript of this is available on the No. 10 website and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Allowances Rules

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will take steps to review the rules which prevent payment of carer's allowance and bereavement allowance at the same time. [75488]

Mr. Plaskitt: It is a basic principle of the social security system that only one benefit at a time can be paid for income maintenance and there are no plans to change this rule.

Bereavement allowance is an income maintenance benefit for those who have lost a spouse who had worked and therefore contributed to the national insurance scheme, whilst carer's allowance provides a measure of income maintenance for those forgoing the opportunity of full-time employment to care for a severely disabled person who is entitled to attendance allowance or the middle or highest rate of the disability living allowance care component.

In practice, where there is entitlement to both benefits, bereavement allowance as a contributory benefit takes precedence. However, where the rate of bereavement allowance is less than the rate of carer's allowance, an amount of carer's allowance can be paid to make up the difference. Even where no carer's allowance can be paid, underlying entitlement to the allowance gives access to the carer premium in income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit, and to the carer's additional amount in pension credit.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Arm's-Length Bodies

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many arm's-length bodies have been (a) established and (b) dissolved by each Government Department in the Province in each of the last 10 years. [74573]

Mr. Hanson: The tables show the number of non-departmental public bodies established and dissolved by each Government Department for which central records are available between 1997 and March 2006.

Cars (Biofuels)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cars in Northern Ireland run on biofuels. [37605]

David Cairns: Information supplied by manufacturers of cars about propulsion fuel types is captured when cars are registered. Biofuel is not one of the fuel types reported by manufacturers and accordingly no information about the number of these vehicles is held on the vehicle register.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will introduce a chewing gum tax in Northern Ireland. [49035]

Paul Goggins: I have no plans to introduce a chewing gum tax in Northern Ireland.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the Answer of 24 October 2005, Official Report, column 88W, on contaminated land, what sites in Belfast the Department has identified as contaminated from former land use. [52878]

David Cairns: The Waste and Contaminated Land (NI) Order 1997 provides a statutory definition of contaminated land, based on the risks of significant harm to human health and the environment, or pollution of controlled waters given the current land use and environmental setting.

The Department of the Environment has not identified any former industrial sites in Belfast as contaminated land. Its Land Use Database has identified locations where former industrial use may have caused contamination, but does not quantify the areas of land involved. The Department of the Environment plans to update the Database over the next 12 months.

Crosshill Quarry

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Department of the Environment in Northern Ireland gave authority to the contractor for the cutting of the railway carriages in Crosshill Quarry. [33565]

David Cairns: The Department of the Environment in Northern Ireland was not required to give authority to the contractor for the cutting of the railway carriages in Crosshill Quarry.

Environment and Heritage Service was under no requirement to take a direct involvement in the cutting and reburial of the carriages.

When the work commenced, Antrim borough council was the waste regulatory body for Crosshill Quarry. EHS (on behalf of the Department) did not take on this responsibility until the introduction of the Waste Management Licensing Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003 on 19 December 2003.

Curricula

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will commission research into the experience of other European countries of the use of the teaching and learning methods embodied in the Early Years Enriched Curriculum Project in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [74989]

Maria Eagle: Throughout the development of the Foundation Curriculum, which includes the enriched curriculum for children in Years 1 and 2, the Council for Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA) took account of international and national research. The council commissioned a literature review from QUB Research Team which was submitted in September 2001. This literature review drew attention to good practice in early years education and international comparisons in relation to such factors as performance, literacy, numeracy, and emotional and social development.

Dangerous Wild Animals

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations his Department has received regarding the possible introduction of a dangerous wild animals Act in the last three years. [55153]

David Cairns: The Department of the Environment has no record of any representation relating to dangerous wild animals in the last three years.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the guidelines are for filling vacancies in (a) each Department in Northern Ireland and (b) the Northern Ireland Office while a grievance procedure relating to the filling of the same vacancy is ongoing. [74478]

Mr. Hanson: The filling of specific vacancies is generally carried out through the "Trawl" procedure whereby individuals apply for posts against specified criteria. If an individual is short listed out they have 10 days to appeal. Once the appeal decision has been made the competition can proceed.

There is no distinction on the operation of "Trawls" between Northern Ireland Civil Service Departments and the Northern Ireland Office.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff in (a) each Department and (b) the Northern Ireland Office did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represented of the total number of staff in each case. [75084]

Mr. Hanson: The information below shows the number of staff, by Department, awarded a box 4 or box 5 in 2003-04 and 2004-05. Information on box markings for 2005-06 will not be available until after December 2006.

Figures for Departments which have less than five box 4/5 markings have not been included on the basis of confidentiality.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dog attacks on people have been reported in each of the last five years in Northern Ireland, broken down by local authority. [52989]

Drug Addicts

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many registered drug addicts there are in each (a) local health authority and (b) ward in Northern Ireland, listed in descending order; what percentage of the total this represents in each case; and how much was spent on drug addiction services by each local health authority in 2004-05. [55547]

Paul Goggins: The Northern Ireland Addicts Index Database holds information on all those persons registered in concurrence with the Misuse of Drugs (Notification of and Supply to Addicts) (Northern Ireland) Regulations 1973. It is based on a specific list of drugs, not necessarily all those which are used by addicts, and is dependent on GPs and other doctors submitting the relevant information. It does not represent the full total of those currently in treatment for problem drug use in Northern Ireland. The latest figures from the Database shows that in 2004-05 there were 239 'registered drug addicts'. Their distribution by Health and Social Services Board (HSSB) is provided in the following table.

Registered addicts by Health and Social Services Board 2005

	Number	Percentage
Northern HSSB	102	43
Eastern HSSB	97	41
Western HSSB	20	8
Southern HSSB	15	6
Total	[1]239	100

[1] This figure includes five individuals for whom Health and Social Services Board data could not be established.

The data collected for the database do not facilitate description of those on the register by council ward or parliamentary constituency.

In respect of expenditure on addiction services, the four Health and Social Services Boards do not differentiate between those receiving treatment for problem alcohol and drug misuse and co-dependency (both substances).

For 2004-05 the four Health and Social Services Boards report expenditure on combined drug and alcohol addiction services as follows.

Health and Social Services Board	Expenditure (£)
Northern	1,501,412
Southern	766,935
Eastern	3,069,771
Western	1,836,715
Total	7,174,883

Fuel Poverty

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many households in each (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) district council area in Northern Ireland are recognised as fuel poor. [75591]

Mr. Hanson: The 2004 Interim House Condition Survey collected fuel poverty information on a Northern Ireland wide basis and due to the small sample size it is not possible to break down the information into parliamentary constituency or district council area. This indicates that the overall number of households in fuel poverty has reduced from 203,000 to 153,530 with the number of vulnerable households decreasing from 181,000 to 126,100 for the same period.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made with the implementation of the Northern Ireland Fuel Poverty Strategy since its launch; and when the action plan is expected to be published. [75590]

Mr. Hanson: 'Ending Fuel Poverty: A Strategy for Northern Ireland' was launched in November 2004 and since then approximately £150 million has been spent on programmes to directly tackle fuel poverty. I have also established the Northern Ireland Fuel Poverty Advisory Group and the Interdepartmental Group on Fuel Poverty to monitor and review the Fuel Poverty Strategy and ensure a partnership approach to tackling fuel poverty.

I will launch the Interdepartmental Group on Fuel Poverty Report in early July and this will detail the action plan for tackling fuel poverty in 2006-07.

Gaelic Athletic Association

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he has received a request from the Gaelic Athletic Association to meet to discuss the draft PPS 14. [75498]

David Cairns: Mr. Danny Murphy, Secretary to Ulster Council GAA, wrote to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on 5 April 2006 to express the organisation's concerns on the introduction of draft PPS 14 and to ask for a meeting. My hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Woodward) replied to this letter as the responsible Minister regretting that heavy diary commitments prevented him meeting members of the Ulster Council in person. He advised that views expressed in the letter would be recorded as a representation and considered and that officials would be pleased to provide clarification on the draft planning policy statement if requested. No subsequent request was received.

Geddis Farm

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take action to stop the fire burning at the Geddis' Farm in Helen's Bay, North Down; and what research has been undertaken by his Department into the environmental damage caused by this fire. [46538]

David Cairns: The legal responsibility for stopping the fire burning at Geddis' Farm rests with North Down borough council. This can be achieved by use of Article 28 of the Waste and Contaminated Land (NI) Order 1997.

The Department of the Environment's Environment and Heritage Service (EHS) is able to take prosecution action for the treatment of waste on an unlicensed site. EHS initiated a prosecution case against Mr. Geddis for the unauthorised disposal of waste. The case was heard on 15 February 2006 and Mr. Geddis was found guilty, in his absence. However, he subsequently was able to convince the court to set aside his convictions because he claimed that he had contacted the Public Prosecution Service to request an adjournment. A date for a new hearing has yet to be arranged.

EHS has not undertaken any research into the environmental damage caused by the fire.

Landfill

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what measures are being put in place to help businesses in Northern Ireland reduce the amount of waste they dispose of to landfill; [53054]

(2) what steps he is taking to assist businesses in Northern Ireland to meet the obligations imposed under Government and EU Environmental policies and strategies. [53055]

David Cairns: I would refer the hon. Member to the answer given during the Grand Committee debate on 7 February 2006, Official Report, column 12. My noble Friend, Lord Rooker will write to the hon. Gentleman in response to his supplementary question on landfill tax revenue.

Limavady Learning Partnership

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) when the Department of Education will make available (a) resources and (b) guidance to Limavady Learning Partnership to enable it to implement a strategic plan to deal with widening public choice and tackling social disadvantage; [73205]

(2) if he will ensure that the Limavady Learning Partnership receives the required resources and guidance from the Department of Education to enable it to implement its strategic plan on widening pupil choice and tackling social disadvantage. [75005]

Maria Eagle: The details of schools to be offered funding for Extended School activities through Theme 1 of the Children and Young People's Funding Package was announced on 6 June 2006. I have no plans through Extended Schools to fund organisations other than schools, though schools may, if they wish, pool their resources to form clusters or partnerships. A toolkit containing guidance for Extended Schools is also being made available. Not all the schools in the Limavady Learning Partnership will benefit from the announcement, but I would encourage those schools not selected to consider using some of their allocation from the £10 million additional funding package for schools that I announced on 5 June 2006 to support collaborative working.

Marine Pollution

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which areas of the Northern Ireland coast are judged to be most at risk from marine pollution. [40993]

David Cairns: The Environment and Heritage Service (EHS) has recently undertaken a risk assessment of international and short seas shipping, associated port operations and past incidents in the seas surrounding the Northern Ireland coastline in order to identify the areas of the coastline which are most at risk. This work indicated that the areas most at risk are Rathlin Island, the coastline from the Gobbins in Co Antrim to Ballymacormick Point in Co Down and from Donaghadee to Portavogie.

Mournes National Park

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made on the Mournes National Park project. [43717]

David Cairns: It is planned to consult at the end of 2007 on draft primary legislation that would provide a framework for the designation of national parks generally in Northern Ireland. In parallel with this, work specific to progressing the proposal for a Mournes National Park is in hand and the Mourne National Park working party plans to consult later this year on a proposed park boundary.

Moy Park Group

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) financial and (b) other support has been provided to Ferne Foods Limited by (i) the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment,
(ii) the Department of Employment and Learning and (iii) Invest Northern Ireland since it was taken over by the Moy Park Group. [73512]

Maria Eagle: Ferne Foods Limited in Lisnaskea became a joint venture with Moy Park Limited in 1994. Ferne Foods Limited was offered selective financial assistance from IDB in 1996 of £487,820. This was fully drawn down by 1999 and the Financial Assistance Agreement is no longer active. On 15 occasions from 1998 to 2004 Ferne Foods Limited has taken part in market awareness visits and group stands at exhibitions with Invest NI. IDB offered assistance towards training and development in 1996 of £159,510 of which £139,410 was drawn down. The Department of Employment and Learning supports all employers who request support by providing a job brokering services and suitable training programmes where appropriate.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment was informed of the Moy Park Group's decision to close the Ferne Foods factory in Fermanagh. [73513]

Maria Eagle: Invest NI was informed on 18 May 2006 that a 90 day consultation period was announced for the Moy Park Group Lisnaskea plant and that the future of the plant is in severe doubt. Invest NI has not been informed by Moy Park Group that a decision to close the plant has been made.

Northern Ireland Roads Service Magazine

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost was of (a) publication and (b) distribution of the Northern Ireland Roads Service magazine, The Link: Investing in the Road Network of 30 May; and how many copies were printed. [75509]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Roads Service, Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, has been asked to write to my hon. Friend in response to this question.

Letter from Malcolm McKibbin, dated 7 June 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding what the cost of (a) publication and (b) distribution was of the Northern Ireland Roads Service magazine, The Link: Investing in the Road Network of 30th May; and how many copies were printed.

As this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service, I have been asked to reply.

Roads Service recently produced a 32-page information supplement called 'The Link' on the M1/Westlink scheme. This is one of the largest and most high profile schemes ever undertaken by Roads Service and has attracted a huge level of public interest and an equally high level of demand from the media for information about the scheme. The supplement was distributed to homes across Northern Ireland in late May, through the 3 main newspapers.

Road Service produced the supplement in house with the assistance of the Departmental Graphic Design Unit and Press Office, and the only costs incurred were for printing and insertion into the three main local daily papers. Some 206,000 copies were printed at a cost of £50,118, and associated distribution costs were approximately £8,500, which equates to just over 28 pence per copy.

The supplement was a significant publication and forms part of our communication strategy to provide information to the public on this £104 million scheme.

Petrol/Electric Cars

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many hybrid petrol/electric cars have been sold in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; and what grants are available to those who wish to buy such vehicles. [37589]

David Cairns: The number of new hybrid electric/petrol cars registered in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years is:

2001	1
2002	2
2003	2
2004	17
2005 (to 16 November)	52

UK-wide Government grants have previously been available under the PowerShift programme to those wishing to purchase certain hybrid vehicles. The programme is due to be replaced by the Low Carbon Car programme which is based on a technology neutral approach. Once cleared by the European Commission under state aid rules, the programme will provide grants towards the purchase of cars with particularly low carbon emissions. This is likely to include a number of hybrid vehicles and will be funded by the Department for Transport for England, Northern Ireland and Wales, and by the Scottish Executive for Scotland.

Plastic (Recycling)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what tonnage of plastic was (a) recovered and (b) recycled in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [37595]

David Cairns: The Department does not hold nor collate figures for the total amount of plastic that is recycled or recovered in Northern Ireland on an annual basis. Figures for separately collated municipal plastic sent for recycling in 2002, 2003 and 2004 were 724 tonnes, 1,221 tonnes and 1,712 tonnes respectively. This represents an increase of 130 per cent. over three years. Data are not available for previous years.

Data on the amount of plastic actually reprocessed or recycled in Northern Ireland are limited to accredited reprocessors. One of these businesses has recently secured investment to increase the tonnage of waste plastic bottles it reprocesses to over 4,600 tonnes per annum.

Pollution

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans are in place to deal with a major pollution incident in Northern Ireland. [40992]

David Cairns: Environment and Heritage Service (EHS) has plans and resources in place in order to respond to a major pollution incident. During the year EHS runs two shoreline booming exercises in order to test its resource and command and control functions in response to a major coastal water pollution incident. The latest exercise, in mid-2005, was designed to test the agency's ability to protect the River Roe. In 2003, EHS took part in a major national coastal pollution response exercise in Lough Foyle, coordinated by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA), which was designed to test the National Contingency Plan.

EHS plans are currently undergoing an extensive review and this is due to be completed in the summer of 2006. As part of this, EHS is a partner in a European Union funded project designed to develop effective contingency plans which minimise the risk from coastal pollution using best practice from four European partners.

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether protocols are in place to work with authorities in (a) Scotland and (b) the Irish Republic in the case of a major pollution incident in Northern Ireland. [40994]

David Cairns: The Environment and Heritage Service (EHS) Water Pollution Incident response procedures describe a standard approach of response to a water pollution incident and this includes the agency's lines of communication in the event of a cross border/national boundary incident. As an example of cross border cooperation, EHS participated in a national exercise in Lough Foyle in 2003 which was designed to test the National Contingency Plan involving a cross border response to a major water pollution incident.

EHS is currently a member of an environmental emergency planning group involving the Environment Agency in England and Wales, and the Scottish Environmental Protection Agency. This group meets regularly to discuss all matters involving the tri-agency response and preparedness to incidents of water pollution.

PSNI

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time officers are serving in the Police Service of Northern Ireland. [15256]

Paul Goggins: The numbers of officers serving as of 20 July 2005 in the requested ranks are.

	Number
PSNI regular officers	7,458
Reserve constable full-time	1,205
Reserve constable part-time	753
Constable part-time[1]	152

[1] New title for officers recruited as new intake of part-time officers.

Psychology Degrees

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many psychology degree course places were available in the Province in 2005-06; and if he will make a statement. [74646]

Maria Eagle: Information from Queen's University Belfast and the University of Ulster indicates that there was provision for 368 undergraduate places and 55 postgraduate places for entry onto psychology degree courses in 2005-06.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many students will commence psychology degree courses in the Province over each of the next five years. [74648]

Maria Eagle: Queen's University Belfast and the University of Ulster have indicated that they currently plan to make provision for the following number of students to commence psychology degree courses over each of the next five years:

	Undergraduate	Postgraduate
2006-07	346	120
2007-08	425	114
2008-09	452	124
2009-10	377	120
2010-11	377	120
Total	1,977	598

The actual intakes are a matter for the universities and are subject to change.

Railway Security

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions the railway line between Lisburn and Portadown has been closed because of security alerts in each of the last 10 years. [74477]

David Cairns: Translink advises that it does not have exact figures for closures of specific sections of the railway network readily available. However the information available on the number of Enterprise and cross border services disrupted by security alerts since 2001 is as follows:

	Disruptions
2001	694
2002	76
2003	130
2004	74
2005	90
2006	8

Most of these disruptions would have been caused by alerts between Lisburn and Portadown.

Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to his answer of 13 February 2006, Official Report, columns 1533-4W, on rates, when he will place in the Library a copy of (a) the internal guidance on the assessment and valuation of domestic properties and (b) a full list of data fields relating to value significant codes and property attributes. [66674]

Mr. Hanson: Internal guidance on the assessment and valuation of domestic properties and a full list of data fields relating to value significant codes and property attributes have now been placed in the Library.

Road Safety

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the discussions which have taken place between the Road Safety Steering Group and the equivalent body in the Republic of Ireland on a north/south approach to road safety on the island of Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [54589]

David Cairns: While there have been no formal discussions between the Road Safety Steering Group and the equivalent body in the Republic of Ireland on a north/south approach to road safety, there has continued to be a high level of cooperation on road safety matters.

Since a previous response on 23 November 2005, Official Report, columns 2013-14W, the ninth joint road safety campaign tackling drink driving, has been launched.

On 9 February 2006 letters of agreement were exchanged between the UK and Ireland to put in place arrangements allowing driving disqualifications to be recognised in both countries regardless of where the offences took place. This will allow the worst offenders, who would otherwise be escaping the rule of law, to be removed from the road. At the same time a commitment was also made that officials would explore possible measures for dealing with driving offences at levels below that of disqualification.

Roads Service

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many properties the Roads Service has compulsorily purchased for future road schemes in each of the last 20 years, broken down by division in Northern Ireland; [52473]

(2) what requirements are in place for the maintenance of property compulsorily purchased by the Roads Service before completion of the relevant road scheme; [52474]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 20 February 2006.

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland two Parliamentary Questions regarding compulsory purchased properties owned by Roads Service:

how many properties the Roads Service has compulsorily purchased for future road schemes in each of the last 20 years, broken down by division in Northern Ireland; and what requirements are in place for the maintenance of property compulsorily purchased by the Roads Service before completion of the relevant road scheme.

As these issues fall within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service I have been asked to reply.

The following table details the number of properties compulsorily purchased or purchased under blight by Roads Service in each of the last 20 years, which haven't yet been used for a proposed road scheme.

The day-to-day management of property acquired by Roads Service in advance of road schemes is carried out by the Department for Social Development's Lands Service, under the terms of a Service Level Agreement (currently under review). The term 'management' as defined in the Service Level Agreement includes the letting of land, collection of rent, rent review, rent accounting and maintenance of property. It also includes the supervision of derelict land and buildings to ensure that they do not constitute a danger to the public and the safeguarding of vacant land against vandals.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many (a) properties and (b) gardens have been bought by the Roads Service in the Shandon Park area of East Belfast in each of the last 25 years; and on what date each site was (i) purchased, (ii) last maintained and (iii) completed; [52475]

(2) how much the Roads Service has spent purchasing property in the Shandon Park area of East Belfast in connection with the proposed link road between Ascot Park and Shandon Park. [52476]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 20 February 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland two Parliamentary Questions regarding the Shandon Park area:

how many (a) properties and (b) gardens have been bought by the Roads Service in the Shandon Park area of East Belfast in each of the last 25 years and on what date each site was (i) purchased, (ii) last maintained and (iii) completed; and how much the Roads Service has spent purchasing property in the Shandon Park area of East Belfast in connection with the proposed link road between Ascot Park and Shandon Park.

As these issues fall within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service, I have been asked to reply.

By way of background, I should explain that the proposed widening of the A55 at Knock Road is included in the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan and Roads Service's Major Works Preparation Pool. The two detailed options still being considered are a dual carriageway or two lanes in both directions with right turning lanes at junctions. Both of these options currently include a link road from Ascot Park to Shandon Park. We plan to present these options at a public consultation day in spring 2006.

In the past 25 years, 2 properties/gardens were acquired by Roads Service for the proposed A55 widening scheme—number 2 Shandon Park (purchased 23 May 1984) and number 4 Shandon Park (purchased 7 December 1987). Both these properties were subsequently demolished. In addition, 2 properties/gardens were acquired for the associated proposed link road from Ascot Park to Shandon Park—number 11 Shandon Park (purchased 17 November 1997) and number 13 Shandon Park (purchased 7 February 2003). The total cost for these two properties was £406,000.

The day-to-day management of property acquired by Roads Service in advance of road schemes is carried out by the Department for Social Development's Lands Service, under the terms of a Service Level Agreement (currently under review). This document, among other things, stipulates response times for reacting to maintenance problems.

DSD colleagues have advised that 11 and 13 Shandon Park were rented to tenants but vacated in January and February 2005 respectively. Unfortunately DSD was unsuccessful in its efforts to secure new tenants for them after advertising in the local press in June 2005.

I understand maintenance work has been ongoing at these properties. At 11 Shandon Park work was carried out between February and April 2005 with further work to be carried out this month. At 13 Shandon Park maintenance work was also carried out in June, July and September 2005 and in January 2006.

School Governor Training

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how much each education and library board in Northern Ireland has spent on school governor training in each of the last 10 years, broken down by (a) staff costs, (b) facility hire, (c) refreshments and (d) other expenses; [74383]

(2) how much each education and library board expects to spend in 2006-07 on training for school governors. [74384]

Maria Eagle: Records for all five education and library boards are only available for the four financial years 2002-03 to 2005-06. Figures for the Western Board will be forwarded when they become available on 12 June. Details of the actual expenditure for the other boards for these years plus the 2006-07 anticipated expenditure figures are as follows:

Sex Offenders

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to his answer of 11 May 2006, Official Report, column 541W, on sex offenders, for what offences each of the people whose addresses are not known to the police were convicted; whether any of these people have been assessed as a danger to public safety; and whether they were subject to supervision and control orders at the time they moved from their last known residential address. [74314]

Mr. Hanson: Sex offender compliance with the notification requirements of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 is high at around 97 per cent. in Northern Ireland. Notifications are recorded by the police on a live database and the number of unregistered offenders in breach of the requirements may therefore fluctuate on a daily basis. A search of the database to provide the information in reply to the hon. Gentleman's question showed that the number of offenders subject to the notification requirements and for whom the police did not have a current residential address has now reduced to 11. The offences for which these offenders had been convicted were as follows: three for rape; one attempted rape; two unlawful carnal knowledge; two indecent assault on a female; two making/possessing indecent images of children; one buggery. One person with a conviction for making/possessing indecent images of children was subject to probation supervision at the time they failed to comply with the notification requirements. Of the 11 offenders, four had been subject to a multi-agency risk assessment with no one being assessed as Category 3 High Risk i.e. someone whose sexual offending has been assessed as currently likely to lead them to seriously harm other people. PSNI pursue a policy of actively seeking to trace offenders who fail to comply with the notification requirements. This includes placing the offender's details on ViSOR and PNC to alert other UK police forces, checking with agencies such as social security to establish if the offender is claiming benefits etc, and providing full details to colleagues in An Garda Siochana who then complete similar checks for the offender in the Republic of Ireland.

Smithsonian Folklife Festival

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether discussions are planned between the Northern Ireland Office and the US consul's office in Belfast in advance of the Smithsonian Folklife Festival in Washington DC during July 2007. [74422]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure co-ordinates arrangements on behalf of the Northern Ireland Government in respect of its planning for the 2007 Smithsonian Folklife Festival and consequently has regular contact with staff of the US consulate.

Social Housing

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many social housing units are scheduled to be completed during 2006. [55789]

Mr. Hanson: The Department's completion statistics are based on the completion of each contract. Houses are not therefore counted as each one individually completes. In a contract that will not complete until 2006-07, the individual houses completed in 2005-06 have not been scored.

Some 1,200 new homes are currently programmed for 'contract completion' in 2005-06.

Social Security Agency Office (Bangor)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he plans (a) to replace and (b) to refurbish the Social Security Agency office on Hamilton Road in Bangor; what the timescale for any such rebuilding or refurbishment is; and if he will make a statement. [52378]

Mr. Hanson: The Bangor Social Security Office is included in the rollout of jobs and benefits offices as part of the welfare reform agenda. The Social Security Agency and Department of Employment and Learning are currently considering a number of proposals for provision of the new office. These include both the refurbishment of the existing office or a number of new build schemes. A decision is unlikely before May 2006.

A target date for completion will be agreed once contracts have been awarded.

Staff Development

[1] The Department of Employment and Learning does not hold the information broken down into separate away day and team building categories.

[2] Due to rounding figures may not add to totals.

Staff away days and team building exercises are key elements of the NICS and departmental business planning and staff development processes, which inter alia enable engagement with staff about strategic departmental priorities and targets, and the cascading of appropriate priorities to staff to help them in turn in developing their business area and personal work plans.

Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office have been taking steps to ensure that best value for money is obtained in this area. Departments will be making as much use as possible of civil service and wider public sector facilities in preference to private sector venues.

The Northern Ireland Office did not capture information at this level through financial coding for financial years 2003-04 and 2004-05 so to provide this would incur a disproportionate cost. A total of £57,243.92 was spent on development days in the Northern Ireland Office in financial year 2005-06. This equates to approximately £150 per head for the total number of staff involved. Development days are used for training and team building.

Such work included the refurbishment of most of the building in the early nineties leading up to the political talks in Northern Ireland.

Since 2003, projects undertaken and associated costs have been:

On this basis a participant is only ever counted once as starting employment, i.e. if a participant has a spell of unsubsidised employment after having a spell of subsidised employment, then the unsubsidised employment always takes priority.
[4] Figures for 2005-06 are not yet complete and will therefore be subject to revision.

Statistics on the most common type of job placement found by females are only maintained for training for work and are as follows:

Royal Irish Regiment

Mr. Hanson: The Start A Business Programme is available to entrepreneurs in Northern Ireland considering setting up a new business which will trade mainly within the Northern Ireland market.

Other programmes delivered by Invest NI are aimed at start-ups which will develop export markets and at companies who will trade globally.

HEALTH

Accident and Emergency Services

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1548W, on accident and emergency services, if she will list the accident and emergency departments within each type in 2005. [75060]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 5 June 2006]: Data are available at trust level rather than at departmental level. The available data have been placed in the Library.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines her Department provides for health trusts on the resultant costs to ambulance trusts of centralising emergency admissions in reduced numbers of accident and emergency departments. [74491]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The provision and location of accident and emergency services is a matter for local, not central, decision. In planning local provision of A and E services, health communities are expected to observe the general principle that all emergency and urgent care should be delivered as close to home as is compatible with clinical safety.

However, the Department does set national response time requirements for ambulance trusts. It is for ambulance trusts, together with primary care trusts as commissioners of ambulance services, to ensure that these requirements are met. This includes ensuring that sufficient numbers of vehicles and staff are available to respond to 999 calls within the national response times. Considerations such as journey times should be taken into account when doing so.

Guidance on commissioning ambulance services, "Driving change: Good practice guidelines for PCTs on commissioning arrangements for emergency ambulance services and non-emergency patient transport services", was issued by the Modernisation Agency in 2004. A copy of this document is available in the Library.

Agenda for Change

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what effect the national level discussions regarding the implementation of agenda for change for ambulance technicians and paramedics will have on services which have already made agenda for change evaluations for these professions locally. [72772]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national discussions are in respect of ambulance services that are experiencing difficulty in concluding the job evaluation of posts. They will not have a bearing on services that have concluded these issues.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many public responses there were to proposals for ambulance reorganisation in Staffordshire. [71220]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The strategic health authorities for the West Midlands region received 586 written responses from members of the public regarding the proposal to establish a single ambulance service for the West Midlands region, and 139 letters of inquiry relating to the consultation. In addition a number of petitions were received.

British Liver Trust

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to give financial support to the British Liver Trust for the three years from 1 April 2006; and what indications she has given to the trust of the funding it is likely to receive through section 64 grants. [73232]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has recently notified the British Liver Trust of the award of a grant of £40,000 per annum under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968, to support its central administrative costs from 1 April 2006 to 31 March 2009[1].

The BLT is already in receipt of a section 64 project grant of £50,000 per annum from 1 April 2005 to 31 March 2008[1] for provision of a hepatitis C and liver disease telephone helpline.

[1] Awards in subsequent years to 2006-07 are provisional and subject to the availability of funds approved by Parliament.

Childhood Obesity

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of whether there is a correlation between childhood obesity and obesity in later life. [74153]

Caroline Flint: Good quality scientific studies from relevant populations in the United States of America and the United Kingdom suggest that childhood obesity does appear to persist into adulthood. It should be noted that the majority of obese adults have gained weight during adulthood. However, a significant proportion of children will remain obese and become obese adults. The risk increases when one or both parents are obese. The likelihood of adult obesity also increases with the age of the child and their degree of obesity.

Children who are obese at the age of 13 are more likely to be obese as adults than children who are obese at age nine.

Epidemiological evidence has demonstrated critical times in childhood (perinatal, five to seven years and adolescence) when the development of obesity is more likely to persist into later life. The physiological mechanisms behind this are still being investigated.

The data underline the importance of a population based obesity prevention strategy for children for both immediate and long-term health benefits. It also demonstrates that the evidence based multi-component treatment of obesity should not be delayed until adulthood.

Children's Health Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what audits have been carried out on the management of common acute illnesses in children in the last five years. [67645]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department's Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) series provides a rolling audit of the national health service's management of illnesses requiring hospital treatment, including common acute illnesses in children. The publication tables for 2004-05 are now available on the HES online website at www.hesonline.gov.uk

Less serious common acute illnesses, accounting for around 80 per cent. of all episodes of illness in childhood, are managed by parents with support as required from the primary care team. This activity is not audited centrally.

Choose and Book

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on the choose and book infrastructure. [74055]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The cost of the central infrastructure of choose and book to date is shown in the following table.

Financial year	Cost (£ million)
2004-05	12.7
2005-06	6.3
2006-07[1]	2.9
Total spend[1]	21.9

[1] As at 30 May 2006

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact on the availability of NHS Stop Smoking Services of the time scale for fully implementing the choose and book programme. [67420]

Caroline Flint: The choose and book service is currently being rolled out nationally. It supports general practitioners in offering patient choice and enables patients to book first consultant-led out-patient appointments at times that are convenient to them.

NHS Stop Smoking Services are not currently bookable through the choose and book service, although the functionality of the service would allow it. A proposal relating to this matter is due to be considered by the national clinical reference panel, which advises the choose and book programme.

The national health service remains on target to meet its objective of 800,000 quits at four weeks over the three years to the end of March 2006. The latest figures were published in "Statistics on NHS Stop Smoking Services in England, April 2005 to September 2005", on 13 February 2006. A copy is available in the Library.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to collect centrally data on patients' decisions under the choose and book system; and if she will make a statement. [69045]

Caroline Flint: The choose and book service records the list of commissioned options made available to patients and the providers they ultimately book. This information forms part of patients' clinical records and is therefore available only to those with legitimate clinical relationships with particular patients.

Aggregated booking information may be used centrally to review trends in referrals to different provider organisations, but without breaching confidentiality in relation to individual patients.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for North-East Milton Keynes (Mr. Lancaster) of 25 April 2006, Official Report, column 1071W, on choose and book, for what reasons the statistics on the Connecting for Health website of 296,655 choose and book bookings to 25 April 2006 differ from those given in the answer. [71499]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The figure of 6,823,970, quoted in the answer of 25 April 2006, is the number of first consultant-led out-patient appointments booked in the period April 2005 to January 2006. The equivalent figure for the period April 2005 to March 2006 is 8,339,293. The majority of these appointments were not booked through the choose and book service.

The figure of 296,655, quoted on the NHS Connecting for Health website, is the number of appointments booked through the choose and book service as at 23 April 2006. As at 14 May 2006, the figure stands at 369,983.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 935W, on the choose and book system, how her Department will monitor whether an aspiration is being met. [73321]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department is establishing a data return to support primary care trusts (PCTs) in assessing whether aspiration payment criteria have been met for the choose and book element of the directed enhanced service (DES). The return will include utilisation data from the choose and book service and practice level referral data from PCTs.

It is for PCTs not the Department to monitor take up of the choice-related aspiration payment available under the DES.

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) biomedical scientists and (b) neurologists have been appointed to the advisory panel on myalgic encephamyelitis. [74707]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: An independent working group on chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis (CFS/ME) was established in 1998 to review the care and treatment of people with CFS/ME. It included representatives from a number of clinical disciplines, voluntary organisations and patients' groups and was disbanded when it finished its work in 2002.

A list of members was included in the group's final report, which is available in the Library and on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/05/95/06/04059506.pdf

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support her Department gives to chronic fatigue syndrome sufferers. [75027]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: People with chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis have access to the full range of health and social services support as outlined in the national service framework for long-term conditions. This includes:

joint health and social care plans that change over time and consider other needs such as housing, transport, benefits, education, careers advice, employment and leisure; access to a broad range of services, including rehabilitation, equipment, accommodation and personal care to help people live as independently as possible at home; and support to help people to work or take up other vocational opportunities.

Clinicians (Information)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to provide clinicians in NHS trusts and other facilities with access to objective analysis and advice on new drugs. [75506]

Andy Burnham: Doctors and other prescribers have access to a wide variety of information resources to support their prescribing. These include the British National Formularies, National Prescribing Centre advice and training, which includes coverage of new medicines, National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence clinical guidelines, National Electronic Library for Health, the various on-line databases and reference resources, such as Medline, and various academic and professional journals, for example the British Medical Journal.

Community Hospitals

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations her Department has received from (a) Yorkshire Wolds and Coast Primary Care Trust, (b) East Yorkshire Primary Care Trust and (c) North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire Strategic Health Authority regarding community hospitals in each of the last three years; and if she will make a statement. [73579]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Yorkshire Wolds and Coast Primary Care Trust (PCT) and East Yorkshire PCT fed public views arising from its review of community hospitals to the Department following the publication of the "Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services" White Paper. There have been no other representations to the Department from either the PCTs or from North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire Strategic Health Authority.

Complementary Medicine

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much NHS funding is available for non-conventional medicine in 2006-07. [74433]

Caroline Flint: Decisions on the commissioning of complementary and alternative therapies, and how much funding to allocate to these, are a matter for primary care trusts and local national health service service providers. There are, therefore, no centrally held records on spending on such therapies within the NHS.

Dentistry

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many students graduated in dentistry in each year from 1997 to 2005 in (a) England and (b) Cumbria; [64427]

(2) when she will answer question 64427, on dentistry, tabled by the hon. Member for Westmorland and Lonsdale on 12 April. [75148]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answers 18 April and 5 June 2006]: The number of students graduating from dental courses that lead to registration with the General Dental Council, England from the academic year 2002/03 to 2004/05 is shown in the following table. This information is not available centrally prior to 2002-03. No higher education institutions in Cumbria offer pre-registration dental courses.

Academic year	Headcount

2004/05	605

Source:
Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) student record

Numbers exclude students at Eastman dental hospital and the Defence Dental Agency Training Establishment as HESA does not collect data for these institutions.

Figures are from HESA standard registration population which excludes overseas visiting/exchange students, dormant students and those who left within 14 days of starting the course.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial assistance for travel is available to eligible patients travelling to private orthodontic clinic appointments after referral by an NHS dentist. [74094]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national health service does not provide assistance with travel costs for patients receiving private treatment.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people aged (a) 17 years or under and (b) 18 years or over were registered with an NHS dentist in (i) England, (ii) each NHS region and (iii) each strategic health authority in each year since 1997; and what proportion each represents of the relevant age group. [71388]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Registration numbers for September in each of the years 1997 to 2005 have been placed in the Library for primary care trusts (PCTs) and strategic health authorities (SHAs) together with England totals. Separate figures are shown for children aged 17 years or under and for adults aged 18 and over.

The registration figures for 1997 are not comparable with the figures for subsequent years because the 1997 data reflect the previous registration periods (24 months for adults and until the end of the following calendar year for children), while the later data mainly reflect the shorter registration period of 15 months. The introduction of personal dental services pilots in October 1998 and subsequent growth has affected the figures from September 1999 onwards; these changes affect comparisons over time. Registration rates are given for SHAs and for England. However, registration rates for PCTs are not available before 2001 because population estimates are not available.

Drug Treatment

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the planned changes are in her Department's funding for (a) the National Drug Treatment Agency and (b) other forms of drug rehabilitation in each year from 2005-06 to 2008-09; and if she will make a statement. [75266]

Caroline Flint: Departmental funding for the National Treatment Agency for 2005-06 was £10,560,000. Funding for 2006-07 will be announced shortly. Decisions on funding for subsequent years have yet to be made.

Departmental funding for other forms of drug rehabilitation for 2005-06 such as the pooled drug treatment budget allocation was £299.4 million, which includes £22 million Home Office funding. This funding is to be used for the funding of treatment within each of the six treatment modalities, which are:

general practitioner prescribing;
specialist prescribing;
residential rehabilitation;
inpatient detoxification;
day care; and counselling.

In addition, an estimated £208 million of mainstream expenditure was made available for drug treatment. Funding for 2006-07 will be announced shortly. Decisions on funding for subsequent years have yet to be made.

GP Referrals

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of whether primary care trusts have used referral centres as a means of delaying GP referrals to consultants during the current financial year; [57781]

(2) what guidance she has given to primary care trusts about the practice of delaying GP referrals to consultants as a means of meeting year-end finance limits; [57782]

(3) what estimate she has made of how many patients have been affected by the practice of primary care trusts using referral centres as a means of delaying GP referrals to consultants during the 2005-06 financial year; [58559]

(4) what plans she has to correct any potential error in waiting time statistics as a result of uncounted delays in the time taken for GP referrals to be passed on from referral centres run by some primary care trusts, with particular reference to North Somerset. [58560]

Caroline Flint: No such estimate or assessment has been made centrally. The Department is quite clear in that referrals to community-based clinical assessment services, and other such centres, should happen only where it adds genuine clinical value for patients. Where they add clinical benefits and are properly integrated as part of the wider primary care health team, such services have a real potential to benefit patients by ensuring that they see the most appropriate clinician in the most convenient setting.

The Department is working closely with Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire strategic health authority to ensure that waiting times of patients referred through North Somerset primary care trust's referral management centre are reported appropriately.

The Department recognises however, that guidance on waiting list reporting is complex, especially in light of changing referral practices, choice, and the 18-week pathway. We therefore intend to work closely with the Royal College of General Practitioners and other professional bodies to develop clear guidance on the role and appropriate use of clinical assesament services and other similar services within the national health service.

Greenbelt Development

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance she has given to (a) primary care trusts and (b) general practitioner practices on the provision of funding to patient groups lobbying for development in the greenbelt; [72975]

(2) what her policy is on the development of health facilities in greenbelt land; [72976]

(3) what her policy is on (a) GP practices and (b) primary care trusts providing funding to patient groups lobbying for development in the green belt. [73241]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The guidance on town planning matters for all national health service organisations is provided in the Department of Health publication "Estatecode—essential guidance on estates and facilities management". The NHS estate is subject to all town and country planning legislation and guidance. Under these provisions, a NHS organisation is able to put forward a detailed application to a planning authority for the development of greenbelt land for new healthcare facilities where this is considered the most appropriate site. The planning authority will assess the proposal in accordance with the relevant statutory provisions.

Primary care trusts (PCTs) are required by statute to operate within resource limits (revenue and capital) set by the Department as part of PCTs funding allocations. PCTs may use their revenue resources for any revenue expenditure permitted in law. As regards the provision of funding to patient groups lobbying for development in the green belt, no departmental guidance or policy has been issued in relation to contracts with general practitioners. However, these practitioners are able to spend their own contract income on patient groups, should they consider this beneficial to their practice.

Health Services Take-up

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when and how guidance on improving the take-up of health services amongst excluded older people will be published. [74799]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We are at the early stages of considering options to develop guidance on improving the take-up of health and social care services amongst excluded older people. At this developmental stage, we are unable to provide any details regarding timescales and plans.

HIV/AIDS (Blood Transfusions)

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much compensation has been paid by the UK Government to those who contracted HIV through blood transfusions. [74297]

Caroline Flint: Up to March 2006, the United Kingdom Government have distributed a total of £39,787,617 via the Macfarlane and Eileen Trusts, to those who contracted HIV infection from blood transfusions or from treatment with blood products.

Home Care Charges

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she proposes to take to reduce home care charges in England. [75286]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is for councils to decide whether and how to set charges for non-residential social services. The legal basis is that charges generally should be 'reasonable' and that no one should be asked to pay more than they reasonably can. This position contrasts with that applying to charges for residential care, where regulations prescribe a national means test, which councils must follow.

The Department issued statutory guidance, 'Fairer Charging Policies for Home Care and other non-residential Social Services—Guidance for Councils with Social Services Responsibilities', which is available in the Library, to all local councils in November 2001. It was amended in September 2003 to reflect the introduction of pension credits. It does not seek to change councils' power to charge, or not, for these services. It is intended to ensure that charges generally should be reasonable and that no one should be asked to pay more than they reasonably can.

The guidance aims to ensure in particular that service users on low incomes are protected from charging and that any charges levied on disability benefits are subject to an assessment of disability costs, to ensure their reasonableness. Councils are required to ensure that charges do not put any users' incomes below basic income support levels or the guarantee credit of pension credit, plus a buffer of 25 per cent. This can lead to real improvements in the position of many users, who will cease to pay charges or pay a smaller charge.

Kidney Dialysis

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many residents of the London borough of Bexley received kidney dialysis treatment at hospitals outside the borough in the last period for which figures are available. [73552]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is not collected centrally.

London NHS Better Healthcare Closer to Home Programme

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on (a) public relations, (b) health consultancy, (c) planning consultancy and (d) hospitality and other areas in connection with the South West London NHS better healthcare closer to home programme. [73848]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department commissioned the Prince's Foundation to undertake an inquiry by design for the NHS better healthcare closer to home project and contributed funding of £60,000. All other work, as specified, was commissioned by the local national health service. Information on this is not held by the Department; it is a matter for the local NHS.

Long-term Conditions Framework

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department has taken to implement the national service framework for long-term conditions. [75432]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Since publication of the national service framework for long-term conditions, the Department has co-ordinated a range of activity to help local health and social care organisations take forward implementation of the NSF. This includes:

working with key national health service, social care, voluntary and independent sector stakeholders, as well as service users and carers, to identify and address key issues in neurological services and the stakeholders' role in implementation;

ensuring that other key delivery programmes, most especially the White Paper "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say" and the long-term conditions strategy help deliver key NSF objectives; and work with the Care Services Improvement Partnership to promote implementation of the NSF through a co-ordinated work programme, including regional workshops, a web-based getting started pack and self-assessment tool for services.

National Framework for Continuing Care

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which (a) organisations and (b) individuals (i) she, (ii) her Ministers and (iii) her officials have met to discuss the national framework for NHS continuing healthcare in the last 12 months; on what date the meetings took place; and what the content of each meeting was. [75126]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Work to produce the national framework for continuing care is ongoing, as is stakeholder communication, engagement and involvement.

The Under-Secretary of State, Department of Health my hon. Friend the Member for South Thanet (Dr. Ladyman) met with the Ombudsman specifically to discuss continuing care, and the subject will have come up in numerous visits and meetings. I have met with local authority representatives and also with the Social Care Institute for Excellence, the General Social Care Council and Turning Point when the subject of continuing care was raised.

Officials have studied the evidence given to the Health Committee inquiry on continuing care. Regular meetings take place with staff from the Ombudsman's office to ensure their full participation and involvement in the development of the national framework.

Meetings and/or discussions have also occurred with numerous organisations, members of the public, researchers and academics, including the Royal College of Nursing, Help the Aged, Age Concern, the Alzheimer's Society and the Long Term Medical Conditions Alliance.

Officials have also had contact with these bodies, and with many other voluntary organisations and professional bodies including the English Community Care Association, Leonard Cheshire, Carers UK, POhWER, the British Medical Association, the Independent Complaints Advocacy Service, the ADSS and the LGA, Radar, Headway, the Neurological Alliance, Scope, the National Care Forum, the National Centre for Independent Living, the National Council for Voluntary Organisations, the Council of Ethnic Minority Voluntary Sector Organisations and the National Care Homes Association. Many of these attended the stakeholder summit that was held on 21 July 2005 to share progress, and to gain contributions in from organisations with patients and service users, carer networks and professional organisations.

An electronic discussion forum has been established for regular communication and through which staff from across the health and social care community and wider stakeholder groups can contribute to specific parts of the framework.

NHS Direct

Mr. Gregan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has for the future provision of the best treatments website through NHS Direct. [66047]

Ms Rosie Winterton: NHS Direct online will continue to signpost to best treatments from the relevant NHS Direct health encyclopaedia topics.

NHS Equipment

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many items of NHS equipment she estimates were not returned to NHS trusts after a patient had used them in aiding their recovery in each of the last five years; [73661]

(2) what measures she plans to take to make patients responsible for returning NHS equipment after use; [73662]

(3) what estimate she has made of the amount spent by the NHS in replacing equipment that has not been returned by patients in each of the last five years. [73663]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not held centrally.

It is for the national health service to plan and commission appropriate services for their local population including policies on returning NHS equipment.

NHS Pension Scheme

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the liabilities of the NHS pension scheme are. [71605]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government Actuary's Department has valued the total liabilities of the NHS pension scheme as at 31 March 2005 to be £127.9 billion. They are in the process of preparing a detailed actuarial valuation of the scheme as at 31 March 2004 which will be published later this year and will include analysis of the factors leading to any change in valuation.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are for (a) negotiations on and (b) changes to the NHS pension scheme. [71607]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Negotiations are continuing between NHS employers, on behalf of the Department, and the NHS staff side on proposals for a new national health service pension scheme. Proposals will be announced for consultation on the completion of these negotiations.

Nurses

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what (a) support and (b) employment advice her Department provides for those successfully completing pre-registration nursing courses but who fail to find a nursing position within the NHS; and if she will make a statement; [75153]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1585W, on pre-registration nursing courses, what assessment has been made by her Department of the employment prospects of those enrolled on pre-registration nursing courses; and if she will make a statement. [75504]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national health service will continue to need new nurses to replace those that retire or take career breaks. However, there is now a much closer match between the demand and supply of health care workers and there is more competition for posts. It is a joint responsibility between higher education institutions and local NHS organisations to see that nursing and other health care graduates are supported to find employment. Vacancies for graduates continue to be posted on NHS Jobs and the NHS careers information service can direct graduates to appropriate sources of information and advice. Graduates are encouraged to be flexible when applying for posts.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of (a) NHS nursing vacancies and (b) expected nursing vacancies over the next 12 months (i) in total and (ii) in each strategic health authority; and if she will make a statement. [75150]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 5 June 2006]: In March 2005, 5,801 had not been filled within three months for qualified nursing, midwifery and health visiting staffing in England. The results of the March 2006 vacancy survey are due to be published in July.

It is the responsibility of local national health service organisations to estimate the likely vacancies over the next 12 months.

Parapox Virus

David Mundell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has evaluated on the possible risk to human health of the parapox virus carried by grey squirrels. [73176]

Caroline Flint: In the absence of reports of human disease due to parapox virus, the Department has not evaluated any research on risk to human health. Both the Department and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) keep a close watch on incidents of parapox infection in squirrels. The human and animal infection risks surveillance group, which includes membership from the Department, DEFRA, the Health Protection Agency and the Food Standards Agency, meets on a regular basis to assess risk to public health and has considered the potential for this infection to spread to people.

Plagiocephaly

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent representations she has received on the treatment of plagiocephaly; [73756]

(2) how many children have been treated for plagiocephaly on the NHS with the STARband helmet in the last 12 months; [73757]

(3) what progress has been made in raising awareness of the condition of plagiocephaly among (a) health practitioners and (b) parents; [73758]

(4) what the incidence of plagiocephaly is in England. [73759]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Departmental Ministers have received 19 letters from Members of Parliament, nine letters and five emails from members of the public, and a large petition about plagiocephaly in the past 12 months. It is for doctors working in national health service trusts to decide how and whether to treat children with positional plagiocephaly. We do not collect information centrally on how they do so. Health visitors and general practitioners are trained to recognise deformities in babies, including plagiocephaly. We have not tried to raise awareness of parents about plagiocephaly but we give advice in "Birth to Five" which is available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidanceArticle/fs/en?CONTENT_ID=4111315&chk=pk7ls0

This suggests that babies should experience a range of positions. If followed, this advice would not only help prevent plagiocephaly, but also enhance a child's development. We do not collect statistics on the incidence of plagiocephaly centrally.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who will appoint the chief executives of the new primary care trusts; and if she will make a statement. [71825]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The process for appointing primary care trust chief executives is covered by the Commissioning a Patient-Led NHS Human Resources Framework for strategic health authorities and PCTs published in December 2005. It states that the appointment process for PCT chief executives will be managed in regional clusters by the new SHA chief executives. Appointment panels for PCT chief executives will be chaired by the new PCT chair (or interim PCT chair, or SHA chair if the new PCT chair has not been appointed), and will also include the SHA chief executive, the new professional executive committee (PEC) chair (or other senior clinician if the new PEC chair has not been appointed), and an independent assessor.

The Human Resources Framework and supplementary guidance, "Primary Care Trusts: Chief Executive Posts is available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/13/46/55/04134655.pdf.

Purchase of Publications

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why funding for the purchase copies of the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin for NHS clinicians has ceased. [75505]

Andy Burnham: This decision was informed by our policy to devolve as much responsibility as possible to the national health service and to look very critically at central spending. It is our policy that central spending should be kept to an absolute minimum in order to maximise the resources available for the NHS to manage at local level. The decision also took account of the availability of other sources of medicines information.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the annual cost to the NHS has been of purchasing copies of the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin in each of the last five years. [75507]

Andy Burnham: The annual cost of the Department's central contract to purchase copies of the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin for each of the last five years is as follows:

Financial year	Cost (£ million)
2001-02	1.350
2002-03	1.419
2003-04	1.435
2004-05	1.435
2005-06	1.435

Redundant NHS Sites

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what regulations cover the selling of redundant NHS sites; whether monies raised in Gloucestershire from such sales will be spent in the county; and if she will make a statement. [74269]

Andy Burnham: Guidance on the disposal of surplus national health service land and buildings is provided in the Department's publication "Estatecode—essential guidance on estates and facilities management".

NHS trusts and primary care trusts (PCTs) have delegated limits for capital investment. Within these limits, they may make capital investment decisions without seeking approval from their strategic health authority (SHA) or from the Department. These limits vary between £1 million and £10 million, depending on the organisation's turnover from provider activities and its most recent performance rating.

Sales of fixed assets such as land and buildings are dealt with in the same way. Within its delegated limit, an NHS trust or PCT can sell assets and reinvest the proceeds without the approval of its SHA. Above the delegated limit, these trusts must seek their SHA's approval both for the sale and to reinvest the proceeds. In many instances, SHAs will approve the reinvestment of the sale proceeds by the selling trust or PCT but the SHA retains the discretion to specify another use.

The SHA with responsibility for health services in Gloucestershire is the Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire SHA. Within this wide geographical remit, there are circumstances where the SHA might consider that there is a health-investment need to use capital proceeds from one county in the other counties that it covers.

When the selling organisation is an NHS foundation trust, the ability to dispose of assets is covered by the "Protection of Assets—Guidance for NHSFTs" published by Monitor, the independent regulator of NHS foundation trusts. Income from the sale of its assets accrues to the NHS foundation trust.

Residential Homes

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines her Department issues to (a) local authorities and (b) primary care trusts on assessments to establish whether patients require nursing care in residential homes. [73832]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: "Continuing care: NHS and local councils' responsibilities" makes it clear that the national health service is responsible for arranging and funding community health service in care homes. In order for people in residential homes to access these services, they must be registered with a general practitioner.

When assessing the nursing care needs of older people in all settings local authorities and the NHS are required to implement the single assessment process, as set out in "Guidance on the Single Assessment Process for Older People". This ensures a person centred approach to assessment and care planning for older people regardless of both organisational boundaries and the health conditions and circumstances of older people.

Seasonal Influenza

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2006, Official Report, column 763W, on influenza, if she will make a statement on the progress of the review on the seasonal influenza vaccination programme; and whether she expects to publish the review findings before general practitioners order their stocks of influenza vaccine for the winter of 2006-07. [73871]

Caroline Flint: Independent assessors have been appointed and are carrying out the review.

Once complete, the reviewers will submit their findings to the Secretary of State for Health. The recommendations will be given careful consideration and the reviewers report will be made available.

General practitioners are already ordering their stocks, and any recommendations from the review will be considered for the 2007 seasonal influenza immunisation programme.

Sexual Health

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of each main category of sexually transmitted disease there were in each primary care trust area in the North East in each year since 2001; and what the rate was of each disease in each area in each year. [75249]

Caroline Flint: Data are not available in the format requested. Statistics of sexually transmitted infections are collected by the Health Protection Agency and are available at national, regional and strategic health authority (SHA) level which is shown in the tables relating to County Durham and Tees Valley SHA and Northumberland, Tyne and Wear SHA.

Spinal Cord Injuries

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people with spinal cord injuries live in (a) England, (b) Essex and (c) Southend on Sea. [75431]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Data on the number of people living with spinal cord injuries are not collected centrally. However, the Spinal Injuries Association has estimated that there are around 40,000 people with spinal cord injuries in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 829W, on spinal cord injuries, (1) what patient activity data of spinal cord injured patients is collected at (a) NHS spinal cord injury centres and (b) general and district facilities; and how such information is shared between these facilities; [75499]

(2) what plans she has to commission research into the long-term treatment and care of spinal cord injured people; [75500]

(3) if she will request the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to assess the requirement for guidance on the treatment and care of spinal cord injured people. [75501]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Hospital episode statistics (HES) patient activity data is collected at specialised spinal cord injury centres, and general national health service facilities. This data is available via HES online at www.hesonline.org.uk

The Medical Research Council (MRC) has responsibility for allocating research funding on health. The MRC is independent, and funding allocations are based on the merit of submitted research proposals rather than being ring-fenced for specific conditions.

We have no plans to ask the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to assess the need for guidance on the treatment and care of spinal cord injured people.

Student Grants Unit

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many students applied for a bursary from the NHS Student Grants Unit for the academic year beginning in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005, broken down by type of course; [72315]

(2) how many and what percentage of students had received their bursary from the NHS Student Grants Unit for (a) the academic year 2005-06 by (i) September 2005, (ii) October 2005, (iii) November 2005 and (iv) December 2005 and (b) the academic year 2004-05 by (A) September 2004, (B) October 2004, (C) November 2004 and (D) December 2004, broken down by (1) type of course and (2) type of bursary; [72316]

Tuberculosis

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what inoculations are given to children to protect against tuberculosis. [73842]

Caroline Flint: The Bacillus Calmette-Guerin (BCG) vaccination is the only inoculation recommended to protect at risk children against tuberculosis.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the basis was for the decision to withdraw tuberculosis inoculation for schoolchildren; and what guidance is available for parents who wish their child to be inoculated. [73791]

Caroline Flint: Since the introduction of the Bacillus Calmette-Guerin (BCG) schools programme in 1953 the epidemiology of tuberculosis has changed from a disease of the general population to one predominantly affecting high-risk groups. The new recommendations are based on the advice of the joint committee on vaccination and immunisation and are aimed at delivering an improved targeted risk based programme. The widespread introduction of targeted BCG vaccination means that the majority of children at high risk of tuberculosis will now be vaccinated in early life.

The Chief Medical Officer announced changes to the BCG programme via a letter to the medical profession and primary care trusts on 6 July 2005. In support of these changes an updated leaflet, factsheet, and poster were produced and sent directly to the professionals and primary care trusts. All of these resources were aimed at raising awareness of tuberculosis, and also informing health professionals and the general public alike, of the changes to BCG policy. All these resources were also made available to order free of charge via the Department's publications line.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Abu Qatada

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in deporting Abu Qatada to Jordan. [69173]

Mr. Byrne: Abu Qatada has appealed against the decision to deport him. The appeal hearing started on 9 May, and closing submissions have still to be made. Subsequent action will depend on the outcome of that appeal.

Alcohol Sales

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to prevent the sale of alcohol to people who are already drunk. [74533]

Mr. McNulty: The Government's strategy for tackling this issue is based on working in partnership with the licensed trade, who have themselves recognised the need to redouble their efforts to prevent their staff selling to those already drunk. We are working closely with the industry on the details of how they will do this.

In addition, through the Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaigns (AMECs), we have been encouraging the police to develop and use innovative tactics to deal with alcohol-related crime and disorder, which include measures to prevent sales to drunks such as visits to licensed premises and to detect sales, through, for example, the use of undercover officers.

Anti-Semitic Incidents

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1613W, on anti-Semitic incidents, how many of the 132 reported incidents in Greater Manchester in 2005 occurred in each of the 10 Greater Manchester authorities. [70334]

Mr. McNulty: The information given in the answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1613W, was taken from research conducted by the Community Security Trust and reported in 2005. That report is available at http://www.thecst.org.uk but does not give a further breakdown as to where these incidents took place.

Assisted Volunteers Return of Irregular Migrants Programme

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of the assisted volunteers return of irregular migrants programme was in each year since its introduction; how many people have been helped under the programme; and how many of these subsequently returned to the UK without authorisation. [73523]

Mr. Byrne: The costs tabled in the attachment include all of those relating to the programme including staffing costs.

Of the 577 people who have returned to their country of origin under the assisted volunteers return of irregular migrants (AVRIM) programme since the introduction of the programme in November 2004, four were refused leave to enter the UK as visitors, two were granted leave to enter as visitors, one had entry clearance and was granted leave to enter as a spouse, one was granted leave to enter as they were applying under an EEA family permit and one held an EEA residence permit.

Asylum/Immigration

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers there are in (a) Coventry, South and (b) the west midlands region. [71751]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 22 May 2006]: The number of asylum seekers supported by the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) is published on a quarterly and annual basis, broken down by Government office region and local authority. The next publication covering the first quarter of 2006 will be published on 23 May 2006, and will be available on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html. Data on asylum seekers supported by NASS broken down by parliamentary constituency are also available from the Library.

The location of asylum seekers not supported by NASS could be provided only by looking at individual case records.

While a supported application is being processed and dispersed accommodation arranged, asylum seekers are housed in Initial Accommodation. As at the end of April 2006 there were 160 asylum seekers in Initial accommodation in the west midlands region.

Some longer standing asylum seekers remain supported by local authorities. Latest available management information suggests that there are 17 cases still supported by authorities in the west midlands.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers that have yet to be deported reside in (a) Bexley and (b) Greater London. [72631]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of asylum seekers who were not removed when all their appeal processes had been exhausted in each of the last five years. [73524]

Mr. Byrne: The recent National Audit Office report "Returning failed asylum applicants" acknowledges that the number of failed asylum seekers in the UK is impossible to determine as some will have left the country of their own accord.

No Government have ever been able to produce an accurate figure for the number of failed asylum seekers who are in the country illegally. By its very nature it is impossible to quantify accurately, and that remains the case.

Information on the number of removals of failed asylum seekers is published quarterly and annually, on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his Answer of 8 May 2006, Official Report, column 71W, on asylum/immigration, what criteria are used when considering a fresh application from a foreign national whose previous appeal rights have been exhausted; and if he will make a statement. [73412]

Mr. Byrne: The criteria for deciding whether a fresh asylum claim has been made are set out in the immigration rules, particularly rule 353. A copy of the rules is available in the Library.

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his Answer of 8 May 2006, Official Report, column 71W, on asylum/immigration, what the cost to public funds was of consideration of fresh applications for asylum from those who had exhausted their appeal rights in the latest period for which figures are available. [73414]

Mr. Byrne: This information was not recorded before June 2005. There were 279 fresh applications recorded in the period June 2005 to March 2006 from those who had exhausted their appeal rights. In its 2004 report "Improving the speed and quality of asylum decisions", the National Audit Office accepted a figure of approximately £3,000 as the average cost of reaching an initial decision on an asylum application. Updating to 2006 prices suggests a current average cost of £3,400.

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his Answer of 8 May 2006, Official Report, column 71W, on asylum and immigration, what percentage of the applicants who submitted a fresh asylum application came from each country. [73416]

Mr. Byrne: I am advised that of the approximately 6,000 failed asylum seekers whose appeal rights have been exhausted and who have submitted further representations which they claim amount to a fresh asylum claim, approximately 17 per cent. were from Zimbabwe, 13 per cent. from Iraq, 7 per cent. from Iran, 7 per cent. from Somalia, 7 per cent. from Eritrea, 6 per cent. from Sri Lanka, 6 per cent. from the Democratic Republic of the Congo, 6 per cent. from Afghanistan, 3 per cent. from Pakistan, 3 per cent. from Turkey, 3 per cent. From Ethiopia, 3 per cent. from Sudan and 1 per cent. from Kosovo. The remaining numbers form percentages of less than one per cent. from each of a substantial number of countries. This information is based on internal management information and as such is not published within official statistics.

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his Answer of 8 May 2006, Official Report, column 71W, on asylum and immigration, how many foreign nationals whose appeal rights have been exhausted have taken up the suggestion of returning home to their country voluntarily. [73417]

Mr. Byrne: I am advised that the numbers are as follows:

2006[1]	Number
January	244
February	339
March	443
April	431
Total	1,457

[1] Of foreign nationals who have returned to their country of origin under the Voluntary Assisted Return Reintegration Programme (VARRP) programme and whose appeal rights exhausted.

Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the average cost to public funds of supporting a failed asylum seeker in the last period for which figures are available. [73413]

Mr. Byrne: The National Asylum Support Service (NASS) provides support to eligible asylum seekers who would otherwise be destitute. Generally, this support ends when the asylum seeker's claim for asylum has been finally determined.

However, where the applicant's claim has been finally determined as refused, support may continue under section 95 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1999 provided the applicant has minor dependants under the age of 18. The average cost of section 95 support, including accommodation and subsistence from un-audited April to November 2005 financial information is estimated at £141 per person per week.

Support may also be provided under section four of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1999 if the applicant is destitute and unable to leave the UK immediately due to circumstances beyond their control. The average cost of section four support for the same period is estimated at £129 per week.

Brian Haw

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the (a) removal and (b) right to remain and protest of Mr. Brian Haw from Parliament Square [74778]

Mr. McNulty: I cannot comment on this case as it is currently sub judice.

Careless Driving

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drivers received a custodial sentence in 2005 after being convicted of careless driving following an incident in which a person died. [70895]

Mr. Coaker: Available data for the specific offence of careless driving, contrary to s.3, Road Traffic Act 1988 in England and Wales, do not indicate whether the incidents to which they relate involved injury or death.

Control Communications Commands

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason (a) Waltham forest and (b) Redbridge are in the second half of the last wave of the process for the integration of control room functions to Control Communications Commands in the Metropolitan Police; what steps he has taken to ensure that the integration process has identified and tackled problems arising in the earlier stages; and if he will make a statement. [47940]

Mr. McNulty: This is an operational matter for the Commissioner of the Police of the Metropolis who will write to my hon. Friend separately. I will arrange for a copy of his letter to be placed in the Library.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer the letter to his predecessor dated 21 March from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mrs. Asma Asad. [72166]

Mr, Byrne: I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer given on 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 902W.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) Ministers and (b) officials in the top three grades are paid from his Department's budget. [67459]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office ministerial team consists of seven Ministers and I am advised that there are in total 260 substantive members of the senior civil service currently working in the Department.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in his Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate telephone numbers in each of the last five years. [67992]

Mr. Byrne: The figures available for the Home Office are set out in the table in annex A. The data for staff disciplined for misuse of the internet includes any misuse of IT including misuse of the internal email system. Similarly, the data for staff disciplined for misuse of the telephone at work include any misuse of the telephone including excessive use or unauthorised telephone calls.

Question: Figures of how many people in the Home Office (including its Agencies) have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate telephone numbers in each of the last five years. Annex A

Mr. Byrne: I am advised that the number of staff in the Home Office that have had (a) five or more (b) four (c) three, and (d) two periods of sick leave of less than five days in each of the last three years are shown in the following table:

Drug-related Crime

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to prevent shoplifting by drug misusers to fund the purchase of drugs. [74534]

Mr. Coaker: The Government's drug interventions programme (DIP) which began in 2003 is providing a route out of crime and into treatment for drug misusing offenders who commit crime to feed their habit. DIP uses contact with the criminal justice system as an opportunity to engage drug misusing offenders in treatment and support.

Individuals who are arrested for certain offences including theft—which includes shoplifting—in the 98 areas with the highest levels of acquisitive crime are tested for class A drugs as a part of DIP. Those testing positive are required to attend an assessment with a drugs worker. Testing on arrest is a way of identifying drug misusers at an early stage in the criminal justice process. Other key elements of the programme are operating across England and in Wales.

The drug interventions programme continues to have a positive impact in communities not only by the interventions that it offers but also by delivering a more integrated approach by local agencies to the problems of offenders. Since the programme began over 43,000 drug misusing offenders have entered treatment through DIP.

Acquisitive recorded crime—to which drug related crime (including theft) makes a substantial contribution fell by 12 per cent. in the year to April 2005 compared with the previous 12 months.

Drugs Offences (Mansfield)

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions there have been for drug offences in (a) Meden and (b) Birklands ward of Mansfield in each of the last five years. [71933]

Mr. Coaker Data for Meden and Birklands ward are not collected centrally.

Convictions relating to Mansfield criminal justice court from 2000 to 2004 are given in the following table.

Number of convictions for drug offences in Mansfield by sentence or order given[1], 2000 to 2004

Embarkation System

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of dismantling the embarkation system was. [73676]

Mr. Byrne: The provision of any embarkation control falls to the individual port operator, including the immigration desks themselves and any associated construction and power supply requirements. The accommodation and equipment for the control is provided free of charge to the Department in accordance with statutory legislation. As such the cost of dismantling such facilities also falls to the individual port operator and not the Home Office.

Foreign Criminals

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of his Ministers have duties related to the release of foreign offenders in England and Wales. [68618]

Mr. Byrne: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has overall responsibility for the Home Office. I am the Minister for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality and am supported in this by the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Enfield, North (Joan Ryan). The Minister for Policing, Security and Community Safety, my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, East (Mr. McNulty) and is supported by the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Coaker).

Baroness Scotland of Asthal QC is Minister of State for Criminal Justice and Offender Management and she is supported by the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Bradford, South (Mr. Sutcliffe).

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether any of the foreign prisoners released without being considered for deportation are currently thought to be in Scotland; [67463]

(2) whether he has identified any failures by the immigration and nationality directorate or immigration service in relation to foreign prisoners released by the Scottish Prison Service; [67464]

(3) when he alerted the Scottish Executive or the Scottish Prison Service to concerns over the operation of the system for deporting foreign prisoners. [67465]

Mr. Byrne [holding answers 2 May 2006]: I refer to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary, on 23 May 2006, Official Report, column 77WS.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals are held in UK Jails, broken down by country of origin. [69363]

Mr. Byrne: I am advised that as of 8 May 2006 the prison IT system contained the records of foreign nationals held in prison as set out in the following table. Details of prison populations held in Scotland and Northern Ireland can be obtained from the Scottish Executive and the Northern Ireland Office respectively.

Illegal Immigration

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many carriers have been fined for transporting illegal immigrants in each year since the passage of the relevant legislation. [74540]

Mr. Byrne: In 2005, charges were imposed on 157 different air and sea carriers under section 40 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 as amended in respect of passengers arriving in the United Kingdom without the required documents.

For earlier years records are not accessible centrally and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal immigrants were found at each main port of entry in 2005. [74673]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Illicit Drugs

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account the Government take in formulating their policy on illicit drugs of the effects of supply-side prohibition; and if he will make a statement. [71311]

Mr. Coaker: The Government's strategy in tackling drugs is founded on the fact that all drugs subject to it are harmful and no one should take them. We take full account of the importance of the role of legislative controls on the unauthorised production, supply and possession of these drugs in reducing the harms that such drugs cause by helping to limit their use and deter experimentation. These necessary controls are an integral, but not exhaustive, part of the Government's drugs strategy.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the rate of absenteeism due to illness was in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in the last period for which figures are available. [73673]

Mr. Byrne: I am advised that the annualised rate for the number of working days lost per employee per year based on sickness absence reported on our computerised resource data system, Adelphi, from 1 March 2005 to 31 March 2006 is 10.32 days.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many letters of complaint have been received by his office relating to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in each year since 2001. [73680]

Mr. Byrne: The total number of complaints received from members of the public through the Immigration and Nationality Directorate's central complaints unit, broken down by category and year are presented in the table. These figures do not include complaints received elsewhere across IND that are dealt with under separate processes i.e. MPs correspondence. Central data specifying the nature of that correspondence is not maintained electronically.

1 April 2005-31 March 2006	433	13,618
Total	2,411	50,142

These figures do not include complaints received elsewhere across IND that are dealt with under separate processes i.e. MPs correspondence. Central data specifying the nature of that correspondence is not maintained electronically.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to commission a report into the most recent allegations of corruption by staff at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. [74994]

Mr. Byrne: Following the publication of allegations in The Observer on 21 May 2006, an internal disciplinary investigation has taken place, as a result of which a member of IND staff has been dismissed. A criminal investigation continues.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has considered commissioning an externally-based investigation into allegations of corruption at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. [74995]

Mr. Byrne: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given earlier.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures his Department follows for checking that applicants for employment in (a) his Department and (b) the immigration and nationality directorate are entitled to reside and work in the United Kingdom. [75201]

Mr. Byrne: I am advised that our current policy is to ask all new staff to produce a passport. If they are not a British or EEA national, an original Home Office document confirming immigration status must be produced. If a UK citizen does not have a passport, and is not being employed in an IND operational grade, they may provide two pieces of alternative identification which can include an original birth certificate, P45. In addition all new entrants will have their immigration status checked against IND records.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will order a review of immigration casework in which Mr. James Dawute was responsible for (a) decisions and (b) recommendations for decisions. [75200]

Mr. Byrne: Immigration Service managers are carrying out a risk assessed review of selected casework dealt with by Mr. Dawute. The outcome of this review will determine if a more detailed and far reaching review of all of Mr. Dawute's cases is required. In addition, the Immigration and Nationality Department's Security and Anti Corruption Unit are conducting a criminal investigation into Mr. Dawute and this will include reviewing some of the cases handled by him.

Leave to Remain (Overruled Decisions)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions a Minister has overruled a decision by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate to reject an application for leave to remain since 1999. [73681]

Mr. Byrne: Statistics on the number of occasions Ministers have asked for cases to be reviewed or have overruled decisions made by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate since 1999 are not available and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Licensing

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been brought for (a) sales of alcohol to under age children under the Licensing Act 2003 and (b) crime and disorder associated with pubs and clubs in Kingston upon Hull, North since November 2005. [69775]

Mr. Coaker: It is not possible to identify prosecutions in Kingston upon Hull, North as the centrally held data are not broken down to that level of detail. Additionally, since the Licensing act 2003 came into force in 2005 there are no data currently available for prosecutions under the act.

Data for 2005 will be available in the autumn.

Lilian Woodcock

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Lilian Woodcock (née Nyakundi), date of birth 24 September 1977, registration number LR172801667J/01, will receive the outcome of her application for leave to remain in the UK as a spouse. [74634]

Mr. Byrne: I am advised that officials at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to Mrs. Woodcock's legal representatives on 26 May 2006 informing them of the outcome of her application.

Mini-motorcycles

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) mini-motorcycles have been confiscated by the police and (b) fines have been issued to drivers of mini-motorcycles in (i) Dudley, (ii) the West Midlands and (iii) England in the last two years. [63023]

Mr. Coaker: This information is not collected centrally.

Ministerial Cars

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by his Department in each of the last five years. [67124]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Transport (Dr. Ladyman) on 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1226W.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times the Minister for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality has visited (a) the Immigration and Nationality Department, (b) the Channel ports and (c) an immigration detention centre since 2001. [73623]

Mr. Byrne: In addition to everyday contact with the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND), the Minister for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality regularly visits IND and related facilities.

People Trafficking

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to link the Coordinated Strategy for Prostitution with the response to the Tackling Trafficking Consultation. [74839]

Mr. Coaker: We are currently in the process of assessing the responses to the consultation paper on proposals for tackling human trafficking.

It is our intention to publish the UK strategy later this year. This will link in with the wider coordinated strategy for prostitution, particularly in relation to tackling demand for prostitution and raising awareness of the trafficking of women and children for the purposes of prostitution.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in the prevention of human trafficking into the United Kingdom. [74857]

Mr. Coaker: The Government are committed to tackling human trafficking and on the 5 January 2006 launched a national consultation exercise on proposals for a UK action plan on human trafficking. The question of how to prevent human trafficking features prominently in the consultation and a summary of the consultation responses is due to be published on the 21 June 2006 with a final UK action plan to follow later in the year.

The Government have introduced comprehensive legislation to criminalise trafficking and in 2000 established Reflex, a multi-agency taskforce on organised immigration crime which has worked closely with international law enforcement partners in taking forward trafficking investigations and in strengthening the capacity of other countries to deal effectively with trafficking at source. In addition, on 3 April 2006 the Serious Organised Crime Agency was launched with organised immigration crime as one of its key priorities, bringing a renewed focus on improving intelligence on organised criminals engaged in this type of crime. During the course of our presidency of the Council of the European Union the Home Office developed an EU action plan on human trafficking which was adopted at the JHA Ministerial Council on 1-2 December 2005. This plan takes an end-to-end approach to the issue and includes specific measures to prevent trafficking into and within the EU.

Police

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress with proposals to merge West Mercia police force with other forces. [69968]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 11 May 2006]: Following the announcement by the previous Home Secretary (Mr. Clarke) on 3 March of his intention to merge the four existing forces in the West Midlands region into one strategic force, we are now in the four-month period for objections to be formulated by the police forces, police authorities and local authorities involved and submitted to the Home Secretary by 2 July.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to continue with his predecessor's plans to abolish the West Mercia police force. [71956]

Mr. McNulty: The strategic objectives set by the previous Home Secretary (Mr. Clarke) were based on the considered evaluation of Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary. It is clear that the present strategic structure of our police service is not fit for purpose in many ways and so the status quo is not an option. The strategic goals outlined by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary and the work done so far point us in the right direction.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to meet representatives of the four Welsh police forces and police authorities to discuss the proposed merger of police forces in Wales. [72968]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 22 May 2006]: I met Welsh Assembly Minister Edwina Hart and the four chief constables of the Welsh forces on 1 June to discuss the proposed merger of police forces in Wales. I will also meet with the police authority chairs shortly.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he expects the number of police officers on patrol at a given time to be affected if constabularies are combined; and if he will make a statement. [67096]

Mr. McNulty: Restructuring of the police service is about strengthening policing and ensuring that all police forces across England and Wales have the required capacity, capability and resilience to provide the most effective policing to the communities they serve. The number of police officers in each strategic force and how they are deployed is a matter for the chief constable concerned.

We are committed to basic command units including neighbourhood policing being at the centre of the new strategic police forces providing local policing to local communities. The proposed new strategic forces should reduce the likelihood of abstractions of patrol officers to major and high profile investigations.

We are undertaking to increase the time spent by police officers on front line duties. At the end of 2003-04 63.6 per cent. of police officer time was spent on front-line duties. We have set a target for an overall improvement to 72.5 per cent. by March 2008.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the work of police witness care units; and if he will make a statement. [39193]

Mr. McNulty: Joint police and Crown Prosecution Service Witness Care Units (WCUs) were piloted in 2003 in 5 areas, Gwent, Essex, North Wales, South Yorkshire and the West Midlands. An independent evaluation of these pilots found that witness attendance at court improved by nearly 20 per cent. and that there was an overall increase of six per cent. in victim and witness satisfaction. It also showed that the number of trials which had to be adjourned as a result of witness difficulties decreased by 27 per cent. and that there was a 17 per cent. reduction in 'cracked' trials where the witness withdrew their statement or did not attend. There was a 10 per cent. increase in the number of 'positive' cracked trials where the defendant entered a late guilty plea.

Building on the success of these pilots, Witness Care Units were rolled out across all 42 criminal justices areas in England and Wales under the No Witness No Justice project. Full coverage was achieved in line with our target of December 2005, with 165 Witness Care Units now in operation.

Although relatively new, Witness Care Units have already demonstrated their effectiveness. The number of trials that did not go ahead as planned because a witness did not attend was reduced from a national average of 908 in September 2004 to 727 in August 2005, a decrease of almost 20 per cent. In those cases handled by Witness Care Units, the witness attendance rate has increased from 78.5 per cent. in the 3 months before WCUs went live to 84 per cent. in August 2005.

A sustainability plan for the project is currently being developed which will provide a detailed analysis of the benefits of Witness Care Units, taking into account savings in time for the police, prosecutors and court officials, reductions in cracked and ineffective trials and savings in legal costs.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the areas that (a) have and (b) do not have Witness Care Units; and if he will make a statement. [59194]

Mr. McNulty: The Government met their target to have full national coverage of Witness Care Units by the end of 2005. There are now 165 Witness Care Units in operation across every criminal justice area in England and Wales.

Witness Care Units are a vital part of the Government's drive to improve support for victims and witnesses. Witness Care Units, jointly staffed by the Crown Prosecution Service and the police, have helped to move the criminal justice system from a concept of partnership to a reality, where Government, agencies and practitioners work together to deliver better services for the public.

It is important that witnesses are valued, kept informed and looked after whether or not they are called upon to attend court. Witness Care Units ensure that witnesses receive a more thoughtful and tailor-made service, with their individual needs considered from the time a statement is first taken by the police. If the case proceeds to court, witnesses will have a single point of contact to keep them up to date on how the case is proceeding, if and when they are required to give evidence and what the final outcome is.

Post-Retirement Employment

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in his Department. [68969]

Mr. Byrne: In the non-agency Home Office, staff below senior civil service grades currently have the option to retire at any point between the ages of 60 and 65 subject to attendance, performance and disciplinary requirements which are applicable to all staff irrespective of age. A member of staff may ask to remain beyond the age of 65, but permission will normally only be granted on an exceptional basis where there is a particular operational business need.

Information about staff in the Identity and Passport Service and Her Majesty's Prison Service are shown in the following table.

	'Standard' retirement age	May opt to stay until

Prison Staff (Bonuses)

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) staff and (b) governors at each open prison received bonuses in each year since 1999 to 2000; what the cost of such bonuses was at each prison in each year; and if he will make a statement. [74874]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on special bonuses has only been recorded centrally since September 2000. Obtaining information prior to this date would entail disproportionate cost. Information on the number and total value of bonuses awarded within each Open prison between 1 September and 31 December 2000 is contained in the following table.

To avoid identifying individuals where the number of bonuses recorded was low, exact figures of less than four are not provided.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many inmates there were at (a) HMP Grendon and (b) HMP Springhill in each of the last 10 years; and what the level of resourcing was at each in each year; [65592]

(2) if he will increase the number of places for women in open prisons. [65595]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following tables provide information on: the numbers of inmates held in Her Majesty's Prison Grendon and Her Majesty's Prison Spring Hill for each year since 1996, as recorded on the Prison Service IT system; the numbers of staff serving at the prisons, as provided from the Prison Service personnel system; and the cost figures for the prisons for the financial years between 1996-97 and 2004-05, as are available in the published Her Majesty's Prison Service Annual Report and Accounts.

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 18 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1212-4W, on Leyhill open prison, how many of the prisoners who have absconded since 1999 have been recaptured; if he will restate the table to show those recaptured by year of abscond and offence; and if he will make a statement. [73472]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 25 May 2006]: Available data indicate that since 1999 there have been 393 absconds from Leyhill prison. Of these, 365 prisoners have been recaptured since 1999. Details of these are given in the table. In addition to those recaptured a further four prisoners who were unlawfully at large have died.

Mr. Sutcliffe: Since 1 January 2001, 169 prisoners have absconded from Springhill open prison. 13 prisoners have not yet been apprehended. Details of the absconders and those remaining unlawfully at large are provided in the following tables.

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have absconded from Ford prison since 21 May; how many were (a) awaiting deportation and (b) being considered for deportation; and if he will make a statement. [75225]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Six prisoners, all foreign nationals, have absconded from Ford open prison since 21 May 2006. Of these two were being considered for deportation and four had been notified to IND but no decision had been reached on enforcement proceedings.

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign national prisoners are being held in Ford prison; and how many of them are (a) awaiting deportation and (b) being considered for deportation. [75227]

Mr. Sutcliffe: None. All foreign national prisoners were removed from Ford prison on 26 May 2006 and returned to closed conditions where they will be subject to full and rigorous risk assessment before any decision is made on the level of security they require.

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to review the risk assessment procedures for prisoners who are awaiting deportation, or being considered for deportation, before they are accepted to open prisons. [75228]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Following a review of the criteria for the categorisation of foreign national prisoners and their allocation to open conditions in May, the Prison Service concluded that no changes were required of the policy. However, governors have been instructed to take into account recent public statements made by Ministers, including the Prime Minister, regarding the likelihood of deportation when considering foreign national prisoners for category D status and allocation to open conditions. The overriding purpose of the security classification must be to ensure that prisoners are retained in custody with a level of security that is consistent with the need to protect the public.

Probation Service

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders were placed under supervision of the probation service by the courts in 2005-06. [75392]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The latest available information shows that some 137,624 offenders started court order supervision by the probation service in the year from 1 October 2004 to 30 September 2005.

Promotion Boards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what promotion boards have been held in his Department in each of the last five years. [72877]

Mr. Byrne: Annual promotion boards have not been held in the Home Office since 2000.

Prosecutions (Northern Ireland)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of cases brought for prosecution by the Public Prosecution Service in Northern Ireland resulted in conviction in each of the last 10 years. [74424]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to reply.

The Public Prosecution Service, which when fully rolled out will be responsible for all prosecutions arising from police investigations, only came into existence in June 2005. Prior to that date, the Department of the Director of Public Prosecutions was only responsible for the conduct of the more serious criminal cases and the bulk of prosecutions in the magistrates court were conducted by the police. The police continue to conduct prosecutions in the magistrates court in those areas not yet covered by the PPS. The figures provided in the tables reflect, therefore, only those cases conducted by the PPS or the old Department of the DPP.

Figures are only available for the past five years following the introduction of a Case Management System.

The figures for the magistrates court are:

	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06

Road Traffic Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the Parliamentary Advisory Committee on Transportation Safety on (a) the enforcement of and (b) other issues connected with sections (i) 14 and (ii) 15 of the Road Traffic Act 1988; and if he will make a statement. [75631]

Mr. Coaker: My officials are in regular contact with the Parliamentary Advisory Council for Transport Safety and discuss a range of roads policing issues. The wearing of seat belts has not however featured specifically in recent discussions. The enforcement of requirements as to the wearing of seat belts is an operational matter for the police.

Serious Organised Crime Agency

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what targets he plans to set the Serious Organised Crime Agency for tackling fraud. [72087]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Secretary's letter setting priorities for the Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) in its first year of operation has been laid before Parliament. The priorities set out there include tackling organised crime threats from fraud against individuals and the private sector. The SOCA Board has subsequently determined that approximately 10 per cent. of its overall effort should be devoted to fraud.

The Home Secretary has set a broad performance framework for SOCA within which its performance will be judged on its ability to contribute to the reduction of the harm caused to the UK by serious crime. The measures on which SOCA will be judged will include the quality of its knowledge and understanding of the crime networks and markets in its priority areas, and the dislocation that it is achieving in respect of those networks and markets.

Student Visas

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign students from (a) Nigeria, (b) Pakistan, (c) Ghana and (d) Bangladesh remain in the UK having outstayed their student visa. [72381]

Mr. Byrne: This information is not available.

Terror Suspects

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of whether foreign national terror suspects are on the electoral roll fraudulently. [74086]

Mr. Byrne: I am advised that we have no specific intelligence that foreign terror suspects are fraudulently registering as electors.

If the hon. Member has particular information relating to this practice he should pass it to the appropriate authorities.

Terrorist Attacks (Compensation)

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much compensation has been allocated to people affected by terrorist attacks in the UK in the last 24 months. [74616]

Mr. McNulty: Compensation for people injured in terrorist attacks in Great Britain is paid from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme. There is a separate, broadly similar scheme in Northern Ireland for people injured there.

The compensation provision available to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority for incidents occurring in Great Britain was augmented by £5 million in 2005-06 to cover the extra costs of compensation arising from the 7/7 bombings. A further £2.5 million is being provided in the current financial year for the victims of the 7/7 bombings outside the terms of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme.

Payments made to victims of terrorist incidents occurring in the last 24 months total £2.12 million to date. These payments are all in respect of the London bombings.

Other payments made in the last 24 months in respect of all previous terrorist incidents total £1.06 million. These payments relate to the London (Soho) bombing of 1999 and the Manchester bombing of 1996, and include both final awards and interim awards.

The Government also contributed £1 million to the London Bombings Relief Charitable Fund, which has made payments totalling around £8 million to victims of the London bombings.

Trafficking Convention

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress is being made towards the Government being in a position to sign the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings. [73140]

Mr. Coaker: We have been looking into the various provisions contained in the Council of Europe Convention on trafficking and have been gathering evidence from our European partners about best practice in member states, the impact of provision of support for the victims of trafficking and any impact that provisions including recovery and reflection periods have had.

We are also engaging actively with the key non-governmental organisations and others working in the field of human trafficking to ensure that we explore thoroughly with them the potential benefits and disadvantages of the approach set out in the Convention.

We launched a public consultation on our strategy to combat trafficking in human beings 5 January 2006 this has now closed. We anticipate developing an action plan which takes a comprehensive end-to-end approach covering the different elements of our anti-trafficking strategy. The consultation document asked for views on whether the UK should sign up to the Convention these will be considered in our decision. A summary of responses from the consultation will be published on 21 June.

Under-age Drinking

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he proposes to take to eliminate (a) under-age drinking and (b) the use of false identification documents by under-aged youths to purchase alcohol. [74531]

Mr. McNulty: The Government are determined to tackle sales of alcohol to under-18s. Enforcement of the law takes place on a daily basis through test-purchase operations carried out by Police and Trading Standards officers. In addition to this regular activity, the fourth national Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaign (AMEC 4) is currently under way. Part of this includes the provision of extra funding for up to 5,000 test-purchase operations during the four-week period of the campaign. Those who sell to under-18s risk a £80 fixed penalty notice, or prosecution. Licensees selling to under 18s additionally risk having their licence reviewed and conditions applied, or even having their license revoked.

The Violent Crime Reduction Bill currently before Parliament establishes a new offence of persistently selling alcohol to under-18s. If three sales are made in three consecutive months, the new offence will be committed, and the licensee risks a fine of £10,000 and having their licence suspended for 3 months. The police can offer the licensee the option of avoiding prosecution by closing their premises for 48 hours.

In addition to enforcement activity, Ministers and officials from the Home Office and the Department of Culture, Media and Sport are working very closely with the licensed industry, and have secured commitments from both the off-licensed sector and the on-licensed sector to seek to eliminate sales of alcohol to children. Progress against these commitments will be monitored closely through test-purchase failure rates.

The Government are aware of the problems faced by young people when wishing to prove their age or purchase age-restricted products, also by retailers when requesting proof of identity. Consequently, the Government are working with the British Retail Consortium's Proof of Age Standards Scheme (PASS) which validates the variety of proof of age card schemes available. This allows card schemes to apply for accreditation under PASS and entitles them to issue cards displaying the PASS holographic logo. This is easily recognisable both to retailers and young people and helps them know that they have a proof of age document which should be accepted. The logo is trademark registered, making it an offence to forge. In the longer term, the identity card can be used as proof of age as well as proof of identity, however, this is a few years away from introduction.

Volunteers Return Scheme

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of foreign nationals given financial or practical assistance under the volunteers return scheme who have not yet left the UK. [73522]

Mr. Byrne: Reintegration assistance payable under the voluntary returns programmes is only payable to returnees on return to their country of origin. The International Organization of Migration (IOM) provides returnees with counselling and information in the UK, coach transport to Heathrow airport, IOM representation and assistance to the departure gate.

Under the enhanced VARRP programme, returnees also receive a £500 resettlement grant at the departure airport.

Work Permits

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether NHS trusts will be able to remove from shortlists doctors who require work permits but who had already been selected for interview before the new regulations came into force. [74603]

Mr. Byrne: The changes to the Immigration Rules for Postgraduate Doctors and Dentists were announced by the Department of Health on 7 March 2006. We put transitional arrangements in place for those who had been offered a recognised training post before this date and which commences before 4 August 2006.

Those offered a post on or after 7 March 2006 would not be covered by these transitional arrangements, and the employer would need to show why they could not fill their post with a resident worker in order to be granted a work permit for a non-EEA national.

The new Rules came into effect on 3 April 2006. Before this date, those meeting the old Rules would still have been eligible for leave as a Postgraduate Doctor or Dentist.

The full transitional arrangements are available on the IND website at www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Code of Conduct for Councillors

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when the revisions to the code of conduct for councillors are expected to be introduced. [74466]

Mr. Woolas: We intend to consult on a draft revised code of conduct for local authority members later this year, with the view, subject to the outcome of this consultation, to implementing an amended code next year.

Council Tax

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what policies the Group Valuation Office has on photographing homes for council tax re-banding purposes; and how the Group Valuation Office selects homes that are to be photographed. [75951]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency has a public fact sheet, "Council Tax—Inspections and Photography". This provides a summary of the Agency's policy on photographing homes for council tax purposes as set out in their Council Tax Manual. Both the Manual and the fact sheet are available on their website www.voa.gov.uk. A copy of the fact sheet and the relevant extract from the Manual will be placed in the Library. Photographs are taken, where Valuation Office Agency staff consider them to be of use in undertaking the statutory tasks of compiling and maintaining council tax valuation lists.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) EU foreign nationals and (b) non-EU foreign nationals have been employed in his Department in each of the last 5 years; what vetting procedures are in place for each category of staff; and whether these include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. [68025]

Angela E. Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not readily available and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department's procedures for security vetting comply with the policy set out to Parliament by the then Prime Minister on 15 December 1994, which came into force on 1 January 1995. All staff who require security clearance for their posts in the Department are subject to this policy, regardless of their nationality.

Local Authorities (Standards Committees)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what advice she has given to local authorities on (a) steps they should take to recruit independent members of Standards Committees and (b) support and training which should be made available to monitoring officers. [74467]

Mr. Woolas: The Relevant Authorities (Standards Committee) Regulations 2001 (SI 2001/2812) set out procedures for appointing independent members of standards committees. The Standards Board for England has also issued guidance, as it is empowered to do by The Standards Board for England (Functions) Order 2004 (SI 2004/2618), to local authority monitoring officers to assist them in undertaking their roles.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Election Expenditure

Mr. Bone: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what recent meetings the Commission has held to discuss limits on expenditure by candidates in general elections. [75054]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that it has held no recent meetings to discuss candidates' expenses limits at general elections. It is, however, planning a series of meetings with party representatives over the summer on the regulation of candidates' election expenses. Reports of these meetings will form part of its contribution to Sir Hayden Phillips' review of the funding of political parties.

TRANSPORT

Automatic Number Plate Recognition Cameras

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how data captured by Automatic Number Plate Recognition cameras is stored; who has access to the data; and if he will make a statement. [74812]

Dr. Ladyman: Three of Department for Transport's Agencies operate Automatic Number Plate Recognition (ANPR) systems, DVLA, VOSA, and Highways Agency.

Data from DVLA's ANPR cameras are used solely by DVLA for VED enforcement. In addition, DVLA complies in all respects with the BSI code of practice on the storage of digital evidence, which covers the secure handling of data through the use of access controls and tight audit trails.

Data from VOSA's eight mobile ANPR cameras is used solely by VOSA for intelligence gathering to enable targeted enforcement. VOSA hold 11 databases such as test certificate and O licence that are used to identify non-compliant operators. Intelligence gathered is encrypted and saved to disk then down loaded to the back office function. Access is via a decryption key held by the Intelligence officer. In addition, VOSA complies in all respects with the BSI code of practice on the storage of digital evidence, which covers the secure handling of data through the use of access controls and tight audit trails.

The ANPR data gathered by the ANPR cameras operated by the National Traffic Control Centre (NTCC) has two characters dropped from the number plate before being encrypted, creating a depersonalised record, which is transmitted back to the NTCC. Once this has been matched to a record from an adjacent camera or a defined period has lapsed the data is deleted. The only information being retained being the average journey time for that section at that time. No one has access to the full number plate data.

There are 108 ANPR cameras around the Birmingham box (M5, M6 and M42). 63 feed to roadside readers which are downloaded by consultants working for the HA. The information is used for traffic flow monitoring, journey time reliability and performance monitoring of schemes such as the M42 Active Traffic Management Scheme. The HA is only given reports and depersonalised information.

45 further cameras feed back to the West Midlands Police Control Office (who are the data owner) and the HA is provided with depersonalised data for traffic management purposes.

Bicycle Accidents

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents involving bicycles were reported on (a) roads and (b) pavements in (i) Kingston and Surbiton constituency, (ii) South West London and (iii) London in each year since 1997. [74780]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of personal injury accidents reported to the police involving one or more bicycles, by whether the bicycles were on the road or the pavement at the time of the accident, in (i) the constituency of Kingston and Surbiton (ii) the strategic health authority of South-West London (iii) and London for 1997 to 2004 (the latest year for which figures are available) are shown in the table.

[1] The accidents in these columns are those that occurred in the 2004 boundary for Kingston and Surbiton constituency.
[2] There is the possibility of double counting between these rows if an accident involved two or more bicycles and at least one was on the pavement and at least one was on the road.

[4] The Strategic Health Authority of South West London, comprises of the London Boroughs of Croydon, Kingston-upon-Thames, Richmond-upon-Thames, Sutton, Merton and Wandsworth.

Illegal Drivers

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many drivers he estimates are driving in the UK without having taken a driving test. [75342]

Dr. Ladyman: It is not known how many full driving licence holders have never taken a driving test.

The Road Traffic Act 1934 introduced tests of competence to drive. This Act, however, provided an exemption from the need to take a driving test for those drivers who had held a provisional licence prior to 1 April 1934. Also between 18 February 1947 and 17 February 1948 provisional licences obtained during the Second World War were converted to full licences without the requirement to sit a driving test.

Records kept at this time did not distinguish between full licence holders who obtained full entitlement as a consequence of passing a test and those who relied on the exemptions contained in the appropriate Acts.

Red Traffic Signals

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the likely impact on road casualties of adopting a policy of allowing vehicles to make a left turn at red traffic signals. [75928]

Dr. Ladyman: The proposal for 'turn left on red' is not considered suitable for traffic management purposes in this country.

Although there are similarities between the road traffic signalling systems in the UK and abroad, there are also differences. Many other countries use fixed time signals, where the green period is based on average flows. These periods will not necessarily be proportional to the actual flow. 'Turn right (left) on red' is often used to overcome resultant delays. The majority in the UK are either vehicle actuated or connected to an Urban Traffic Control system using 'live' information. Timings are proportional to the flow and 'turn left on red' would not afford the same advantage.

There are also differences in junction type. Where 'turn right (left) on red' is used, for example in the United States, most junctions have good visibility between side and main road traffic. Many junctions in the UK have poor intervisibility because of existing buildings and the junction geometry. Any uncontrolled movements from the side road would involve increased risks and an increased accident potential at the junction.

Also, in the UK many pedestrian phases display a green figure on the 'side road' while a red is shown to the 'main road'. Allowing vehicles to turn left on red would pose increased risks to all pedestrians, especially vulnerable road users such as blind and partially sighted pedestrians, who are often given audible and/or tactile signals as an indication that all conflicting vehicular movements have stopped.

Studies in the mid-1970s, in six states of the USA where 'turn right on red' was introduced, showed that pedestrian and cyclist accidents increased, ranging from 48 per cent. to 123 per cent. Vulnerable groups showed the greatest increase.

Number Plates

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport under what legislation the Register of Number Plate Suppliers was introduced and is maintained; and if he will make a statement. [75519]

Dr. Ladyman: The Register of Number Plate Suppliers was introduced in the Vehicles (Crime) Act 2001 (VGA) and is maintained by the same legislation. The Road Safety Bill currently going through Parliament will amend the VGA by extending the scheme to Scotland and Northern Ireland, giving the Secretary of State enforcement powers to prosecute errant suppliers and outlawing so called "show plates".

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the operation of the Road Vehicles (Display of Registration Marks) Regulations 2001; what recent representations he has received about the operation of these regulations; and whether he plans to amend the Regulations. [75520]

Dr. Ladyman: The Road Vehicles (Display of Registration Marks) Regulations 2001 are operating well. I have not had any recent representations about the operation of these regulations and presently have no plans to amend them.

Road Accidents

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road accidents in England and Wales were a direct result of (a) speeding and (b) driving under the influence of (i) drink and (ii) drugs in each year since 1997, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [75382]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not available.

Road Traffic Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will produce an annual report on the operation of section (a) 14 and (b) 15 of the Road Traffic Act 1988; and if he will make a statement. [75521]

Dr. Ladyman: There are no plans to produce such an annual report. TRL Ltd. already publishes an annual report on observed seat belt wearing rates on behalf of the Department and the Home Office publishes annual figures for prosecutions including seat belt wearing offences.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Alcohol/Drugs

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken to encourage a no-drug policy in schools. [74855]

Jim Knight: "Drugs: Guidance for Schools" issued to all schools by the Department in March 2004 makes it clear that drugs have no place in schools. The guidance outlines a range of strategies, including drug testing of pupils, which schools can adopt to ensure a drug-free school. We also expect that all schools should have a drug policy available to all pupils and parents. We have made clear that where pupils are permanently excluded for supplying an illegal drug, the Secretary of State would not normally expect the governing body or the independent appeal panel to reinstate the pupil. We will also be conducting an evaluation study of drug testing in maintained schools.

The standards in the DfES guidance are supported by the Government-funded certification programme for teachers of Personal Social and Health Education and by the National Healthy School Programme.

Biological Diversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which Minister in his Department is responsible for monitoring his Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if he will make a statement. [73945]

Jim Knight: Under Section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000, Ministers and Government Departments have a duty to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity. This has been replaced by a similar provision under Section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act, which comes into effect on 1 October 2006. The Department for Education and Skills has taken a number of steps to benefit biodiversity including:

the ongoing consultation on a Sustainable Schools Strategy in which the natural environment plays a major part: www.dfes.gov.uk/consultations the requirement for all major new build and refurbishment projects in schools to achieve a minimum "BREEAM Schools" rating of very good;

promoting the preservation and enhancement of the biodiversity of schools through a range of criteria in the Land Use and Ecology section of the methodology: www.breeam.org/schools launching a Sustainable Schools web portal for teachers on 9 June 2006: www.teachernet.gov.uk/sustainableschools

Class Sizes

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average secondary school class size was in (a) Cornwall and (b) England in 2005-06. [72782]

Jim Knight: The requested information is given in the table.

Maintained secondary schools[1]: Average class size[2,3]—January 2006 (provisional)

	Average class size
England	21.5
Cornwall local authority area	21.9

[1] Includes middle schools as deemed.
[2] Classes as taught during a single selected period in each school on the day of the census in January.
[3] Classes taught by one teacher.

Education and Inspections Bill

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations he has received regarding the mergers provisions of the Education and Inspections Bill. [73911]

Jim Knight: We have received two representations regarding the amalgamation of schools and how the process by which two or more schools are closed and a single new school is opened using the predecessor schools' sites is affected under the school competition provisions of the Education and Inspections Bill.

GCSEs

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of GCSE students in (a) the London borough of Havering and (b) other London boroughs achieved five or more C grades or higher in 2004-05. [75452]

Jim Knight: 61.2 per cent. of pupils at the end of key stage 4 achieved five or more GCSEs or equivalents[1] at grades A* to C in 2005 in the London borough of Havering. The following table shows the proportion in other London boroughs.

Government office region[2]—local authority	Number of end of Key Stage 4 pupils	Percentage of pupils achieving 5+ A-C grades*

Teachers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on teacher retention in the London borough of Havering. [75570]

Jim Knight: There were 2,050 full-time equivalent teachers in maintained schools in Havering in January 2005, compared to 1,870 full-time equivalent teachers in 1997. In January 2005, there were 13 full-time vacancies in Havering, or 1.4 per cent. of full-time teachers in post in the maintained sector. In January 1997, there were nine full-time teacher posts vacant, or 0.5 per cent. of full-time teachers in post.

Significant increases in London teachers' pay, including doubling the threshold payment in 2003 for good experienced teachers in London, have provided a clear incentive for teachers to stay in the capital. Since 2004, school teachers in London have been able to use interest free loans of up to £100,000 through the key worker living initiative to help them afford the cost of homes. 1,800 teachers were helped to buy homes between April 2004 and March 2006 under the scheme which continues until 2008.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Africa

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with African (a) leaders and (b) parliamentarians regarding corruption in Africa; and if he will make a statement. [73581]

Hilary Benn: Corruption is a serious problem in much of Africa. DFID is supporting a wide range of activities to help countries detect and take action against corruption. Some of the recent discussions I have had with African leaders and parliamentarians about corruption are outlined below.

When I visited the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) in October 2005, the main focus was to urge the Congolese Government to tackle corruption—particularly within the army pay system.

I had frank discussions with President Kibaki of Kenya about corruption when I visited in January 2006. Since then some steps, including the removal of three senior Ministers, has taken place in response to public pressure following the release of the Githongo dossier and Goldenberg report. This is an encouraging start but Kenyans are calling for more to be done. When I met President Kibaki again recently, I stressed the importance of continued progress in the corruption investigations. I have also met several Kenyan Members of Parliament (MPs) to discuss progress on corruption and specifically the Public Accounts Committee report on the so-called Anglo-Leasing affair.

I met President Kagame and Ministers in Rwanda in November 2005. Discussions focused on the Rwanda-UK Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) which covers corruption among other issues.

When visiting Tanzania in May 2006, President Kikwete and I focused discussions on corruption and growth. Following progress made by his predecessor Benjamin Mpaka, President Kikwete is determined to improve governance and tackle high-level corruption.

I met President Museveni when I visited Uganda in May 2006. I discussed the President's commitment to tackle corruption made in his election manifesto and subsequent public statements.

President Mwanawasa of Zambia and I met in February 2005 and emphasised the importance of continued commitment to combating corruption and continuing improvement of public financial management.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent representations his Department has made to the World Bank regarding its Africa Plan; and if he will make a statement. [73583]

Hilary Benn: The World Bank's Africa Action Plan, endorsed by Bank Governors at their annual meeting in Washington in September 2005, forms part of the Bank's response to the commitments made at Gleneagles last June. DFID officials discuss the Plan regularly with Bank staff. I raised implementation of its recommendations at the Bank's spring meetings in April this year, and look forward to discussing progress in the first year by the time of this year's annual meeting of Governors in September.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the implications of the World Bank Africa Plan for efforts to address climate change; and if he will make a statement. [73582]

Hilary Benn: The World Bank's Africa Action Plan does not specifically address climate change. However, the World Bank fully recognises the severity of the impact climate change will have in Africa and is committed to helping countries address these. It is also looking at improving the ways African countries can benefit from a global shift towards cleaner energy, through carbon finance projects, for example.

Last year at Gleneagles the G8 asked the World Bank to lead the development of a new global investment framework to speed up the adoption of cleaner energy in developing countries to help address climate change. As part of this framework the World Bank is also developing approaches to help countries adapt to the impact of climate change. This work was discussed by governors at the World Bank's Spring Meetings in April. In my written statement to the Development Committee at the Spring Meetings I welcomed the valuable work the World Bank had done so far and stressed the need for this to be developed further by the Annual Meetings in September. I also said that helping member countries meet the challenges of climate change should be a key objective of the World Bank over the coming years. The statement is available on DFID's website at:

www.dfid.gov.uk

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to improve the governance of the Democratic Republic of Congo's natural resource wealth. [74834]

Hilary Benn: Improving the management of natural resource and improving revenue generation in the DRC is one of the main features of DFID's Country

Engagement Plan for DRC. DFID funded the non-governmental organisation Global Witness to conduct research on natural resources in the Great Lakes region, and we have now developed a plan for long term involvement in the sector.

DFID and the World Bank have been leading support to the implementation of the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI) in DRC—which aims to improve revenue transparency between government and mining companies.

DFID is also involved in the development of the World Bank's plans to support implementation of the DRC's forestry code—to ensure it provides for a sustainable timber business in DRC, and protects the livelihoods of forest dwelling communities and the environment.

We are now developing a large programme of support to the minerals sector. This is likely to include continuing support to the implementation of the EITI, support for efforts to improve the regulation of companies involved in minerals extraction, and developing partnerships with the private sector to provide services to mining communities.

Departmental Office Expenditure

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much was spent on the running of the Department's office in (a) Accra, (b) Luanda, (c) Makurdi, (d) Kinshasa, (e) Banjul, (f) Nairobi, (g) Maseru, (h) Lilongwe, (i) Maputo, (j) Kigali, (k) Khartoum, (l) Dar es Salaam, (m) Kampala, (n) Lusaka, (o) Harare, (p) Addis Ababa, (q) Bujumbura, (r) Abuga, (s) Ekiti, (t) Jigawa and (u) Enugu in 2004-05. [73560]

Hilary Benn: The following table shows how much was spent (on administrative resources) running these offices during the financial year 2004-05:

Office	Cost (£ million)
(a) Accra—Ghana	2.637
(b) Luanda—Angola	0.397
(c) Makurdi—Nigeria	0.140

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many staff in his Department have had (a) 5 or more, (b) 4, (c) 3 and (d) 2 periods of sick leave of less than 5 days in each of the last 3 years. [72999]

Mr. Thomas: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

DFID is committed to managing sickness absence effectively. Our average working days sick absence per staff year fell from 7 days in 2003 to 4.8 days in 2004. Figures for 2005 are not yet available. We are currently in the process of reviewing our data retrieval requirements with the objective of increasing our ability to access information on a more flexible basis than at present.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many and what percentage of staff in his Department are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension. [73003]

Mr. Thomas: Members of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) can pay additional contributions to top up their pension either through the Civil Service Additional Voluntary Contributions Scheme (CSAVCS), a money purchase arrangement, or by buying added years of service in the PCSPS. As an alternative to membership of the PCSPS recruits from 1 October 2002 have been able to join a stakeholder arrangement, the partnership pension account.

The number and percentage of staff in the Department for International Development who are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension as at 26 May 2006 are shown in the table.

	Number	Percentage
CSAVCS	50	2.73
Added Years	120	6.56
Partnership	27	1.48

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures of (a) project and (b) staff performance are in place in his Department. [74831]

Mr. Thomas: The information requested is as follows.

(a) DFID rates the performance of its projects and programmes on a five point scale. This assessment is required for all bilateral projects/programmes with a commitment value of £1 million or more and takes place annually while the project is running and at the completion of the project.

DFID uses this performance information in our Public Service Agreement (PSA) 'value for money' target.

(b) Beginning in 2006 DFID has introduced staff performance arrangements which focus on individual delivery of outputs against agreed objectives. There are three categories of performance:

Performing to a very high standard

Performing well

Most in need of development

Assessments are completed annually at the end of March.

Ethiopia

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to ensure that UK aid to Ethiopia is not used for military spending; and what estimate he has made of the proportion of Ethiopian GDP that its defence spending represents. [74615]

Hilary Benn: For this Ethiopian fiscal year, 2005-06, defence expenditure is budgeted to amount to 2.9 per cent. of GDP. In recent years, the Ethiopian Government has maintained its defence budget in constant cash terms, so it has declined as a percentage of GDP.

We no longer provide budget support to the Government of Ethiopia and all our funds are provided for specific purposes. We receive regular accounts of expenditures and monitor the delivery of services.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what account was taken of the disputed election in Ethiopia in allocating UK aid to that country. [74620]

Hilary Benn: My written statement of 24 January 2006 explained to the House that as a result of concerns over human rights and governance in Ethiopia following the disputed 2005 election, UK and all other donors who had been giving direct budget support to the Government of Ethiopia has decided to withhold this form of support. We wrote to the Minister of Finance in December to explain this decision.

I made clear that the UK would work with other donors to continue to support the poorest people in Ethiopia. On 26 May, I announced approval of the Protection of Basic Services Grant, which has been developed by the World Bank and DFID. Through this grant, funds will be earmarked for use at the regional and local level to deliver essential services in education, health, agriculture and water. There will be a strong focus on transparency and accountability. The World Bank will provide over £120 million of funding, and DFID will provide £94 million over two years. The Netherlands will also be contributing and other donors are considering contributions.

I will place a statement in the House setting out more information on these two schemes shortly.

Guinea

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) whether his Department is involved in planning for the Guinean 2007 legislative elections; [74828]

(2) whether his Department is providing assistance to Guinea (a) to reform the country's electoral commission and (b) for other political reforms; [74841]

(3) whether his Department is supporting the development of rural radio stations in Guinea. [74829]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development's support to Guinea in these areas is through the European Union's assistance programme to improve the climate for democracy and the rule of law. Following commitments made by the Guinean authorities in April 2005, the EU agreed to unspent funding being used for programmes supporting the poorest parts of society, for civil society and the promotion of good governance, democracy and human rights. It includes:

plans to provide £6 million for the 2007 legislative elections in addition to £2 million in support of the 2005 local elections; assistance to the Electoral Commission provided as part of the local election support, but the Guinean authorities now need to demonstrate their willingness to reform the Commission; plans for a good governance project. Though support will depend on the willingness of the Guinean authorities to implement reforms; plans for support to civil society, including private radio stations. However EU conditions for funding have not yet been met by the Guinean authorities.

We shall continue to monitor the progress made.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding his Department has allocated to Guinea over the next three years. [74840]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development does not have a bilateral development programme in Guinea nor plans to establish one. We provide support through the European Union and multilateral agencies, which amounted to an estimated £7.8 million in 2003.

We are concerned about the political and humanitarian situation, and provided £750,000 in preventative humanitarian assistance in 2005-06. A similar commitment is planned this financial year.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by his Department in each year since 2001; in what capacities they were employed; how many were discovered as part of a criminal investigation; and what the nature of the charges brought against them were. [73957]

Mr. Thomas: I can confirm that no illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by DFID since 2001. Nationality checks are carried out as part of the recruitment process before any individual is appointed to DFID. We have not included any agency workers, contractors or consultants as these individuals are not employed directly by DFID.

Nepal

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what direct funding his Department has allocated to the Government of Nepal in 2006-07; and what provision has been made within that amount for the establishment of a Defence Ministry. [73724]

Mr. Thomas [holding answer 25 May 2006]: DFID currently plans to provide £6.8 million in direct assistance to the Government of Nepal in the financial year 2006-07. This will support Government programmes in health, basic education, rural roads and agriculture, all of which target poor people.

The total planned bilateral DFID assistance for 2006-07 is currently £30 million, with the £23.2 million balance being channelled mainly through non-Government organisations, multilateral organisations, or directly through DFID—administered projects. In many of these projects, the Government of Nepal is an important partner, even though DFID funds do not go through the Government budget.

No provision has been made from DFID's bilateral programme for support to the Nepali Defence Ministry.

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the UK has provided support to ensure the ceasefire in Nepal is effectively monitored. [74180]

Mr. Thomas: The issue of ceasefire monitoring is currently under negotiation between the Government of Nepal and the Maoists, and no arrangements are yet in place. The UK Government recognise the need for effective ceasefire monitoring and the importance of sufficient resources being made available by the international community. The interdepartmental Global Conflict Prevention Pool (GCPP) is a potential source of UK funding and this is currently being considered.

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the UK has restructured its aid to Nepal in order to support the new democratic Government in Nepal. [74181]

Mr. Thomas: The recent political developments in Nepal offer an important new opportunity to make progress towards a lasting peace and a return to multi-party democracy. DFID is currently considering, with other donors and other UK Government Departments, how best to respond to the new situation, so that development assistance contributes effectively to peace, democracy, poverty reduction and social inclusion of marginalised groups. Early priorities are likely to include support for ceasefire monitoring; voter education and other help relating to a constituent assembly; and resources to improve access by the poor to essential services and infrastructure. In addition to DFID's bilateral programme, consideration is also being given to financial and technical support to the peace process from the interdepartmental Global Conflict Prevention Pool (GCPP).

The EU is currently discussing what peace building support it can provide to Nepal, and the UK expects the EU to consider positively any requests by the Nepalese Government for assistance.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on progress of the analytical framework for donor assistance in Nepal. [74830]

Mr. Thomas: Multilateral and bilateral donors are considering how best to help Nepal make progress towards a lasting peace and a return to multi-party democracy. Donors are committed to close co-ordination among themselves and with the Government. This should ensure that aid funds and advice are well targeted; are provided in ways that are easy to use; avoid duplication; and do not place unnecessary demands on the new Government.

Donor assistance can help in three broad areas: direct support for the peace process (such as ceasefire monitoring); building confidence in the peace process by ensuring that poor and excluded groups see real improvements in their quality of life; and by building the capacity of state institutions to function effectively and thereby gain people's confidence and trust.

Palestinian Territories

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent representations he has received from aid agencies in the Palestinian Territories on (a) the humanitarian situation and (b) their ability to operate in the current security environment; and if he will make a statement. [73716]

Hilary Benn: DFID is in close contact with aid agencies in the Palestinian Territories, including the United Nations Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs (UN OCHA), which co-ordinates monitoring and response to the humanitarian situation. The UN released an updated consolidated appeal for humanitarian assistance on 31 May 2006 and will also, from June, produce monthly humanitarian monitoring reports.

UN OCHA reports that the main restrictions on humanitarian operations are Israeli restrictions on movement and access to, and within, the West Bank and Gaza, as well as security concerns in Gaza. DFID has agreed to provide expertise that will help UN OCHA monitor the humanitarian situation and co-ordinate humanitarian access with Israeli security forces.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations he has received from (a) the World Bank and (b) the IMF regarding mechanisms for the delivery of funding for health and education in the Palestinian Territories; and if he will make a statement. [73717]

Hilary Benn: DFID is in close contact with the World Bank, IMF, European Commission and international donors on mechanisms for delivering funding for Palestinian basic needs. At its meeting on 9 May the Quartet (United States, European Union (EU), United Nations and Russia) welcomed the offer by the EU to develop and propose a mechanism for delivering direct assistance to the Palestinian people. The Quartet also invited other donors and international organisations to consider participation in such a mechanism.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with Jan Egalund, the UN emergency relief co-ordinator, on the impact of the security situation in Darfur on the humanitarian situation there. [74661]

Hilary Benn: I spoke to Jan Egeland recently about the situation in Darfur, and he has also briefed my officials both in Sudan and at the UN in Geneva following his most recent visit. I very much share his concern about the deteriorating security situation there, which has worsened dramatically since January, with increasing levels of banditry, armed clashes and attacks on civilians and UN and NGO staff. The rising level of insecurity threatens to reverse progress made in 2005. Over the last four months alone, 250,000 people have been driven from their homes by the violence. The ability of the UN and NGOs to access the most vulnerable people is becoming a critical issue with no or very limited access to up to 650,000 people in Darfur.

In recent weeks we have seen encouraging steps forward with the signing of the Darfur Peace Agreement (DPA), and the more recent announcement from the Government of Sudan agreeing a joint African Union/United Nations Technical Assessment Mission to travel to Darfur. Stabilising security in Darfur is crucial if the DPA is to succeed. A UN force would build on the achievements already made by the African Union's Peacekeeping Mission in Darfur (AMIS).

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Department of Finance and Administration

Helen Jones: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) how many staff are employed in the Department of Finance and Administration; [75938]

(2) how many staff were employed in (a) the Department of Finance and Administration and (b) its predecessor Departments in each of the past 10 years for which figures are available. [75939]

Nick Harvey: The Department of Finance and Administration had the following numbers of staff as at 31 March for each of the following financial years.

	Number of staff
2005-06	142
2004-05	158
2003-04	141
2002-03	147
2001-02	141
2000-01	122
1999-2000	131
1998-99	122
1997-98	121
1996-97	115.5

The figures up to and including 1999-2000 are the Department's complement. Figures from 2000-01 are full-time equivalents.

Helen Jones: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what the cost was of running the Department of Finance and Administration, broken down into (a) wages and associated costs, (b) accommodation and (c) other costs, in each of the last three years. [75940]

Nick Harvey: The total cash cost of running the Department of Finance and Administration (DFA) over the last three financial years has been:

	2003-04	2004-05	£000 2005-06
Total cost	14,636	14,502	17,953
Includes:
Salaries and other staff costs	4,397	4,649	4,964
Other running costs	2,646	1,752	1,948

The cost of accommodation is not currently held in a form attributable to an individual Department.

As DFA is the central finance department, these figures include a significant level of corporate expenditure which is not directly attributable to the direct costs of running the Department. Some of the larger corporate items during 2005-06 included pension contributions (£10,277,000), contracts management (£608,000), child care vouchers (£217,000), and special payments (£198,000). Employer-related pension costs increased by around £2,881,000 in 2005-06 following an increase in the contribution rate.

Helen Jones: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what recent audits have been undertaken into the efficiency and effectiveness of the Department of Finance and Administration; and by whom they were carried out. [75941]

Nick Harvey: The Internal Review Service (IRS) of the House of Commons carries out regular reviews of financial areas within the Department of Finance and Administration (DFA) as part of its assurance to the Accounting Officer on the adequacy of internal controls. From October 2004 PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC) have provided internal audit services in partnership with the IRS in-house team.

Helen Jones: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what measures are in use to ascertain the levels of satisfaction among hon. Members with the services provided by the Department of Finance and Administration. [75942]

Nick Harvey: The Department of Finance and Administration provides a number of services to Members of Parliament and their staff. These include direct services such as payroll, administration of allowances, pensions and occupational health; and advisory services on matters such as personnel and data protection. A variety of mechanisms are used to ensure that the Department's services meet customer needs and that they are provided efficiently and effectively.

The Department is taking an active part in the design of the second Member satisfaction survey which will take place in 2007, as it did for the last survey which took place in 2003. It also works closely with the Advisory Panel on Members' Allowances and recently submitted evidence to the Administration Committee on its review of Post-Election Services to Members. The Department has procedures for reviewing complaints received from Members and administrative errors; and the departmental website has a facility for Members to give feedback. Services are subject to regular audits by the House-wide Internal Review Service.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

World Trade

11. Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with other EU Trade Ministers on the current World Trade Organisation negotiations. [75728]

Mr. Darling: The Government remain fully committed to securing an ambitious, pro-development outcome to the Doha Development Agenda (DDA). Sunday Trading

14. Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Sunday trading proposals. [75731]

Mr. Darling: We are currently reviewing the whole question of Sunday shop opening hours.

No decisions have been made and if Government do decide to alter the current arrangements there will be a full public consultation.

Small Businesses

16. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment he has made of the effect of employment legislation on the economic viability of small businesses. [75734]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department conducts a thorough analysis of the impact of all proposed employment legislation on small firms and this is published as part of a regulatory impact assessment.

The Government with the aid of all stakeholders have identified a number of areas of employment law to review with the intention of providing greater simplification and clarity. The Government are committed to reducing compliance and complexity costs for business while continuing to deliver excellent regulatory outcomes.

In addition the Government provide comprehensive advice for employers through the ACAS telephone helpline, which received a million calls a year and the ACAS and www.businesslink.gov.uk websites. This together with the stable management of the economy provides a great environment for small business.

Renewable Energy

18. Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the costs and benefits of tidal lagoons and barrages as sources of renewable energy. [75737]

Malcolm Wicks: Between 1978 and 1994 a £20 million Government programme of research and development on tidal energy considered tidal barrage schemes at a number of potential sites and more recently a study of the Severn barrage was carried out by the Severn Tidal Power Group and published in 2003.

The DTI has previously commissioned an independent assessment of a proposed tidal lagoon scheme in Swansea Bay, which it is our intention to publish.

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will reply to the letter of 15 December 2005 from the hon. Member for Aylesbury, on behalf of Mr. S P of Bledlow Ridge, about the aftermath of the Buncefield disaster, which was transferred to his Department by the Department of Transport on 6 January (Department of Transport reference SL/026807/05). [76347]

Malcolm Wicks: Verification of the end-user is a key part of the risk assessment in determining whether to issue an export licence. I have no present intention to change the procedures.

Green Technologies

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the potential for job creation in the green technologies sector; and if he will make a statement. [72723]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government are committed working with the environmental goods and services sector to promote new green technologies and industries. We are working with the Environmental Innovations Advisory Group to enable grater innovation in the environmental industries sector. This includes projects on procurement, technology support, state aids, finance and regulation. We also work with the Regional Development Agencies and the Devolved Administrations to estimate the size of the sector, and published data in 2004 showing the sector already employed over 400,000 people.

[1] Group 3 claims are denied and no payments made to claimants in this Group. Group 4 claims are from those miners who were in a Group 3 occupation but have been tortiously exposed to vibration and therefore received settlement payments.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the Coal Health Claims scheme to be completed. [75195]

Malcolm Wicks: Nuclear site licensees and, where necessary, approved carriers are required by law to meet the costs of security for civil nuclear sites and associated nuclear materials in transit.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the full costs of research funded by the Government into Generation 4 reactor designs will be taken on by private investors if the energy review concludes that a new generation of nuclear reactors should be built in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [75612]

Malcolm Wicks: In the past the UK's contribution to the Generation IV international research collaboration has been funded by BNFL. Future funding of research relating to the civil nuclear industry is currently under consideration.

Patents

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what account is taken by the Patent Office of the intellectual property rights of indigenous communities in relation to traditional knowledge when considering patent applications involving such knowledge. [74558]

Jim Fitzpatrick: In the patent examination process, the Patent Office has to consider whether applications relate to inventions which are, among other things, new and inventive. This requires the Office to search through published material, which will include intellectual property rights of indigenous communities in relation to traditional knowledge. Moreover, if a patent application is made by a person who is neither the true inventor, nor has lawfully acquired rights to the invention, any person, including members of an indigenous community, can apply to the Office to have the matter rectified.

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made against the Government's target to reduce the disparity in growth rates between English regions. [75735]

Jim Fitzpatrick: All English regions grew in 2003 and 2004 and the poorer-performing regions narrowed the gap in growth rates with London, the South East and East.

The Government will make a full report on progress towards its regional economic performance target later in the year.

Thorp Plant

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has become of the liquid recovered as part of the clean up at Thorp Processing Plant completed on 14 June 2005; to where has it been removed; by what means; what the cost of the operation was; and whether this cost was met from the NIREX budget. [72802]

Malcolm Wicks: The dissolver liquor that leaked from an accountancy tank in the THORP feed clarification cell was contained within a designed secondary containment system. The liquor was later pumped to downstream vessels where it remains pending subsequent processing. The work was carried out by British Nuclear Group on behalf of the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA). The costs associated with the temporary closure due to the incident will be the subject of an insurance claim by the NDA.

Wireless Telegraphy Act

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much Ofcom spent on preparation for the auction of the award of Wireless Telegraphy Act 1998 licences in 2005-06; how much it plans to spend on preparations for the award of such licences in 2006-07; and if he will make a statement. [72413]

Margaret Hodge: The matter raised is the responsibility of the Regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom) which is accountable to Parliament rather than Ministers. Accordingly, I have asked the Chief Executive of Ofcom to reply directly to the hon. Member. Copies of the Chief Executive's letter have been placed in the Libraries of House.

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much Ofcom spent in consultancy fees in preparation for the award of the recent Wireless Telegraphy Act licences for the frequencies 1781.7-1785MHz paired with 1876.7-1800MHz; and if he will make a statement. [72415]

Margaret Hodge: The matter raised is the responsibility of the Regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom) which is accountable to Parliament rather than Ministers. Accordingly, I have asked the chief executive of Ofcom to reply directly to the hon. Member.

Copies of the chief executive's letter have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

DEFENCE

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent on information technology (IT) sourced from outside his Department in each of the last five years; who is responsible for such projects in his Department; and what IT (a) expertise and (b) qualifications they possess. [71798]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence's spend on information technology (IT) sourced from outside the Department in each of the last five years is given in the following table.

£ million

Financial year	Operating costs?IT (excluding calls and line rental, etc)	Capitalised asset additions—IT and comms equipment
2000-01	403,500	35,371

Information on the departmental spend on IT and Telecommunications operating costs and assets is published each year in the departmental annual accounts.

The Director General Information acts as the Department's Chief Information Officer and sets policy for how the Department exploits information, as well as being Senior Responsible Owner (SRO) for several of MOD's largest IT programmes. The chief executive of the Defence Communications Services Agency is responsible for the organisation which procures the majority of the Department's IT. In addition to their own experience in delivering results in Government, the incumbents of these senior posts are supported by experts with the appropriate expertise and qualifications in specialist areas. All major programmes will have an SRO appointed who is responsible for delivery of that programme.

Marine Salvage

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has sold salvage rights to any maritime wreck during the last 10 years. [74202]

Mr. Ingram: During the last 10 years the Disposal Services Agency (DSA) has sold salvage rights in respect of the following wrecks:

Name of vessel		Date of agreement	Date expired
MV Jolly Girls	Sank North Shields on 2 December 1940	June 1997	7 May 2002
HMS Campania	Sank in Firth of Forth on 5 November 1918	26 June 1998	1 March 2004
HMS Sidon	Sunk as a target WNW Portland Bill in 1957	15 March 2000	1 May 2005
HMS Upstart	Sunk as a target off the Isle of Wight 29 July 1959	16 September 2000	1 November 2005

Additionally, on 27 September 2002, a Licence Agreement was signed with Odyssey Marine Exploration Inc., in respect of the Sussex, which sank in a storm in the western Mediterranean in 1694. This agreement provides that excavation and any recoveries are made in accordance with a strict set of provisions to ensure archaeological best practice.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has had discussions with marine salvage companies (a) Deep 6 and (b) SubSea Resources in respect of planned salvage operations on any British shipwreck for which it is responsible. [74203]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has held no discussions with either Deep 6 or SubSea Resources.

Mesothelioma (Compensation)

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the House of Lords judgment in the case of Barker v. Corus UK Ltd. on future spending plans of his Department in respect of expenditure on compensation payments for those suffering from mesothelioma. [75766]

Mr. Watson: Currently, the Ministry of Defence receives around 50 mesothelioma claims each year. In the vast majority of claims brought against the Department the sole defendant is the MOD. Therefore, the financial implications of the House of Lords judgment in the case of Barker v. Corus UK Ltd. are likely to be minimal in respect of expenditure on compensation payments.

Porton Down

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) pursuant to the answer of 8 May 2006, Official Report, column 41W, on Porton Down, how many of the experiments were (a) wholly and (b) partly commissioned by (i) UK companies, (ii) foreign companies and (iii) foreign Governments; and if he will make a statement; [73798]

(2) how much income was generated for the Department from undertaking animal experiments at Porton Down on contract for other (a) Governments and (b) private sector organisations; [73799]

(3) if he will list the (a) UK companies, (b) foreign companies and (c) foreign Governments with whom the results of animal experiments at Porton Down were shared; and if he will make a statement. [73800]

Mr. Ingram: The remit of the Defence Science and Technology Laboratory (DSTL) at Porton Down is to undertake research on behalf of the UK Government.

DSTL participates in International Collaborative Programmes with other allied nations on behalf of the Ministry of Defence. These are conducted under signed Memorandums of Understanding (MoUs) to ensure the free and open exchange of information between the participating nations. DSTL is not a commercial contract organisation but does accept commercial contracts where these support MOD's wider programmes.

All research work undertaken as part of these collaborative programmes is closely aligned to supporting, complementing and enhancing the MOD research programme. This exchange of information will include research involving the use of animals. This assists the advancement of the International research programmes and prevents the duplication of research funding. The participation by DSTL in these International Collaborative initiatives means that some aspects of the research programme will receive funding through foreign Governments, or their contractors. The research involving the use of animals is only a small sub-set of the overall collaborative research programme and is not accounted for separately.

In conducting any animal research, DSTL fully complies with all of the legislative requirements that are placed on research organisations licensed to undertake research involving animals, under the terms of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 as administered by the Home Office. This compliance includes a full ethical review of the proposed work where the benefits of saving lives have to justify the use of animals in research. This ethical review also ensures that there is no unnecessary duplication of animal-based research.

DSTL submits the results of its scientific research to peer reviewed open literature publications wherever possible. It is estimated that, security concerns included, 95 per cent. of DSTL research is published in the public domain. These publication figures include research involving the use of animals. Therefore, the results of the research, the development of techniques and alternatives are available to all researchers to review, regardless of which country they work in or whether they are employed in the commercial or Government sector.

Second World War POWs

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what steps his Department has taken to assess the need for support of the survivors of the British Army who were recruited from the Indian subcontinent and who were taken prisoner of war on the Western Front in the second world war; [74102]

(2) what arrangements are in place for support and financial assistance for members of the British Army who were recruited from the Indian subcontinent and who were taken prisoner of war on the western front in the second world war; [74103]

(3) what discussions have taken place between the Government and the Indian Government on the situation faced by members of the British Army who were recruited from the Indian subcontinent and who were taken prisoner of war on the western front in the second world war; [74104]

(4) what recent representations his Department has received with regard to the need for support and financial assistance to surviving members of the British Army recruited from the Indian subcontinent and who were taken prisoner of war on the western front in the second world war; [74105]

(5) what recent representations he has received on the support and financial assistance provided to former members of the British Army recruited from the Indian subcontinent and who were taken as prisoners of war by Japan in the second world war; [74106]

(6) what arrangements his Department has put in place in liaison with the Indian Government to assess the needs of the surviving members of the British Army recruited from the Indian subcontinent who were taken as prisoners of war by Japan in the second world war; [74107]

(7) what support and financial assistance has been provided to former members of the British Army recruited from the Indian subcontinent and who were taken as prisoners of war by Japan in the second world war. [74108]

Mr. Watson: The responsibility for meeting the needs of former members of the Indian Army who were taken as prisoners of war in the second world war generally passed to the Governments of the countries of which they became nationals when they gained independence in 1947.

Personnel recruited into the British armed forces from the Indian subcontinent and held as prisoners of war by the Japanese may be eligible for a payment under the United Kingdom's November 2000 ex gratia scheme for far east prisoners of war in the following cases:

former members of the Indian Army who were British subjects at the time when they became prisoners of war and who have since the war resided in the UK for at least 20 years; members of UK-based units, including those that were locally recruited such as the Hong Kong and Singapore Royal Artillery (many of the latter were recruited in what is now Pakistan); and members of certain other former colonial forces who had qualified for a payment under a 1950s compensation scheme based on liquidated Japanese assets.

Nepali Gurkhas who were held as prisoners of war by the Japanese have also received payments from the ex gratia scheme.

I am aware of no recent discussions between the UK and Indian Governments on the problems faced by former Indian Army prisoners of war but each year the Department receives a number of communications from former members of the Indian Army who face financial hardship and inquire whether they are entitled to any financial support from the UK. We have no record as to whether these may have been held as prisoners of war during world war two.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Departmental Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will list those (a) Acts and (b) parts of Acts which received Royal Assent between 1976 and 2006 for which his Department has policy responsibility and which remain in force. [70081]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers have responsibility for the following Acts or parts of Acts:

The Law Officers Act 1997

The Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate Act 2000

Those parts of the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 which establish the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office.

The Law Officers also share responsibility with other Criminal Justice Ministers for a range of criminal justice legislation and take the lead on issues arising from the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 and the Criminal Justice Act 1987.

Prosecutors/Crime Victims (Dialogue)

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Solicitor-General what mechanisms are in place to encourage and facilitate dialogue between prosecutors and victims of crime. [73975]

The Solicitor-General: There are two key mechanisms in place to encourage and facilitate dialogue between prosecutors and victims of crime. The prosecutors pledge sets out the level of service that victims of crime can expect to receive from prosecutors. This includes; promoting and encouraging two-way communication between victims and prosecutors at court, and keeping victims informed of the progress of any appeal and explaining the effects of the court's judgment.

In addition, the Code of Practice for Victims of Crime sets out the minimum level of service that victims of crime can expect to receive. The code, which was launched in April this year, places obligations on prosecutors to inform victims about charging decisions and communicating with victims at court.

WALES

Biological Diversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which Minister in his Department is responsible for monitoring his Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if he will make a statement. [73935]

Mr. Hain: Under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000, Ministers and Government Departments have a duty to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity. This has been replaced by a similar provision in section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006 which comes into effect on the 1 October 2006.

In June 2003, the Wales Office became a separate entity within the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) and we have adopted the DCA corporate policy for sustainable development. The department remains committed to ensuring that biodiversity is considered as part of any new build or major refurbishment. My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Nick Ainger) has lead responsibility for sustainability issues in the Wales Office.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Arts Council

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on progress with reform of the Arts Council. [74998]

Tessa Jowell: Arts Council England underwent a peer review in 2005. The final report of the review team was published in December, alongside an action plan to take forward their recommendations. The Arts Council is making progress in acting on the review recommendations, as exemplified by plans for a restructure at the organisation's national office, which were announced on 30 March this year.

Big Lottery Fund

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the Big Lottery Fund regarding the future classification of lottery good causes after 2009. [74514]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I have discussions from time to time with the chair and chief executive of the Big Lottery Fund. We cover a range of issues but have not focused on the future classification of lottery good causes after 2009.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on plans to establish the Big Lottery Fund. [74515]

Mr. Caborn: Plans to establish the Big Lottery Fund were agreed within Government. However, neither my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State nor I have had any specific discussions with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on this matter.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what impact she expects the creation of the Big Lottery Fund to have on the National Heritage Memorial Fund. [73805]

Mr. Caborn: None. The Big Lottery Fund will distribute Lottery money to projects connected with charitable expenditure, health, education and the environment and the National Heritage Memorial Fund will continue to enable emergency acquisitions of heritage treasures.

Commonwealth Institute Building

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with English Heritage on the future of the Commonwealth Institute Building. [75822]

Mr. Lammy: I met the Chairman and Chief Executive of English Heritage on 6 June 2006 to discuss the Commonwealth Institute Building.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the possible implications for other listed buildings of delisting the Commonwealth Institute Building. [75823]

Mr. Lammy: The Commonwealth Institute's role as an international and inter-governmental organisation is unique. Its future is not just a domestic issue, but an international issue of concern to 52 other countries and for these reasons no parallels may be drawn for other listed buildings.

Departmental Pensions

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will estimate the pension liability of her Department over the next 30 years. [75235]

Mr. Lammy: I refer the hon. Member to the technical Note by HM Treasury which was placed in the Library of the House following an oral statement in Parliament by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 2 March 2006, Official Report, columns 388-390. Pension liabilities are not estimated for individual Departments, they are estimated for individual pension schemes. Table 1 of the Note gives a breakdown of liabilities per pension scheme.

Departmental Performance

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will place in the Library her Department's balanced scorecard for each quarter in the past year; and if she will make a statement. [74569]

Mr. Lammy: The quarterly balanced scorecard is an internal performance monitoring tool. It provides periodic management information to the DCMS Board on the status of our key programmes and initiatives. It is designed to facilitate the free and frank exchange of views within the board and is not made available more widely. The DCMS Autumn Performance Report and Annual Report provide extensive information on our performance. These documents are published and are available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by her Department in each year since 2001; in what capacities they were employed; how many were discovered as part of a criminal investigation; and what the nature was of the charges brought against them. [73969]

Mr. Lammy: No illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed directly by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport since 2001. This includes staff on fixed-term appointments and casual contracts, but excludes agency workers, contractors and consultants.

Lottery

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which 10 parliamentary constituencies received least in awards from Lottery sources in 2005; and which 10 constituencies have received least in 2006. [75542]

Mr. Caborn: The following lists show which constituencies have received the least monetary value in Lottery awards in 2005 and 2006 so far reported to the Department:

2005

Birmingham, Yardley
East Surrey
Stoke-on-Trent South
Elmet
Chingford and Woodford Green
Portsmouth North
Birmingham, Hodge Hill
Nottingham North
Bolton West
New Forest East

2006

Kingston and Surbiton
Enfield, Southgate
Feltham and Heston
Wallasey
Bexleyheath and Crayford
Castle Point
Ilford North
Plymouth, Devonport
Upminster
Bedford

The lists are derived from the Department's Lottery award database, searchable at: www.lottery.culture.gov.uk which uses information supplied by the Lottery distributors.

School Sports

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the value was of the contract awarded for the UK School Games to be staged in Glasgow in 2006; whether the contract was awarded in accordance with normal open tendering procurement practice; whether the British Olympic Foundation was involved in the tendering processes; and whether the award was funded from the National Lottery. [75372]

Mr. Caborn: The selection of an operator to organise the UK School Games this September and the subsequent grant of National Lottery money was a matter for the Millennium Commission. In my capacity as Chair of the Commission, I will write to the hon. Member on this matter and arrange for copies of my reply to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The Public (West Bromwich)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1412W, to the hon. Member for Stourbridge (Lynda Waltho), on The Public (West Bromwich), on what basis the decision was made that the payments by Arts Council England to Robin and Gorringe are commercial in confidence. [75354]

Mr. Lammy: The decision that payments made by the Arts Council to the firm Robin and Gorringe should be treated as commercially sensitive was based on our consideration of the ongoing and complex discussions that are under way between the administrators and contractors at The Public. These are aimed at achieving completion of the building project. It was our judgement that publishing this information could be detrimental to the conduct of these discussions and consequently disrupt the process of completing the building project and removing The Public from administration. The information was therefore judged too commercially sensitive to be published at this time.

Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding her Department has (a) allocated and (b) spent from Lottery receipts in supporting charitable organisations in preparation for the implementation of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. [73777]

Mr. Caborn: Lottery distributors make awards independently of Government. Information on all Lottery awards is available from the Department's Lottery awards database, at www.lottery.culture.gov.uk, which uses information supplied by the Lottery distributors.

The database, however, does not identify as a distinct category those awards that have prepared organisations for the implementation of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Pay Equality

23. Barbara Keeley: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps she is taking to address the gap between men's and women's pay. [75714]

Meg Munn: The Government have set up a team of officials who are working across Government to take forward the Women and Work Commission recommendations on ways to tackle the gender pay gap and an action plan will be issued later this year. I will also chair a project board of senior officials.

Election Candidates

24. Sarah McCarthy-Fry: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what her assessment is of the progress being made towards more women being selected to contest seats in general elections. [75715]

Meg Munn: We introduced in 2002 the Sex Discrimination (Election Candidates) Act which allows positive measures designed to ensure greater equality in the selection of prospective parliamentary candidates.

The Labour party was able to increase the percentage of women MPs in the last general election by using all-women shortlists to select candidates in its retirement seats.

By contrast the Liberal Democrat party and the Conservative party respectively only selected 32 per cent. and 12 per cent. of women candidates for their 50 most winnable seats.

Financial Planning

25. Miss Begg: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps the Government are taking to encourage women to plan their financial lives and save for their retirement. [75716]

Meg Munn: Proposed reforms set out in the Government's recent White Paper: "Security in retirement: towards a new pensions system" will enable women to make more informed choices about planning and saving for retirement, by providing simpler, fairer and more widely available state pensions as the foundation on which to save.

Pensions

26. Rosie Cooper: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what discussions she has had with colleagues in the Department for Work and Pensions on recognition for women's caring role in pension arrangements. [75717]

Meg Munn: I have had regular meetings with colleagues in the Department for Work and Pensions throughout the development of the pension reforms. I am pleased that the reforms in the White Paper: "Security in Retirement: Towards a new Pension System" will deliver fairer pension outcomes for women and carers.

Sexual Orientation (Discrimination)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what representations she has received on the consultation by the Department of Trade and Industry on the proposal to outlaw sexual orientation discrimination in the provision of goods and services. [76050]

Meg Munn: We have received a very high number of responses to the consultation that closed on 5 June about the proposed sexual orientation discrimination regulations and are now beginning the process of analysing these responses. I and my officials have also had a number of meetings with organisations and individuals who are interested in the proposed regulations during the consultation period.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Breast Cancer

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many women failed to attend their first breast screening tests in each of the last three years; what the take-up was of the second offered screening in each year; and what age group was most likely to miss their first appointment in each board area in each year. [74219]

Paul Goggins: The following tables show how many women in Northern Ireland during 2002-03, 2003-04 and 2004-05, who (A) failed to attend their first breast screening appointment; (B) attended their second breast screening appointment having not attended their first appointment (C) attended both their first and second breast screening appointments.

The vast majority of women who receive a first invitation to breast screening are in the 50-53 age group. In 2004-05, 91 per cent. of the eligible population in Northern Ireland had been invited to a first screening appointment by their 53rd birthday.

Central Government Funding

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total value was of central Government funding in Northern Ireland in each of the past 30 years at today's prices. [67823]

Mr. Hanson: The difference between Government expenditure and revenue attributed to Northern Ireland has been estimated on an occasional basis since the late 1990s. These estimates indicate that public expenditure exceeds taxes collected in Northern Ireland. The estimates of this funding shortfall, often referred to as the 'Fiscal Deficit', are set out in the following table.

It is important to note that these estimates do not carry the imprimatur of official statistics as there are major difficulties in allocating revenue and expenditure across UK regions. The estimates for the earlier years in the table were based on the best data then available, which have been frequently revised since.

Departmental Hearing (Strangford View)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost to public funds has been of the Department of Environment's hearing in relation to the wall at Strangford View, Killyleagh; and if he will make a statement. [75473]

David Cairns: To date invoiced costs received by the Planning Service total £5,170 while the Planning Appeals Commission has incurred costs of £2,209.

New enforcement notices were served on 19 May 2006. They require that, within 16 weeks of that date, the wall and associated fill material should be removed and the lands in question be regraded to form a reinforced slope to the satisfaction of Roads Service engineers (to retain the approved road).

Discussions are ongoing between the Planning Service and the developer's representatives about the development of the remainder of the site.

Disability Access

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether any buildings in (a) each of the Northern Ireland Departments and (b) the Northern Ireland Office, fall short of disability access regulations. [73085]

Mr. Hanson: All Northern Ireland Departments (including the Northern Ireland Office) have programmes of work identified to achieve compliance with the requirements of the Disability Discrimination Act for all buildings which need to be adapted. Currently some 74 Government buildings remain to achieve full compliance with the Act.

Down District Council

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost to public funds has been of Down district council's corporate box at Down Royal Race Course in the last 12 months; how much of the cost related to (a) alcohol and (b) food; and if he will make a statement. [75474]

David Cairns: The cost of providing a corporate box at Down Royal Race Course is included in the overall expenditure incurred by Down district council on tourism. The level of expenditure requested is not held centrally.

Lung Cancer

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to improve the survival rates of those diagnosed with lung cancer in the Province. [75470]

Paul Goggins: The Government and the DHSSPS are committed to improving the survival rates for all cancers including lung cancer. This commitment is underpinned in the Department's public service agreement which aims to increase the five-year survival rate for lung cancer by 5 per cent. by 2010, compared to the 1993-95 baseline.

The Department in partnership with the Northern Ireland cancer network (NICaN) is taking forward work on a number of fronts which have the potential to improve survival rates for lung cancer patients. These include:

the provision of better information for lung cancer patients;

the development of GP referrals guidelines and improved primary care pathways for those suspected of having lung cancer, and;

further improvements in oncology protocols for the treatment of lung cancers.

Police

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 500W, on police, what Mr. Colin Ashe's key duties and responsibilities are as chief executive of the Northern Ireland Police Fund; what his grade is; what the grade is of other chief executives, or equivalent, of other Government Departments and agencies in Northern Ireland; and what direct experience Mr. Ashe has relevant to the Northern Ireland Police Fund. [69239]

Paul Goggins: Mr. Ashe's key duties and responsibilities are a matter for the Northern Ireland Police Fund. Information on the grade of all chief executives and their equivalents is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. In relation to Mr. Ashe's experience, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for St. Helens, South (Mr. Woodward) of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 500W.

Restorative Justice Schemes

Mr. Holloboone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the introduction of community-based restorative justice schemes in Northern Ireland. [72939]

Mr. Hanson: I refer the hon. Member to my statement on community-based restorative justice made on 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 98WS.

Superannuation Entitlements

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many part-time members of staff at each health trust in the Province have submitted industrial tribunal applications regarding non-payment of superannuation entitlements; [65347]

(2) how many industrial tribunal applications by part-time staff from each health trust in the Province regarding superannuation entitlements (a) have been successful, (b) have been rejected and (c) are still to be resolved. [65348]

Mr. Woodward: This information is not held centrally. I will write to the hon. Member with the information as soon as it becomes available and place a copy in the Library.

281 industrial tribunal applications have been lodged by part-time staff seeking retrospective access to the HPSS Superannuation Scheme.

Details of numbers of applications by Trust are not held centrally. I will write to the hon. Member with the information as soon as it becomes available and place a copy in the Library.

Substantive answer from Paul Goggins to David Simpson:

The majority of the applications to the Office of the Industrial Tribunals by HPSS employees seeking retrospective access to the HPSS Superannuation Scheme refer to the period 1976 to 1991, prior to HSS Trusts coming in to operation. In many cases individual applicants have made claims in respect of a number of periods of employment. It is not possible to provide a breakdown by Trust, however, details are provided in the following table by health and social services board area.

HSS board area	Number of cases	Successful	Unsuccessful dismissed/ withdrawn	Pending
EHSSB	180	11	18	151
NHSSB	44	3	5	36
SHSSB	39	0	8	31
WHSSB	18	0	2	16
Total	281	14	33	234

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what public funding has been allocated to (a) the Riverside Theatre, Coleraine and (b) theatres in (i) Belfast and (ii) Londonderry in each of the last three years. [72545]

Maria Eagle: Public funding allocated to (a) the Riverside Theatre, Coleraine and (b) theatres in (i) Belfast and (ii) Londonderry in each of the last three years is as follows:

Notes:
These figures include both capital and revenue funding. They represent the grants allocated to projects although in some cases the expenditure may not be incurred until future years.

Traffic

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what daily average number of vehicles used the (a) Lodge Road Roundabout, Coleraine and (b) Caw Roundabout, Londonderry during 2005. [75949]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 8 June 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding how many vehicles on average used the (a) Lodge Road Roundabout Coleraine and (b) Caw Roundabout Londonderry during 2005.

As this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service, I have been asked to reply.

By way of background, I should explain that Roads Service collects traffic volume data by means of 270 automatic census points strategically located throughout the Northern Ireland road network. The information is recorded for one week in each quarter during the year and an annual average calculated. The results are published in Roads Service's annual Traffic and Travel Information Report, which presents the traffic volumes in a variety of formats for each site. Figures for the 2005 Report are still being processed, and therefore, the figures quoted below are based on the latest available data.

With regard to the Caw Roundabout, census points are placed on all four approach roads. The table details the average daily number of vehicles entering the roundabout from each road.

Caw roundabout	Average daily flow
Foyle Bridge[1]	15,930
Clooney Road[2]	15,600
Caw Brae[2]	7,510
Crescent Link[2]	12,970
Total	52,010

[1] This figure relates to the 2003 census as 2004 figures are unreliable, probably due to works on the Foyle Bridge during that period.
[2] These figures relate to the 2004 Census.

In relation to the Lodge Road Roundabout, unfortunately census points exist on only three of the five approach roads. While I have detailed the average daily number of vehicles entering the roundabout from these roads in the table below, I am unable to provide you with the full information requested.

Lodge road roundabout	Average daily flow
Ballymoney Road[2]	8,250
Sandleford Bridge[2]	13,840
Ballycastle Road[2]	10,480
Lodge Road	No information available
Rugby Avenue	No information available
Total	32,570

[2]These figures relate to the 2004 Census.

Valuation and Lands Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what Geographical Information System data is used by the Valuation and Lands Agency's domestic rates Automated Valuation Model. [70395]

Mr. Hanson: Valuation and Lands Agency's CAMA (Computer Assisted Mass Appraisal) system uses the following Geographic Information System data:

Ordnance Survey for Northern Ireland's (OSNI) digital database of vector and raster maps;

OSNI's X Y coordinates (geocodes) linked to VLA's database of property attributes;

Northern Ireland Statistical Research Agency's Census output areas; and VLA's neighbourhood and estate code polygons.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Biomass Industry

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which recommendations made in the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution's report of May 2004 on biomass the Government has implemented. [22205]

David Miliband: The Government's response to the report was published in October 2004 and set out the measures that were in place at that time, or were being developed to address the issues raised in the recommendations. Copies of the Government's response have been placed in the House Library. Significant developments have since taken place on a number of issues relevant to the report:

In March 2006, the Government published the new Climate Change Programme which sets out the UK's programme to tackle climate change domestically and to secure agreement on action to reduce global greenhouse gas emissions.

A new support scheme for biomass heat in the industrial, commercial and community sectors will be introduced. The scheme will be worth at least £10-15 million in England over the next two years and will run for a total of 5 years.

Subject to State aid approval, a second application round of the Bio-energy Infrastructure Scheme will be launched during 2006-07.

DTI's Low Carbon Buildings Programme started in April 2006 and supersedes the previous Clear Skies Initiative and Solar PV programmes. The scheme provides grants for householders, community organisations, schools, the public sector and businesses to install microgeneration technologies.

Following the report from the Biomass Task Force, setting out their recommendations to overcome the barriers to developing biomass heat and electricity, the Government published its response in April 2006. This accepts that energy from crops, trees and waste can make a strong contribution to reducing greenhouse gas emissions and sets out 12 key ways to make this happen. A number of the initiatives have already begun.

The 2006 revisions to the Building Regulations, together with the changes in 2002, will improve energy efficiency standards by 40 per cent. A draft Code for Sustainable Homes has been issued which sets out voluntary standards going beyond the minimum set out in the Building Regulations. The Minister for Housing has set out the Government's aim to support a long term ambitious framework for moving first to low carbon and then towards carbon neutral development.

Carbon Management Programmes

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the list of change management and other consultants undertaking carbon management programmes will be opened up to other consultants. [67846]

Ian Pearson: The Carbon Management Programme has been developed by the Carbon Trust. As the Trust is a private company, the management of contracts is a matter for its Board. Officials from the Carbon Trust will contact the hon. Member direct about this.

Children's Services

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many nursery and creche places are provided for people working in his Department; what charges are made for the provision of such services; and what other facilities are provided for the children of employees of her Department. [67362]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA is committed to childcare support both for the benefit of its staff but also as an essential element of addressing the Departmental business need DEFRA's childcare provision set out in the following table.

DEFRA employees are able to use a salary sacrifice scheme to reduce their childcare costs by up to £243 per month.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what promotion boards have been held in his Department in each of the last five years. [70543]

Barry Gardiner: Most posts in DEFRA are filled on the basis of individual advertisements, in-house, across the civil service or as open competition, based on a competence-based selection process. The aim is to obtain precise and verifiable information about when candidates have displayed the particular behaviours and expertise at the level required for the vacancy. There have only been two general promotion boards, in 2003 and in 2004, to fill a number of vacancies and projected vacancies in the senior civil service. Selection was also through a generic competence-based process, supported by psychometric and cognitive tests, a presentation and final panel interview.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many non-pensionable bonuses were awarded to members of his staff in each of the last three years; and at what total cost. [73100]

Barry Gardiner: DEFRA changed its payroll provider in November 2004. It would be disproportionate cost to report on the archived data prior to 2005-06.

During the period 1 April 2005-31 March 2006, Defra paid 4362 non-pensionable bonuses at a cost of £3,356,845.67. This equates to 1.25 per cent. of the 2005-06 pay bill.

These figures, taken from the DEFRA payroll also include agency staff in the: Pesticides Safety Directorate, State Veterinary Service, Veterinary Medicines Directorate, Marine Fisheries Agency and Government Decontamination Service.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff in his Department did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represented of the total number of staff in each case. [75107]

Barry Gardiner: For 2003-04 17 staff (0.27 per cent.), and in 2004-05 18 staff (0.28 per cent.) were assessed as unacceptable. The 2005-06 annual appraisal exercise is on going.

These figures are for staff in core DEFRA, the Pesticides Safety Directorate, State Veterinary Service, Veterinary Medicines Directorate, Marine Fisheries Agency and Government Decontamination Service.

Flooding

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to help areas which may suffer flooding in the next 12 months. [75569]

Ian Pearson: The Government invest significant sums of money each year to reduce the risk of flooding. Total central and local government funding for flood and coastal erosion risk management has nearly doubled from £307 million in 1996-97 to around £600 million in 2005-06.

Local authorities and the emergency services have contingency plans in place to cope with a range of incidents in their areas, including flooding. The Environment Agency (EA) also maintains its own local, regional and national level flood contingency plans. At the national level, DEFRA is the lead role for flood emergencies within Government, and our Lead Department Plan sets out the co-ordination arrangements needed at all levels.

The Government have set up a regional resilience team in each of the English regions to enhance the co-ordination of planning for wide impact events, such as major flooding, and to improve lines of communication between central Government and local response teams if a serious incident does occur. The EA, with other stakeholders, also carries out a regular programme of exercises to test its capability at all levels. This included a national level exercise in 2004, Exercise Triton.

Post-flooding, the recovery effort would be led by local authorities. Where they have incurred excessive expenditure as a consequence of a disaster or emergency they may be able to apply to the Department for Communities and Local Government for exceptional funding under the Bellwin Scheme.

Fox Hunting

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact on rural communities of the ban on fox hunting; and if he will consider the merits of repealing the ban. [74769]

Barry Gardiner: The Government have no plans to repeal the Hunting Act 2004. Since the ban came into effect, evidence has shown that hunts are continuing to meet and ride within the law and that the dire consequences for rural communities predicted by opponents of the Act have not materialised.

Rural Development Programme

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what matched funding will be raised in 2006-07 to permit the rural development programme in England to be adequately funded; [74872]

(2) what steps he is taking to match fund modulation for farmers. [75046]

Barry Gardiner: During 2006, the England rural development programme will continue to be funded by EU rural development money from the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund (EAGGF) and by transfers from Pillar 1 direct payments through voluntary modulation. Receipts from both of these funding sources will continue to be co-financed on an equal basis by the UK Exchequer and the EU.

From 1 January 2007, a new rural development programming period will commence with slightly different rules. The EAGGF will be replaced by a new fund called the European agricultural fund for rural development (EAFRD). This will include funds transferred from the 5 per cent. compulsory modulation applied in the old EU-15 member states. Any money from this fund must be co-financed by the national exchequer. This will normally involve equal funding by the Exchequer and the EU, although new rules allow this to be set at a ratio of 45 per cent. exchequer funding to 55 per cent. EU funding for some schemes.

The December 2005 EU budget summit agreed that from 2007, member states could decide at what level to match-fund any receipts from voluntary modulation. However, final decisions have yet to be taken about the levels of voluntary modulation and co-financing which will apply during the period 2007-13.

Single Farm Payments

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farms in Bridgwater constituency are entitled to single farm payments; and what total amount had been paid in single farm payments to farmers in that constituency at 1 May 2006. [68954]

Barry Gardiner: 120,367 applications were received for the single payment scheme (SPS). By the end of Tuesday 30 May 95,674 claims (79 per cent.) had been paid.

Analysis of these applications by constituency is not available but the total amount of payments for the single farm payment scheme in the Bridgwater constituency at 1 May 2006 was £2.938 million.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the delays within the Single Payment Scheme on the ability of the Rural Payments Agency to deliver each of its other programmes. [66704]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) has kept Ministers and officials informed of the impact of administering the Single Payment Scheme (SPS) on all of the Agency's programmes. Given the importance of the SPS to the farming community RPA has, with ministerial agreement, sought to focus as many staff as it can on that scheme. This has meant that less effort has been deployed on some other activities at particular points over the past year and has resulted in a reduction in previous performance levels on other schemes. The Agency has kept representative organisations informed of its approach to SPS and other activities.

Water Leakage

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will ensure that the method of calculating acceptable levels of leakage by water companies takes account of the effects of leaks on (a) the environment and (b) consumers. [72853]

Ian Pearson: Leakage targets are set by the Economic Regulator, Ofwat and will be kept under review. They require water companies to compare the cost of reducing leakage and the value of the water saved, including any associated environmental and social costs and benefits. Leakage targets are set to balance the needs of consumers, against the environmental benefits associated with reduced leakage.

Woodland Grant Scheme

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many applications from the (a) private, (b) not-for-profit and (c) public sectors have been accepted under the woodland creation section of the England Woodland Grant Scheme in the last bidding round in each region; and what the (i) value of and (ii) area covered by each bid is. [74099]

Barry Gardiner: The Forestry Commission's English Woodland Grant Scheme was open for woodland creation grant applications between 18 July 2005 and 30 September 2005. In this period 596 applications were made and 448 met or exceeded the published scoring threshold and were accepted for processing. Of these 326 have resulted in signed grant scheme contracts. The remaining 122 were either withdrawn by the applicant or have outstanding technical or administrative issues to be resolved, including in some cases a final decision from the applicant as to whether they wish to proceed.

The information on the accepted (i.e. met or exceeded the published scoring threshold) and approved applications by ownership type for each region and is given in the following tables.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcohol Sales

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the negative price differential between alcoholic and soft drinks. [74612]

Mr. McNulty: None. However, we have been working with the drinks industry to raise standards of operating practice and support their principles and standards document which was published in November. This contains guidance on preventing irresponsible promotions and includes the recommendation that operators include a selection of soft drinks or low alcohol drinks at reduced prices during the happy hour. We have been working with all sectors of the trade to put this document into place.

Assets Recovery Agency

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 11 May 2006, Official Report, column 508W, on the Assets Recovery Agency, if he will break down the total value of realised assets for (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06 by type of assets realised. [74686]

Mr. Coaker: The information as regards realised assets in 2004-05 is set out in the table. I regret that the total sum of realised assets in 2004-05 given in my earlier reply, 11 May 2006, Official Report, column 508W, was understated by £0.158 million. I am now advised by the Assets Recovery Agency that the correct figure is £4.3 million. The agency's annual report for 2005-06, which will set out progress in meeting last year's targets, including the value of realised assets, will be laid before Parliament shortly.

Value realised 2004-05

Asset type	£ million
Cash[1]	4.0
Houses	0.3
Vehicles	0.0005
Total	4.3

[1] Cash covers bank accounts, money seized by other law enforcement and money held in solicitors and other client accounts etc.

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Assets Recovery Agency recovered assets equivalent to 100 per cent. of its budget in (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06. [75313]

Mr. Coaker: The Agency did not recover assets equivalent to 100 per cent. of its budget for 2004-05 which was its second full year of operation. Civil recovery cases in the High Court can take over two years to complete litigation. This period is longer where respondents seek to use all their rights of appeal. The impact of legal challenges, although inevitable with new legislation, has delayed the progress of cases in the High Court. The Agency's Annual Report for 2005-06, which will set out progress in meeting last year's targets, will be laid before Parliament shortly.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the financial impact on voluntary organisations of their Registered Body status being removed by the Criminal Records Bureau. [74439]

Joan Ryan: Draft regulations were submitted to the Domestic Affairs Committee prior to being laid before Parliament. A full regulatory impact assessment was completed. It was acknowledged that small organisations would probably not be able to satisfy the minimum threshold and would need to approach other organisations in order to obtain checks on their employees and incur the associated costs. However, in some cases it was concluded that the costs of using such an organisation would be lower than the administrative costs of running and maintaining a small volume Registered Body.

The proposed changes arose from a key recommendation of the 2002 Independent Review of the CRB and were supported by the recent Bichard Inquiry. The intention is to make the Registered Body network more professional and more experienced in the disclosure process which will allow the CRB to ensure that the network of users is proficient in the security and policies of the CRB.

As part of the continuous consultation process, the CRB are working with the voluntary and community sector (VCS) to resolve issues about access to the disclosure service. To this end, there are several voluntary and not-for-profit Umbrella Bodies (UBs) that serve the VCS and details of these are available on an improved web page of the CRB website. Charges by these UBs are comparatively low and in some cases, services are free to volunteers. Access to the disclosure service will be maintained by this UB network. By using voluntary or not-for-profit UBs, the cost of accessing the disclosure service will be kept to an absolute minimum for voluntary organisations and, in many cases, the charges will be less than the administrative costs associated with direct registration with the CRB.

The CRB will provide advice, guidance and support to organisations on the options available to access the disclosure service before their registration is cancelled due to low volume.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many criminal record checks were carried out (a) for people undertaking voluntary work and (b) for voluntary organisations in each year since 1998; [74440]

(2) how many voluntary organisations (a) are registered bodies for the purposes of the Criminal Records Bureau, (b) lost their registered body status as a result of not meeting the minimum number of checks per annum in each year since 1998 and (c) applied to be registered bodies in each year. [74441]

Joan Ryan: The number of criminal record checks carried out by the Criminal Records Bureau for people undertaking voluntary work since the disclosure service was launched in 2002 is as follows:

	Number
2002	122,177
2003	386,194
2004	495,811
2005	556,935
2006	194,411

Information is not available to answer the hon. Member's question about the number of checks carried out for voluntary organisations in each year since 2002.

There are 350 registered bodies who have defined themselves as voluntary organisations which are registered for the purposes of processing disclosures. To date, the registered body status of 66 voluntary organisations is currently under review initially as a result of not meeting the minimum number of checks in any 12-month period. As part of this review there will be an appeals process. The basis of a successful appeal will be on the specific situation of each organisation and will be based on various criteria such as the services the group supplies, whether it has any sector speciality and the number of other organisations in the area. The number of voluntary organisations which applied to be registered bodies in each year is as follows:

	Number
2002	143
2003	111
2004	48
2005	41
2006	7

Deportations

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals are held as convicted prisoners in (a) Aylesbury Young Offenders Institution, (b) Grendon Prison, (c) Springhill Prison and (d) Woodhill Prison; how many such prisoners were convicted of each category of offence; in the case of how many such prisoners the trial judge recommended that deportation be considered at the end of the custodial sentence; and if he will make a statement. [67675]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested on foreign nationals being held as convicted prisoners in each of the prisons listed, by type of offence and as recorded on the Prison IT system, is provided in the table.

Information about those detained in the prisons listed who have been recommended for deportation is not held centrally. The Immigration And Nationality Directorate are in the process of introducing a system to enable this information to be routinely collated.

Family Indefinite Leave to Remain Exercise

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals who have been granted leave to remain under the Government's Family Indefinite Leave to Remain Exercise have had (a) a claim for asylum refused and (b) a claim for asylum refused and exhausted their rights of appeal. [73778]

Mr. Byrne: The requested information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by examination of individual case records.

Fire Sprinklers

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the policy is of his Department with regard to the fitting of fire sprinkler systems in (a) forensic hospitals and (b) prisons. [71021]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Home Department is responsible for fire safety policy in prisons, and the Department of Health has this responsibility for high and medium security psychiatric hospitals.

In prison cells, the usefulness of sprinklers is unproven as they pose practical and operational implementation difficulties and are costly and difficult to install, particularly in existing establishments. A policy regarding the use of sprinklers is to be determined in the context of an overall prison fire safety strategy. Sprinklers have been fitted in some prisons in high-risk areas such as kitchens and hospitals.

In the three high security psychiatric hospitals, no sprinklers have been fitted. The design guide for medium secure psychiatric units does not specifically mention sprinklers. Instead, building designs include measures such as fire compartmentation and easy horizontal evacuation to places of safety.

Foreign Prisoners

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what procedures the UK immigration service follows relevant to the handling of cases where a Scottish judge has recommended a foreign national on sentencing to be deported on release; [67584]

(2) what discussions his Department has had with the Scottish Prison Service on foreign national prisoners recommended for deportation who are serving their sentence in a Scottish prison. [67589]

Mr. Byrne: I refer to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary on 23 May.

Free on Licence Prisoners

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for how many of the prisoners free on licence following life sentences his Department does not have addresses. [71254]

Mr. Sutcliffe: All life sentence prisoners are released on licence on the authority of the independent Parole Board. The licensee must comply with a number of specific licence conditions, including a requirement to be supervised by a probation officer and to live only at approved addresses. Although the supervision element of the licence may be removed after a minimum of four years, the life licence remains in force for the rest of the person's life and can be revoked at any time if such action is necessary on risk grounds.

A total of 1,565 life licensees were under active supervision on 31 March 2006 and their addresses are known to the relevant probation areas. In 23 other cases where the life licence has been revoked, the life licensees are unlawfully at large pending their arrest and return to custody. The police are notified when prisoners abscond and their details are entered on the Police National Computer.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Immigration and Nationality Directorate will reply to the correspondence from the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green of 7 February 2006 regarding a constituent Mrs. Mackay (née Lema) of Victoria Road, London, Home Office Reference L1115499. [75603]

Mr. Byrne: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the hon. Member on 24 February 2006.

Immigration/Asylum

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum detainees who escaped from the Yarl's Wood detention centre on 14 February 2002 have subsequently been detained. [73924]

Mr. Byrne: Many records were burnt or destroyed on the night of the fire and, to the best of our knowledge, the following figures are correct. Of the 23 escapees 16 have been relocated. Of these, nine have been removed, four re-detained (three of whom were subsequently released), one reported to Croydon enforcement unit voluntarily and was released and two were granted temporary release. The whereabouts of seven remain unknown. Decisions on the 16 were made in line with the casework criteria as it applies to their individual circumstances.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many detainees held at the Yarl's Wood detention centre on 14 February 2002 were unaccounted for following the fire at the centre that day. [73926]

Mr. Byrne: 23 detainees were unaccounted for in the immediate aftermath of the fire. Stephen Shaw published brief details of these people in his comprehensive report of the fire and disturbance.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of people arriving in the UK on student visas who (a) returned and (b) did not return to their country of origin upon completion of their studies in the last 5 years. [74124]

Mr. Byrne: Following withdrawal of the control for passengers travelling to continental destinations from ferry ports and small/medium-sized airports by the Government in 1994, the UK has had a diminished ability to record exit movements, and so such calculations are problematic.

The e-Borders programme will soon use biometric data to record passenger movements at UK ports.

Individual Support Orders

Ann Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment has been made of the reasons for the difference in the number of individual support orders and antisocial behaviour orders issued; [74520]

(2) what account he expects the courts to take of the mandatory nature of individual support orders when issuing antisocial behaviour orders; [74521]

(3) how much has been provided to fund individual support orders since they were introduced; [74522]

(4) how much funding for individual support orders has been allocated, broken down by local authority; and how much such funding has been spent, broken down by authority; [74875]

(5) whether there are any plans for further funding for individual support orders beyond that already allocated. [74876]

Mr. McNulty: Individual support orders (ISOs) can be attached to stand-alone antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) for 10 to 17 year-olds.

We are working with the Youth Justice Board and HM Court Service to increase the take-up of ISOs, and we are starting to see encouraging signs of wider use. This includes actively promoting their use to all interested parties at antisocial behaviour-related events and updating advice and guidance. We are implementing a Home Office/Youth Justice Board/HM Courts Service action plan and as part of this we have just completed a series of meetings with Youth Offending Teams to ascertain views on barriers to take-up and to see what needs to be done to encourage increased numbers. We are currently examining the information from these meetings but initial soundings are that ISOs are a popular measure with those people who have been consulted.

When considering making a stand-alone ISO on a young person the court must make one in every applicable case if it considers that it would help prevent further antisocial behaviour. The Judicial Studies Board is producing a new updated antisocial behaviour training programme for magistrates, which will feature ISOs, and incorporate them within practical training exercises to assist magistrates in fulfilling their statutory duty.

We provided £500,000 to YJB in June 2005 to fund ISOs. Funding for this financial year and from now on is available through the £45 million uplift given to the Youth Justice Board as part of their youth prevention budget.

The funding is allocated to Youth Offending Teams based on a formula and they have submitted plans to the Youth Justice Board on how they plan to spend it—some have specific ISO schemes and others have looked to embed the work into Youth Inclusion Support Panels.

London Bombings

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much compensation has been (a) allocated for and (b) paid to those affected by the terrorist attacks in London on 7 July. [74516]

Mr. McNulty: Victims of the London bombings of 7 July 2005 are eligible for compensation under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme, which is administered by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority (CICA). In a written ministerial statement of 17 November 2005, Official Report, column 78WS, my right hon. Friend the then Home Secretary (Mr. Clarke) said that he was allocating another £5 million to CICA to cover costs associated with the London bombings. We announced in May that an additional £2.5 million was being made available for the victims of the London bombings over and above their awards from the Compensation Scheme.

As at 26 May 2006, CICA had paid 319 awards totalling £2.12 million to victims of the London bombings. 189 of these awards were final awards: the others were interim awards.

The Government also contributed £1 million to the London Bombings Relief Charitable Fund, which has made payments totalling around £8 million to victims of the London bombings.

National Identity Register

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines the Government have in place to regulate (a) which bodies will have access to the National Identity Register and (b) how these bodies will be able to use this information; and if he will make a statement. [75405]

Joan Ryan: The Identity Cards Act 2006 does not provide for any direct access to information on the National Identity Register (NIR) for organisations, either with or without the consent of the individual. The Identity and Passport Service (IPS) intends to provide an identity verification service. This does not provide direct access to the NIR but rather it intends to verify an individual's identity in a method appropriate to the situation, ranging from an electronic card authentication to the provision of information to an organisation based on a specific request.

The Identity Cards Act 2006 establishes a number of conditions and safeguards regarding the use of the identity verification service by organisations.

It is expected that most identity checks will be done with the consent of the individual. Section 12 covers the provision of information with the consent of the individual. It limits the information that may be provided to organisations as part of a verification check with consent and also allows for regulations to be made prescribing how the individual's authority and consent for the provision of information is to be given. Private sector companies will only be permitted to use identity services with the consent of the individual and thus are regulated under this section.

Sections 13-16 cover the use of identity services in relation to the provision of public services. These sections ensure that the use of identity services by public service providers must be approved by Parliament by affirmative order and may also be subject to consultation with the users of that service before it can commence.

Powers to provide information from the NIR without consent are strictly limited and laid out in Sections 17-21. Information may be disclosed without consent to Security and Intelligence Agencies for the purposes of carrying out their functions. The Police and the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs may also be provided with information held on the scheme but the type of information and the circumstances in which it may be provided are limited under Section 17(3) and 17(4). Furthermore, Section 18(4) limits the provision of information on when a person's record on the Register has been checked to purposes connected with the prevention and detection of serious crime alone. Under Section 17(5) and 20(1), the provision of information without consent to any other Government Department or public authority could not occur unless it had been approved by Parliament by affirmative order.

The Act also provides for the accreditation of organisations before they can be provided with information from an individual's record from the NIR. The accreditation process will establish the business need for the information and whether their internal systems and procedures are satisfactory. The process will also establish the terms and conditions under which an organisation can use the identity services offered by IPS.

With regard to the use of this information by organisations, there are also a number of safeguards.

Firstly, user organisations will continue to be subject to the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1998 in how they handle any information received from a verification check. Thus, the safeguards within that Act and the independent oversight of the Information Commissioner in relation to its provisions will apply.

Secondly, the National Identity Scheme Commissioner (NISC) or, where appropriate, the Intelligence Services Commissioner will provide independent oversight as to how the National Identity Scheme operates and the uses to which ID cards are put. The NISC will publish a report every year, which will be laid before Parliament.

Thirdly, IPS will also reserve the right to audit any user organisation's processes to ensure they remain compliant with the terms and conditions of the use of the identity verification services.

Finally, Section 21 of the Identity Cards Act provides for the establishment of restrictions on how the provision of information without consent may operate, which may include stipulations that only certain ranks or postholders in an organisation are permitted to receive any information provided after a request for information from the NIR.

Opiate Products

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department, subject to quality and quota restrictions, will permit manufacturers of opiate products for medicinal use in acute pain relief and long-term palliative care to import the restricted raw materials they need from approved sources in the European Economic Association or from countries where a high level of institutional co-operation exists; and if he will make a statement. [75346]

Mr. Coaker: Importation policy is governed by the United Nations single convention on narcotic drugs, 1961 which calls on Governments to restrict international trade to the minimum necessary to meet countries' medical needs. The policy also takes account of the United Kingdom's obligations to the European Union and to the European Economic Association. Imports from EU and EEA countries can therefore be considered.

There is no basis for importation from any other source irrespective of levels of institutional co-operation.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many controlled drugs' raw materials are manufactured by a monopoly supplier for UK production; and if he will make a statement. [75469]

Mr. Coaker: Macfarlan Smith Ltd. is licensed to manufacture 33 opiate derivatives. Its effective monopoly position arises from the absence of any other applicant for a manufacturing licence.

Penal Policy

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has commissioned into the effect of levels of incarceration on the rate of criminal activity. [59309]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Currently no research is being carried out on the effect of levels of incarceration on the rate of criminal activity. Some work previously carried out in 2003 for the correctional services review ("Managing Offenders, Reducing Crime" by Patrick Carter) estimated that the increased use of prison in England and Wales since 1997 had reduced crime by around 5 per cent. However, international evidence shows no consistent relationship between levels of incarceration and crime.

Police

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce his decision on whether to restructure Hampshire Police; and if he will make a statement. [60540]

Mr. McNulty: A statement was made by the Home Secretary on 20 March indicating that Hampshire Police would stand alone as a strategic force.

The Home Secretary has made it clear that he believes that the establishment of strategic police forces through the merger of existing police areas is the basis for a reformed, fully effective police service in the future and in particular is the necessary step to enhance the stability of local neighbourhood policing, and that he wishes to carefully review the restructuring programme before making announcements on the best way forward.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what factors were taken into account when the decision was made that Kent police should remain a single entity. [73568]

Mr. McNulty: The decision that Kent police could remain a single entity and internally reconfigure to improve its provision of protective services took into account professional advice from Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary.

The decision further took into account: the business case submitted by Kent police which set out planned reforms to further develop its provision of protective services and neighbourhood policing; financial assessments of the case commissioned by the Home Office; and the need to establish a balanced and resilient regional and national policing landscape.

The Home Secretary has made it clear that he believes that the establishment of strategic police forces through the merger of existing police areas is the basis for a reformed, fully effective police service in the future and in particular is the necessary step to enhance the stability of local neighbourhood policing, and that he wishes to carefully review the restructuring programme before making announcements on the best way forward.

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his Written Statement of 20 March 2006, Official Report, columns 6-7W, on Police Force Restructuring, (1) what reasons underlay his decision not to restructure Hampshire Police; and if he will make a statement; [61307]

(2) what reasons underlay his decision not to restructure Hampshire Police; and if he will make a statement. [62404]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Secretary's decision to allow Hampshire Police to remain as a stand-alone force was informed by the professional advice of Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary that the force has the capacity, capability and resilience to provide protective services to national standards.

The decision further took into account:

the business case submitted by Hampshire Police which set out planned reforms to further develop its provision of protective services and neighbourhood policing; financial assessments of the case commissioned by the Home Office; and the need to establish a balanced and resilient regional and national policing landscape.

The Home Secretary has made it clear that he believes that the establishment of strategic police forces through the merger of existing police areas is the basis for a reformed, fully effective police service in the future and in particular is the necessary step to enhance the stability of local neighbourhood policing, and that he wishes to carefully review the restructuring programme before making announcements on the best way forward.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the 10 most common offences were for which men were sent to prison in England and Wales in the last year for which figures are available, broken down by age group. [75535]

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have absconded from each open prison in England in each year since 1997; how many have been recaptured; and if he will make a statement. [73474]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There have been 7,105 absconds from open prisons in England since 1 April 1997. A break down of the number of prisoners who have absconded from each open prison over the last five years is given in the following table.

Available data indicates that 356 prisoners remain unlawfully at large from those who absconded from English open prisons since one April 1997. The police are notified when prisoners abscond and their details are entered on the police national computer.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people convicted of (a) murder, (b) rape and (c) robbery have absconded from English prisons in each year from 1997; and if he will make a statement. [73475]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Absconds can only take place from open prisons and only prisoners who are category D, the lowest security category, can be placed in open conditions. Open prisons take prisoners who are nearing completion of their sentence in preparation for their release.' As part of the categorisation process prisoners are subject to a rigorous and robust risk assessment. Only those assessed as not being a risk to the public and of low risk of escape will be categorised as D.

Available data indicate that 1,018 prisoners have absconded since 1997 who were serving sentences for murder, rape or robbery. A break down of these is given in the following table. The police are notified when prisoners abscond and their details are entered on the police national computer.

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners held in Ford prison while awaiting deportation or being considered for deportation (a) have absconded in 2006 and (b) absconded in each of the last five years. [75226]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 5 June 2006]: To date in 2006, 61 prisoners have absconded from Ford open prisons. 33 of these are foreign nationals, 19 were being considered for enforcement proceedings by the immigration and nationality directorate and one was going to be deported. Information about the deportation status of prisoners who absconded prior to 2006 is not held centrally by the Prison Service and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Security Industry Authority

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many licence applications to the Security Industry Authority have been rejected in the last 12 months (a) because the form was not correctly completed, (b) because the accompanying documents were not adequate and (c) on substantive grounds because the applicant was not a person who should be licensed; and if he will make a statement. [55172]

Mr. Coaker: This information is not held centrally. However, the Security Industry Authority has worked closely with the industry to implement changes which have successfully reduced the rejection rate from 50 per cent. in January 2006 to approximately 20 per cent. at the beginning of March. There are a little over 12,000 applications recorded as rejected and awaiting re-submission from the applicant. As at 31 May, 4,042 licences had been refused on substantive grounds, namely that the applicant had a criminal history.

Serious Organised Crime Agency

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which posts in the Serious and Organised Crime Agency are vacant; and what grade each is. [75690]

Mr. Coaker: The Serious Organised Crime Agency was established on 1 April 2006 with a staff of around 4,300, the vast majority of whom came from the precursor agencies. SOCA has identified a shortage of up to 150 posts in some specific skills at grades 1-3, across operational and corporate services directorates, which it is now seeking to fill through external recruitment and internal promotion and staff moves.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 16 May 2006, to question number 71551, how many posts the Serious Organised Crime Agency is seeking to fill. [75883]

Mr. Coaker: The Serious Organised Crime Agency's workforce plan is to fill up to 150 posts through internal promotion, external recruitment and staff moves to meet the identified skills shortages.

Shoplifting

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many shoplifting cases were brought before the courts in each of the last 10 years; how many cases in each year led to (a) an acquittal and (b) a conviction; and how many of those defendants were facing their first criminal charge. [71967]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates courts, acquitted and found guilty at all courts for 'theft from shops' for the years 1994 to 2004 in England and Wales, are provided in the following table.

It is not possible to identify how many defendants were facing their first criminal charge from the data held on the court proceedings database. Data for 2005 will be available in the autumn.

Stansted Hijacking

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department has received evidence that the Stansted hijacking was also part of a people smuggling operation; and if he will make a statement. [74002]

Mr. Coaker: We have received no evidence that the Stansted hijacking was part of a people smuggling operation. Our current understanding is that the purpose of the hijack was to claim asylum.

UK Passports

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK passports were reported (a) lost and (b) stolen in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [75004]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 7 June 2006]: It is not possible for the UK Passport Service to identify exactly how many passports were reported lost or stolen in Northern Ireland. However, the Belfast passport office, which serves the Northern Ireland area, processed the following reports of (a) loss and (b) theft of a passport for the calendar years of 2004, 2005 and 2006 to date.

	Belfast
	Lost	Stolen
2004	9,496	1,959
2005	9,615	1,117
2006 (to date)	4,329	473

	UK
	Lost	Stolen	Other	Total

Workers Registration Scheme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to revise the Workers Registration Scheme to (a) increase the level of registration and (b) reduce illegal working. [71901]

Mr. Byrne: In developing and implementing the Workers Registration Scheme (WRS) we have sought to strike the right balance between the objective of monitoring the labour market impact of enlargement and avoiding unnecessary bureaucracy. The Government believe that the WRS has worked well to date as a means of monitoring impacts and as a safeguard against illegal working and fraudulent access to benefits. However, we will continue to keep the need for the scheme under review.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on progress made in training Afghan police in Helmand province. [74967]

Dr. Howells: The Government of Afghanistan's National Police Reform Programme has not, up to now, reached the southern provinces and training of the National Afghan Police (ANP) in Helmand province has been slow. This has been largely due to the difficult security situation in southern Afghanistan which has hampered the International Community's efforts to provide training and follow-up support. Since the establishment of the UK-led Provincial Reconstruction Team in Helmand on 1 May 2006, the UK has been working closely with the provincial government and the Ministry of Interior to accelerate progress. At the beginning of this year there were around 1,700 ANP in Helmand, of varying levels of expertise. Many will need additional training. Approximately 200 additional trained ANP officers have since been redeployed from elsewhere in Afghanistan to reinforce the current force levels while new recruits are trained and equipped under the German/US police training programme. The pay and rank review currently underway will determine the final shape of the police structure in Helmand.

Eritrea

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions the British Embassy in Eritrea has had with the Eritrean Government about the imprisonment of Eritrean citizens for belonging to Christian churches not recognised by the Government. [75943]

Mr. Hoon: We remain concerned by reports of state interference in religious affairs and lack of freedom of worship in Eritrea. We monitor closely action taken by the authorities against members of minority religious groups not recognised by the Government of Eritrea.

Officials from our Embassy in Asmara continue to raise these issues with the Eritrean Government. As local EU presidency, the UK also conveys the EU's concerns, including through the EU-Eritrea Political Dialogue on Constitutional and Human Rights. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, wrote to President Isaias on 6 October expressing our concern and has raised this with the Eritrean Ambassador.

India

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Indian Government on the enactment of the Rajasthan Dharma Swatantrata Act in Rajasthan which prohibits religious conversion. [76037]

Dr. Howells: It is for the Indian authorities to decide how to deal with this issue. However we have raised this in response to legitimate UK public and parliamentary interest.

Officials from our High Commission in New Delhi raised this when they called on the Chair of the National Commission for Minorities in April.

Although the Rajasthan Legislative Assembly approved this Act in April, we understand that the State Governor of Rajasthan refused to sign the bill when it was presented to her on 19 May.

We will continue to monitor the situation.

Palestine

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the temporary international mechanism envisaged by the Middle East Quartet will channel humanitarian aid to the Palestinians; and how many public employees' salaries will be paid through that mechanism. [75580]

Dr. Howells: The European Commission is continuing to discuss how the Temporary International Mechanism will operate with international donors, Quartet members and International Financial Institutions. The Mechanism seeks to provide support without funds passing through the Hamas-led Palestinian Authority.

The payment of allowances to individual Palestinians is one of the areas under discussion. But we must be clear that the Mechanism cannot and does not seek to replace the role of the Palestinian Authority. It is the responsibility of the Palestinian government to pay its employees' salaries. The Government fully supports the Quartet statement of 9 May which said that donors were willing to restart direct support to the Palestinian Authority as soon as the Palestinian Authority government meets and implements the three Quartet principles. The full text of the 9 May statement can be found on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website at:

http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1145894914790.

United Nations

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on UN Security Council expansion. [76201]

Dr. Howells: The Government supports expansion of both permanent and non-permanent membership of the Security Council. This is essential to ensure that the Council remains representative of today's world. We continue to support the candidatures of Germany, Japan, India and Brazil for permanent seats on an enlarged Council, and for permanent African representation.

As my right. hon. Friend the Prime Minister said in his Georgetown speech on 26 May, we want renewed momentum in the debate on Security Council enlargement.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister who is responsible for overseeing the Travel by Ministers Guidance; what grade he or she is; what the details are of his or her career to date; who appointed him or her; whether the post was advertised; how many persons applied for the post; how many were short listed for interview; and if he will make a statement. Vera Baird: The Department aims to reply to 90 per cent. of letters from hon. Members within 20 working days of receipt. In 2005 Ministers replied to 3,179 letters with the target met in 92 per cent. of all cases. I apologise for the administrative oversight that led to the delay in sending a response to the hon. [74524]

Ms Harman: The information is as follows:

All magistrates are issued with the 'Adult Court Bench Book' that contains a checklist of factors to consider when imposing antisocial behaviour orders (ASBO) and ISOs. This guidance sets out the approach courts should take in respect of ISOs.

All magistrates sit in court with a qualified legal adviser who is able to provide advice on relevant legislation, caselaw and guidance relating to ISOs.

An article on ISOs featured in the March edition of 'The Magistrate' magazine.

The judicial studies board is producing a new updated antisocial behaviour training programme for magistrates, which will feature ISOs, incorporating them within practical training exercises. We aim for this to be available by the end of the year.

Publicity Initiatives

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the annual cost has been to his Department of (a) publicity initiatives and (b) administration for the (i) minimum income guarantee and (ii) pension credit in each year since they were introduced; [73789]

(2) what funding his Department has allocated to publicity initiatives by local government to increase take-up of the (a) minimum income guarantee and (b) pension credit for each year since each was introduced. [73718]

James Purnell: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in 2001. Information on cost for activity prior to 2001 for minimum income guarantee can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Pension Service continues to develop its activity-based information to better understand the cost of processing pension credit and other benefits. A modern resource management system is being rolled out across the Department in 2006. This new system includes costing functionality. Until this work is complete we cannot provide the cost of processing pension credit. Administration costs for minimum income guarantee will not be available under the new system.

The pension service is the only agency responsible, with allocated funding for the publicity initiatives for pension credit.

The available information is in the following table.

	Amount (£)
Publicity cost for minimum income guarantee
2000-01	[1]3,510,000
Publicity for pension credit cost
2002-03	600,000
2003-04	14,800,000
2004-05	7,500,000
2005-06	2,500,000

[1] Figure includes costs for advertising media and production and elements of 'other' publicity costs. This excludes costs incurred for customer research into MIG claim form.

1. Allocated funding for pension credit publicity was equivalent to the total spent in each year.
2. Pension credit costs include advertising media and production, direct marketing, other publicity and fees, excluding VAT.

State Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the total state pension entitlement in real terms using 2005-06 prices for a person on median earnings who works from age 25, based upon (a) the existing pensions system and (b) the reformed pension system set out in the White Paper Cm 6841. [75511]

James Purnell: The information requested is in the following table.

	Total weekly state pension (basic and state second pension) (£)
	In 2005-06 prices	In 2005-06 earnings terms
Under current scheme on reaching state pension age in 2050	245	100
Under proposed reformed system on reaching state pension age in 2053	360	139

Notes:

1. Estimates are for a male median earner (earning around £23,000 per annum) working from age 25 to state pension age (so reaching state pension age at age 65 in 2050 under the current scheme and at age 68 in 2053 under the proposed reformed scheme).
2. Estimates expressed in 2005-06 prices reflect the "real terms" value of pension entitlement in 2050 or 2053 relative to expected changes in the level of average prices over time.
3. Estimates expressed in 2005-06 earnings terms reflect the value of pension entitlement in 2050 or 2053 relative to expected changes in the level of average earnings over time.

The Department has also received a 1,226-postcard campaign from members of the public opposing abortion.

As we do not collect information on whether specific letters about abortion support or oppose this or specify between letters and postcards, unless they concern a specific, high-volume campaign, this information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) feticide interventions, (b) urea injections and (c) lethal injections into the fetal heart have been performed during abortions in each year since 1997. [74157]

Caroline Flint: The role of the Department is to ensure that strategic health authorities comply with the operating framework guidance published on 26 January 2006. It is for individual strategic health authorities to agree with their local health economy the details of the cost improvements required for that local health economy.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what directions she has given to (a) the Gloucestershire, Avon and Wiltshire Strategic Health Authority, (b) the primary care trusts in Gloucestershire and (c) the Hospital Trust in Gloucestershire on the requirement for those organisations to balance their annual budgets during the 2006-07 financial year; and if she will make a statement. Care Record Service

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the cost to local NHS bodies of implementing the care record service. [73231]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Eddisbury (Mr. O'Brien) on 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 1114W.

Community Nursing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of Agenda for Change on (a) community nurses and (b) community nursing posts. [72265]

Ms Rosie Winterton: From the available evidence, where job evaluation outcomes and headcount of staff are both considered community nursing posts have proportionately higher outcomes than nurses working in the acute sector. This is likely to be due to the added level of autonomy required. NHS employers are supporting organisations, via strategic health authorities, to assess properly the impact of Agenda for Change.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to reply to the letter of 26 April 2006 from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire on avian influenza. [75954]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A reply to this letter was sent on 8 June 2006.

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to reply to the letter of 25 April 2006 from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire regarding a constituent. [75955]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This letter was replied to on 25 May 2006.

Cottage Hospitals

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cottage hospitals have closed in England since 2001. [74270]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not centrally available.

Counterfeit Lipitor

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 23 March 2006, Official Report, column 580W, on counterfeit Lipitor, what recent assessment she has made of whether (a) the UK has a system of monitoring pharmaceutical products sufficient to provide confidence that no quantifiable percentage of counterfeit medicines is entering the UK distribution system and (b) the system of pharmaceutical product recall reaches all those involved in the distribution and provision of medicines. [75187]

Andy Burnham: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA), as the United Kingdom (UK) competent authority responsible for the regulation of medicines, has in place comprehensive systems of surveillance, including medicines testing, reporting of adverse reactions, inspections, product recall and intelligence gathering, based on an ongoing assesament of risk. The MHRA also operates a comprehensive anti-counterfeiting strategy, advising the Government and working with partners and stakeholders to ensure that current safeguards work effectively and that vigilance against counterfeit medicines entering the legitimate UK supply chain is maintained.

The prime responsibility for product recall is with the marketing authorisation (MA) holder and not with the MHRA. The MHRA advises the MA holder as to the classification of recall, recipients who should be informed, wording of notifications, investigations and it reviews proposals for corrective actions. In many cases, the MHRA issues a drug alert to inform possible recipients and support action being taken by the MA holder.

When drug alerts are issued by the MHRA, the extent of distribution is decided from a risk analysis of the known facts. If there is a significant concern about potential patient harm, the MHRA may advise contact to patient level. In cases of lower risk, the distribution may be limited to pharmacy or wholesaler level.

Dentistry

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in South East Northumberland have (a) not signed up to new contracts, (b) signed only partial contracts and (c) closed their lists to new NHS patients. [70866]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists or dental practices who have signed the new contract and the number who have not signed is not available centrally. We do however have some provisional information that covers contracts. A contract may be for more than one dentist and so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level.

The number of new dental contracts signed and rejected in the Northumberland Care Trust area is shown in the table.

	Number/percentage

Approximate units of dental activity (UDA) value	557,503

Departmental Credit Card

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what facility is available for senior civil servants in her Department to use credit cards supplied by the Department. [72860]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has adopted the Office of Government Commerce buying solutions pre-tendered national framework for the Government procurement card (GPC). Under this framework GPC credit cards are held by authorised cardholders throughout the Department and are available for use for properly approved purchases under £2,000 per transaction for all departmental staff.

Departmental Report

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the consultations undertaken by her Department covering the period of the Departmental Report 2006; what steps she is (a) taking and (b) plans to take to meet the 12-week minimum period; and if she will make a statement. [71980]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Consultations launched between 1 April 2005 and 31 March 2006 are shown in the table.

The Department seeks through guidance to staff and through a gateway process covering communications with the national health service to ensure that consultations meet the 12-week minimum period. In the coming year, the Department plans to update its guidance on consultations and promote good practice through communications with staff.

Drugs and Therapeutics Bulletin

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) why her Department has ended its contract for the Drugs and Therapeutics Bulletin; [75796]

(2) what research was undertaken in advance of the cancellation of the distribution of the Drugs and Therapeutics Bulletin to NHS doctors. [76395]

Andy Burnham: The decision not to renew the Department's national contract for distribution of the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin was informed by our policy to devolve as much responsibility as possible to the national health service and to look very critically at central spending. It is our policy that central spending should be kept to an absolute minimum in order to maximise the resources available for the NHS to manage at local level. The decision also took account of the availability of other sources of medicines information.

E-coli 0157

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the location and suspected causes of reported outbreaks of E-coli 0157 in the UK over the last 12 months. [73760]

Fairford Hospital

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to reply to Gloucestershire county council regarding the referral of Fairford Hospital in March. [75662]

Caroline Flint: The referral from Gloucestershire Health Overview and Scrutiny Committee of Cotswold and Vale Primary Care Trust's decision to close inpatient facilities at Tetbury and Fairford community hospitals is currently under consideration, and a decision will be made once the information has been considered.

General Practitioners

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GPs there were per head of population in the Carlisle primary care trust area in each year since 1996. [67328]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the format requested. However, data for the Carlisle primary care trust (PCT) dating back to 2001 is shown in the following table.

General medical practitioners (excluding retainers and registrars)[1] per 100,000 head of population, for Carlisle and district PCT, 2001-05

	All practitioners (excluding retainers and registrars)[1]	All practitioners (excluding retainers and registrars)[1] per 100,000 head of population
2001	71	62.2

2003	74	64.2
2004	75	64.1
2005	80	68.4

[1] General medical practitioners, excluding retainers and registrars, includes contracted general practitioners (GPs), general medical service (GMS) others and personal medical service (PMS) others. Prior to September 2004, this group included GMS unrestricted principals, PMS contracted GPs, PMS salaried GPs, restricted principals, assistants, salaried doctors (Para 52 SFA), PMS other, flexible career scheme GPs and GP returners.

Notes:
1. 2004 population figures from the 2001 Office for National Statistics (ONS) resident estimates have been used for 2005 calculations, as population figures for 2005 at organisation level are not yet available, this figure is therefore subject to change.
2. GP figures given for September 2005, but as yet ONS have not published an up to date 2005 population figure by organisation. Therefore, the calculation for 2005 is based on the 2004 population figures and is therefore subject to change.

Head Injuries

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she has taken to ensure that progress is made against the quality requirements of the National Service Framework for Long-Term Neurological Conditions published in March 2005; and what steps she is taking to ensure that (a) local authorities and (b) NHS Trusts are implementing the national service framework. [76152]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Since publication of the national service framework (NSF) for long-term conditions, the Department has co-ordinated a range of activity to help local authority social care organisations and national health service bodies take forward implementation of the NSF. This includes:

working with key NHS, social care, voluntary and independent sector stakeholders, as well as service users and carers, to identify and address key issues in neurological services and the stakeholders' role in implementation;

ensuring that other key delivery programmes, most especially the White Paper "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say" and the long-term conditions strategy help deliver key NSF objectives; and work with the Care Services Improvement Partnership to promote implementation of the NSF through a co-ordinated work programme, including regional workshops, a web-based getting started pack and self-assessment tool for services.

Progress on implementation will be measured in a number of ways, including:

research studies commissioned as part of a national research initiative to underpin implementation of the NSF, to provide baseline data needed to measure the subsequent impact of the NSF; work to develop a national minimum dataset for long-term neurological conditions; and implementation of clinical indicators developed as part of the Better Metrics programme.

Health Funding (Gloucestershire)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to reduce the gap in health funding between Gloucestershire and the national average; and if she will make a statement. [74271]

Caroline Flint: The aim of the weighted-capitation formula, which informs revenue allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs), is to provide equal access for equal need in all parts of the country, and to reduce health inequalities.

The components of the formula weight each PCT's crude population, according to their relative need (age, and additional need) for healthcare and the unavoidable geographical differences in the cost of providing healthcare (the market forces factor).

The weighted-capitation formula is used to set targets, it does not determine allocations. Actual allocations reflect decisions on the speed at which PCTs are brought nearer to target through the distribution of extra funds (pace of change policy).

To ensure equity in funding, the pace of change policy for the 2006-08 revenue allocations has moved more quickly towards their fair share of funds. In 2003-04, the most under-target PCT was 22 per cent. under target. By 2007-08, no PCT will be more than .5 per cent. below its fair share.

The following table shows the 2006-07 and 2007-08 revenue allocations made to PCTs in Gloucestershire.

	2006-07 allocation	2007-08 allocation	Two year increase		2007-08 closing DFT
PCT	£000	£000	£000	Percentage	Percentage
Cheltenham and Tewkesbury	181,446	198,605	32,341	19.5	-0.2
Cotswold and Vale	222,132	240,253	34,858	17.0	3.3
South Gloucestershire	250,189	275,190	45,949	20.0	-0.8
West Gloucestershire	266,091	292,350	48,551	19.9	-1.3

Health Service Budgets

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which (a) primary care trusts and (b) hospital trusts showed financial deficits in 2005-06; how much those deficits were; and if she will make a statement. [74264]

Andy Burnham: The 2004-05 audited financial position and the 2005-06 unaudited position, as submitted to the Department by national health service organisations (strategic health authorities, primary care trusts and NHS trusts) is available on the Department website, and can be accessed at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/FreedomOfInformation/ClassesOfInformation/fs/en

Hepatitis C

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the timetable is for the establishment of a compensation scheme for those infected with hepatitis C by NHS blood or blood products. [76010]

Caroline Flint: The Skipton Fund was established in 2004, to administer the ex-gratia payment scheme for people infected with hepatitis C following national health service treatment with blood or blood products. The scheme became operational on 5 July 2004.

Hospital Parking

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in how many hospitals in (a) England, (b) each English region and (c) the Tees Valley do NHS staff need to pay for parking. [73653]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not collected centrally on the number of hospitals that require staff to pay for on-site parking.

Imported Blood Products

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether individuals with haemophilia were given factor VIII imported blood products; and if she will make a statement; [64127]

(2) whether individuals with haemophilia were given imported blood products under the named patient system without (a) consultation and (b) the signed agreement of the patient; and if she will make a statement. [64129]

Caroline Flint: During the 1970s and 1980s, clinicians were able to obtain blood products domestically, from Blood Products Laboratory (BPL) or purchase imported products from other international pharmaceuticals companies.

We are aware that during the 1980s pharmaceuticals companies were developing clotting factors, using new techniques in an attempt to reduce the risk of transmitting non-A and non-B hepatitis. We understand that the preference of some haemophilia centre directors was that these products should be administered through controlled clinical trials rather than on a named patient basis. However, this did not preclude individual clinicians, in consultation with a patient, from prescribing on a named patient basis, if considered in the patient's best interest.

Medical Errors

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients underwent the wrong procedures due to medical errors in each of the last 10 years; [75029]

(2) how many patients died due to medical errors in hospitals in each of the last 10 years. [75030]

Andy Burnham: The Department does not centrally collect data on the number of patients who underwent the wrong procedures or died due to medical errors in hospitals.

The Government are, however, concerned about national health service patients affected by adverse events and that is why it established the National Patient Safety Agency (NPSA) in July 2001 and asked it to set up a national reporting and learning system (NRLS) for patient safety incidents. This system is now in place across the NHS and all trusts have been connected and reporting to the system from late 2005. Data collected by the NPSA are based on incidents reported by NHS staff.

From November 2003 to the end of May 2006 there were 2,575 incidents reported as wrong or inappropriate treatment or procedure in the surgical and anaesthetic specialties. In 1,918 cases (74.5 per cent.), there was no reported harm to the patient, in 437 cases (17 per cent.) low harm, 179 cases (7 per cent.) moderate harm, 35 cases (1.4 per cent.) severe harm and in six cases (0.2 per cent.) it was reported that the patient died.

Data on deaths due to medical errors in acute hospitals over the last 10 years is not available. In July 2005, the NPSA published "Building a memory: preventing harm, reducing risks and improving patient safety. The first report of the National Reporting and Learning System and the Patient Safety Observatory". At the time of publication, the NPSA estimated that the annual figures for NHS acute hospitals in England would be in the order of 840 patient safety incident-related deaths from 572,000 reported incidents from acute hospitals each year in England. The estimate was derived from 18 acute hospitals consistently reporting to the NPSA from October to December 2004 and was adjusted for variations in reporting, as well as deaths which had been incorrectly labelled as patient safety incidents. The estimates cover all patient safety incident- related deaths including those due to medical errors in acute hospitals.

The NPSA is due to publish a second report with its latest analysis of all patient safety incidents shortly.

Mental Health

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures her Department is taking to improve morale of permanent members of staff in small psychiatric centres in Leeds and West Yorkshire; and if she will make a statement. [75832]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: National health service employing organisations are responsible for the morale of their staff. NHS organisations providing mental health services across West Yorkshire have taken a range of measures to support staff. These include ensuring that staff have access to good child care facilities and support, occupational health and counselling services, flexible working and training and development opportunities.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures her Department has in place to monitor the effectiveness of care in the community for mentally ill patients in (a) Leeds and (b) West Yorkshire. [75835]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department continues to monitor primary care trusts' progress on the delivery of their agreed local delivery plans which also forms part of the annual performance assessment by the Healthcare Commission.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) full-time members of staff and (b) temporary members of staff are employed in small psychiatric care centres in (i) Leeds and (ii) West Yorkshire. [75836]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not held centrally.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Goodwill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many multiple sclerosis patients have been (a) prescribed and (b) refused the drug Sativex by the national health service. [76287]

Andy Burnham: The drug Sativex is currently unlicensed for use in the United Kingdom. However, doctors are able to use their clinical judgement to prescribe this drug on a named patient basis for the treatment of any medical condition they feel appropriate. Prescription data would therefore not provide information on how many patients were receiving Sativex for the treatment of multiple sclerosis.

The Department does not collect information on those incidences where a doctor makes a clinical judgement not to prescribe a specific drug to an individual patient.

NHS Direct

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the implications of the announcement by NHS Direct of job cuts in London; and if she will make a statement. [75694]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: NHS Direct began a 12-week consultation period with staff and staff side representatives on 16 May 2006 on proposals to ensure that its organisational structure, estates and staffing are fit for purpose to meet future developments and demand. The consultation period is due to end on 16 August 2006. The outcomes of the consultation will be made public thereafter.

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to the consultation on the reorganisation of NHS Direct, on what evidence the statement (a) that NHS Direct moving toward larger sites will improve clinical safety and (b) that best practice in the wider call centre industry is better than in NHS Direct is based; [75944]

(2) what assessment was made of the impact on the employment of disabled nurses of the proposed changes to NHS Direct. [75947]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not centrally held. It may be available from the Chairman of NHS Direct Special Health Authority.

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the basis is for the forecast that NHS Direct will need fewer nurses. [75945]

Ms Rosie Winterton: NHS Direct reviewed forecast demand for their services and the impact of introducing call streaming. These two factors combined mean that they will need fewer nurses.

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether health advisers may do the work of nurses in NHS Direct. [75946]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No. Health advisers are trained to use standardised protocols to assess the need for referral for face-to-face care or advice from an NHS Direct nurse.

NHS Finance

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on NHS funding in Wirral. [71701]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department allocates funding to primary care trusts (PCTs) on the basis of the relative needs of their populations. The 2006-07 and 2007-08 revenue allocations represent £135 billion investment in the national health service, £64 billion to PCTs in 2006-07 and £70 billion in 2007-08. Over the two years covered by this allocation, PCTs will receive an average increase of 19.5 per cent. The table shows allocations for Bebington and West Wirral PCT and Birkenhead and Wallasey PCT.

PCT	2006-07 allocation (£000)	2007-08 allocation (£000)	Two year increase
			£000	Percentage
Bebington and West Wirral PCT	138,522	149,618	21,738	17
Birkenhead and Wallasey PCT	321,016	350,999	57,453	20

The Department does not allocate funding to NHS trusts. NHS trusts, as providers of services, receive the bulk of their revenue funding from commissioning by PCTs. They also receive revenue funding from the Department for medical staff education services and for research and development. In addition, trusts can charge staff, visitors or patients for services provided, such as catering or provision of private patient facilities.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Statement of 12 April, whether she expects that (a) turnaround organisations and (b) all primary care trusts and NHS trusts which are overspending (i) will show improvement during 2006-07 and (ii) by the end of the year should have monthly income covering monthly expenditure. [76049]

Andy Burnham: The aim is for the national health service as a whole to return to net financial balance by the end of 2006-07.

We are aiming for all NHS organisations with deficits to have monthly balance of income over expenditure by April 2007. There will be some exceptional cases where an organisation needs longer to make the necessary changes, while still maintaining patient care. However, because over-spending by one organisation has to be balanced by under-spending elsewhere, we will continue to challenge and expect organisations to return to monthly balance as quickly as possible.

NHS Pension Scheme

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the NHS Pension Scheme is funded; and what the contribution level of the scheme is. [71606]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The NHS Pension Scheme is an unfunded scheme. Employers pay 14 per cent. of the pensionable pay into the scheme and employees pay 6 per cent., apart from manual staff who pay 5 per cent.

North-West Lancashire Strategic Health Authority

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what considerations she took into account when approving the appointment of the chair of the new North West Lancashire strategic health authority; and if she will make a statement. [69846]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Responsibility for the appointment of chairs and non-executive members of national health service boards has been delegated to the NHS Appointments Commission. As a national body, it follows national procedures for all appointments to ensure consistency across the NHS, while also taking into account specific local circumstances.

The selection of candidates for the strategic health authority posts was undertaken by a panel which included an independent assessor. Candidates were only appointed if they met all of the criteria for these posts and after successfully completing a process of selection and interview.

Notifiable Diseases

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what factors were taken into account when deciding not to include the (a) HIV and (b) H5N1 viruses on the list of notifiable diseases; [75018]

(2) which sexually transmitted diseases (a) are and (b) are not on the list of notifiable diseases; and what criteria are used when deciding which diseases to include. [75017]

Caroline Flint: Under the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984, there is a requirement to notify local authorities of cases of certain infectious diseases so that they can consider whether to use the measures to control disease that the Act provides. Section 11 of the Act sets out the procedure for notifying the relevant local authority of cases of cholera, plague, relapsing fever, smallpox, typhus and food poisoning. Regulations made under the Act (the Public Health (Infectious Diseases) Regulations 1988) apply section 11 to certain other infectious diseases[1].

However, statutory notification of specified infectious diseases is only one of a range of methods by which epidemiological surveillance and control of infectious diseases are carried out. HIV, sexually transmitted infections and H5N1 are not notifiable diseases[2].

For HIV, local and national data are collected from several sources including reporting of diagnosed cases by clinicians and laboratories and by unlinked anonymous surveys of HIV prevalence in population sub-groups, such as genito-urinary medicine (GUM) clinic attendees and injecting drug users in contact with specialist services. Similarly, for other sexually transmitted infections, there are other surveillance methods used including returns from GUM clinics of episodes of sexually transmitted infections and the national chlamydia screening programme.

Making HIV and other sexually transmitted infections notifiable might raise concerns about patient confidentiality and could deter individuals at risk of infection from seeking advice, testing and specialist care.

H5N1 infection does not readily pass from birds to humans and there is currently no evidence that this pathogen is capable of spreading from person-to-person efficiently or of sustaining such transmission. This infection can only be diagnosed by laboratory confirmation of the pathogen as the clinical illness has similarities with several other infections. H5N1 infection in birds or poultry, which comes within the definition of avian influenza, is notifiable as a disease of animals and as an animal disease that may transmit to humans. This allows measures to be put in place to reduce the risk of spread to other birds or poultry and to humans.

[1] Acute encephalitis, acute poliomyelitis, anthrax, diphtheria, dysentery (amoebic or bacillary), leprosy, leptospirosis, malaria, measles, meningitis, meningococcal septicaemia (without meningitis), mumps, ophthalmia neonatorum, paratyphoid fever, rabies, rubella, scarlet fever, tetanus, tuberculosis (where the opinion of the registered medical practitioner that the person is suffering from tuberculosis is formed from evidence not solely derived from tuberculin tests) typhoid fever, viral haemorrhagic fever, viral hepatitis, whooping cough, and yellow fever.

[2] Viral hepatitis is statutorily notifiable and can be transmitted sexually. However, apart from hepatitis B virus, sexual transmission is not the most important mode of infection.

Obesity (North Somerset)

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the percentage of schoolchildren in North Somerset who are obese. [73983]

Caroline Flint: Following the Department's guidance on weighing and measuring all primary school children issued in January 2006, primary care trusts will be required to return data on obesity prevalence among reception year and year six pupils to the Department's performance management system by end of September 2006.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will answer questions (a) 51633, (b) 51635, (c) 52749, (d) 52765, (e) 52767, (f) 53030, (g) 53840, (h) 55583, (i) 55601, (j) 55743 and (k) 56246 tabled by the hon. Member for Forest of Dean. [58658]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 14 March 2006]: Replies to all the questions listed have been given.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will reply to questions (a) 65773 on the choose and book system, (b) 65781 on waiting times and (c) 70972 on the care record spine tabled by the hon. Member for St. Ives (Andrew George) [72739]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 22 May 2006]: Answers were given on 24 and 25 May.

Sexual Health

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what evidential basis her Department used for the estimate of the number of young people who are sexually active before they reach 16 years in Best Practice Guidance for Doctors and Other Health Professionals on the Provision of Advice and Treatment to Young People Under 16 on Contraception, Sexual and Reproductive Health; whom she consulted while drafting this guidance; if she will list the (a) individuals and (b) organisations who submitted advice; and if she will make a statement; [75530]

(2) if she will list the (a) individuals and (b) organisations she consulted while preparing Best Practice Guidance for Doctors and Other Health Professionals on the Provision of Advice and Treatment to Young People Under 16 on Contraception, Sexual and Reproductive Health; if she will place in the Library copies of any responses; and if she will make a statement. [75622]

Caroline Flint: Evidence for estimating the number of young people who are sexually active before they reach 16 years old is contained in the National Survey of Sexual Attitudes and Lifestyles (Natsal 2000): "Sexual behaviour in Britain: early heterosexual experience". Lancet. 2001Dec 1;358(9296): 1843-50. Further evidence is contained in the "Social Exclusion Unit (SEU) Report on Teenage Pregnancy" which is available in the Library.

The Department worked with the relevant professional bodies including the British Medical Association, Royal College of Nursing, and Faculty of Family Planning in producing the final draft.

The revised best practice guidance, which replaced and cancelled HC (86)1/HC (FP) (86)1/LAC (86)3 was issued on 30 July 2004. This guidance was recently subject to a judicial review and was upheld to be lawful.

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action the Government have taken to improve sexual health by providing strongly focused prevention messages as identified in the Government's response to the Health Select Committee Report on New Developments in Sexual Health and HIV/AIDS Policy (Cm 6649). [50565]

Caroline Flint: To inform the new safer sex campaign the Department has undertaken market research on what messages are most effective in promoting safer sex to sexually active young adults in addition to consultations with sexual health professionals, potential commercial partners and voluntary sector organisations who will have a role to play in the campaign's successful delivery. Other action to improve sexual health includes investment to improve and modernise sexual health services and the prioritisation of sexual health and access to genito-urinary services as one of the six key actions for national health service for 2006-07.

SHAs (Senior Staff)

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) chairs and (b) chief executives of strategic health authorities (i) are from an ethnic minority background and (ii) have prior experience of work in the health sector. [72416]

Ms Rosie Winterton: None of the nine chairs and 10 chief executives appointed to the strategic health authorities is from an ethnic minority background. Of the nine chairs, six have prior experience of work in the health sector. All 10 of the chief executives have previously worked in the health sector. Two of the chief executive appointments are interim, pending a further round of recruitment.

TB Immunisation

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what opportunities there are for children to obtain necessary immunisation against tuberculosis; and whether a charge is made. [76081]

Caroline Flint: The changes to the Bacillus Calmette-Guerin (BCG) programme announced by the Chief Medical Officer in July 2006 have involved replacing the universal BCG immunisation with a programme targeted on higher risk groups within the general population.

BCG immunisation is available free of charge to the following groups:

all infants aged 0 to 12 months living in areas of the United Kingdom where the annual incidence of tuberculosis (TB) is 40/100,000 or greater;

all infants aged 0 to 12 months with a parent or grandparent who was born in a country where the annual incidence of TB is 40/100,000 or greater; previously unvaccinated children aged one to five years with a parent or grandparent who was born in a country where the annual incidence of TB is 40/100,000 or greater. These children should be identified at suitable opportunities, and can normally be vaccinated without tuberculin testing; previously unvaccinated, tuberculin-negative children aged from six to under 16 years of age with a parent or grandparent who was born in a country where the annual incidence of TB is 40/100,000 or greater. These children should be identified at suitable opportunities, tuberculin tested and vaccinated if negative; previously unvaccinated tuberculin-negative contacts of cases of respiratory TB (following recommended contact management advice); and previously unvaccinated, tuberculin-negative new entrants under 16 years of age who were born in or who have lived for a prolonged period (at least three months) in a country with an annual TB incidence of 40/100,000 or greater.

Therapeutic Services

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what publicly funded therapeutic services are available for victims of sexual abuse; and if she will make a statement. [71695]

Caroline Flint: There are a very substantial number of voluntary sector organisations providing therapeutic services for victims of sexual violence and abuse in receipt of recent, current and newly allocated public funding. Some of these have been or are in receipt of Section 64 funding from the Department. These number 10 and are shown in the table which includes the name of the organisation, the purpose of the grant, the year and the amount of the funding provided.

A larger number of voluntary sector organisations have been in receipt of funding from the Home Office's victims fund grant. The total Home Office provision for victims of sexual offending was 46 organisations in 2004-05, 62 organisations in 2005-06, and 45 organisations in 2006-07. Tables providing the name of the organisation, the year and the amount of funding have been placed in the Library.

The Department and Home Office work closely together on improving services for victims of sexual crime and the Department contributes to the decisions taken by the Home Office on the allocation of the victims fund grant.

Coastal Monitoring

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many HM Revenue and Customs staff were allocated to the monitoring of the coasts of (a) Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) the South West in each year since 2001. [75295]

Dawn Primarolo: At present HM Revenue and Customs has some 1,200 Intelligence and 4,500 frontline Detection staff whose role includes monitoring movements across all UK frontiers.

Previous years' figures are shown in the table.

	Detection	Intelligence
2002-2003	3,790	1,323
2003-2004	3,754	1,312
2004-2005	3,910	1,295
2005-2006	4,256	1,226

HM Revenue and Customs does not specifically allocate staff to any particular coastline.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the letter of 24 April 2006 from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire regarding a constituent (PO Ref: 1/43132/2006). [75952]

Ed Balls: I replied to the hon. Member on 23 May 2006 and again on 7 June 2006.

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the letter of 29 March 2006 from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire regarding a constituent (PO Ref: 1/42692/2006). [75953]

Dawn Primarolo: I expect to be in a position to write to the hon. Gentleman in about a fortnight's time in the light of the forthcoming debate in the Finance Bill standing committee on inheritance tax provisions to which your letter refers.

Drug Seizures

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many drug seizures from pleasure craft were carried out by HM Revenue and Customs in each (a) region and (b) county in each year since 2000. [75244]

Dawn Primarolo: The national information for drugs seizures made by HM Revenue and Customs since 2000 is contained in the Annual Reports for HM Customs and Excise and HM Revenue and Customs. The figures for the year ending 31 March 2006 will be published in the next Annual Report.

Information of drug seizures by location cannot be disclosed as this would provide information of value to those seeking to circumvent HM Revenue and Customs' controls, thereby prejudicing the prevention and detection of crime.

HM Revenue and Customs does not centrally record drug seizures from pleasure craft.

EU Funding

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the level of European Union funding allocated to Cornwall in each of the last five years. [72727]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

The following table shows the Structural Funds allocations to Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly for the current 2000-06 funding period.

The United Kingdom will receive a total of approximately 9.4 billion euros (in 2004 prices) in Structural Funds receipts from 2007-13, in comparison with 16.6 billion euros (in 1999 prices) in the current Financial Perspective. This will include a total of approximately 2.6 billion euros in Convergence funding for its poorest regions, including Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly. We estimate that Cornwall's allocation for 2007-13 will be approximately a third higher than its current receipts.

Further background and details of the United Kingdom's future Structural Funds receipts were provided in my right hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff South and Penarth's written statement of 20 December 2005.

HM Revenue and Customs Staff

Dr. Pugh: To ask The Chancellor of the Exchequer how the number of people employed as HM Revenue and Customs officers has changed in the last five years. [75678]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs became a legal entity on 18 April 2005. Before then its business had been conducted by the Inland Revenue and HM Customs and Excise.

The numbers of staff employed in Civil Service departments and agencies, including the Inland Revenue, HM Customs and Excise and HM Revenue and Customs are available on the Cabinet Office's "Civil Service Statistics" website at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/statistics/index.asp

The effects of changes in departmental responsibilities on staff numbers are also available on the website.

Lease Lend and War Loans

Anne Moffat: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been paid to the US Administration by the UK Government in respect of interest and capital reduction on lease lend and war loans incurred as a result of the second world war in each of the last five years; what total sum has been paid to date; and what capital balance is outstanding. [75620]

Ed Balls: The following table shows capital and interest payments for world war two loans for the last five years.

December	$ million
2001	152
2002	150
2003	148
2004	145
2005	142

Final repayment of $83 million in interest is due to be made in December 2006, subject to the UK choosing not to exercise its option to defer payment. Information on the total interest and capital payments to date for world war two loans is not currently in a readily available format. However, work is currently in progress to tidy the data and the United Kingdom Government intend to release detailed figures on completion of the loan.

Listed Buildings (VAT)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the reasons are for the differing VAT treatment of repairs to listed buildings and alterations to listed buildings made with listed building consent. [75547]

Dawn Primarolo: When VAT was introduced in 1973, zero-rating applied to the construction and alteration of all buildings. The repair and maintenance of buildings has, however, always been standard-rated. Due to difficulties in administering the borderline between 'repairs' and 'alterations', the zero rate for alterations was largely withdrawn in 1984 by the then Government, although the zero rate for work carried out in the course of an approved alteration to a listed building was retained.

Under agreements with our European partners we can keep our existing zero rates of VAT but we are not able to extend them or introduce any new ones. The VAT treatment of repairs and approved alterations to listed buildings could therefore only be levelled if the Government were to withdraw the existing zero rate for approved alterations. The Government have no plans to do so.

Online Goods Declaration

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1723W, on the online goods declaration, whether paragraph 6.15 of the Carter Report has been considered in relation to the HM Revenue and Customs free declaration service. [75428]

Dawn Primarolo: Lord Carter was asked to advise Ministers on measures to further increase the use of HMRC's self-assessment, VAT, corporation tax and PAYE online services. Lord Carter's report was published on Budget day alongside the Government response. These can be found at: www.hmrc.gov.uk/budget2006/carter-review.htm

HMRC is now consulting with businesses, taxpayers, agents and software developers on the implementation of Lord Carter's recommendations.

Online goods declarations were not within the remit of Lord Carter's review. However, HMRC are committed to reducing the customer's compliance burden, and to help us do that we provide a range of electronic communications channels so that the customer can make an informed choice. Typically, this might include email, web interface and XML. HMRC will keep under active review whether or not they need to provide their own free online software or whether the software industry is able to sufficiently provide for the market while keeping customer compliance costs to a minimum.

Pensioners (Income)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of pensioners with pension income in excess of £50,000 in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [75326]

Dawn Primarolo: There are an estimated 60,000 people with pension income in excess of £50,000 in 2006-07, of whom an estimated 40,000 are above state pension age.

Pension income includes pensions and annuities paid under occupational and personal pensions schemes and state retirement pensions.

The information is based upon the 2003-04 Survey of Personal Incomes projected forward to 2006-07 in line with March 2006 Budget assumptions.

Points of Entry (Revenue and Customs Cover)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many points of entry had permanent HM Revenue and Customs cover in each year since 2001. [75211]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs aims to maintain a permanent cover of all points of entry into the UK through intelligence-led and risk-based interventions by flexible and mobile teams.

More detailed information cannot be disclosed as this would provide information of value to those seeking to circumvent HM Revenue and Customs' controls, thereby prejudicing the prevention and detection of crime.

Public Expenditure (Wales)

Hywel Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the identifiable public expenditure in Wales on enterprise and economic development by UK Government Departments was in each year since 1999-2000. [76048]

Mr. Timms: UK Government Departments' identifiable public expenditure on enterprise and economic development for Wales in 2000-01 to 2003-04 is published in additional tables of Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses on the Country and Regional web pages http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/media/4CB/DD/PESA_2006_Chapter_7_Tables_Additionalxls

Data for 2004-05 is shown in table 7.17 of PESA 2006 (Cm 6811) http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/media/4CB/C6/PESA_2006_Chapter_7_Tables.xls

Data for 1999-2000 is not available on a comparable and consistent basis.

Sale of Financial Products

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will undertake a public consultation on further regulation of the sale of general insurance. [75793]

Ed Balls: The Financial Services Authority (FSA) assumed responsibility for the regulation of general insurance on 14 January 2005. The FSA's regime served to implement the EU's Insurance Mediation Directive (IMD) in the UK.

The FSA began a review of the effectiveness of the general insurance regime in April 2006. This review will include seeking feedback from firms and consumer research.

Separately, the Treasury will review early in 2007 whether travel insurance sold as part of a package should be subject to FSA regulation. The IMD only requires the regulation of travel insurance if sold on a stand-alone basis.

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what regulations apply to the selling of complex financial products on a non-advised basis. [75795]

Ed Balls: Regulations applying to the sale of complex financial products are governed by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000. They are implemented by conduct of business rules set by the Financial Services Authority on the principle that firms making sales on an advised or non-advised basis should treat their customers fairly and provide them with clear information. The rules are set out in the Financial Services Authority's Handbook.

Tax Credits

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what behavioural assumptions in relation to families being required to repay tax credits are used in his Department's (a) costings, (b) models and (c) decisions; and if he will make a statement. [75176]

Dawn Primarolo: Our assumptions are based on the expected year of recovery of overpayments for 2003-04 tax credit awards as provided in the Comptroller and Auditor General's Standard Report on the Accounts of the Inland Revenue 2004-05. The Department of Inland Revenue 2004-05 Accounts are available at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/about/ir-report2005.pdf.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the cost of administering the tax credits system in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07; and if he will make a statement. [75779]

Dawn Primarolo: The cost of managing and paying the child and working tax credits in the financial years 2005-06 and 2006-07 will not be available until the Trust Statement's for those years are released.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his latest estimate is of the amount of tax credit overpayments in (a) 2003-04 and (b) 2004-05 which will be recovered; [75790]

(2) how much of the tax credit overpayments in (a) 2003-04 and (b) 2004-05 has been recovered to date; and if he will make a statement. [75816]

Dawn Primarolo: The expected year of recovery of overpayments and amounts for 2003-04 tax credit awards, including amount recovered in 2004-05, are provided in the Comptroller and Auditor General's Standard Report on the Accounts of the Inland Revenue 2004-05, which is available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/about/ir-report2005.pdf

Figures for 2004-05 overpayments will not be available until the publication of the Comptroller and Auditor General's Standard Report on the Accounts of the H M Revenue and Customs 2005-06.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were in receipt of tax credits in each year since 1997. [75914]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for the number of recipients receiving working family tax credits and family credits between May 1998 and February 2003 appear in the quarterly published WFTC statistics. Estimates for the number of recipients receiving child and working tax credits for 2003-04 and 2004-05 awards, based on final family circumstances and incomes for 2003-04 and 2004-05, appear in the HMRC statistical publications "Child and Working Tax Credits Statistics. Finalised Awards 2003-04" and "Child and Working Tax Credits Statistics. Finalised Awards 2004-05".

These publications can be found on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/menu.htm

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether the Paymaster General remains the designated Treasury Minister responsible for oversight of the tax credits system; and if he will make a statement; [76190]

(2) what responsibilities the Chief Secretary to the Treasury has in relation to the tax credit system; and if he will make a statement. [76477]

Mr. Timms: The responsibilities of Treasury Ministers are set out on the Treasury website. The Paymaster General is the Minister responsible for tax credits.

Tax Returns

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on the (a) staffing and (b) costs of accountancy firms of the change in filing deadlines for tax returns. [75878]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are currently assessing the impacts on businesses of implementing the recommendations of Lord Carter of Coles' Review of HMRC online services, and HMRC has published a Partial Regulatory Impact Assessment which invites comments and evidence to inform the final assessment. The document can be viewed at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/ria/pria-online-services.pdf

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultation of accountancy firms was undertaken before the decision was made to change the deadline for filing tax returns from 31 January each year. [75879]

Dawn Primarolo: The proposed changes to the filing date were recommended by Lord Carter's review of HMRC online services. As part of that independent review Lord Carter and his review team consulted widely. Written submissions were also invited and over 70 were received, including several from firms of accountants. The review team included three members of the accountancy profession from different sized firms.

Unused Land and Buildings

Margaret Moran: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list Government-owned land and buildings (a) unused and (b) about to become unused in the next five years, broken down by county. [75925]

Mr. Timms: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Widowed Parents Allowance

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria underlay the decision to class the widowed parents allowance as a second income; and if he will make a statement. [75850]

Dawn Primarolo: Widowed parents allowance, which is paid by the Department for Work and Pensions, is taxable because, as a continuing benefit, it is intended to replace lost earnings. The allowance replaced widowed mothers allowance, in the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992, which was also taxable.

Earnings-replacement benefits are taxable. This ensures equality of tax treatment in the same year between someone whose income is all from earnings and someone with the same level of income but which is derived partly from earnings and partly from benefit.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Regional Development Agencies (Representation)

Ms Abbott: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what assessment she has made of the representation of black and ethnic minority women on the boards of regional development agencies. [75354]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

At present three RDA board members are black or ethnic minority women, which represents 2.5 per cent. of total representation.

The Department is fully committed to strengthening the diversity of the RDA boards. Each year, awareness-raising events are run and information is distributed to appropriate organisations and other interested bodies in the regions. All of the material for these posts stresses that these appointments are made on merit and that applications from women, those from ethnic minority backgrounds and the disabled would be particularly welcome.

Retirement Planning

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps she is taking to encourage women to plan and save for their retirement. [75802]

Meg Munn: The Government's recent White Paper, "Security in Retirement: Towards a New Pensions System", contains proposed reforms that will enable women to make more informed choices about planning and saving for retirement, by providing simpler, fairer and more widely available state pensions as the foundation on which to save.

Proposals include:

Supported private saving by helping people to make better informed choices about their retirement, introducing a range of pension forecasts to give individuals an understanding of the income they are likely to receive in retirement.

Abolition of the minimum contribution conditions in basic state pension and awarding new credits for parenting and caring—ensure such contributions are rewarded through the state pension in the same way as paid contributions.

Measures to make it easier to save will be supported by a higher, fairer state pension linked to earnings. This will give a firm, simple-to-understand, foundation on which to build, and enable them to have confidence that their personal saving will be worthwhile.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Compensation Claims (Handling Services)

John Mann: To ask the Solicitor-General whether the Treasury Solicitor's Department has negotiated with companies providing claims handling services, rather than solicitors, when dealing with compensation claims against Government Departments in connection with their role as employers since 1997. [76441]

The Solicitor-General: The Treasury Solicitor's Department does not maintain a central record of claimants' representatives. Whether or not a claimant was represented by a company providing claims handling services, rather than by solicitors, can therefore only be ascertained by retrieving the relevant files and examining the correspondence in order to discover the identity of each claimant's representative. Such an exercise would be labour intensive and would be at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Expenditure

Chris Huhne: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will list the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from his Department in each of the last five years. [71779]

The Solicitor-General: I am answering this question on behalf of the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS), the Serious Fraud Office (SFO), the Treasury Solicitors Department (TSol) and the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office (RCPO). Returns for HMCPS Inspectorate and my own office are included in the figures for the Treasury Solicitors Department.

The last five years have been taken to be the financial years from 2001-02 to 2005-06.

Payments are taken to mean disbursements (and the value of any other consideration) for goods and services provided under a contract. The Office of Government Commerce (OGC) understands that payments of grants, credits and subsidies under statutory obligations for which the department is responsible are out of scope.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Air Industry

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with (a) the Secretary of State for Defence and (b) others on the impact of proposals in the Defence Industrial Strategy on the air industry sector. [74782]

Margaret Hodge: My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, as Chair of the Cabinet Committee on Restructuring of the European Aerospace and Defence Industry, held meetings in October 2005 and December 2005 with the Defence Secretary, Chief Secretary, Foreign Secretary, Minister for Defence Procurement and Minister for Industry and the Regions, which included discussion on the impact of proposals in the Defence Industrial Strategy on the UK's Defence Aerospace Industrial Sector.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State also regularly meets senior industrialists of aerospace and defence companies and has discussed aspects of the Defence Industrial Strategy with them.

The Department of Trade and Industry regards the Defence Industrial Strategy as vital to the future of the UK's defence industrial base. It establishes a long-run strategy to promote a sustainable base in the UK of those industrial capabilities needed to ensure appropriate sovereignty and to provide companies with greater clarity of future equipment needs which allows them to plan UK investment effectively.

Biomass

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on promoting biomass in his energy review. [76153]

Malcolm Wicks: The Energy Review Team is analysing the 5,300 consultation responses—a number of which included reference to biomass—and has met representatives of the biomass industry.

Biomass has been reviewed by the independent Biomass Task Force and the Carbon Trust, both of whom published their reports in October 2005. The Government published their response to the Biomass Task Force in April 2006.

The Energy Review will report in the summer.

Coal

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what projections his Department has made of the potential difference between the sale price of domestic deep-mined coal and the international Amsterdam, Rotterdam and Antwerp coal price over the next (a) five and (b) 10 years. [74710]

Malcolm Wicks: International coal price assumptions are set out in Tables 5 and 6 of "The UK Energy and CO2 Emissions Projections", published by the DTI in February 2006. These are presented in the following table.

Projections for the market price of UK deep-mined coal are not available.

US$/GigaJoule

	Central scenario (favouring gas)	Central scenario (favouring coal)	High energy price scenario	Low energy price scenario
2010	1.50	1.50	1.70	1.30

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his Department's most recent estimate is of the difference between the sale price of domestic deep-mined coal and the international Amsterdam, Rotterdam and Antwerp coal price. [74711]

Malcolm Wicks: The available data relate to steam coal (the coal suitable for use in steam boilers, e.g. a coal-fired power station). About 50 per cent. of UK domestic production of steam coal is deep-mined.

In Q4 2005, the domestic steam coal price paid by UK generators (who account for some 80 per cent. of total coal usage) was approximately £1.3/tonne higher than the international coal price[1], although in the past it has been up to £12.2/tonne lower.

The following table shows the evolution of the UK steam coal and international prices since 2000. As can be seen, the domestic price has been relatively more stable over the period.

[1] "Commodity Insurance Freight" price for coal with sulphur content less than 1 per cent. imported in north-west Europe; also referred to as Amsterdam-Rotterdam-Antwerp (ARA) coal price (25GJ/tonne gross calorific value).

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the capacity of the existing rail network to transport an increased supply of imported coal in the future. [74709]

Derek Twigg: I have been asked to reply.

Network Rail is currently undertaking Route Utilisation Strategies (RUS). The Freight RUS will be based on forecasts by the rail freight industry. All RUSs seek to balance capacity, passenger and freight demand, operational performance and cost. The RUSs will form the basis for the development and delivery of timetables, infrastructure and renewals of the network. Network Rail expects the draft Freight RUS to be published for consultation in September this year.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will reply to the hon. Member for West Worcestershire's letter of 6 April. [73893]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The hon. Member's letter was transferred to the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on 20 April for reply.

Departmental Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what facility is available for senior civil servants in his Department to use credit cards supplied by the Department. [72905]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department makes available to appropriate staff a Government Procurement card (GPC), operated under the OGC buying solutions pre-tendered National Framework for the Government, in line with best practice.

In addition, a separate facility is available to staff who can demonstrate a need for booking hotels and associated costs.

Each of these facilities is available to senior civil servants and other staff according to need.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people in his Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate telephone numbers in each of the last five years. [67997]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information relating to inappropriate use of the internet while at work is contained in the following table.

	Number of dismissals	Other disciplinary sanction
2005	2	2
2004	0	3
2003	0	3
2002	0	3

There have been no cases during the past five years of disciplinary sanctions imposed, including dismissal, relating to the access via work telephone of premium rate telephone numbers.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) EU foreign nationals and (b) non-EU foreign nationals have been employed in his Department in each of the last five years; what vetting procedures are in place for each category of staff; and whether these include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. [68013]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department of Trade and Industry does not hold information on EU foreign nationals and non-EU foreign nationals centrally.

The Department's recruitment procedures require all candidates for employment to comply with the civil service nationality rules.

Furthermore, all staff who require security clearance for their posts in the Department are subject to the Department's procedures for security vetting and comply with the policy set out to Parliament by the then Prime Minister on 15 December 1994, which came into force on 1 January 1995.
